Aboard the Paoli special, social relations were once again resumed with the girls still holding down the end of the train. All went smoothly until the "whistle stop" was reached.

After the poor chumps who were trying to create an impression had assisted in the embarkation, they were rewarded with nothing more than a hurried "thanks."

Maybe that will be a lesson to all concerned, a further proof that Villanovans are considered nothing more than "has beens" by these "fairest of the fair."

CORRECTION DEPARTMENT:

In order to prevent a serious international situation, this column wishes to correct a mistaken impression which is quite prevalent. It has to do with a message to be delivered to Frank Abbott. We have it on good authority that the first name of the lady DOES NOT begin with the letter "K."

INDIGESTION:

Joe Connor, pride of the Greeks and light of his father's life, is a silent though amorous admirer of a young lady who is a member of the chorus in the Ice Follies. Usually much outspoken, the mighty mite is strangely silent concerning his new friend.

The forthcoming Amateur Night productions will put forth such a wealth of talent in the form of singers, dancers, and comedians that it is felt by many that a revival of Turf and Tinsel would be well worth-while. . . . "Quincy" De Grace is quite the traveler. Having a female acquaintance who dwells in Virginia, he burns up the highways between here and there on more than one week-end, even though his visit be brief. The things some people do for a favorable glance from the opposite species!

Remember, it's only fifteen days until Christmas—and you all know what follows Christmas!

The elections in Mexico for the past few years have not been free elections as we understand them in the United States, but they have been controlled by a clique and are usually influenced by the Army. The Army has notoriously dominated the voting for a long time, and if a man is forced to vote at the point of a gun, with only one candidate in the running, he certainly hasn't much right to choose.

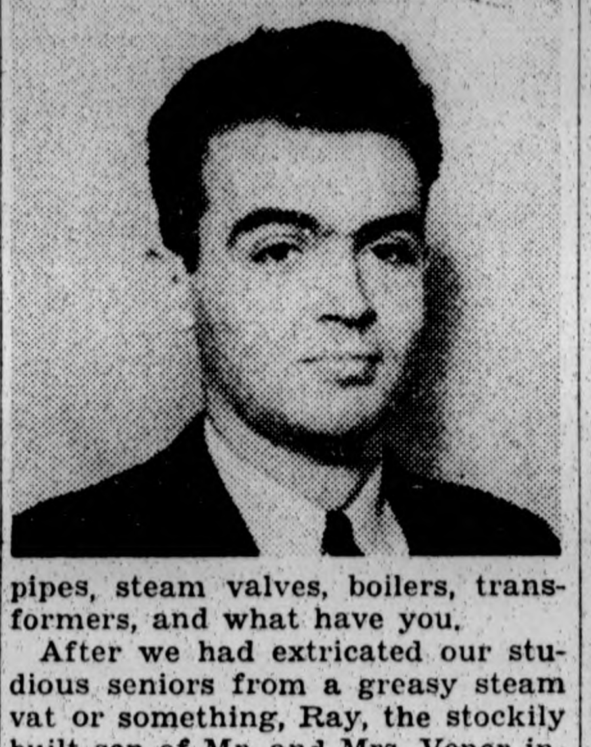
Mexico is Catholic, has been Catholic since 1549, and the heart of the people will never be anything else. A Catholic President, thank God!

Perhaps many of the abuses which the Church has suffered will now be corrected because the blood of her martyrs has watered the soil, and, as in every other country, will grow great fruits.

Meet The Boys: "Uncle" Ray Plus "Cynical Chick": As A Combination You Must Admit It's Slick!

By DAVE REARDON

DELVING deep into the dark dungeons of Mendel Hall's Unit Operations lab, we found Ray "Uncle" Vener and "Cynical Chick" Schafer busily experimenting with their playthings. This maze of mechanical toys includes intricate apparatus for the study of fluid flow, heat transfer, evaporation, humidification, drying, absorption, distillation, and filtration. At least that's what the book says. Anyhow to us it looked like a boiler room resplendent with vats, pipes, steam valves, boilers, transformers, and what have you.



After we had extricated our studious seniors from a greasy steam vat or something, Ray, the stockily built son of Mr. and Mrs. Vener informed us that the Quaker City was the scene of his birth back in 1919, in that famous industrial locality, Brewerytown. However, he contends that his environment had nothing whatsoever to do with his current social likes and dislikes but he does admit a certain amount of skill with darts.

Wins Scholarship Here

St. Ludwig's school taught our boy his three R's. Next he entered Roman Catholic High School. Here he continued his excellent scholastic work and was a consistent honor roll student. Upon graduation he was offered a scholarship to our great institution which he immediately accepted.

The engineering school was selected by him as his course of study and in his second year he decided to become an electrical engineer. At the present time he is one of 13 seniors in this difficult course.

Membership in the Phi Kappa Pi Engineering fraternity is foremost in his activities; this year he is serving as president. Our energetic executive has revolutionized interest in the fraternity by broadening its scope to include research in arts, music, sociology and other cultural fields. In this way the engineers receive a widened educational viewpoint.

Honorary Frat Member

His remaining societies include the necessary mechanical research organizations. They are the Chemical Engineering Society, of which he has been a four-year member and Chi Epsilon Mu, an honorary scholastic fraternity, consisting of only four outstanding scholastic members of the school. Of this group he is vice-president.

As a laboratory assistant for three years, Ray has provided aid to many a distressed neophyte engineer and has proven himself an indispensible man in this respect.

Socially A Success

Participation in intra-mural basketball and bowling round out his extra-curricular activities.

Socially, he has attained success but upon this he will not comment. It is sufficient to note that he attends all the school dances with a girl who, rumor has it, is an excellent automobile driver.

According to "Chick" Schafer, "Uncle" Ray is a self-made psychologist and attempts to psychoanalyze everyone he meets. He has been gifted in the art of speech and can hold his own in any "bull session" on any subject.

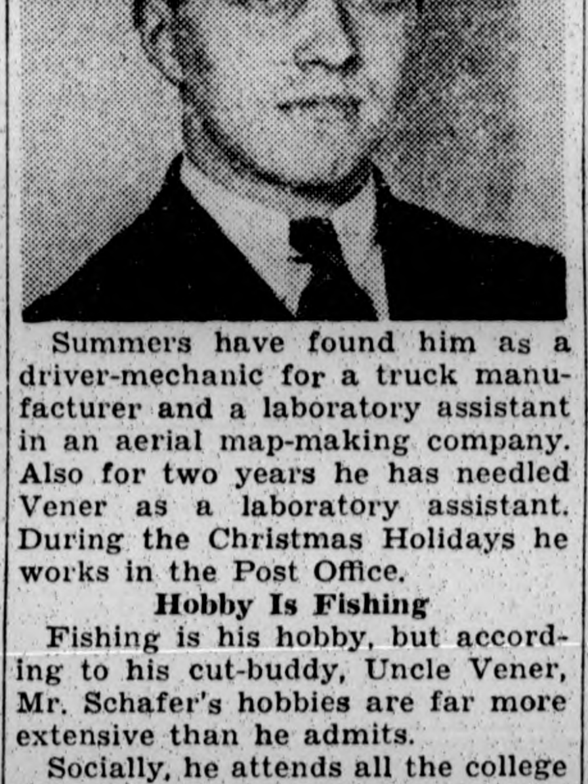
CHUCKLING "Chick" Schafer, the Don Juan of the engineers, entered the world on the second of January, 1918, in Philadelphia. This, incidentally, is the anniversary of the Second Battle of Bull Run.

After crawling around on his hands and knees for six years, he climbed the stairs of Transfiguration School and eight years later entered the portals of West Catholic High School.

He holds that some unknown force influenced his matriculation here at college but his registration day was a memorable one.

"Engineer" Editor

Our illustrious interviewee has been outstanding throughout his four years. During the past year he has been Editor-in-Chief of the "Engineer." He is also a four year member of the Chemical Engineering Society and is its president this year. Phi Kappa Pi, Sophomore Cotillion Committee, and Student Council complete his list of activities.



Summers have found him as a driver-mechanic for a truck manufacturer and a laboratory assistant in an aerial map-making company. Also for two years he has needled Vener as a laboratory assistant. During the Christmas Holidays he works in the Post Office.

Hobby Is Fishing

Fishing is his hobby, but according to his cut-buddy, Uncle Vener, Mr. Schafer's hobbies are far more extensive than he admits.

Socially, he attends all the college affairs in the company of a little lass named Mae, who resides in the vicinity of Drexel Hill.

Self-assured and easy going is this dark-haired, good-looking senior. His sense of humor is highly developed. However, his concentration results in some brilliant ideas which need merely to be applied.

'Song-Fest' Doin's Shock Maw's Boy: Reckons Affair Quite Tolerable

By JEREMIAH GARDENVILLE

I WASN'T a-figgerin' on going' to it in the first place—it bein' so late, an' all—but now that it's over, danged if I hain't right glad I did. Them gals looked mighty purty, even without their aprons on. 'Course, I don't know how good they can cook—but Maw'll prob'ly live quite a while yit.

Eh? Oh, ya'as, I mean that there psalm-singin' they had over to Rosanova, or Villamont, or whatever it is, the other night.

I had aimed to go sparkin' over at Susie's house, but Susie hadn't baked no pies that day, and she said she hadn't no objection to me goin' to the song-fest instead.

Must Be Nice!

Eh? Oh, ya'as, the gals. Well, they was all tintivated an' befurbished fit to kill. I swan, with all those long, colored dresses a-minglin' an' a-mixin', they looked mighty nigh as good as Si Everts' flock of mixed pullets at feedin'-time. Yessir, jest about.

Oh, of course I dozed off durin' part of the affair. It didn't start 'till after eight o'clock. I woke up all of a sudden, wondering why all the young fellers near me was a-settin' on the edge of their seats, clappin' their hands off. Then I saw. It was some gal a-singin' all by herself—Rita something, I rec'lect her name was.

Strange Doin's

Durin' the intermission, I was a-talkin' to one of the ones as was in it. She must've been eating some kind of red jelly-beans or something, and some of the red got on her lips. I figgered on maybe doin' her a favor, and told her about it. But all she did was make some kind of choking giggle in her throat. And then she took another swig out of the little jug — as I tho't — in her hand. Then I looked closer, and seen she was suckin' on a lemon. Honest to gosh-all-catfish, it was a lemon.

That was enough for me. Them college girls is purty, all right, but they eat candy kind of messy-like, and they like lemons. An' they stay up late, too. Took me 'till almost five o'clock to get up next mornin'.

Lay Concert Success To 'Seasoning'

By GERARD BELZ

SUCCESS of the combined Villanova-Rosemont Concert was clearly manifested Sunday night by the very appreciative reception tended by an audience of some nine hundred people.

Further confirmation of the success of the concert became evident when, at the conclusion of the performance, a broad, radiant, unmistakeable smile of satisfaction enlightened the countenance of the director, Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A.

Commenting on the concert, Fr. Handran said, "This year's concert has no doubt surpassed former years and the success is due primarily to the well-seasoning of the group. The two choral groups are just now becoming accustomed to singing together and are effectively functioning as one group."

To single out the best performer —or performers—of the evening is almost impossible but if a very accurate applaudometer would have been utilized we think the results would have given Miss Rita Schildnecht top honors. Her rendition of "On Music's Wing" was superb.

Every great show has its man behind the scenes who contributes greatly to the success but receives little of the recognition. Villanova had two such men in the persons of Father Boyle and Father Vrana.

Father Boyle was the concert committee adviser, the director of the stage settings, and although few of the performers realized it, the source of their fine morale.

Father Vrana, as ever the man who does everything but wants nothing, was directly responsible for the fine amplification which contributed no small part to the general performance.

Last but not least the Villanova singers expressed their appreciation to Mother Mary Paula of Rosemont College, who was responsible for the development of the Rosemont group.

Retake Pictures

Since all "Belle Air" pictures in Zamsky's Studios were destroyed by fire on Thanksgiving eve, all senior portraits must be retaken.

No charge will be made for these sittings provided that each senior have his picture taken at the time specified on the bulletin boards.

Those fourth-year men who still have proofs retained from the first sittings should bring them at the time of this new sitting so that they can point out which pose they liked best and have it duplicated.

COMING into the home stretch of the first semester reminds us that we have only a few more opportunities to make known any thoughts which we consider pertinent to the welfare and progress of Villanova, so here goes. . .

Congratulations to Joe Barnes and the entire student body for their unprecedented response in support of the 150's. This small edition of "Clipper's" Wildcats shows great promise of continuing the winning tradition that we have grown accustomed to during the past years.

On the subject of improvements, we might say that one of our pet ideas for a long time was the inauguration of a lecture series here at Villanova such as is in vogue at most other colleges. The science and engineering schools have been fortunate in having this feature as a regular part of their curriculum and the many interesting speakers who have been presented before this group have served to supplement classroom work and add practical experience to theory. This department feels that such an activity should be a part of every school's activities.

Dr. Harry Gideonse, President of Brooklyn College said recently that the Communist party is "deliberately using the free colleges of New York City as a sounding board for its own activities." This is a classic example of the failure of our schools to develop and inculcate the real American spirit in their students and shows the evil of confusing the "liberty" of free speech with the "licence" to talk down the very ideals of our society and government.

Speaking of winning streaks:

One of the most phenomenal winning streaks in the history of inter-collegiate sports has been compiled by Penn State's soccer team over an eight year period. In this time the Nittany Lions have not tasted the bitter dregs of defeat in 61 contests.

This used to be a man's world:

The inability of Temple's director of dramatics to obtain enough male actors has caused him to change his selection of plays to include more feminine thespians. Adding insult to injury, it was also discovered that Temple has three women editors, two women class presidents, and that women were in the majority in the freshmen class. It looks like the draft has already had its effect. —Temple News

Once burned is not enough:

Jesse Jones' remark last week to the effect that England is a good risk and that we should loan money in addition to our already voluminous material aid reminds us of the ancient proverb. It seems to us that there are records somewhere indicating that the British still have a slight obligation remaining from their last escapade. The frequent recurrence of such statements makes us wish there were more rock-ribbed Americans like Senator Hiram Johnson speaking to the public instead of such "hyphenated Americans" as the said Mr. Jones.

The last straw:

The University of Toledo student council discussed the placing of plainsclothes secret police among the students in order to enforce its campus regulations.

Obsession

By JOSEPH M. GAMBESCIA
(With apologies to Joyce Kilmer)

I think that I shall never see
A course like cat anatomy.
A cat that glares at me all day
As I sadly lift my arms to pray.
A cat who may have in summer roamed
But now is just a bag of bones.
A cat who intimately lives with me
And taunts and haunts this soul with glee.
Poems like this are made by me;
That's why I'm flunking anatomy!

Debaters To Meet Price Forum Team Tomorrow Evening

Beta Gamma, Villanova varsity debating group, will meet the Charles Morris Price Forum team in a Philadelphia Forensic League decision debate tomorrow evening in Philadelphia. John P. Fullam and David N. Reardon will uphold the affirmative of the resolution that the United States should conscript industry in time of need.

The Drexel Institute of Technology team will come here for another league debate on December 16. Thomas DiSipin and Joseph Mahoney will argue the negative of the "conscription" resolution. The Oregon style will be followed in both of these league debates.

Thomas J. Moore, chairman of Beta Gamma, has announced two other definite dates for future debates. Villanova will engage the University of Pennsylvania in a radio debate over station WFIL on January 10, and on February 27 will be host to Princeton's debating squad. Subjects of these two debates will be announced later.

Book Club Discussion Concerns Lawyers, 'White House Squire'

A special meeting of the Book Club will be called tomorrow at 3:15 P. M. in Simpson hall for the purpose of taking a picture for the "Belle Air." The presence of all members is required.

At the gathering last Wednesday two members, Thomas J. Moore and Thomas H. Doyle, Jr., reported on current non-fiction works, "Country Lawyer," by Bellamy Partridge, and "Country Squire in the White House," by John T. Flynn.

In his report on Partridge's book, Moore described the incidents in the career of a typical small-town probate lawyer, the father of the author. According to the writer's narrative, the "country" lawyers of the last era led an exceedingly busy and varied life. Moore expressed the opinion that this type lawyer is less in evidence today and probably will not exist in the future.

From his reading of "Country Squire in the White House," Doyle traced the New Deal's history in the light of the man behind it. Flynn describes Roosevelt as a man with little knowledge of money, taxes, and other vital subjects of government; as a man, who from early life was fascinated by battleships, admirals, and all things pertaining to the sea.

N. Y. Times

"Times" on Dec. 2 stating that no one fitting the description or bearing the name of the accused person has ever been employed or ever was in any way connected with Villanova College, and requested that prominence corresponding to that given the original article be given to a retraction of the statement.

Detective Misquoted

He also wrote to Detective Gaetano, of the New Jersey State Police requesting that he, if he had been erroneously quoted by the "Times," also demand a retraction.

Gaetano immediately informed the president that neither he nor any other member of his department connected with the investigation mentioned Villanova College as being in any way connected with the investigation. He also stated that the only newspaper man he spoke to in connection with the stolen chalice investigation was a reporter for the Trenton "Sunday Times-Advertiser," which quoted him correctly.

Hidden Retraction

The only retraction of the article made by the "Times," placed inconspicuously on page 22 of the Dec. 5 issue, was approximately two inches in length, and is quoted in its entirety as follows:

"A news dispatch from Princeton, N. J., published in the NEW YORK TIMES of Dec. 1, reported that Carl Klein, arrested in Boston for the theft of a diamond studded chalice had been employed as a teacher at Villanova College, Villanova, Pa. This was incorrect. Edward V. Stanford, president of Villanova, asserts that Klein has never been on the staff of the college or in any way connected with it."

No Apology

At the time of this writing, the "Times" had sent no letter to Fr. Stanford apologizing for the error. Last Friday President Stanford dispatched a letter to the "Times" expressing his dissatisfaction with the retraction and urging that it be reprinted on the first page of the paper's Sunday issue.

Heads Admissions

George Weber, sophomore science man, was officially appointed yesterday to the post of Chairman of Admissions to the Kappa Gamma Sigma Society for the current year.

Weber has announced that applications are now available at the information booth and from the officers and must be submitted no later than Wednesday, Dec. 18, at 12:00 noon.

AIEE Men View Films On Power And Voltage

"Power Transformers" and "Induction Voltage Regulation," two films illustrating the practical application of the principles of electrical engineering, were presented to the members of the local A. I. E. E. at a meeting held yesterday.

A review of the past 35 years of engineering and manufacturing progress in the building of transformers was included in the first film. The second, "Induction Voltage Regulation," showed the features and functions of the induction voltage regulator, one of the most important pieces of apparatus in the alternating current system.

ASCE Members Hear "Cement" Discussion Tonight At Banquet

Ten members of the A. S. C. E. with their moderator, Mr. John A. Oakey, M. S., assistant professor of engineering, will attend a dinner tonight at the Engineers Club in Philadelphia.

Speakers at the dinner will be Mr. Frank H. Jackson, of the Federal Public Road Administration, and Mr. Stanton Walker, of the National Sand and Gravel Association. The subject of the evening's discussion will be "Developments in Cement and Concrete."

John J. Skelly, senior, delivered a paper on the "Construction of Modern Highways" at a meeting of the society held yesterday at 11:40 A. M. At 1:00 P. M. the group met again to view slides on "Foundation Problems on the East Side Highway," which were obtained from the parent A. S. C. E.

Other slides on "Boulder Dam" were shown on Dec. 4. These slides as well as those shown yesterday, are prepared by the men actually in charge of these projects who are among the outstanding engineers in the country.

Honor Rolls

C. & F. school are not yet available but will be posted in the Commerce building today.

Those in the science school acquiring a rating of 3:00 or more were: Seniors: Columbus Gangemi, Theodore Kraus, Raphael DeHoratius, Armand Castagna, Robert Kiley, John Begley, Harry Goodman, Joseph Camarda, Eugene Eichman, John Lipka, Charles Dolan, Robert DePersio, William Piscione, and George Urban.

Juniors: Eugene Nelson, Sylvatore Campo, Joseph Koch, Isadore Merlinsky, and Theodore Grieff.

Sophomores: Eugene Labowski, John McGee, Francis McLaughlin, Arsenio Martinez, George Weber, Joseph Gambescia, and Joseph Puleo.

Freshmen, following Samuels: William Hadfield, Robert DeRevere, Louis Fares, and Joseph Tartoreto.

The engineering school will not release an honor roll for the first or third quarters, but will wait until the end of each semester.

"Narcotics"

"One of the most intriguing of scientific studies today is the study of narcotics," stated J. Eugene Nelson, student speaker at the Research Seminar last Wednesday. "The study is important because it includes a great many of the drugs contained in the materia medica today."

Nelson discussed at length the particular narcotics opium, morphine, codeine, papaverine, and narcotine. He stressed the fact that these drugs are habit-forming and produce deleterious effects upon the body since recovery is always difficult and often impossible.

Band Practices With Immaculatans

The Symphonic Band under the guidance of Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., began practice immediately after the Duquesne game for the Band and Instrumental Soloists Concert which will be given at the beginning of February.

For the first time in its history, the Symphonic Band will be made up of students from both Villanova and Immaculata Colleges. In addition to the present members of the Football Marching Band, from twelve to fourteen players will be brought over from Immaculata. They will include one tympani, two oboes, three trumpets, three clarinets and three flutes.

HEAR DR. DRENICK

Dr. Rudolph Drenick will be the featured speaker at the next meeting of the Phi Kappa Pi fraternity. It will be a non-technical speech and will be held in Simpson hall next Monday at 11:35 A. M.

History Seminar Aim Shown as Knowledge Of Democratic Way

Today, at 3:00 P. M., the History Seminar will meet in Simpson hall to discuss administrative problems of handling the current military conscription.

Fundamental objectives of the seminar were set forth by its moderator, Dr. Harold F. Hartman, last Tuesday, Dec. 10, at the weekly meeting of the organization.

"The purpose of the seminar is to acquire an appreciative knowledge of democratic government and democratic institutions. This purpose is hoped to be achieved through the practical application of the cherished privileges of free discussion and free understanding," stated Dr. Hartman.

Dr. Hartman also expressed the hope that democracy might be preserved and made stronger through the work of similar seminars.

Discussing foreign relations and foreign policies, last week's seminar made a survey of the powers of the president and the Congress in respect to foreign affairs. With this as a background three important matters of the present day—the policy of isolation, the evolution of the Monroe Doctrine, and the policy of imperial expansion were considered.

Basca Brilliant In Final Clash As Auburn Outlucks Blue, 13-10

Sportorial

By Bob Funabashi
Guest Columnist

THE books are closed. Now the pigskin becomes deflated and the dummy becomes another mummy. Thirty-nine players have tread the turf for the last time in 1940. Eight of these have closed the curtain on intercollegiate football.

In this hectic campaign of ten weeks, Villanova labored hard and long, yet success on the gridiron became fruitless with loss of five games. Not one major victory was recorded this fall and as one jester put it, "the Wildcat became a pussy cat."

Not so long ago, on the eve of the Manhattan game, Clipper Smith in addressing the Alumni, defined Villanova's position in the sports world. "Villanova" lives in the future and forgets the past."

Yet, we rather favor pausing in the shades of the past and like to dig out a few astounding facts. Over a five-year period (1935-1939) the Wildcats have maintained the second best record of any football team in the nation. Within these same five years Villanova extended an undefeated streak of twenty-three games. And in 1937 and 1938, official football rankings placed Villanova within the category of the ten best teams. Lest we forget, headlines have claimed the names of John Mellus and John Wysocki, who reached All-American heights and Clipper Smith was hailed as the wonder from the coast.

Now that the dust of the past has been shaken off, we'll bet that dollar to a doughnut and look ahead to make a prediction. The 1941 edition of the Wildcats will climb back near the top to be a wise and dangerous feline. It's rare for a coach to say that he'll go undefeated for the season so we won't make the promise of one either.

Somehow and in someway those five defeats will be rectified and during the winter months Clipper Smith and Vince McNally will discover, diagnose and medicate the ailments of the squad.

The loss of a superlative array in Nick Basca, Ed Collins, Bill Piscione, Lindy Kolenda, Harry Dhue, Pete Yankauskas, Stan Stress and Ben Morkum will be felt rather badly, for men who have been mainstays for the past three years. But all the weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth won't bring them back.

Someone must serve the Wildcat, whether it be the up-and-coming freshmen, the sophomores or this year's junior talent. In the present Freshman team lies the speed and running game missing from the varsity squad. Although smaller than in unusal years, the backs are fast and tricky. The yearling line offers a host of reserves for center and end positions and men capable of filling a varsity post. One factor which they do not possess is experience, which proved injurious to Villanova's 1940 varsity team.

When Nick Basca left the field last Saturday for the last time, the big question confronting Clipper Smith was the selection of his predecessor. Without doubt, Nick was one of the greatest backs ever to wear the Blue and was the true leader of the 'Cats. Now that he has gone, who will wear jersey "60"? From the freshman squad we can name Pezelski or Mosca; out of the sophomore list come the names of Eusko and Smith, and from the juniors, Howlett and Behot are prevalent. If Clipper can unveil another Basca, Villanova's future was never brighter.

Fourth Period Blocked Punt Enables Plainsmen to Upset Villanova in Tilt

Lady luck, the kind old lady who has helped the Wildcat out of many a predicament, turned her back on the 'Cat last Saturday at Montgomery, Alabama, and on a rain-soaked gridiron battlefield, Auburn, trailing by a 10-0 score came rambling back in amazing fashion to register two touchdowns and set Villanova deeper in the road of ruin.

For the second year in a row, Villanova has traveled South to meet the Plainsmen in the finale of the season and both times the Wildcats have returned home a much sorer 'Cat and one "without the bacon." Last year Auburn eked out a 10-9 decision and this year the 13-10 victory was in short, unearned. For the Blue was no doubt the better team, but the loser.

Basca Great

Not for a long time has Montgomery witnessed a more masterful exhibition of football and the star of this game, as in past clashes, was Nick Basca who rounded out his collegiate career in brilliance. Perhaps is was the fact that Nick played his last game and that Villanova displayed its finest blocking and kicking of the year, that the crown arose spontaneously to cheer as the Phoenixville flash left the game.

In his final game, Nick passed a touchdown, kicked a 30-yard field goal, carried a punt back for 61 yards and did 75 per cent of the remaining chores. To the 5,000 soaked fans he was the standout of the game and will be watched when he makes his return engagement in the North-South game at Montgomery.

His cousin Joe Yednock, starting for the first time this year put on another show by himself with some accurate and long distanced punting. Added to that, he made a jumping catch in the third period

To Honor Squad At 19th Annual Football Dinner

Loyalty Award Will Be Presented at Bellevue Stratford Gathering; Many Personalities Expected

Alumni and followers of the Villanova grid forces will unite this evening to honor the squad and coaching staff at the 19th annual football dinner to be held in the main ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. It will begin at 7 o'clock.

More than four hundred people are expected; including Very Rev. John Sheehan, O. S. A., Provincial of the Augustinian Order; Very Rev. Joseph Hickey, Assistant-General of the Order; famous athletic coaches and personalities, sportswriters, radio commentators and leaders in alumni affairs.

Feature of the evening will be the presentation of the Loyalty Award to the alumnus who has contributed most to Villanova during the year 1939-40. Cyril Burke, Detroit, received the award last year.

To Show Movies

Another attraction of interest to football fans will be the motion pictures of the outstanding football games and action plays during the current season. These pictures will be presented through the courtesy of the Paramount Picture Corp.

One of the chief speakers of the evening will be Maurice (Clipper) Smith, varsity coach. It is believed Smith will give an inkling of his plans for the 1941 edition of the 'Cats.

Invitations have been extended to many of the most prominent athletic personalities in the nation. They include Ray Morrison, Temple University coach; George Munger, mentor of the famous Penn eleven; Bert Bell, owner-coach of the Philadelphia Eagles and the famed Jimmy Dykes, fiery manager of the Chicago White Sox, who has a son enrolled at Villanova.

Scribes Expected

Also expected to be present from the Fourth Estate are the scribes who covered Villanova during the season. Among them will be Red Smith and Jim Gallagher, Philadelphia Record; Perry Lewis, Inquirer; Ross E. Kaufmann, Bulletin and Tommy Lovett of the Ledger. Kirby Kushing and Hal Simons will represent the radio fraternity.

Chairman of the dinner is Joseph Freeney, '27, while Martin J. McLaughlin, '14, will be toastmaster. Music for the occasion will be furnished by the Villanovans.

This dinner is sponsored annually by the members of the Villanova Alumni Club in honor of the fine work of the members of the football squad, coaches and managers.

Nick Basca Accepts North-South Game Bid

With Texas A. & M. accepting the Cotton bowl bid against Fordham, Nick Basca will not have the opportunity to again face Big John Kimbrough and his mates in the North-South game at Montgomery, Alabama, on December 28th, as was expected.

Basca received an invitation to join the Northern squad last week and he immediately accepted. The senior Aggie players had planned to join the Southern representatives but with the acceptance of the bowl bid they were forced to drop out. Carl Snavely of Cornell will join with Lynn Waldorf, Northwestern, in directing the North team.

This marks the third year for the game which is rapidly gaining interest and now rivals the East-West game in gaining the pick of stars in the East and Midwest. Several members of the Cornell team, Charley Drulis of Temple and many other have signified their intention of playing with the North.

MURRAY INJURED

Elk Murray, junior end was the only member of the squad who received serious injury on the Auburn trip. Murray dislocated his shoulder but should be fully recovered in two weeks.

Varsity Cagers Card Three Foes For Coming Week

Severance Sharpshooters Will Meet Upsala and Wittenberg at Field House and Travel to Albright

By FRED CLARK

With the first two games of the young basketball season now things of the past and the results safely stowed away in the record books, the varsity basketballers of Villanova College enter into the "meat" of the schedule this week.

Three games in four days is the menu offered to the followers of Coach Al Severance's varsity five during the coming week. For an appetizer, the 'Cats engage Upsala College on Friday night in the Villanova Field House. The main course will be fed to the 'Cats in the form of the Lions of Albright College on Saturday evening on the home court of the Lions at Reading. And for dessert the 'Cats will attempt to consume the "Fighting Lutherans" of Wittenberg College on Monday night, when hostilities are resumed on the home floor in the Field House.

Vikings on Rebound

Upsala will arrive on the Main Line with a team that is an unknown quantity so far as the home forces are concerned. No elaborate press notices have been forthcoming from the East Orange school, so it may be that they are planning to take the Wildcat five by surprise and take the sharp edge off that appetite. Villanova had little trouble in subduing the Vikings last year to the tune of 49 to 28, but it may be a different story this year.

On the other hand there is no secrecy enveloping the actions and prospects of the 'Cats' second opponent of the week—Albright. Advance notices from Reading state that the Lions will possess one of the greatest basketball teams in Albright's history. And that is saying plenty, considering the fact that the Lions play a 23 game schedule that includes such top-flight basketball schools as Long Island University, Seton Hall, and Rice Institute.

Coach Neal Harris has three veterans returning from last year's team which lost to the Wildcats, 46-34, in the persons of Bill McKinney, Paul Petruka, and Red Sheffer. However, the rosy outlook is due to the presence of last year's Frosh team which lost only one game out of sixteen and around whom this year's team will be built. Dick Shc nberger, Chin Rhoads, Ken Hopkins, Bill Spangler, and Jim Kane are some of the sophomores from whom Coach Harris expects big things this year.

High Scoring Star

The "Fighting Lutherans" of Wittenberg College arrive on the scene Monday evening with one of the highest scoring college players in the country in Cliff Heskett, 150 pound forward. Last year Heskett became the first Wittenberger to pass the 300 mark in scoring when he chalked up 307 points, and he

Lightweight Club Dinner Guests

The members of the 150-pound football squad were the honor guests last Tuesday evening at a student-sponsored dinner in recognition of their fine work this season. The lightweights finished second in the Eastern Intercollegiate League with four victories and two defeats.

After a delicious steak dinner, the squad members and guests heard short speeches by Rev. Bernard Albers, O. S. A., Rev. Joseph Dougherty, O. S. A., "Clipper" Smith and Tom Casper.

Smith congratulated the squad on its excellent record and said, "You have put a bright light in the athletic picture at Villanova this season just when the varsity fortunes were at low ebb." He also praised the work of Coach Tom Casper in his first year as mentor.

Coach Casper thanked the authorities and squad members for their cooperation during the season and singled out several players for special praise.

Frank Lombardo received the Alumnus Award as the most valuable member of the team. Lombardo was fullback for three years. Following the dinner, movies were shown of several varsity and lightweight games.

Southern Sunning For Senior Gridders

Austin Natators Win Swim Title

Blue Splash to Six Firsts Amassing 36 Points; Gleeson Sets Record

By PAUL McCANN

The natators of Austin Hall splashed their way to a decisive triumph in the Intra-Mural Swimming Meet held in the pool at the Field House Wednesday night. The Austin swimmers gained a total of 36 points. Fedigan's representatives were next with 13 points, and the mermen of Alumni, Mendel and C. and F. earned 7, 4, and 3 points respectively.

Joe Naylor got Austin off on the right foot by winning the opening event, the 50-yard free style, in 27.4 seconds and from that moment on the outcome of the meet was never in doubt.

John Green gave a good exhibition of fancy diving in winning all of the springboard events. Boudon, his teammate from Austin, was second. This is the second year in a row that these boys have finished one-two in the diving contest.

Riley Wins Freestyle

One of the most brilliant performances of the evening was Ed Riley's victory in the 100-yard freestyle swim in the fine time of one minute and eight-tenths of a second—to give Austin one of its six first places.

In the 50-yard breaststroke race, Frank Desmond spread-eagled his competition by winning in the impressive time of 31 seconds.

Vogel, of Fedigan, back-paddled his way to the only first place not captured by Austin by staving off the late challenge of Kohleen of Alumni in the 50-yard backstroke event.

The highlight of the evening came after the conclusion of the meet. Joe Gleeson established a new pool record by swimming underwater the remarkable distance of 72 yards.

Summary:

50-Yard Freestyle — Won by Naylor, Austin; second, Breen, Mendel; third, Healy, Fedigan. Time: 27.4.

100-Yard Freestyle—Won by Riley, Austin; second, Clarken, Fedigan; third, Schappen, Alumni. Time: 1.00.8.

50-Yard Breaststroke: Won by Desmond, Austin; second, Leo Hin, Austin; third, Fenton, Mendel. Time: .31.

50-Yard Breastroke—Won by Vogel, Fedigan; second, Kohleen, Alumni; third, Pete Hin, Alumni. Time: 35.4.

Fancy Diving—First, Green, Austin, 72 points; second, Boudon, Austin, 60 points; third, Gilday, Alumni, 52 points.

100-Yard Relay — Won by Austin (Moore, Green, Holland and Naylor); second, Fedigan (Goodman, Murphy, Robinson and Healy); third, Alumni (Galzitti, Buchennis, Zamunski and Swan). Time: 50.5.

Medley Relay — Won by Austin (Riley, Desmond and Leo Hin); second, C.&F. (Haley, Manly and Con-ess); third, Fedigan (Vogel, McElligott and Clarken). Time: 42.5.

QUITE A DISTINCTION

Barney McAloon, senior forward on the court squad, can claim to be one of the smallest varsity court players in the nation. McAloon, who reaches five feet, six inches skyward, is playing his first year of varsity ball. He was a member of the intramural squads for three years.

Clipper Smith began his annual tour of the banquet circuit by speaking last night at the all-sports dinner of the West Chester Teachers' College.

Austin's Firemen Turn Waterbugs

Frosh Continue Unbeaten Pace

The Villanova freshmen court representatives won their second game of the current season and maintained the undefeated record carried over from last year by defeating the Malvern Prep Alumni, 50-21, on Saturday evening at the field house.

Using almost the entire squad, the yearlings found the alumni club an easy target. Chuck Drizen, former prep star, continues to pace the club in scoring by scoring 19 points. Seven field goals and five fouls accounted for his total.

Won Opener

The opening game on Monday found the frosh rather handily defeating Conshohocken, 58-20. Drizen and Klotz led the scoring.

Drizen, Lord and Klotz have been scoring with ease to lead the rest of the team in scoring. Klotz's fine ball handling has caused much comment among the fans, but the real spark plug in the team seems to be mite "Major" McDonald, who has instilled a fighting spirit in the squad.

A. P. Announces Blue Standing

Through yesterday's Associated Press release, Villanova was given ninth place in the teams of the nation over a five year period. Last year Villanova was established in a two-way tie for second place and after a not-too-successful season dropped to ninth place.

The Wildcats, according to the A. P., have won thirty-three games, lost nine and tied three for a percentage of .786. They have tallied 812 points against their opponents and have had 250 points scored against them.

to snak Nick's touchdown pass to put the 'Cats on the march. But the irony and injustice of it all was the exasperating note of a blocked kick of Yednock's which put the Plainsmen ahead and insured their victory.

Scoreless Half

Villanova and Auburn battled in the rain in the first half and neither could account for a score. Then in the third period the 'Cats turned the battle in their favor.

After an unsuccessful field goal try, Nick pitched a pass to Lindy Kolenda on the Auburn 20. From that point the 'Cats worked the pigskin to the yard stripe and on last down, Basca took a poor pass from center, picked it up and ran to his right evading half the Auburn line. On the run he threw a swift pass to Yednock who jumped up to catch it, amid two Tiger backs, to score.

Field Goal

Another fine kick return by Basca got the gnal 'Cat scoring drive going. After two aerials were incomplete, Nick stepped back to his 30 and booted a field goal.

also highlighted the season by scoring 20 points against Long Island University.

Six lettermen returning from last year's high-scoring quintet, bolstered by as many capable newcomers to the squad, seem to indicate that Wittenberg will again boast of a first rate club. The six returning lettermen are seniors Dick Caton, Ed Chatlain, Norman Foster, Cliff Heskett, and juniors Vic Kowalczyk and Jim Reusswig.

Finish High

Wittenberg is a member of the 20-team Ohio Conference and last year they finished in the first quarter of this group. However each year the "Lutherans" make a pre-Christmas conditioning tour through Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, and it is on this trip that they meet the Wildcats. On this Eastern swing this year, Wittenberg will play seven games in eight days but the Villanova quintet cannot depend on engaging a travel-weary team since this game is the second one scheduled on the trip.

Last year the Wildcats won a thriller from the Springfield (Ohio) team when they eeked out a decision after trailing 15 to 14 at half-time.

Bright Future Seen For Frosh

Speed and Excellent Form Are Keynotes of Yearlings in Initial Tests

One of the classiest aggregations ever to represent Villanova on the court is rapidly rounding into shape. With two wins behind them, the Wildcat yearlings are ready to wade through the remainder of a schedule, tentatively drawn up but not yet confirmed. Playing their first year together, the Frosh have moulded well into a unit. They have given indications of becoming one of the greatest, if not the greatest team in the history of the sport at Villanova.

Acclimating themselves readily to the system under Coach Al Severance the freshmen form a quintet which is smart, speedy aggressive, and cooperative. They excel in all departments of the game, and are equally dangerous on both outside and inside shots.

Display Varsity Calibre

Team play being supreme, there is no player thus far who has established himself as the star. Sporting some names prominent in scholastic circles about Philadelphia last year, in addition to those from neighboring states, the Frosh stand ready to extend the winning streak started by their predecessors now performing so capably on the varsity.

Chuck Drizen, "Reds" Klotz, and Al Rapello are the nucleus of this high scoring outfit.

As Al Severance sees it, "They should, added to the material which will be available from the present varsity, present one of the strongest quintets for 1941-42."

Frosh Run Wild

Just one week ago the Frosh ran wild against a Conshohocken outfit in the preliminary game to the Varsity tilt. In their decisive 58-20 victory, the squad showed excellent form in shooting with Klotz and Drizen pacing the way.

It was very pleasing to Coach Severance to see the band of ball displayed by his yearlings and certainly this quintet is a fine defensive ball club as indicated by the score. Although lacking height, the club is speedy and elusive.

NOW RIVALS

Two former Villanova court stars and teammates are now rivals in the Tri-County League. Johnny Krutulis, '39 is a member of the Harrisburg Caissons, while Duke Duzminski, '40 is playing with the Norristown entry. This is one of the fastest pro loops in the east with many American League stars also playing in it. This marks Krutulis' second year in the league.

HERE AND THERE

By JIM HAUGHTON

THE last edition found our ebullient boss, Mr. Barnes, dipping his Remington in vitriol and coming out with some loud and lusty yells about other colleges' not wanting to schedule Al Severance's quintet. This produced an amazing amount of publicity for Barnes in general, and sympathy for Villanova in particular.

But if last Saturday's exhibition was any criterion, there should be a turnabout in sympathy. Not for Villanova—but for the teams which failed to answer the 'Cat requests for games. Because these teams might have been embarrassed to the point of losing.

Thoroughly recovered from its opening jitters, the team even had Severance smiling. And everybody knows that he has been pulling a Gil Dobie since way back in September.

Good Foundation

We're not trying to kid ourselves that Villanova will have its greatest court season in history. But we do know that they have the foundation for a very good club. One that will produce some bad moments for visiting mentors. Individually the team members are equal to any in the East. Paul Nugent and Chuck Yund would be welcomed by any coach. Nugent is a smart, alert leader who can fathom the opponents' play. Yund, on the other hand, is a steady fighter who gets in his rival's hair. He has shown that for two years. The other lads on the club, like Gray, Woods, Spector, Gerland and Kelty, can come through when necessary.

This week-end should provide the final answer as what to expect for the season. Albright has a surprisingly strong club with a good plebe team as the basis. The Berks County school expects its biggest court season and is plugging this game as one of the big attractions. You all remember the Wittenberg game last season. The Ohioans were playing their opening game and did unusually well, only to lose. This time they will be out to redeem themselves.

The mention of basketball brings to mind the report that the soon to be released frosh schedule is supposed to be bigger and better than ever. But it doesn't have to be too good to be better than in former years. Except for Brown Prep and a few more teams, the yearlings have had soft pickings.

Consider Fans

Easy opponents enable a club to build up an impressive record, but it is not fair to either the fans or the players. The customers come to see a good game. Yet they have to be content with watching five guys named Joe who are willing to play for gas money and a shower. And the players become indifferent.

Last year the suggestion was made that a definite schedule be arranged with the leading high, prep and college teams in an attempt to create new rivalries. We hope the new schedule will fulfill this order. For good opposition contributes to a more interesting program and bigger crowds. We all welcome the change.

Duffy Successful

Bill Duffy, former boxing captain, is meeting with much success in his pro fistic career. He has already gained more than a dozen victories and is still undefeated. His fine showings up New England way have enabled him to gain New York booking. He recently won a bout at the Bronx Coliseum and is scheduled for Madison Square Garden on the 13th and White Plains on the 17th of this month.

Joe Greco, who gained a first string end post on the UP all-state team, was formerly a member of the '41 class. He transferred to Susquehanna after his freshman year. Scribes labeled him the "Adhesive Tape Kid," because even with injuries he managed to star. Oddities in the news: Ed Collins made the AP all-state team and didn't even receive honorable mention on the UP selections. Something's wrong somewhere.

Fordham Gossip

Fordham's Len Eshmont is fondling a juicy offer from the New York Giants, although he will deny it at present. They also say the Rams are considering Manhattan and Boston College for future booking.

With N. Y. U. scheduling the Texas Aggies for next season it will probably put a stop to rumors that Temple will play the Texans in 1941.

Late Bulletin

Officials for the varsity football banquet to be held this evening announced that John Keffer, '25 will receive the Alumni Loyalty award. Dr. Edward Burke, '23 will make the presentation.

Several prominent speakers have been added to the program. They include Colonel Arthur S. Foran, '09, Speaker of the New Jersey State Senate. Colonel Foran is the father of Dick Foran, Hollywood movie star. Others will be William "Big Bill" Hollenback, former Penn grid star, Jim Henry, La Salle football coach, and Joseph Tomlin, president of the Sandlots Sports Association.

'Cat Courtmen Triumph Easily

Varsity Open Winter Season With Double Win Over St. Francis and Rider

One big first-half scoring rampage notched Villanova's victory-minded 'Cats their second straight win of the season Saturday night at the Field House as the Blue and White easily subdued Rider College of Trenton, 38-27.

Previously on Monday night, Severance's sharpshooters found little trouble in defeating St. Francis of Pa. 38-30 in the season's debut.

Capturing a 25-9 lead at the end of the first half in the Rider clash, the 'Cats breezed on to an easy win by playing a strong defensive game for the remaining time, to maintain a comfortable margin.

Co-Captains High

Rather erratic in the opening minutes, the squad found their shooting eyes and scored almost at will. By half time they had piled up a comfortable margin and in came Coach Al Severance's second and third teams. Co-captains Chuck Yund and Paul Nugent led the line of firing, accounting for seven points apiece, while Bill Woods, Fred Gerland and Art Spector each scored six points apiece.

This combination which led the 16-field goal barrage worked well together in the game, dispelling the thoughts of many who feared the 'Cats would be lost without their leader of last year, Duke Duzminski. Gerland who played a good defensive game first snapped the 2-2 tie after the tap-off and then the Cats rolled on easily, functioning well.

Passing Weak

Rider went to the lead, 5-4 on Henry d'Aiutolo's mid-court shot then Chuck Yund retaliated to put the 'Cats into the lead on a one-hand stab from the side. Immediately Villanova went on a spree with Nugent and Bob Kelty caging two field goals. From that point the lead increased until half time when the quintet left the floor with 16 point lead.

The second half found Rider pecking away at the lead but never getting the second and third teams on the run. In that half, every member of the varsity squad saw action.

Rider was aided in scoring by Villanova's poor passing.

Basketball-Conscious Chuck Yund Holds Firm Belief In Army Life

By BILL CAREY

IF there is anything you want to know about a sport called basketball just look up Chuck Yund. For here is a gentleman who eats, sleeps and plays a very good court game.

Throwing the leather ball through the hoop, dribbling about on the wooded way and other duties connected with the game manage to make Yund a rather busy young man. But he does admit a warm spot in his heart for Doc Macbeth's American Literature course.

Naturally, a lad showing such proficiency in the game must have had an early inclination for it. For way back in the twenties, when Chuck was but nine years of age, he engaged in his first basketball exhibition. And he is now twenty-two. So you see he has a pretty fair foundation.

Albany Product

To anyone acquainted with Villanova basketball Yund is a familiar name. The Albany, N. Y., product is now playing his third year on the varsity and still occupies the spotlight. His steady floor game, his dogged determination and amazing vitality have won him the respect of coaches and scribes through the Eastern states. While it is still a bit early to be prognosticating, the experts predict Yund stands an excellent chance of clinching a berth on the all-state team.

It is easy to write about Yund's easy going gait which is a campus tradition, but one must not forget Paul Nugent. For forgetting Nugent is almost as bad as forgetting Yund. These two have been inseparable since they met four years ago in Alumni hall. If you find them conversing, it will prabably be about one thing—you guessed it—basketball.

Military Man

Chuck did his preparatory work at LaSalle Military Academy out on Long Island. He matriculated there four years, making quite a name for LaSalle and himself by being an all-around athlete. The military life has ably trained him for any work Uncle Sam may decide in the draft. He admits a liking for the life of a "Kaydet." The constant demand for physical fitness has left a definite mark on him, as his excellent condition will verify.

Chuck is not much for talking but is known better for his quiet, pleasant manner. But there is one matter which he keeps pretty much to himself. And that's his middle name. It seems the cognomen is a hand-me-down from his grandfather and while Chuck is proud of it, he'd much rather keep it to himself. He insists it's a bit too melodious.

Vacations?

The past summer found Chuck on vacation and as expected he went in for some diversification by playing basketball. Working at a summer camp he cavorted daily with many of the stars from the college teams in the New York City area. Believe it or not, he ran up 23 points on Hooks Anderson, for-All-American at N. Y. U.

Every athlete has a particular memory which he loves to muse over. Yund's pleasant memory concerns last year's game with Waynesburg, when the 'Cats, faced with a 19-point deficit, managed to come through and defeat the Western Pennsylvania club—and by 10 points.

On the scholastic side of the ledger we find that Yund is enrolled as a senior in the School of Commerce & Finance

First To Join Red Cross

Opening the college's part in the 1941 Red Cross Roll Call, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., President, and sponsor of the drive here, is pictured as he purchased the first membership last Tuesday from James P. Collins, who is directing Villanova's membership drive. Thomas H. Doyle, Jr., left, and Joseph A. Barnes, behind Fr. Stanford, were next in line to join the Red Cross.

Support Of Roll Call Urged

With the intention to do her bit in "Serving Humanity," Villanova opened her part in the 24th American Red Cross Roll Call last Tuesday with the sale of the first memberships.

Aiming to exceed the meagre contribution made by the students in a class-to-class collection last year, James P. Collins, editor-in-chief of the VILLANOVAN, took charge of selling the $1.00, $5.00 and $25.00 memberships and odd contributions stipulated by the humanitarian organization.

But, according to Collins, to date the drive "has fallen far short of expectations. Few students have cooperated to make the college's donation to the Red Cross, one of the most worthy and useful organizations in America—a presentable one."

The drive will continue until the Christmas holiday with all contributions being accepted both at the booth in front of the main entrance to Mendel hall and in the VILLANOVAN office.

Collins asked support of this Roll Call by stressing the worthiness of the cause. He urged all Villanova students "to make it their business to stop at the booth selling the memberships and add their share to the great sum that will be expended during 1941 on easing the burden of those Americans less fortunate than we are.

"The Red Cross not only carries on its famous work on the battlefield and in time of disaster, but spends half of its funds on improving the conditions and even saving the lives of the family that may live right next door to you."

Belle Masque Smoker Thursday

Belle Masque will hold its first annual smoker on Thursday evening, Dec. 12, at 8:30 P. M. on the stage of the Field House.

Anthony J. Frayne, director, has appointed a committee of five to arrange the details. Chairman John McGovern promises a highly interesting evening's entertainment for all attending members. Joseph McCabe is engaging a program of speakers and James Halpin is in charge of refreshments. John Faraci and Joseph Kiefer are assisting in this work.

At this affair Rev. Francis X. Boyle, O. S. A., will be formally inducted into the society as its faculty moderator for the current year.

The stage will be especially decorated for the occasion and various faculty members will be guests of honor.

Final arrangements will be made at a meeting of the society this afternoon in room 104, Mendel hall at 2:30 P. M. All potential members must settle their financial obligations in order to receive a membership card of admission.

Keys To E. P. T.

Keys to be given to senior members of Epsilon Phi Theta and a proposed amendment to the group's constitution which will provide for a compulsory meeting every two weeks were discussed at the fraternity's meeting last Wednesday.

Math Club Plans Joint Meetings

Plans to hold joint meetings with mathematics students of local colleges were announced to the Mathematics Club by Joseph E. Dorsey, junior electrical engineer and chairman of the program committee of the society.

Dorsey further stadted that all future monthly meetings will be at night; most of them will be held with groups from other colleges.

By having the meetings with the students of other schools, the program committee expects to get more variety and to give the meetings social appeal as well as a scholastic one.

Contacts have been made with Rosemont, Immaculata, the College of Chestnut Hill, St. Joseph's, and La Salle. A schedule of the joint meetings is to be released as soon as replies from all have been received.

15 Seniors Chosen To Assist Eichman

Dinner - Dance Committee Formed to Select Site and Manage Affair of Feb. 22

Preparations for the senior socials moved ahead today with the appointment of 15 members of the class to assist Edward A. Eichman, chairman of the Dinner-Dance, in selecting the site of the affair and a plea by class treasurer James T. Brady for further payment of class assessments so that a top "name band" may be procured for the Belle Air Ball.

Members of the class selected to serve on the dinner committee are: Clifford Randolph, Richard Healey, Frank Lombardo, John Looney, Anthony Sachetti, James Haughton, and Edward Wagman, commerce students; Daniel Keating, Edward Kelly, Norbert Smith, and John Maguire ,engineers; and Eugene Eichman, David Morse, Fred Steller, and Robert De Persio, science students.

These men will aid the chairman in sorting through the many recommendations offered for possible sites and will secure either a country club or a hotel which will best comply with the interests of the class. Eichman expects preparations to gain momentum with the committee's appointment and to have the site signed during the Christmas vacation. His intention is to have unique decorations and favors at the dance and make the affair the most unusual of recent years.

In appealing for prompt payment of class assessments, Brady emphasized the fact that a much larger amount of capital is needed if a high-ranking orchestra is to play at the Belle Air Ball. Up to this date only $200 has been realized in class dues.

When 40 or 50 more seniors contribute to the treasury their $10 assessment, Ball Chairman Brosmer will be able to sign a band of the desired caliber. As things stand, it will be impossible for the class to sign any of these orchestras since all ask nearly $1,200, a large portion of which must be paid in advance.

Chem Society

Completes Second Trip of Five on List — Penna. Sugar Co. Visited Last Thursday

Members of the Chemical Society made an inspection tour of the Pennsylvania Sugar Company on Delaware Avenue, Philadelphia, last Thursday, Dec. 12.

Among the industrial processes of the company viewed were the manufacture of raw sugar, 'dry' ice, alcohols and other organic chemicals.

Second in a series of five plant trips to be undertaken by the society during the year, the trip was arranged through the courtesy of Dr. G. T. Reich, chief chemist of the company.

Dr. Reich sent blue prints, flow diagrams and mimeographed descriptions of the operations for each member of the society and on Monday, Dec. 9, at the regular society meeting, Nicholas Aceto, Karl Vogel and William Delahanty presented talks on the various operations.

Prof. Henry To Present Annual Legal Instruction

William C. Henry, assistant professor of Business Administration and advisor to pre-law students, will conduct the annual meeting of sophomore pre-legal students today at 1:15 P. M. in room 101 of the commerce building.

The meeting will consist of a discussion and explanation of the various legal aptitude tests and of the recent novel comprehensive test given by the Massachusetts bar examiners.

CONTRASTS WITH EUROPE

Dr. Rudolf F. Drenick, instructor in mathematics and physics, spoke on his personal experiences as a traveler and undergraduate student in the University of Vienna yesterday before Phi Kappa Pi, telling of his acquaintance with men of renown and pointing out the contrast of European life to American life.

Initial Belle Masque Smoker Great Success

"Unusually successful" was the expression Anthony J. Frayne, director, used to typify the first smoker held by Belle Masque since its revival five years ago. Last Thursday evening approximately forty members of the dramatic society gathered on the stage of the Field House to indulge in a bit of merriment.

Rev. Francis X. Boyle, O. S. A., addressed the group as its new moderator, expressing the necessity of spirit in such an organization. He envisioned great possibilities for the continued success of the society. Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., and Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., past moderators, also spoke to the gathering, as did Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A. dean of men, and the various officers.

John T. Gallagher, business manager, has been forced to relinquish his position to James Halpin because of pressing engagements.

During the course of the evening's entertainment, Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., showed motion pictures of "Winterset" and "Journey's End," past successes of the club. Ed "Alec Templeton" Kubler played numerous selections on the piano and Chris Kiefer strummed a guitar solo. Robert Whalen, Secretary of Athletics, accompanied a community sing on the piano.

Concluding the evening, sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee were served and cigars and cigarettes distributed.

Swartz's 4:00 Leads '42 C&F

Bernard Swartz led the junior class of the Commerce and Finance school with a perfect 4:00 rating, according to the grades released by the Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean.

Other junior class honor men included Thomas Sullivan, Edward Frank, Ernest Klappenbach, Anthony LaBrasca, James McElligott, and John Jakovic.

The senior class, with an average rating of 2.08, led the commerce school. The sophomore and freshman classes were next with an average of 1.87, followed by the junior class with 1.84.

The senior, sophomore, and freshman honor rolls were published in last week's issue of the VILLANOVAN.

Christmas Program

Tonight at Chapel Seminary Choir to Sing Seasonal Hymns

Seminary students of St. Mary's hall will sing and present a program of sacred music for Christmas this evening at chapel services.

Under the direction of Mr. Thomas Purcell, O. S. A., the program will include Silent Night; Adeste Fideles; Gesu Bambino by Yon, and Panis Angelicus. Following these selections, benediction will be sung by the students.

Since the last student Mass before the Christmas holidays will be celebrated tomorrow, the organist is to play a selection of Christmas music.

Historians Analyze Johnson Act Facts

Repeal of the Johnson Act was discussed last Tuesday at the final 1940 meeting of the History Seminar in an open forum session.

Loans to Britain was the central topic of discussion, with fever waxing high in the forum. Senator Hiram Johnson's Act, which faces a possible repeal in Congress next session, was discussed pro and con. All present agreed that the veteran Senator's reputation would offer a formidabe block for any repeal move.

Dr. Harold F. Hartman and Rev. John J. Dunne, O. S. A., were present to guide and moderate student opinion and tempers. After approximately an hour-and-a-half of discussion, the meeting closed with "no decision reached."

Fr. Stanford Completes Tour

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., President of the college, completed his formal schedule of yearly visits to the Alumni Clubs at a banquet sponsored by the Trenton Club on December 5. Col. Arthur Foran, parents of the present students of the college, and numerous other distinguished guests, were in attendance.

Althbough this concluded Father Stanford's formal program, there is a strong possibility that he will visit, later in the month, a California Club which is in the process of formation.

January 17 winds up the first part of the instruction for Lorry Jones, Bob Dooley, Walt Mason, Joe Gallagher, Bob Starr, John Parsons, and Joe Schultes. However, these chaps together with some members of our alumni who also are "bats about flying" plan advanced courses almost immediately.

And being at the airport one day last week watching them go through their paces, or rather their loops, I can readily understand the attraction. In fact, now even I am a confirmed bird man.

of fanciful, bird-like planes soaring, diving, spinning, and landing. And the ordinary person resents his inability to accept the challenge since it is not as simple to step into an airplane and ask a friend to teach you to fly as it is to learn the operation of an automobile in that way. All of this makes the C. A. A. just that much more valuable. It takes the place of the friends and leaves nothing to be desired.

Relations Club At Immaculata Jan. 9

Cultural relations between the United States and the Latin American Nations will be discussed at a symposium to be held by the International Relations clubs of Villanova and Immaculata on Thursday, January 9, at Immaculata College.

Five eight-minute papers will be read. The speakers will trace the cultural developments of these nations and compare their similarities and divergences.

William Schubert, junior artsman, will present a paper dealing with the cultural developments of the United States. John Fullam, junior education student, will deliver a paper on the religous and educational conditions of the Latin-American countries and the United States.

Immaculata students will deliver the three remaining papers dealing with the same general topic.

"With all the saints in Heaven God can make room for one More," so spoke Mother Mary Lawrence of Rosemont College during an address on St. Thomas More, delivered before the Science Forum last Thursday.

Mother told the assembly some of the less widely known facts of the saint's private and public life. Many humorous anecdotes about him were related in presenting a picture of the man as he really was.

Skelly Plans

Trip to Suburban Water Company Plant in Springfield for Student A. S. C. E. Chapter

Plans for an inspection trip to the Suburban Water Company's Springfield plant by the student A. S. C. E. immediately after the holidays were announced last week by John J. Skelly, senior civil engineer and chairman of the society's trip committee.

Permission has been obtained for the students to examine the experimental laboratory of the plant in the course of their tour. Other main points which they will inspect include the dam and the reservoir, the settling tanks, the filtration system, and the pumping station.

Interest in the trip is heightened by the fact that Springfield is the source of the college's water supply. From the main plant the system spreads out to cover the entire suburban area, and the company's auxiliary tanks are to be found all through the section.

'Mechanicals' To View Film On Plastics Jan. 27

The student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at Villanova will see the film "New World Through Chemistry" at their meeting on Jan. 27.

This motion picture is a sound film in color that shows the great strides that have been made in chemistry in recent times. The uses and the process of making plastics is fully reviewed and many future uses to which plastics may be put are graphically described.

SENIORS TO DECIDE BAND

A very important meeting of the senior class will be held today in the Amphitheatre at 1:00 P. M. At this time J. Gorden Brosmer, Belle Air Ball chairman, will speak on the bands available for the dance and receive the class' opinion. Dues will not be discussed.

It's Still Christmas!

TO US Americans, Christmas is the most joyous of holidays. We celebrate it with great feasting, by giving gifts, with Christmas trees and beautiful decorations. To our fellow-men across the seas, Christmas once meant much the same thing. The fact that this year it will not mean that to them should make us mindful all the more of that first Christmas so many years ago.

No war, no matter how great or how devastating, can blot out what happened on that day, or the effect that day has had and will always have upon mankind.

With this in view, the VILLANOVAN staff wishes you all happiness for the holiday season. May the sorrow of other nations not dull your appreciation of Christmas as a holiday; may the irreligion of other peoples not dull your appreciation of it as a holy day.

—J. P. F.

Let Them Starve?

THE Government of London issued a statement last week through her late ambassador, Lord Lothian, which must have left a distasteful impression in the minds of many Americans. In effect, the message has made impossible American aid for Europe's hungry this winter. It was indeed a noble gesture on the part of "the sole remaining stronghold of democracy in Europe".

The Five Small Democracies, by virtue of this decree, will be left to the inevitable famine and pestilence which confronts them. A National Committee headed by former president Hoover had planned to ship foodstuffs to Finland, Norway, Holland, Belgium, and Central Poland, but Great Britain has revealed that such shipments will not be permitted to pass the blockade.

Britain feels that the responsibility for feeding conquered countries should rest with Germany, and that our scheme would be of material assistance to Germany's war effort. The first contention we can dispel in the light of the food survey of Europe, which leaves no doubt of the conditions that will exist in Germany and the Nazi-vanquished nations this winter.

If our efforts will assist Germany's war effort, we care to remind Britain that the blood of some of these nations was sacrificed for her effort in the same conflict. We are eager to recall that their husbands and sons were slaughtered in what amounted to mass murder, that their homes were destroyed, that their fields and crops were burned and confiscated—all this they suffered resisting the same force that is threatening England.

And now His Majesty's Government would deprive them of the right to feed their children, it would condemn these nations through no fault of their own to starvation and disease.

—H. A. McC.

Guide To Peace

IN A CHRISTMAS cartoon, captioned "Education", issued by the Associated Collegiate Press last week, a solution was presented to the horrors of war and tyranny in the form of a lone star looming in the distant horizon. This is indeed a noble attempt at pointing out a path through the maze of horrors created by this man-made hell we call war, but we firmly believe that they could have gone one step further in captioning the star—for it was supposed to represent the Star of Bethlehem—by calling it Christian Education.

Christian Education! Love of God and Neighbor . . . Charity and Justice foremost in men's dealings with one another . . . and Truth! These should be the dominant principles of an Educational Philosophy which would arrive at a rational solution to existing problems.

Without them, a system becomes materialistic. It reduces man to the animal status. It makes him a bond servant of the state, not an integral and individual part of its highly complicated mechanism. Without them, Might becomes Right and the devil take the hindmost. Without them, a strong militant minority can oppress and keep in subjective servitude the majority.

Christian Education, as outlined by the Holy Father, Pope Pius XI, in his encyclical on Christian Education, is the solution to war.

—A. J. D'A.

You Can't Beat Spirit

THE recent football season, disastrous though it was from the standpoint of games won and lost, produced many gratifying results. In the first place, it proved than any Villanova team, even a losing one, is possessed of that intangible and oft-abused word "spirit."

The spirit of the Villanova football team is best exemplified in the war cry it shouts on lining up for every defensive play. And it is to their everlasting credit that Clipper's boys never forgot that cry, even in the Detroit and Temple debacles.

So let us now salute a team which was beset by injuries and ill-fortune, but which never forgot its war cry or what that war cry signified.

—T. F. D.

A CHRISTMAS SUGGESTION

Give Books This Time For Enduring Pleasure

By FR. FALVEY, Librarian

DURING the Christmas season many people waste valuable time in wondering what to offer as a present to a friend. Did you ever stop to consider a book as a Christmas gift? Frequently a home or a family is judged by the books in its library, and a person is judged by what he has read. It has been said that books are our best friends. They are enduring remembrances and sure companionship. A good book will never grow old. It may be read and re-read without its becoming obselete.

If a Catholic is to present a book to a friend, the selection should be a book that is Catholic in its scope.

This does not mean that the book must be devotional or pietistic. However, it does mean that life is portrayed just as it is, without the glorification of vice or sin.

On two occasions during this present year Our Holy Father has strongly urged all to read good literature. He has stated that good books will be the lamp of the Sanctuary, always ready to point out the way to the faithful. The Supreme Pontiff knowing the value of books stated, "You desire pleasant conversations, wise and comforting words, and rightly detest blasphemy and corrupting speeches. Therefore, seek out good books and hate the bad."

During this year many good books have come from the pens of various authors. The following is a list of some recent and good publications:

BIOGRAPHY

Benson, E. F.
Final Edition. $3
An autobiography also treating of the remarkable Benson family.

Borden, L. P.
"Once in Palestine." $1.50
A beautiful story of the birth and life of Christ by a popular author.

Ferrara, O.
"Borgia Pope." $3.50
A true unbiased portrait of the much maligned Pope Alexander VI.

Kelly, J. B.
"Cardinal Hayes, One of Ourselves." $1.75
An interesting biography of the late "Cardinal of Charity" by one of his former subjects.

Lemcke, P. H.
"Life and Works of Prince Gallitzin." $2.50
A vital portrait of the Russian aristocrat known as "Apostle of the Alleghenies."

Margaret, H.
"Father de Smet." $3
Presents the remarkable work of a Belgian priest among the savage Indians of this country.

Meynard, T.
"Queen Elizabeth." $4
An account of the enigmatic Tudor Queen "Good Queen Bess."

Rankin, C.
"The Pope Speaks." $2.75
Contains the words of the Pope on vital current affairs and a biography.

Shulte, P.
"Flying Priest Over the Artic." $2.75
A world war pilot gives the daring flights and living conditions of the Eskimos.

HISTORY

Walsh, W. T.
"Characters of the Inquisition." $3
With original sources he removes numerous dark clouds that have hidden this important historical event.

Baldwin, M. W.
"Medieval Papacy." $1
An accurate history of ecclestiastical policy during 1049-1254.

DRAMA

Lavery, E.

College Chatter

By Joe McCabe

ALTHOUGH it was supposed to be strictly a stag affair, the presence of two "girls" at Amateur Night momentarily caused a commotion. However, the dainty little things turned out to be a part of Austin's show.

This may appear to be a bit of stale information, but the after-effects are still being heard. One of the female impersonaters is literally being besieged by would-be escorts and this popularity is so great that a date book has come to be a necessity. What'll they do next?????

Now that the football season is officially over, we herewith present our nominations for All-American escorts: "Tony" Anderson is so taken up with "Doie" that he sits in his room and moods — the big thing — if he doesn't hear from her. This procedure is bad, as our star found out when he tried to get a date for the basketball game on Friday night and learned to his chagrin that she was busy. . .

"Elk" Murray is almost in the same boat, although he's been wearing that ecstatic look of late due to the presence of the "Pride of Montclair" in the immediate vicinity. . .Bill Howlett and Ed Korisky are two more stars, but their sentiments, if any, are a little better covered up than the others. It loks as though there really are some varsity cut-ups—even off the gridiron.

To Fred Kull goes the title "Mr. Glamour Boy of the Campus". We doubt if there's any opposition to this statement, because of the overwhelming popularity of the candidate. This unaffected charm was most recently put to test during the rehearsals and performances of the joint Rosemont-Villanova concert.

A gentleman at all times, he proceeded to render every assistance necessary to the comfort of the young ladies—even playing porter to a harp. Not only is he a by-word at Rosemont, but the question always asked at Immaculata is "Do you know Fred Kull?" Need the title be disputed further?

DOTS AND DASHES:

Jack McMahon is really worried about a young little nurse from Bryn Mawr, due to the fact that he can't make up his mind whether it will be Women In White or the Home Economics gal from the Island. . .

"Li'l Abner" Smith doesn't wish it made known publicly, being in character, that the young lady whose valises he so nobly carried not so long ago has him hiding from all the rest of "them purty girls'.

"Rick" Frey and Ed Bennis must like variety. Neither one of them has been able to fix his attention on any one individual, but rather they prefer to play escort to many. Maybe they don't talk enough when out on a date!. . .There appears to be international trouble brewing in Puerto Rico because the campus Atlas is sadly neglecting the titian Senorita.

Bill Guyton, soph engineer, claims there's nothing like getting in "with a real first-rate Y. M. C. A. crowd." When he spends his week-ends in Germantown, the sharper trots down to the local "Y" dances to make the local stock lucky—though Germantown's "stuff" certainly can do all right by itself.

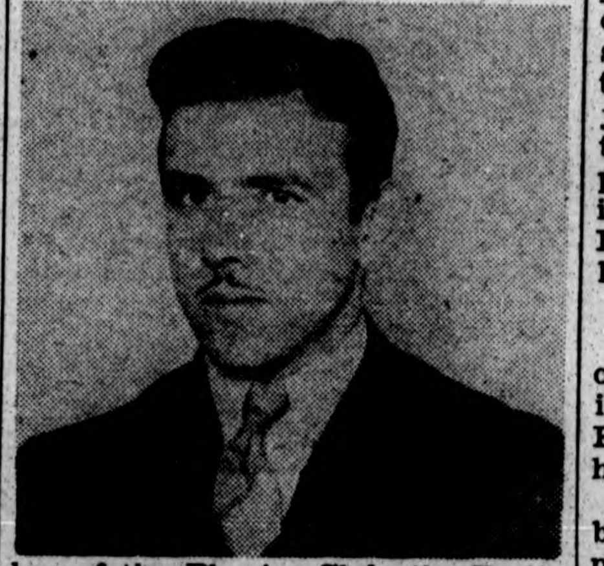
Since this is the last issue of the year 1940, we wish one and all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. This gentle holiday thought pertains even to all the Rosebuds who threaten mayhem on sight.

Meet The Boys: Trust Mer And Andy To Do Things Dandy; In Crises They're Handy

By JOHN P. FULLAM

TYPICAL of the VILLANOVAN Office are three things: clattering typewriters, paper all over the floor, and heated arguments on current affairs. Typical of the last-named is suave, little-but-lively Andrea J. D'Angelo.

This sheet's Literary Editor, militant editorialist, and poet, D'Angelo is a man of inexhaustible talents. After three years at Southeast Catholic High School in Philadelphia, in which he did anything and everything, he entered Villanova, where he continued along the same general lines. The list of his high school activities left your biographer gasping—he was editor of the school paper and an associate editor of the year-book; played the lead in the senior play and in other productions; was a member of the Physics Club, the Radio Club, the German Club, the Latin Club, and the Italian Club; took part in intramural basketball and track; was Salutatorian; received an award for general scholastic excellence; won third place in a student poll for the ideal student; and received a scholarship to Villanova.



And Still More

Well, when that was over, Andrea J. paused just long enough to get his second wind, and then proceeded to take Villanova by storm. Now a senior in the Education department, he has been a member of the VILLANOVAN staff for three years, a member of the German Club, the History Seminar, Epsilon Phi Theta, the International Relations Club, and the Ring Committee. And, of course, the Honor Roll.

Fencing and swimming are his recreations, and the former, augmented by his quite famous poetry, has earned him the nickname "Francois Villon," of which he says, with as much ardor as any six-footer: "I'd like to throttle the guy that started it."

The Nickname Fits

"Francois'" literary activities are more extensive than physical Francois. He is the author of nine one-act plays in Italian, in which he acts, produces, and directs. Right now he's rehearsing for one play as an actor and directing another.

One of his English plays was presented o'er the ether, but school activities interfered with the continuation of a series which was originally planned.

As if this were not enough, dapper D'Angelo informs us he's done everything "from huckstering to sheet metal work" during vacations. When we asked, naively, just what that might include, he told us—and how! "Farm work, painting, carpentering, upholstering, delivering ice, translating from Italian to English, tutoring in most high school subjects. . ."

He's a Cozy "Kid"

To stop him we had to ask another question, about his romantic interests. "They don't call me Francois Villon for nothing" was his highly indicative reply.

Ralph Bracken, the Gloucester boy, has been his inseparable companion all through Villanova. With Ralph he has "argued on every subject under the moon." But he's "never been able to get him to roll an 'r' ".

After graduation, Andrea intends to write—"the truth"—and to teach English. We don't know who his pupils will be, but they're going to have a time getting ahead of Mr. Andrea J. D'Angelo.

THE 1941 Belle Air's College Editor is a red-headed senior from Wilmington, Delaware —John Merwin Bader. John has done a lot of other things as well, in the active course of his life to date — things which ought to be made known.

To begin with, he was born. June 29, 1919, was the date; Wilmington (Del.) the place. Some years thereafter, he entered Salesianum High School, where he was Secretary of his senior class and Editor of the year-book, the Salesianum "Grasshopper."

Hopped to the C. & F.

After his graduation in 1936, it was but a brief hop from the "Grasshopper" to the Commerce and Finance department of this institution, with Accounting as his "piece de resistance."

Upon the completion of two years' tycooning, John decided to ascertain whether or not he was fitted for the religious vocation, and entered the Novitiate of the Oblates of Saint Francis de Sales at Childs, Maryland. The answer was no, and after about a year there he withdrew.

And so, in the fall of 1939, the Wilmington wonder was back again. This time, John enrolled as a Junior in the School of Arts. In addition to carrying a necessarily burdened curriculum, "Mer" staff-wrote for the Belle Air and was a member of the Sanctuary Society, the History Seminar, and the International Relations club.

Paging J. M. B.!

Nowadays, if you're hunting for Bader—and someone usually is—you'll find him in one of three places—at Band practice, setting a new high as general efficiency expert (he's Manager, you know); in the Belle Air office, struggling to make this another All-American year; or in class, asking questions.

And speaking of classes, we asked John what his favorite was. With typical tact, the lad replied, "Well, uh, that's treading on dangerous ground, dont' you think?"

He's the same way about girls. Lest some fluttering feminine heart be offended, he declined to mention any names. And all the time he was answering the question, it was apparent in which direction his every thought was straying — toward some Belle Air work he was doing.

There He Goes!

The sight of "Mer" scurrying about the halls from room to room is a familiar sight at examination time. Because of his extraordinary schedule, he has at times found it necessary to take more than one exam in the time allotted for one. As a matter of fact, we've heard there's a movement afoot called the "Amalgamated Followers of Bader" — composed only of those who can complete an exam in ten minutes or under. The phenomenon lies herein: he gets honor grades.

To predict a brilliant future for John Merwin would be tautological. That's an accepted fact. His energy, his abilities—and his irresistible scarlet thatch — will take him anywhere he wants to go. Just wait and see.

GOING HOME?

Students who wish to use the special-fare train to Newark and New York are urged to be at the P. R. R. Station at 1:00 P. M. tomorrow. The round trip fare is $3.10. Twenty-five students must be at the station before tickets will be sold. Students may return on any train but must go to Newark or New York as a group.

The "Immaculatan's" 'Camera Hop' Deserves Support Without Stop

By WILLIAM J. TOY

HAVE you seen a certain young man strolling about the campus these days in gleeful spirits? If you have, and no doubt you have, that certain person must be one Joseph Rozum who has secured the job of playing for the Camera Hop — a new dance on the Immaculata campus —to be sponsored by the Immaculatan, student publication.

It seems that the Immaculatan has pressing need for a new camera which costs something like one hundred dollars in the coin of the realm, and that's not hay. Therefore, the staff in a blissful moment of inspiration arrived at the marvelous deduction that a dance would be the ideal method for raising the funds and, at the same time, provide social entertainment for the members.

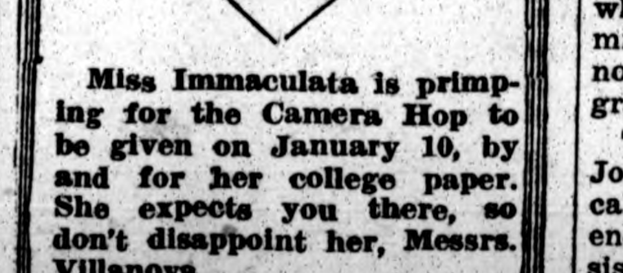
Noble Initiative

It is time to applaud when our young women show that spirit of self-reliance by raising the money themselves for the implements necessary in the workings of a newspaper. The future looks bright for us, their future husbands. I wonder if they can say the same for us?

Now, my dashing young devotees of terpsichore, if it should strike your passing whims, it would be appreciated by the staff of the Immaculatan if you would purchase yourself a ticket to this event and deposit the small donation of $1.50 in the camera treasury. In fact, I have it on good authority that even if you can not secure yourself a fair damsel to accompany you on this adventure because of such short (?) notice, the girls from the neighboring campus could entice some lovely creature to give you a break and be your guest. Such arrangements can be made through our front office, 119 Mendel.

Can you visualize the VILLANOVAN in like difficulties? Would you rally to the cause or would you allow us to progress week after week in the same rut without a picture to our name. After all, what is a paper without a camera?

The perenial gripe of transportation will probably arise, but this can be nipped in the bud since the dance is to be held in the surrounding territory at the Bala Country Club in Bala-Cynwyd. Much foresight was shown in the selection of this spot because now none of our eligibles can plead inaccessibility to the hall. The item of convenience usually plays a large part in the success of a dance and, since it is desired to make this dance a success, it was decided to hold it near Philadelphia.



Miss Immaculata is primping for the Camera Hop to be given on January 10, by and for her college paper. She expects you there, so don't disappoint her, Messrs. Villanova.

Local Lads to Play

For the men of Villanova a homey atmosphere will exist since the dancopations will be supplied by the campus band under the direction of Joe Rozum and Fred Kull. These fellows seem to get around as they are also scheduled to play at the next Harcum Junior College dance.

So, as a parting reminder, let's all get out and give the girls a hand. They're aiding Villanova in the coming symphonic concert, and the least we can do is to be well represented at their dance. Let's back both the Villanovans and the girls by a large attendance at the Bala Country Club on the coming January 10.

Start the year right—you'll have a good night.

It's Still Christmas!

TO US Americans, Christmas is the most joyous of holidays. We celebrate it with great feasting, by giving gifts, with Christmas trees and beautiful decorations. To our fellow-men across the seas, Christmas once meant much the same thing. The fact that this year it will not mean that to them should make us mindful all the more of that first Christmas so many years ago.

No war, no matter how great or how devastating, can blot out what happened on that day, or the effect that day has had and will always have upon mankind.

With this in view, the VILLANOVAN staff wishes you all happiness for the holiday season. May the sorrow of other nations not dull your appreciation of Christmas as a holiday; may the irreligion of other peoples not dull your appreciation of it as a holy day.

—J. P. F.

Let Them Starve?

THE Government of London issued a statement last week through her late ambassador, Lord Lothian, which must have left a distasteful impression in the minds of many Americans. In effect, the message has made impossible American aid for Europe's hungry this winter. It was indeed a noble gesture on the part of "the sole remaining stronghold of democracy in Europe".

The Five Small Democracies, by virtue of this decree, will be left to the inevitable famine and pestilence which confronts them. A National Committee headed by former president Hoover had planned to ship foodstuffs to Finland, Norway, Holland, Belgium, and Central Poland, but Great Britain has revealed that such shipments will not be permitted to pass the blockade.

Britain feels that the responsibility for feeding conquered countries should rest with Germany, and that our scheme would be of material assistance to Germany's war effort. The first contention we can dispel in the light of the food survey of Europe, which leaves no doubt of the conditions that will exist in Germany and the Nazi-vanquished nations this winter.

If our efforts will assist Germany's war effort, we care to remind Britain that the blood of some of these nations was sacrificed for her effort in the same conflict. We are eager to recall that their husbands and sons were slaughtered in what amounted to mass murder, that their homes were destroyed, that their fields and crops were burned and confiscated—all this they suffered resisting the same force that is threatening England.

And now His Majesty's Government would deprive them of the right to feed their children, it would condemn these nations through no fault of their own to starvation and disease.

—H. A. McC.

Guide To Peace

IN A CHRISTMAS cartoon, captioned "Education", issued by the Associated Collegiate Press last week, a solution was presented to the horrors of war and tyranny in the form of a lone star looming in the distant horizon. This is indeed a noble attempt at pointing out a path through the maze of horrors created by this man-made hell we call war, but we firmly believe that they could have gone one step further in captioning the star—for it was supposed to represent the Star of Bethlehem—by calling it Christian Education.

Christian Education! Love of God and Neighbor . . . Charity and Justice foremost in men's dealings with one another . . . and Truth! These should be the dominant principles of an Educational Philosophy which would arrive at a rational solution to existing problems.

Without them, a system becomes materialistic. It reduces man to the animal status. It makes him a bond servant of the state, not an integral and individual part of its highly complicated mechanism. Without them, Might becomes Right and the devil take the hindmost. Without them, a strong militant minority can oppress and keep in subjective servitude the majority.

Christian Education, as outlined by the Holy Father, Pope Pius XI, in his encyclical on Christian Education, is the solution to war.

—A. J. D'A.

You Can't Beat Spirit

THE recent football season, disastrous though it was from the standpoint of games won and lost, produced many gratifying results. In the first place, it proved than any Villanova team, even a losing one, is possessed of that intangible and oft-abused word "spirit."

The spirit of the Villanova football team is best exemplified in the war cry it shouts on lining up for every defensive play. And it is to their everlasting credit that Clipper's boys never forgot that cry, even in the Detroit and Temple debacles.

So let us now salute a team which was beset by injuries and ill-fortune, but which never forgot its war cry or what that war cry signified.

—T. F. D.

A CHRISTMAS SUGGESTION

Give Books This Time For Enduring Pleasure

By FR. FALVEY, Librarian

DURING the Christmas season many people waste valuable time in wondering what to offer as a present to a friend. Did you ever stop to consider a book as a Christmas gift? Frequently a home or a family is judged by the books in its library, and a person is judged by what he has read. It has been said that books are our best friends. They are enduring remembrances and sure companionship. A good book will never grow old. It may be read and re-read without its becoming obselete.

If a Catholic is to present a book to a friend, the selection should be a book that is Catholic in its scope.

This does not mean that the book must be devotional or pietistic. However, it does mean that life is portrayed just as it is, without the glorification of vice or sin.

On two occasions during this present year Our Holy Father has strongly urged all to read good literature. He has stated that good books will be the lamp of the Sanctuary, always ready to point out the way to the faithful. The Supreme Pontiff knowing the value of books stated, "You desire pleasant conversations, wise and comforting words, and rightly detest blasphemy and corrupting speeches. Therefore, seek out good books and hate the bad."

During this year many good books have come from the pens of various authors. The following is a list of some recent and good publications:

BIOGRAPHY

Benson, E. F.
Final Edition. $3
An autobiography also treating of the remarkable Benson family.

Borden, L. P.
"Once in Palestine." $1.50
A beautiful story of the birth and life of Christ by a popular author.

Ferrara, O.
"Borgia Pope." $3.50
A true unbiased portrait of the much maligned Pope Alexander VI.

Kelly, J. B.
"Cardinal Hayes, One of Ourselves." $1.75
An interesting biography of the late "Cardinal of Charity" by one of his former subjects.

Lemcke, P. H.
"Life and Works of Prince Gallitzin." $2.50
A vital portrait of the Russian aristocrat known as "Apostle of the Alleghenies."

Margaret, H.
"Father de Smet." $3
Presents the remarkable work of a Belgian priest among the savage Indians of this country.

Meynard, T.
"Queen Elizabeth." $4
An account of the enigmatic Tudor Queen "Good Queen Bess."

Rankin, C.
"The Pope Speaks." $2.75
Contains the words of the Pope on vital current affairs and a biography.

Shulte, P.
"Flying Priest Over the Artic." $2.75
A world war pilot gives the daring flights and living conditions of the Eskimos.

HISTORY

Walsh, W. T.
"Characters of the Inquisition." $3
With original sources he removes numerous dark clouds that have hidden this important historical event.

Baldwin, M. W.
"Medieval Papacy." $1
An accurate history of ecclestiastical policy during 1049-1254.

DRAMA

Lavery, E.
"Theatre for Tomorrow." $3
It contains three plays, Damien, Savanorola and Campion, with an outline of Catholic drama and a list of plays.

NOVELS

S. M. C.
"Sparks in the Read." $2
A tale of mans heroic struggle against the evils inherent in the Industrial Revolution.

Dudley, O. F.
"Tremaynes and the Masterful Monk." $2
A penetrating psychological love story with a fast moving plot.

Kaye-Smith, S.
"Ember Lane." $2.50
A story of the Sussex moors and a long forgotten mystery.

Keyes, F. P.
"Fieldings Folly." $2.50
A romance of the Church's most recent literary convert.

Shepard, E.
"Murder in a Nunnery." $1.75
A delightful mystery portraying how a convent behaves under an exceptional event.

Undset, S.
"Madame Dorothea." $2.50
Portrays the true love of a woman for her man.

College Chatter

By Joe McCabe

ALTHOUGH it was supposed to be strictly a stag affair, the presence of two "girls" at Amateur Night momentarily caused a commotion. However, the dainty little things turned out to be a part of Austin's show.

This may appear to be a bit of stale information, but the after-effects are still being heard. One of the female impersonaters is literally being besieged by would-be escorts and this popularity is so great that a date book has come to be a necessity. What'll they do next?????

Now that the football season is officially over, we herewith present our nominations for All-American escorts: "Tony" Anderson is so taken up with "Doie" that he sits in his room and moods — the big thing — if he doesn't hear from her. This procedure is bad, as our star found out when he tried to get a date for the basketball game on Friday night and learned to his chagrin that she was busy. . .

"Elk" Murray is almost in the same boat, although he's been wearing that ecstatic look of late due to the presence of the "Pride of Montclair" in the immediate vicinity. . . Bill Howlett and Ed Korisky are two more stars, but their sentiments, if any, are a little better covered up than the others. It loks as though there really are some varsity cut-ups—even off the gridiron.

To Fred Kull goes the title "Mr. Glamour Boy of the Campus". We doubt if there's any opposition to this statement, because of the overwhelming popularity of the candidate. This unaffected charm was most recently put to test during the rehearsals and performances of the joint Rosemont-Villanova concert.

A gentleman at all times, he proceeded to render every assistance necessary to the comfort of the young ladies—even playing porter to a harp. Not only is he a by-word at Rosemont, but the question always asked at Immaculata is "Do you know Fred Kull?" Need the title be disputed further?

DOTS AND DASHES:

Jack McMahon is really worried about a young little nurse from Bryn Mawr, due to the fact that he can't make up his mind whether it will be Women In White or the Home Economics gal from the Island. . .

"Li'l Abner" Smith doesn't wish it made known publicly, being in character, that the young lady whose valises he so nobly carried not so long ago has him hiding from all the rest of "them purty girls'.

"Rick" Frey and Ed Bennis must like variety. Neither one of them has been able to fix his attention on any one individual, but rather they prefer to play escort to many. Maybe they don't talk enough when out on a date!. . .There appears to be international trouble brewing in Puerto Rico because the campus Atlas is sadly neglecting the titian Senorita.

Bill Guyton, soph engineer, claims there's nothing like getting in "with a real first-rate Y. M. C. A. crowd." When he spends his week-ends in Germantown, the sharper trots down to the local "Y" dances to make the local stock lucky—though Germantown's "stuff" certainly can do all right by itself.

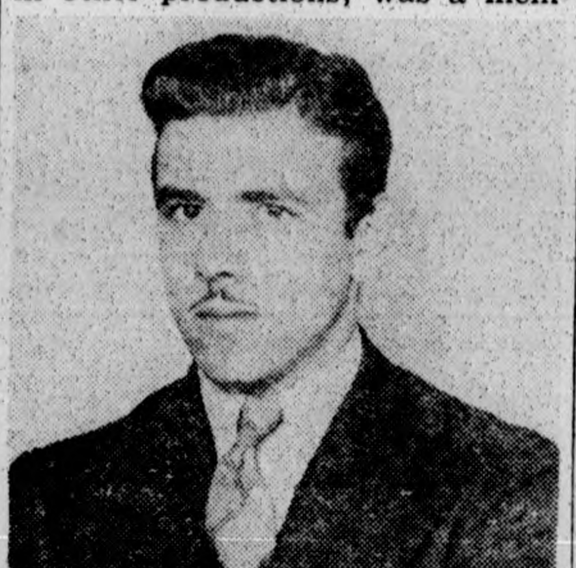
Since this is the last issue of the year 1940, we wish one and all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. This gentle holiday thought pertains even to all the Rosebuds who threaten mayhem on sight.

Meet The Boys: Trust Mer And Andy To Do Things Dandy; In Crises They're Handy

By JOHN P. FULLAM

TYPICAL of the VILLANOVAN Office are three things: clattering typewriters, paper all over the floor, and heated arguments on current affairs. Typical of the last-named is suave, little-but-lively Andrea J. D'Angelo.

This sheet's Literary Editor, militant editorialist, and poet, D'Angelo is a man of inexhaustible talents. After three years at Southeast Catholic High School in Philadelphia, in which he did anything and everything, he entered Villanova, where he continued along the same general lines. The list of his high school activities left your biographer gasping—he was editor of the school paper and an associate editor of the year-book; played the lead in the senior play and in other productions; was a member of the Physics Club, the Radio Club, the German Club, the Latin Club, and the Italian Club; took part in intramural basketball and track; was Salutatorian; received an award for general scholastic excellence; won third place in a student poll for the ideal student; and received a scholarship to Villanova.



And Still More

Well, when that was over, Andrea J. paused just long enough to get his second wind, and then proceeded to take Villanova by storm. Now a senior in the Education department, he has been a member of the VILLANOVAN staff for three years, a member of the German Club, the History Seminar, Epsilon Phi Theta, the International Relations Club, and the Ring Committee. And, of course, the Honor Roll.

Fencing and swimming are his recreations, and the former, augmented by his quite famous poetry, has earned him the nickname "Francois Villon," of which he says, with as much ardor as any six-footer: "I'd like to throttle the guy that started it."

The Nickname Fits

"Francois'" literary activities are more extensive than physical Francois. He is the author of nine one-act plays in Italian, in which he acts, produces, and directs. Right now he's rehearsing for one play as an actor and directing another.

One of his English plays was presented o'er the ether, but school activities interfered with the continuation of a series which was originally planned.

As if this were not enough, dapper D'Angelo informs us he's done everything "from huckstering to sheet metal work" during vacations. When we asked, naively, just what that might include, he told us—and how! "Farm work, painting, carpentering, upholstering, delivering ice, translating from Italian to English, tutoring in most high school subjects. . ."

He's a Cozy "Kid"

To stop him we had to ask another question, about his romantic interests. "They don't call me Francois Villon for nothing" was his highly indicative reply.

Ralph Bracken, the Gloucester boy, has been his inseparable companion all through Villanova. With Ralph he has "argued on every subject under the moon." But he's "never been able to get him to roll an 'r'".

After graduation, Andrea intends to write—"the truth"—and to teach English. We don't know who his pupils will be, but they're going to have a time getting ahead of Mr. Andrea J. D'Angelo.

THE 1941 Belle Air's College Editor is a red-headed senior from Wilmington, Delaware—John Merwin Bader. John has done a lot of other things as well, in the active course of his life to date — things which ought to be made known.

To begin with, he was born. June 29, 1919, was the date; Wilmington (Del.) the place. Some years thereafter, he entered Salesianum High School, where he was Secretary of his senior class and Editor of the year-book, the Salesianum "Grasshopper."

Hopped to the C. & F.

After his graduation in 1936, it was but a brief hop from the "Grasshopper" to the Commerce and Finance department of this institution, with Accounting as his "piece de resistance."

Upon the completion of two years' tycooning, John decided to ascertain whether or not he was fitted for the religious vocation, and entered the Novitiate of the Oblates of Saint Francis de Sales at Childs, Maryland. The answer was no, and after about a year there he withdrew.

And so, in the fall of 1939, the Wilmington wonder was back again. This time, John enrolled as a Junior in the School of Arts. In addition to carrying a necessarily burdened curriculum, "Mer" staff-wrote for the Belle Air and was a member of the Sanctuary Society, the History Seminar, and the International Relations club.

Paging J. M. B.!

Nowadays, if you're hunting for Bader—and someone usually is—you'll find him in one of three places—at Band practice, setting a new high as general efficiency expert (he's Manager, you know); in the Belle Air office, struggling to make this another All-American year; or in class, asking questions.

And speaking of classes, we asked John what his favorite was. With typical tact, the lad replied, "Well, uh, that's treading on dangerous ground, dont' you think?"

He's the same way about girls. Lest some fluttering feminine heart be offended, he declined to mention any names. And all the time he was answering the question, it was apparent in which direction his every thought was straying — toward some Belle Air work he was doing.

There He Goes!

The sight of "Mer" scurrying about the halls from room to room is a familiar sight at examination time. Because of his extraordinary schedule, he has at times found it necessary to take more than one exam in the time allotted for one. As a matter of fact, we've heard there's a movement afoot called the "Amalgamated Followers of Bader" — composed only of those who can complete an exam in ten minutes or under. The phenomenon lies herein: he gets honor grades.

To predict a brilliant future for John Merwin would be tautological. That's an accepted fact. His energy, his abilities—and his irresistible scarlet thatch — will take him anywhere he wants to go. Just wait and see.

Austin's Museum Is Amateur Hit

C&F Day Students, Alumni and Mendel Halls Place in Judging

Austin hall repeated its intramural Amateur Night victory of last year by winning the judges' decision before an overflow crowd at the Field House last Wednesday night. C. & F. merited second with Alumni and Mendel following in third and fourth places, respectively.

Directed by Andy Melton, the Austinites brought the pennant to Father McKee's hall with their presentation of "Madam B's Wax Museum." Featured in the skit were Jack Green and Bill Appel as the James brothers; Joe McCabe, as Queen Victoria; Dan Savini and Eddy Elman, playing the accordion; John Burke, as a feminine spectator; and Jack Gallagher, as announcer.

Commerce and Finance ran a close second with an old-fashioned minstrel show termed the "Greatest Show This Side of Heaven." Outstanding in the show were "Judge" Winterbottom, "Major" MacDonald, John Parson and "Carmen" Sacchetti.

Alumni, finishing third with a skit entitled "A Day at Villanova," gave imitations of faculty members and world personalities. Mendel's version of a Villanova-Temple rivalry during the "stone age" took fourth place.

D.P.E. Frat Makes Plans For January 17 Dance

Plans are rapidly taking shape for the first annual winter dance of Delta Pi Epsilon, business school fraternity, which will be held on January 17 in the Field House.

President George Flannery announced that the appointment of co-chairmen will take place shortly. Tickets, costing $1.50, will be distributed after the holidays. Publicity and advertising will be taken care of by the various committeemen to be appointed to work in collaboration with the chairmen. The dance will be informal and all the students are cordially invited to attend. It is anticipated that this dance will act as a reunion for the business school graduates. Music will be furnished by the Villanovans, who recently received the highest commendation in "Metronome," a musical magazine.

German Club Dances

Friday evening over thirty members of the German Club of Chestnut Hill attended a meeting with Villanova's German Club in the reception room of Simpson hall.

Main feature of the meeting was the motion picture "Konzert en Tirol"—"Symphony in the Mountain." The picture featured the renowned Vienna Choir Boys in a Yuletide role.

After the picture the members sang German Carols and favors were distributed among the guests.

Refreshments and dancing concluded the meeting.

Kee, Collins, Joseph A. Barnes, retiring sports editor, the new editor and the new sports editor. Keys will then be presented to deserving senior members of the staff.

The affair will be formal and is restricted to members of the VILLANOVAN staff and their guests. About 65 students are eligible to attend.

Gallagher, who was also toastmaster and chairman of last year's dinner-dance, is making efforts to insure the success of the affair. In previous years the dinner-dance has been held at the Arcadia International Restaurant, in Philadelphia, but this year it was decided that a site outside the city would be more desirable.

Seniors who will retire this year include, in addition to Collins and Barnes: Murray P. Zealor, managing editor; Andrea J. D'Angelo, literary editor; Henry L. Mancuso, photography editor; Robert P. Schisler, circualtion manager; James F. Haughton and Thomas J. Moore, columnists; Walter T. Brown, George J. Flannery, William J. Toy, David E. Morse, Victor J. Corbett, William Epifanio, Harry P. Goodman, and Joseph M. Santaniello, staff members.

L. K. D. Fraternity Considers Pledgees

Lambda Kappa Delta, science school fraternity, expects to complete the list of students being considered for membership before the end of the present semester. During the last few days the board of admissions has interviewed approximately forty applicants who have been recommended by the faculty.

Names of those who will be eligible for the probationary period previous to the formal induction will be posted before vacation begins on Wednesday. The board will act immediately to insure the rushees a full-member rating by the time the new semester opens in February.

Atlantic Refining Men Address Frosh Engineers

Talks by Edward Birch and John McIlvain, personnel officers of the Atlantic Refining Company, closed the freshman engineers' orientation program for the first semester on Monday, Dec. 9.

Birch spoke on plant personnel and McIlvain discussed research and personnel development, emphasizing the desirable characteristics of employees.

These talks by outside men followed the series of formal talks by members of the faculty in which the factors entering into satisfactory interviews were enumerated and discussed.

Brotherhood Of Man Belle Air Theme

Following a meeting of the Belle Air staff last Friday afternoon, Thomas J. Moore, editor-in-chief, announced that the theme of the 1941 issue will be "The Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man."

The Belle Air will show in its introduction the Fatherhood of God to be the reason for furthering the Brotherhood of Man. College activities will be shown in the light of promoting better relations between fellowmen to combat present-day methods which are operating in direct contrast.

Despite being handicapped by pictorial material destroyed in the fire which gutted Zamsky's studios, the Belle Air staff is proceeding favorably. Approximately 128 of the 260 pages have been completed.

'Cats Coast To Beat Wittenberg Quint, 34-31

Spector, Wood, Star In Conquest As Substitutes See Much Action

Severance Uses Varsity Sparingly in Nosing Out Ohio Five in Field House Battle; Defensive Work by Spector Features Drab Contest Played Before 1500 Fans

With the prolific use of substitutes Al Severance guided his varsity court squad to their fifth straight conquest of the season last night, winning over Wittenberg College, 34-31.

Looking good while the starting five were in the ball game the 'Cats piled up a comfortable margin which slipped considerably when the substitutes began to pour from the bench Severance's contention that he lacks capable reserves outside of Dick Gray was quite definitely proven by last night's demonstration.

Sharpshooter Bill Wood led the Wildcat attack with three field goals and five fouls for eleven points, with Chuck Yund trailing closely with four twin-pointers and a free throw for nine points.

Most outstanding for Villanova however was the work of sophomore Art Spector, who despite the fact that he played little more than half the game, turned in a marvelous job of ball-retrieving and all-around defensive work. Spec also rang the cords for four points.

The 'Cats took the lead early with a field goal by Paul Nugent in the first minute of play and were headed only once—towards the end of the first half when the Ohio visitors jumped to a 15-12 lead.

Highest lead commanded by the 'Cats throughout the game came in the second half when they held the midwestern combine scoreless for several minutes and moved to a 34-18 score, at which time the varsity was withdrawn and the second and third stringers poured in. Lacking any shooting ability they were powerless to advance the score at all.

Leading scorers for Wittenberg were Cliff Heskett with three and one for seven and Vic Kowalczyk who notched six points. Jim Reusswig, stellar center for the Ohioans was injured early in the game.

Other scoring for Villanova included two field goals and a pair of fouls for Nugents, six points and one field goal and a pair of fouls for four points by Bob Kelty.

Gerland, Robinson, Kolenda, Gray, Murphy, McAloon, Harford, and McFayden also saw action but failed to dent the score coulmn.

Five Matches For Villanova Quint During Holidays

Loyola Foe Saturday Night Sports Maryland State Crown of '39 - '40

By JACK DUDLEY

The Christmas Holidays, a time of peace and good will among men, will be a period of strife and struggle for the Villanova basketeers. From the time that the student body streams homeward tomorrow until Jan. 6, when the trek back to the campus begins, the team will take the floor five times. This Saturday the 'Cats meet Loyola College at Baltimore. Returning home for the remainder of the vacation, the 'Cats take on Niagara, Kansas State, Geneva, and Detroit in that order.

Last year Villanova defeated Loyola 35-26. The Maryland Collegiate Champions are reportedly stronger this year, which means that Al Severance's boys will have no easy time of it.

In his two years as Athletic Director and three years as basketball coach, Lefty Reitz, former Villanova court star, has brought about a sporting renaissance at Loyola. He is now one of the most popular figures in Maryland Collegite sporting circles. The most noteworthy of his achievements is his success with basketball. Holder of one court championship now, he and his team look forward to coming out on top of the newly-formed Mason-Dixon Conference. There is a great deal of confidence on the Evergreen campus.

On the 23rd Villanova plays host to "Taps" Gallagher's Niagara U—when the 'Cats hope to walk away with a premature Christmas present. Four nights later, with their hearts full of holiday spirit, the 'Cats will attempt to send Kansas State home on the short end of the score.

With all kinds of good resolutions, the team meets Geneva College in the first athletic encounter of the New Year. The following night Detroit arrives to begin a rivalry which promises to be as hard-fought as that on the gridiron.

Detroit court followers are anything but optimistic about their team's prospects. Graduation wiped out the entire first team including All-American Jack Calihan, who in three seasons scored a total of 795 points. Coach Lloyd Brazil faces the task of building up a team to replace one that had a won and lost average of .680 in two years of play.

Returning lettermen who saw plenty of action last year include Captain Henry Lundgren, great set-shot artist, Charlie O'Brien, a steady floor-man, Frank Dulapa, the smallest man on the squad, and Bob Brice, whose specialty is a running one hand shot.

In spite of the gloomy forecasts coming from Detroit, this game should be the toughest on Villanova schedule thus far It is the first meeting of the two schools on the court in recent years.

This full holiday schedule should enable the Villanova squad to obtain the finish they need to carry them through the rest of the schedule.

Former Sport Leaders Visitors To Campus

Two former captains of Villanova athletic teams were visitors to the campus last week. Andy Chisick, last year's football leader, and Saul Wallach, two-time tennis captain were the visitors.

Chisick, who is now a member of the Chicago Cardinals professional team, looked none the worse for the wear and tear of a grueling season with the play-for-pay boys and from all indications is set for a long career in the big time.

Wallach, who is known as the "foster-father" of tennis here, having revived it five years back when the sport was almost slipping to obscurity, dropped in on the campus on a somewhat farewell visit since he expects to be called into Uncle Sam's forces early next month.

Paul Stenn and Nick Basca were guests of the Berwick, Pa., High School's annual football dinner last Thursday night. Stenn is an alumnus of the school.

"Clipper" Releases '41 Schedule As 400 Alumni Fete Grid Squad

In all probability Villanova will play an all-major eight game football schedule next fall, according to Clipper Smith in his speech at the Alumni banquet feting the football squad last Tuesday evening at the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia.

The schedule will be virtually the same as this year except for the fact that Centre will replace P. M. C. and Kansas will not be met.

Centre will be opening engagement in a Shibe Park fray. Three other foes will also definitely be met on the Park loam. They are Auburn, Baylor, and Detroit. Negotiations are also being carried on with Arkansas University for a game here.

Manhattan also is still in the tentative stage, while Florida and Duquesne will be met on foreign fields. Temple will be met at the Owl Stadium on November 8th, the only definite date released.

According to Smith the season will be closed earlier next Fall to avoid contact with winter's icy blasts.

Four hundred guests attended the banquet which was held in the spacious main ballroom of the famed Philadelphia hotel. Speakers included the Very Reverend Joseph Hickey, O. S. A., the Very Reverend John Sheehan, O. S. A., Bill Hollenback, all-time all-American football player at Penn, Jim Henry, Villanova grad and head mentor at LaSalle College, George Parker of the Sandlot Sports Association, Lawson Robertson, Penn and Olympic track coach, Vince McNally and Clipper Smith.

Father Sheehan brought down the house in a thunder of applause by ending his speech with the fervent wish that "Clipper" Smith will remain at Villanova as long as he lives.

Bill Hollenback drew a round of laughs by remarking that he was probably Villanova's greatest opponent due to the fact that he played against the 'Cats four straight years while at Penn and in addition practiced against them at least three or four tmies a week. Then to top it off Bill recalled his coaching days at Penn State when he also sent teams against Villanova.

Recapitulation of 1940. . .not the greatest year in Villanova sports. . .but not the worst either . . .so let's take a turn around the annum and then say goodbye to the year of Roosevelt III.

Sustained thrill of the year: Nick Basca's 59-minute performance against Auburn two Saturdays ago. . . when Mr. Basca firmly established himself in this column's book as the greatest Villanova back in history.

Pride of the year: Tom Casper's 150-pound football team. Their raw courage, clean hard fighting spirit and outstanding work as a team makes our chest swell, "we knew them when. . ."

Knowledge of the year: We finally found out who that guy is who yells "Hit em high, hit 'em low" so loud that you can hear it all over the ballpark. He's Charley Lockland, an alumnus, and has he got a set of tonsils.

Heartthrob of the year: When Kerby Cushing, renowned radio commentator, alumnus of Columbia University, and bearing no other connection to Villanova than that which permeates his heart turned to "Clipper Smith after the Pre-Temple rally and said, "Win this one for me 'Clipper,' it's the one I want most." Repella, Lord High Scorers in Easy Court Triumph Last Night

Villanova's freshman basketball team chalked up their fifth straight victory of the current court season when they defeated the West Philadelphia Y. M. C. A. last night by the onesided score of 59-18. The game was played as a preliminary to the varsity-Wittenburg game at the Main Line Field House.

The high-scoring first-year quintet ran up 18 points before the visitors could score a basket. Coach Al Severance tried to keep the score down by inserting the second team after the first-stringers had rung up a 32 to 5 lead with three minutes to go in the first half. The frosh led at half-time by a score of 36 to 7.

Though Villanova's second team played the first twelve minutes of the sceond half, the score continued to rise. When the starting five returned to the game they displayed a brand of ball-handling seldom seen in a freshman team.

Ted Repella took high scoring honors for the evening with seven field goals and two fouls for a total of 16 points, though teammate Joe Lord pressed him closely with 13 counters. Bill Leonard led the visitors' attack with 8 points.

Nick Outstanding Says Dixie Paper

In an article appearing in a recent edition of the Auburn Plainsman, Nick Basca was designated as the outstanding back to face the Tiger eleven all year. Nick was rated ahead of Boston College's Charley O'Rourke and the writer states "two thousand Auburn fans had to be convinced that it wasn't Tom Harmon out on the field."

As the article states, "for 59 minutes he gave Dixie its greatest headache since 'Abe' Lincoln.

"In gaining 22 yards from scrimmage," writes John Pierce, the paper's sports editor, "Nick probably ran farther than did all the backs on the field. Nick could outfade the invisible man. With the Auburn line rushing him he had to fade, but many think he ran it into the ground. He didn't have to fade into the bleachers."

Nick will make another appearance in the south on Dec. 28 in the North-South all-star game. From reports from the south he is the feature attraction of the northern line-up as far as fan opinion goes. One Dixie gentleman, a former Auburn gridder, says that Nick "can have the whole damn town piece by piece if he wants it."

Thus all Dixie has turned Yankee in a big way for Nick, whose performance in the south on December 7 stamped him as the greatest back ever to play there.

Basca is practicing daily with the basketball team to keep in physical shape for the Blue-Gray encounter.

Montgomery Plays

Big Jim Montgomery, '39, onetime all-state basketball player here, is now a member of the renowned Akron Firestones amateur club which is affiliated with the Akron Tire and Rubber Company in Cleveland, Ohio, Jim's hometown. Montgomery played in Philadelphia last Saturday night.

Gridders Name Tomasic Outstanding In Picking All-Opponent Eleven

Detroit, Temple, Florida, Auburn Each Place Two Men on Team Named as Best by Gridders; Battista Finest Lineman Faced by Wildcats All Season

By JOE SENRAB

Andy Tomasic, Temple's touted terror, was selected "outstanding opponent of the year" by the varsity football team last week. Tomasic was placed at the left halfback post.

"Mush" Battista, Florida guard, was named the best lineman to face the Wildcats during the recently completed campaign.

Others in the backfield besides Tomasic included Al Ghesquiere, Joe McNulty, and Lloyd Chetham. The line has Russell and Ferguson at ends; Bulger and Pavelec at tackles; Drulis and Battista at guards, and Demao at the center slot.

Tomasic was the whole show against Villanova as he led the Owls to their 28-0 win over the 'Cats. Andy racked up one score for himself and passed to Sutch for another while leading the Cherry attack all afternoon. Besides completing nine out of ten passes for a total gain of 94 yards he also ran the ball personally for a total gain of 141 yards in 32 tries while losing only ten yards.

At the quarterback position is Lloyd Chetham of Auburn who led the southerners' attack in the game played at Montgomery, Alabama on December 7. Besides turning in a marvelous job in running, Chetham was also the outstanding blocking back on the Tiger eleven and was superb in pass defense.

The right halfback slot is securely held by Al Ghesquiere of Detroit who ran wild on a Sunday afternoon last Fall when the Titans avenged defeats of previous years by dealing the Blue a 10-0 defeat

Fullback is held down by Joe McNulty, hard running sophomore from Manhattan. McNulty's showing in the Manhattan backfield against Villanova was the lone ray of sunshine in the Gotham day as the 'Cats trampled the Jaspers even though they failed to put a halt to McNulty, a triple-threat of the old school. And he still has two years left!

On the line Jack Russell, a smooth sophomore and a fast charger, holds down one end slot. Russell was the Baylor lad who spent most of the night in Villanova's backfield in the early season test won by the southwestern eleven 7-0 in Texas.

At the other end is "Fergie" Ferguson of Florida who performed quite capably on Villanova turf in an early season night game. Despite the fact that the Wildcats scourged the southerners by a 28-0 count, Ferguson was still the outstanding end on the field. A crashing, Bill Hewitt type of end, Ferguson ranks on any man's "all team."

Ossie Bulger of Auburn and Ted Pavelec of Detroit are the tackles on the 'Cats "dread list". Both merited their posts well despite the high calibre of tackle oppostiion faced by the Villanova team throughout the season.

At the guards positions are the aforementioned Battista of Florida and Al Drulis of Temple. Battista was easily the outstanding of the two and by far the best guard faced by the team throughout the campaign. "Clipper" Smith singled him out as the "finest lineman seen all year," which is a tribute enough for any man.

Drulis, Temple's contribution to the line, is another of the famous Girardville, Pa., clan which has made several all-opponent teams of the past in performing sterling deeds for the Owls against Villanova.

At center is Duquesne's only contribution to the team, Al Demao who has consistently been given mention on various all-American and all-eastern teams and is almost a unanimous selection on the all-Pennsylvania eleven. To earn the post on the 'Cat list he had to beat out such sterling centers as Bob Nelson of Baylor, top slot man in the southwest and Larry Braham of Temple.

Kansas University and Pennsylvania Military College failed to place any representatives on the team although both had several outstanding players who barely fell short of the mark.

Fullback was the hardest position to select by the team.

Kitten Quintet Tops Strong Foes

The crack Villanova freshman team added lustre to its basketball record by scoring two decisive wins this past week-end.

At the field house Friday night the yearlings handled the well-regarded York Collegiate Institute in impressive fashion in winning by a 49-18 score. Off to a fast start with a 20-8 lead at half time, the team just coasted to victory.

Ted Rapella, playing his best game at center to date, paced the club in scoring by dropping in eight fancy rebound shots and one foul for 17 points. Chuck Drizen was next in scoring with 10 points. The team gave a fine exhibition of ball-handling throughout.

Battle Albright

On Saturday night, the frosh journeyed to Reading to battle the Albright College freshmen. Again the Villanova representatives turned what shaped up in pre-game figures as a close contest into a rout. They took a commanding lead early and, with a 23-9 lead at the halfway mark, had the ball game well under control all the way. Chuck Drizen led the team in scoring in this encounter by virtue of six field goals and five successful gestures from the free throw line for 17 points. The rest of the team scoring was quite evenly distributed.

Grid To Court

Len Kolenda, senior from Nanticoke, Pa., is the only member of the basketball team who also played football.

They Were Best

At left is Lloyd Chetham of Auburn and above is Jack Russell of Baylor University, a pair of gridders who impressed Villanova players greatly during the past season. Chetham was selected quarterback on the Blue All-opponent team while Russell was placed at end.

Varsity Five Improves Steadily In Winning Over Upsala, Albright

With the first quarter of the schedule completed, it becomes more and more apparent that the many tears which have been shed in the past few months over the plight of the Villanova basketball forces this year, were premature and unnecessary. The Wildcats have emerged on the long end of the score in four straight contests thus far, but, what is more important, they have improved with each victory.

Coach Al Severance's quintet added two more pelts to their string of victories when they defeated Upsala College of East Orange, N. J., 53-22, on Friday evening at the Main Line Field House, and then traveled up to Reading on Saturday night to outscore a highly touted Albright College quintet, 48-39.

The hapless Upsala team found itself hopelessly outclassed from the opening whistle to the final second of play. The Vikings could not concentrate on stopping any one of the Villanova sharpshooters because the Wildcats scored in relays. First Paul Nugent started dropping two-pointers through the hoop and when he cooled off Art Spector took up the slack and was sinking baskets from all parts of the floor when the half ended. In the second half the Vikings found trouble again, this time in the person of Bill Woods, who made four field goals and two fouls for a total of ten points in the second half alone.

Spector led the Wildcat scorers with 14 points but he was followed closely by Paul Nugent who amassed 12 points and Woods with 10 points.

Due to the clever defensive tactics of Al Severance's charges, no Upsala player could garner more than 4 points. Berger, Opsal, and Dunn each dropped in two field goals for a total of 4 points apiece to share the high-scoring honors for the visitors.

On Saturday evening the Wildcats did not find the sledding so easy but they were up against stronger opposition in the Lions of Albright College. A crowd of 3000 partisan fans viewed the contest and, although the home team lost, they saw a fast and exciting game.

Lead at Half

Villanova held a 25 to 17 lead at half time and, although the Albright team fought back valiantly in the second half and tried to overcome this lead, the best they could do was hold the 'Cats on even terms.

Bill McKinney, the Albright center, copped high scoring honors for the evening with 13 points, while Co-Captains Chuck Yund and Paul Nugent led the Wildcats' attack with 12 and 11 markers respectively.

This was the second setback of the season for the Lions, who previously lost to Seton Hall by the narrow margin of 5 points. However the Albright team is composed mostly of sophomores and if their present brand of ball is any indication of what they can do in the future, all opponents had better beware of the Lions next year and the year after.

firmly from the bottom of his heart. Such are the friends of Villanova.

Disgust of the year: When that beauteous brunette down in Alabama came up to us during a smooth party and said, "Where all is this heah Villanova. . .?"

Play of the year: Duquesne had it and beat Villanova with it. That's all we can say because it was too fast for these mortal eyes to see.

Heart attack of the year: That Waynesburg-Villanova basketball game last winter when the Cats, losing indifferently 29-12 at half-time, came back gloriously and with a fighting spirit never surpassed to win out, 42-33.

Misfortune of the year: Star trackman Johnny Maher's serious sickness, from which he is now recovered and ready for action.

Sorrow of the year: That bleak day last June when "Clipper," Al, Doc, and the other coaches saw some of the greatest athletes in Villanova history take diplomas and say goodbye.

Laugh of the year: That never ending intramural verbal battle between moderators Fr. Dunne and Fr. McKee. Won't they ever kiss and make up?

Success of the year: As usual "Doc" Jacobs who turned in another undefeated frosh football club and won the state baseball championship with his Villanova nine.

Congratulations of the year: To Jim Elliott who stepped in the breach left by Ray Gadsby's retirement from the Trainer's job and turned in an amazingly fine job. So good in fact that the Clipper continually slips him buckets of praise.

Surprise of the year: Vince McNally's after-dinner speaking ability. The Grid banquet was the first occasion at which we heard Vince speak. And did he wow us! Somebody should get him to orate more frequently.

And so goodbye to '40.

Here and There

By Jim Haughton

WHAT started out as a real estate agent's pipe dream known as the Rose Bowl has now blossomed into a perfect topic for a stormy debate on professionalism, just because Pacific Conference officials felt it their duty to compensate players who lose holiday employment by participating in the game.

The idea of aiding the "struggling" athletes is well and good, but the Conference doesn't realize in what a position it's placing the coaches. Why they are showing utter disregard for the profession. Ed Atherton, the converted athletic commissioner drafted from G-Men ranks said, "We are hoping for the best and fearing the worst." But, the worst is yet to come.

Think of the dilemma in which Clark Shaughnessey will be placed. And he still must play Nebraska. Clark may be the "wonder man of the coaching field," but he'll be eligible for top billing on John Anthony's Court of Human Relations after this game.

Just imagine what a spot he'll be in when his triple-threat halfback, Steven Blitzkreig, approaches him with this problem: "Coach, I'm in a h-l of a spot. Why last summer when I got my merit badge in Hiking I promised Santa Claus I would help him on Xmas eve. All these years I've been waiting for this offer from Santa and just this summer my scoutmaster saw our Congressman and Roosevelt arranged it. Now how can I travel with the team when Santa needs me?"

Shaughnessey or Biff Jones can pore through the coaches' manual but this department fears they won't find the answer. Nor will they find satisfactory solutions to many other grave problems the game will bring.

The press associations report, "Athletes who could show that they already were working at jobs or had promises of jobs for the holidays would be paid for their lost time." This sounds like an easy way out, but it will also bring trouble.

Just consider the case of Mary Dogge, girl friend of the all-coast guard, Garfinkel Ham. Why she had Garfinkel, as she calls him for short, all set to wear his new prepayment tuxedo to the sorority dance which the dollies at the Heave - Ho Mill are giving on New Year's Eve. How in the name of heavens can Garfinkel attend this big social event and not break training? Think of all the fine people he would meet. Can't Mary insist she has hired Ham for New Year's Eve, regardless of what Stanford's athletic plans might be? What can Clark do besides call in his G-Man friend? Please send all answers here and you'll get free tickets to the big dart match between Rosemont and Villanova tonight at—well, you guess.

Yet Shaughnessey will not be able to pass off the problems so easily. He must solve them by January 1, 1941 or else go back to Chicago as coach of the chess team. And then there is Biff Jones, trained in the ways of a soldier. He will have some agricultural problems.

There will be husky 278-pound tackle, Cyrus Glump, who is scheduled to help his father do the corn-husking. They do husk in winter, don't they? Why his old man can demand enough dough from Rose Bowl officials to trade in the cow for a dairy. Maybe the Farm and Home Hour, The Country Gentleman or the Secretary of Agriculture will be able to solve these perplexing situations. 'Cause we give up.

Paul Nugent, Product Of Bronx, Makes Good In Big Way Here

Alumnus of Stuyvesant High Picks Loyola's Mike Novak as Best Opponent

By BOB FUNABASHI

Prying the lid off the personal life of Paul Nugent wasn't very hard even though two big worries confront him at the present. It seems that our co-captain of this year's varsity quintet is destined for the life of a soldier under the new conscription act, for when graduation takes place next June, Paul will have exactly one month to bid good-bye to the social world.

Of the present worries, Paul sighs deeply for the good old Bronx, for this Christmas vacation will be spent here at Villanova, except for Christmas Day. But since basketball season is in full fire, the absence of one Mr. Nugent would show a depreciation in the club's outcome.

Just how Paul first took to basketball was all very well explained to me as I sat in Lindy Kolenda's room, Sunday night. Paul had evidently fallen into a short snooze and as always happens, it became a bit over-extended.

Long Chat

Well, Lindy and I had a long chat and along about 10 P. M., Paul came about, gave all the indications of yawns and stretching. He gave that "H'ya?" gesture, and I acknowledged. Lindy said something and then I figured, well, the psychological moment was on hand for quiz, so I toed the line and commenced.

"High School? Sure! Stuyvesant High School in the Bronx was my Alma Mater, plenty big and a swell bunch of fellows. We had a great year there in 1936 and a lot of us were offered scholarships to colleges."

Naturally I was inquisitive about where he could have gone, so immediately he listed Kansas and Manhattan as the schools favoring his court talent. The mention of Kansas sort of startled me for, as I recall, K. U. was one of the best basketball teams in the country last year, and certainly Paul would have been one of those headlined starters.

PAUL NUGENT

But all that was purely imaginative, because he didn't select either of them but is here at Villanova at present and has been for close to four years. While here Paul has established a notable reputation on the ribbed court. For three years now he has been a first string guard on Al Severance's clubs and last year when he piled up the third largest score in Philadelphia scoring it was the duty of the fourth estate to select him on their All-Philadelphia team.

Novak Tops

When a fellow has played for three years against some crackerjack outfits, like Paul, he must have come up against a hardy bunch of players, and without my cornering him, for a lengthy discussion, the reply was emphatic to both Lindy and myself that Loyola of Chicago's Mike Novak is tops on the all-opponent list and the best team was Indiana U. of last year.

All sessions lead slowly but surely into feminine pulchritude, but this time Lindy shakes his head, Paul shakes his head and I being the polite guest also shake my head and say, "Oh!" That was the end of that, I think, but maybe I should have been more impersonal!

Well, it was getting about 10:30 and we had just been looking over the handbook, the three of us, and knew it was time to retire, but I was just getting hot with my questions and Paul seemed more anxious to continue so we allowed ourselves about another half-hour.

In that short time and with interruptions by Prof. Quiz's radio program, everything rolled along swell. In fact, I found out that besides playing basketball, Paul has been an honor student for the past three years and in his Junior year he was first in his class, for the third quarter, which ain't hay.

D. P. E. Man

He is a member of the Commerce and Finance Fraternity and served on the Junior Prom committee along the social front.

Paul Nugent is an Irishman, whose parents came from Newfoundland. That's why he's a sturdy and hardy player with plenty of fight. When he was small, some years ago, Paul took a trip to Newfoundland but when trying to remember what the country looks like, he doesn't recall. Incidentally Paul's cousin from Newfoundland is a member of the R. A. F. in England and has not been heard of since the outbreak of World War II.

Well, before long I was getting rather hazy, with a few yawns and groans, and so I bid them "goodnight" and slipped out the door.

Santa Claus' Visit To Villanova Will Be Appreciated By Coaches

By S. K. LAWS

Comes December 25 with its abundance of Yuletide stuff and nonsense. Mom gives a check to Pop and all he has to do is sign it. Pop gives Mom a washing machine and she bawls all day saying he wants to make her a slave.

To top it all off Junior probably gives sister a nice football. What she can't use it? Well, that's alright, Junior will find a little use for it himself.

Now here at Villanova Santa hasn't made a really generous visit in quite sometime, so herewith we round the Wildcat sports circuit and attempt to find for you a little idea on what the Blue athletic moguls want in their socks come Christmas day.

We saw Tony down at the gym first and that venerable Villanova tradition who takes care of sundry athletic departments came right back at us after the question, "What would you like to have in your socks come Christmas morn, Tony?"

"My feet," says Tony. What can you do with a guy like that?

Val, custodian of equipment, was little more help. All he wants is to find that pair of sweat socks he loaned to a football player four years ago and hasn't got back yet. It's the only piece of missing athletic equipment in the department since Val took over.

Finally we bumped into track coach Jim Elliott. Now Jim is one of those guys who find it more desirable to give than to receive, so all he wants to do is to give out some nice sound defeats to the competition of the coming indoor season. Nice guys eh what.

Walking down the steps we were almost bowled over by a cyclone coming up. Stopping the cyclone we found it to be none other than Doc Jacobs. Now if there is anyone who doesn't deserve anything for Christmas it is the "Doc." He's one of those rich kids you know. Undefeated in football for oola-la so many years, possessor of too many state and eastern baseball championships, and bearing the sobriquet of "best football scout in the East" makes "Doc" a little unworthy of further gifts. So Santa you can pass up the genial Dutchman. He does alright for himself.

Clipper and the Vince, the inseparable pair that guide the destinies of Villanova football were next. They both groaned their request at once, "a football team." Greedy lads these two, have they no feelings for others and besides from what we heard during the finale of their current season they already have one. Maybe they want a spare to enter the Pro ranks. Just another team to beat the Eagles?

Moving around to the intramurals we met those two demons of the interhall rivalry, Fathers Dunne and McKee. Yes, they were battling again. Father McKee, a generous soul, asked little for himself and Austin (he already has everything in the I-M book) but he did request a basketball team for the hapless Father Dunne. The latter snorted with mock rage and decreed himself four championships during the coming year. "And it won't be with subsidization like Father McKee has neither!"

Father Sullivan was the most hapless of the lot. When we came upon him he was sitting in a trance dreaming of the glorious days of Joe Bochetto and Fedigan championships — all gone forever up in smoke (not the Zamsky variety) and Father Sullivan sits in the ashes. What does he want for Christmas? Well just ship him a few boys that can find the basket, Santa, and all will be well.

Al Severance couldn't be found. It's rumored that he's up in the North Pole looking for Santa's stock of courtmen . . . but that is cheating.

What's The Season? Just Look Around

By JOHN P. FULLAM

JUST as the swallows, flowers, buds, bees, etc., forecast the advent of Springtime, certain unmistakable signs betoken the arrival of Christmas. For instance, Santa Clauses, Christmas trees, and poinsettias blossom forth on every grammar-school window. Children hang up their coats, eat their spinach, and go to bed on time.

At Villanova, similar signs are to be noticed. First, there are those manifested by the students themselves. Resident students who are going home for Christmas make frequent journeys to the P. O., eagerly awaiting that check for the fare home. Resident students who are not going home for Christmas also make frequent journeys to the P. O. — and bring their friends along to help carry back the packages, they hope.

The same manifestations are noticeable in the faculty—in a more dignified and restrained way, of course—and seem to indicate that our professors aren't going to lose any sleep over losing us for a couple of weeks.

A routine check-up on the student body discloses that most students will do one of three things over the holidays: (a) go home and work in the Post Office; (b) work in the Post Office somewhere else; or (c) go Christmas shopping, catch up on their reading, do some homework in advance, rest up, go skating and skiing, sleep as long as they dern well please, and go out with "Home Town Girl" three times a day, four times on Sundays.

And in at least two of our institutions, the Pie Shoppe and the VILLANOVAN office, no state of normalcy exists. The Pie Shoppe, usually a noisy, care-free sort of place, wears an air of despondency as students look first at the gifts on display there, then at their wallets, and shake their heads sadly.

In the VILLANOVAN office, the changes wrought by the season are glaringly apparent—the papers on the floor have pictures of Santa Claus in them.

New C. A. A. Course

ing and they are certainly top-notch instructors, being patient, friendly and thorough in their work. The whole set-up is a perfect one.

"The Flying Duchess"

Why, the boys even enjoy the company of a glamorous debutante. Barbara, the flying deb, only recently won her wings as a pilot and can be seen winging her way through the ether in her own private "Ryan" almost any day at the port. Yes, sir, Barbara, the social bud, and her all-metal plane lend an atmosphere to C. A. A. training at the moment. And then there's the cute airport secretary about whom Jonesy can tell you more. But all of this is just to show you that the womanly touch is not even lacking in the manly business of flying.

"Contact, Dooley"

Before being accepted in the C. A. A. one must pass a physical exam, have two years of college work or its equivalent to his credit, be able to devote sufficient time to the study of flying, and meet a financial requirement of fifty dollars. The college provides transportation to and from the airport whenever the student pilot's schedule necessitates it. Also he is insured for $3000 damage.

The ground instruction is given at Villanova during the evening and in most cases is simultaneous with actual contact with the airplanes at the field during the day. So the theory and practice go hand in hand.

Planes used in training the C. A. A. pilot are the "Cub Trainers," small but efficient craft of sturdy build. "The Cub Coupe" is a heavier type plane and together with the classy looking, open cockpit "Ryan" jobs will be used in the advanced courses.

The next course will begin on January 17, 1941, and applications for the service—a tremendous bargain considering the cost of privately financing the lessons for five months—must be made immediately to Mr. W. Slaughter, Placement Director.

A. I. E. E. Plans Meeting

At the next meeting of the A. I. E. E., which will be held after the holidays, John J. Skelly will give a talk on Railway Electrification. He intends to cover such vital elements as Transmission, Substations, Catenary systems and the types of electric locomotives in current operation. His discussion will be supplemented by explanatory film slides.

A short talk on a topic of current interest will be presented by Joseph Dorsey at the same meeting.

Beta Gamma Set For 7 Debates

By WARD GUNCHEON

Within the next two weeks Beta Gamma, varsity debating society, will engage in three radio debates, two Philadelphia Forensic League debates, and two outside contests.

Today Temple University will be host to Villanova, represented by Burt Collins and Edward Manderfield. The topic for debate is Resolved: That the United States should form a permanent alliance of the nations in the Western Hemisphere for protection from foreign interests. Beta Gamma has chosen the affirmative.

Later this week the society will meet Drexel Institute of Technology in a home debate on the "conscription of industry in time of necessity" subject. Upholding the negative for Villanova will be David Reardon and John Fullam. Both of these debates are league debates.

The "permanent alliance of Western Hempisphere nations" will again be the issue when Villanova, upholding the affirmative, meets Immaculata College away this Friday.

The first radio debate will see Swarthmore College on the opposite side of the microphone. At the broadcast from station WDAS on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 19, from 3:15 to 3:45, Villanova will argue the affirmative of the conscription question. Representing Beta Gamma will be Edward Borden and Frank Cahill.

Speakers for the other two radio debates have not yet been chosen. Both debates will be held on Sunday, Jan. 25. One with Swarthmore College will be broadcast from Station WILM in Wilmington, from 4:00 to 4:30 P. M. The other, with Loyola College in Baltimore, will be heard from the Mutual Station in Baltimore, WCBM, from 9:00 to 9:30 P. M.

Doyle, As Editor, Leads New Staff

McCall, Sullivan, Devine, Crumb On Editorial Board

By WILLIAM E. SCHUBERT

Thomas H. Doyle, Jr., junior accounting major in the School of Commerce and Finance, has been named editor-in-chief of the VILLANOVAN for the coming year. Formal induction to office of the new editor and his staff will be held this evening at the annual VILLANOVAN dinner-dance.

In assuming the duties of the editorship, Doyle relinquishes his post as college editor, in which capacity he has served during the past year; he has been a member of the staff since freshman year.

Other Positions Filled

Appointments to the remaining editorial positions have also been made. Robert Funabashi, junior business student, will succeed Joseph Barnes as sports editor. The duties of college editor have been assigned to Thomas Devine, sophomore artsman. Thomas Sullivan and Howard McCall will serve as copy editor and literary editor, respectively.

Columnists for future editions will be Fred Clark, David Reardon, and Bruno Talvacchia. Joseph Bee will continue as art editor; John Gallagher and John Maher have been reappointed business and advertising managers. Names of those who have received appointments as staff reporters will be published in the masthead of the next edition on February 4. No photography editor has been selected as yet.

During his three years here Doyle has been active in numerous campus organizations as well as standing second on his class Honor Roll for every quarter but two. He is secretary of the Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity and chairman of the organization's Membership Committee. His other activities include the History Seminar, Book Club, intramural athletics, and the varsity track team, of which he has been head manager for three years. Recently, he was named orchestra sub-chairman of the Junior Prom committee.

At the dinner dance this evening, keys will be presented to retiring members of the staff who have filled the necessary requirements with regard to length of membership and cooperation. The keys are engraved with the name and position of the recipient.

"Pennsylvanians" Play

Contrary to a previous announcement, the "Villanovans" will not supply the music for this evening's social. In their place have been engaged the "Royal Pennsylvanians."

Hemingway's Latest

Novel "For Whom The Bell Tolls" Reviewed at Book Club Meeting

Book Club reports were given on several books including "For Whom The Bell Tolls," by Ernest Hemingway; "The Roman Fountain," by Walpole, and "Oliver Wiswell," by Kenneth Roberts at a meeting last Wednesday afternoon in Simpson hall.

Raymond Valentine reviewed in some detail the book "For Whom The Bell Tolls," describing it as a story of the Spanish Civil War told from a viewpoint partial to the Loyalists' ideals. The author "pulls no punches" in relating his story but as a whole it provides an entertaining bit of reading.

Only brief resumes were given on the other books but the style of each author was analyzed and discussed by the members of the club.

The next meeting will be held after the examinations have taken place, the exact date to be announced later.

PROOFS DUE

All senior proofs are to be returned to Miss McCarthy, representative of Zamsky Studio, who will be in the reception room of Mendel hall on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

"Queen" To Reign At Junior Prom

Judging Committee Also to Select Six Attendants From Pictures Submitted

For the first time in the history of Villanova a "Queen," together with six attendants, will be selected to rule over the Junior Prom on the night of May 9.

Only girls escorted to the Prom by members of the junior class are eligible for the honor of "Queen," but all "dates" of any Villanova students attending have the opportunity to become members of the "Queen's" court.

Students expecting to attend this all-important social affair are urged to submit photographs of their prospective dates to Robert J. McIntyre, publicity chairman, or any other member of the dance committee.

John J. Parson, chairman of the Junior Prom committee, will appoint a judging committee to select the twelve or fifteen most attractive entrants on the basis of these photos, and send their pictures to a nationally known American artist in New York for final judging.

The girl selected will be crowned "Queen of the Junior Prom," and will head the grand march at the dance, surrounded by her six attendants.

Approximately ten girls have already entered the contest as the result of having their photos submitted to McIntyre. Pictures six by eight inches or larger are preferred, but not necessary, and January 27 has been set as a deadline for the contest. All pictures will be returned after the final selection has been made.

Rosemont, Immaculata, and Chestnut Hill Colleges are being contacted by Chairman McIntyre in his search for suitable candidates.

Pan-American

Cultural Relations Discussed at Joint Meeting of Villanova and Immaculata Clubs

Development of cultural relations between the United States and the Latin American Nations was the topic of discussion at a joint meeting of the Villanova and Immaculata International Relations clubs held at Immaculata College last Thursday.

Five papers were delivered, three of which dealt with the early history and background of North and South America and two considered the problems and benefits arising from the possible relationships between the Americas.

Following the reading of the papers an open discussion was held in which members of the two clubs questioned the speakers. There was a controversy on the question of which America had the more cultured people. No definite decision was reached but the general opinion was that both Americas had much to offer one another and that a stronger relationship between them would have many desirable effects.

NEXT ONE FEB. 4

Due to the mid-year examination period and to the annual retreat exercises, the VILLANOVAN will cease publication with this issue until Tuesday, February 4.

Commerce Frolic Due This Friday

Delta Pi Epsilon Holds Pre-Exam Informal Dance in Field House

Ushering in the winter social season, Delta Pi Epsilon, business school fraternity, will present its first annual Financiers' Frolic this Friday evening, Jan. 17, in the Field House.

From nine o'clock until one, Villanova's largest fraternity will play host to an expected large attendance. The dance, an informal one, will serve as a social reunion for all past graduates of the School of Commerce and Finance, as well as providing the usual attraction for undergraduates.

Music for the dance will be furnished by the "Villanovans," recently awarded the title of "Pennsylvania's outstanding college dance orchestra" by "Metronome," current musical publication. To help justify the selection of the affair's title, extra entertainment will be provided.

Decorations will be in accordance with the strict informality which will prevail and refreshments will be served in the Blue Room. Tickets are being sold at $1.50 by the ticket committee and fraternity officers.

Co-chairmen Frank Lombardo and James Jernee, senior commerce men, promise an evening's entertainment never before equalled in campus informal dances. A large committee has been working under each for the past two weeks to insure its success.

According to Lombardo, "The Frolic, the first large social venture of the businessmen since 1930, is apparently handicapped by the short time available in which to make preparation and its proximity to the mid-year exams. But because we have gone to greater lengths than ever before to make it a perfect evening for all, we are confident that it will draw the largest crowd at any informal here for the past several years. After all, most of the boys will want one 'last fling' before they crack the books for next week's tests."

Pres. Sees Threat To Higher Studies

In a speech terminating his tenure of the office of president of the Association of American Colleges, the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., M. S., LL. D., president of Villanova, on Jan. 9 at Pasadena, California, expressed grave concern for the future of higher education in America.

Stating that war hysteria would seriously impair the functions of colleges, Fr. Stanford said, "It has been their (the officers of the Association) problem to work for the loyal patriotism which supports National Preparedness and to work against the pseudo-patriotism born of haste and hysteria which would hamper or destroy the freedom of colleges to carry on the essential work of education. Thus far an equitable balance has been fairly well preserved, but the danger period is not yet passed."

After indicating a fear that increased Federal pressure on educational facilities may develop into complete governmental control, our prominent educator demanded, in order that the essential work and services of our colleges might remain intact during peace-time conscription, that "young men be permitted and encouraged to complete their college courses before being called for actual military service."

Concluding his talk, he stated, "Whatever threatens the continuity of our educational services in the present emergency is a matter of grave consequence to the nation as well as to the colleges."

Fr. Stanford's address was given considerable publicity in the "Daily Tribune" of Dubuque, Iowa, the "Brooklyn Tablet" and the "Denver Register."

While on the West Coast, the president investigated the possibilities of establishing a Villanova Alumni Club in California.

A Light Shines

AT LAST a small, but shining, light seems to be issuing forth from the darkness and confusion that surrounds Washington. A sensible, rational note seems to be creeping into Senatorial opinion concerning our attitude towards British aid, although not without considerable opposition from certain sources.

Chairman Walter F. George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee predicted last week that the British aid bill would be amended to the extent that a requirement would be inserted insisting that England put up "reasonable securities" for war materials provided it.

Although the House Military Affairs Committee voted to demand that the bill be withdrawn from the former committee and placed before it for consideration, this prediction on the part of Senator George indicates the possibility of a change in the attitude toward this question of British aid.

It may mean that our whole policy may be guided by cold, business sense instead of mushy, irrational sentimentalism, which loses sight of ultimate consequences. It may mean that good "Yankee common sense" may come to the fore and save future Americans from paying back in taxes the deficit caused by the debts of defaulted nations of this war.

At least we hope so!

—A. J. D'A.

Oh, Turn It Off!

THE much laughed about but not very funny feud between ASCAP and BMI, which is seriously interfering with the radio enjoyment of people everywhere, is having its effect upon our colleges as well.

There's the Rose Bowl Game, for instance. It was a good game, all right; —but for those far-away millions enjoying it indirectly, something was lacking. For many of the school songs—even Nebraska's Alma Mater—were barred from broadcasts. You see, they were ASCAP.

We have in the past been proud of the general excellence of the programs that private sponsorship has given us. If this excellence is to be maintained, private squabbles must be squelched.

Which side is right, and what sort of compromise is advisable, is not for the uninitiated outsider to decide. He can only sit by and hear beautiful old songs murdered by over-use, while shorter-lived, currently popular tunes remain unplayed.

—J. P. F.

About Time For Facts

THE annual message delivered to Congress Monday a week ago by the President was a masterpiece of generalization, and as a result many dissenting opinions have been expressed by the masses. Whether the President seeks unlimited authority to loan abroad as he sees fit, whether the fulfillment of his speech means war in this country, or whether his views will lead us in the path of peace are the general questions which have resulted from the speech.

The main issues of his address were national defense, our foreign policy, and a consideration of what expectations could be realized from a dictator's peace. These three points were embodied in his statements: "All inclusive defense"; "Full support of all those resolute people everywhere who are resisting aggression"; "The proposition that principles of morality and considerations for our own security will never permit us to acquiesce in a peace dictated by aggressors and sponsored by appeasers."

The phrasing of these statements above are typical of these expressed throughout the entire speech. The first two are vague generalities. They reveal no concrete or definite methods to be pursued, nor do they inform us that means shall be exercised to accomplish these measures. The best we can say for the last statement is that we agree with this sentiment, and have felt the same way for a long time.

We are sorry that we cannot acclaim this message and we regret that the President was satisfied to deal in general terms, but it has long since been time for the people of the United States to know just what is happening, and just what is going to happen, on Capitol Hill. The President skillfully spoke the voice of the people by expressing the sentiments of majority, but he merely reiterated what he has expressed before and has not as yet told Congress what to do.

Sincerest Sympathies

THE VILLANOVAN extends sympathy to Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, college librarian, upon the death of his sister, and to Rev. James H. Griffin, former president of Villanova, on the demise of his mother.

Miss Anna Falvey died suddenly on Dec. 30, at Holyoke, Mass., and was buried from the Sacred Heart Church on Jan. 2.

Mrs. Mary Griffin died on Jan 6. Fr. Griffin was succeeded by Fr. Stanford as college president, and is now pastor of St. Nicholas Church, Jamaica, L. I.

The VILLANOVAN also offers sincere condolences to the surviving families of:

The father of Timothy Donovan, senior enginner, Mr. Timothy Donovan of 136 Lafayette Square, Haverhill, Mass., who died Sunday night.

Mr. Edward Barry, father of Eugene Barry, who died yesterday morning, at his home, 7201 Hilltop Road, Upper Darby.

There Ought To Be A Law

By FR. BRESNAHAN

IT is said that the major constituents of our inherited civilization are: Greek philosophical thought, Roman law, and Christian spirituality. This statement itself should be sufficiently arresting to warrant a brief treatment here of the age-old, century-plodding subject of Roman law.

Most people of ordinary schooling have heard, at some time or other, of the Law of the Twelve Tables and the Justinian Code. In knowing only that much, they already know considerable about Roman law as a whole. For these titles, respectively, represent the beginning and the end of Roman legal codification. Between these two collections of law, there existed, of course, a matter of some one-thousand years (450 B. C.—534 A. D.) But, really, that many years of continued identity and experience seem to have been necessary to Rome for her to evolve the comprehensiveness and flexibility of the code of Justinian out of the meagre, arbitrary, and rigid provisions of the first law formula.

Three Periods of Progress

The progress of these many years may be summarily considered in three periods of approximately three-hundred years each. The first period — roughly corresponding to the time of Rome's existence as a republic—was a period of liberalization in which former arbitrary norms were modified by reasonable concession and application. The second period—again roughly, that of Rome as an empire under pagan emperors—was the golden-age of skilled experimentation in equity made glorious by such men as Papinian, Paulus and Ulpian, Gaius and Modestinus. The third and final period—a span still within the duration of the Rome of empire, but of that empire as now coming chiefly under Christian rulers—was the era of synthesis of previous experience, the period of such codifications as the Gregorian, Hermogenian, and Theodosian codes and, finally, the code of Justinian. For the actual production of this final masterpiece, it is to the genius of man appointed by the Emperor Justinian to supervise the work, the legist Trebonian, that we are most indebted.

Indebtedness Traced

But let us now trace, along general lines, the extent of modern indebtedness to Roman law.

At the time of the birth of the Justinian Code, Rome, actually, as an empire, was in its death throes. Justinian, from his seat of rule at Constantinople, had directed strenuous efforts to the regaining of western Mediterranean lands — Italy, Africa, and Spain - for the Empire; but the successes were nowhere complete, and, though the Italian peninsula, the most coveted prize, was won back from the Goths while Justinian lived, it was promptly to be lost again, save for a small sector about Ravenna, when the Lombards invaded a few years after Justinian died. Thus this emperor's great law revision had but little influence on the western Mediterranean world of his own time. Still, its reduction to practise in the small "Exarchate" of Ravenna, which managed to maintain adherence to Byzantium (Constantinople) for as much as two centuries longer, was to mean much to its survival and influence in later ages.

The influence of the law promulgations prior to that of Justinian continued to survive in those lands of the West which remained in the possession of the invading barbarians, since the invaders usually allowed the Roman provincials the option of being judged by their own laws. But the Justinian legislation thrived in Ravenna as it did nowhere else and made its influence felt throughout northern Italy long after Ravenna itself capitulated to the Lombards and became their leading city.

Begin Study of Law

We are not surprised to learn, therefore, that it was the nascent university of Bologna that began a revival of the scientific study of law upon the basis of Justinian's Code (Corpus Iuris Civilis) just as the eleventh century was drawing to a close. A definite channel of influence was thus laid, for other of the rising universities followed suit; most notably, that of Paris. But the north-Italian influence continued to be of prime importance. It was from the jurists of north Italy that the German emperors of those years sought instruction and support for their claim of being the legitimate successors of the Caesars (ch. "Kaisers") of the ancient Roman Empire. In this way, Roman law, for the first time, made headway among the German peoples. The reformed codes of Napoleon and Frederick the Great of Prussia may rather veil the fact, but the truth is that French and German law, even as found in these newer codes themselves, owe exceedingly much to the legal genius of ancient Rome.

College Chatter

By Joe
McCabe

AS MARY LIVINGSTON once said, "New Year's comes but once a year — so what?" Not wishing to be so carefree as the aforementioned stooge, we attempt to turn over a new leaf and offer the following resolutions — crossing the fingers and hoping they'll be kept:

WE RESOLVE:

1. To cease writing base untruths about the sensitive young things at Rosemont.
2. To stop annoying Jim Halpin until he makes up his mind between Brooklyn and the Bronx.
3. To give Artie Somers and Jack Gallagher until next Christmas before "Third Finger, Left Hand" is announced.
4. To stop complaining about the Greek's because there's nothing that can be done about it—they still persist in looking over the "glamour."
5. To stop trying to catch up with Johnnie Burke — he appears to like the title "lone wolf" so much that the time he spends on the campus can be counted on one finger.
6. To steer clear of "Moocher" McIntyre, to whom Santy Claus should have given a carton of cigarettes instead of a pack of matches.
7. To stop saying "yes" every time a prof asks "Isn't that right?"
8. To start smoking cigars and get rid of the filthy cigarette habit. This one is borrowed from Elmer.
9. To stop trying to predict the weather, because even the weather man can't be sure.
10. To save all our money for "Bundles for Junior Week," which will be plenty to take care of; and to stop listening to "Captain Midnight" — the suspense is too much.

THISA AND THATA:

The C&F frat dance floaters publicize the "Villanovans" as the best college outfit in Pennsylvania. This well-deserved popularity is being evidenced by the fact that these delineators of syncopation are booked to play at several "outside" dances hereabouts.

The contest for "Queen" of the Junior Prom is progressing rapidly, so rapidly in fact that some of the boys are vieing with one another in writing away for the pictures of movie stars. What would the little woman at home think if she knew about this disloyalty?

PARTING THOUGHT

While on the subject, we're wondering if any of the boys misunderstood the rules of this little "Queen and Her Court" competition? The prom committee has emphasized the fact that anyone in the school may turn in as many photographs of anybody whom they even remotely know as they desire.

For example, your truly is going to enter, besides his eight local loves and ten distant ones, his fifteen sisters, eighty-five cousins, and even his auld Irish grandmither. One of them's bound to come close then, and they'll be easy to fix up with a date.

Radio's Solution: Use "Alma Mater"

Well, boys if our idea is carried out you can turn on your radios again. For Villanova's songs—possibly through remarkable foresight, possibly for other reasons—are not ASCAP.

Picture one instance of the horrible state that would exist if they were. Soft-pedals would have to be installed on all band instruments at football games, for fear of some snooping microphone.

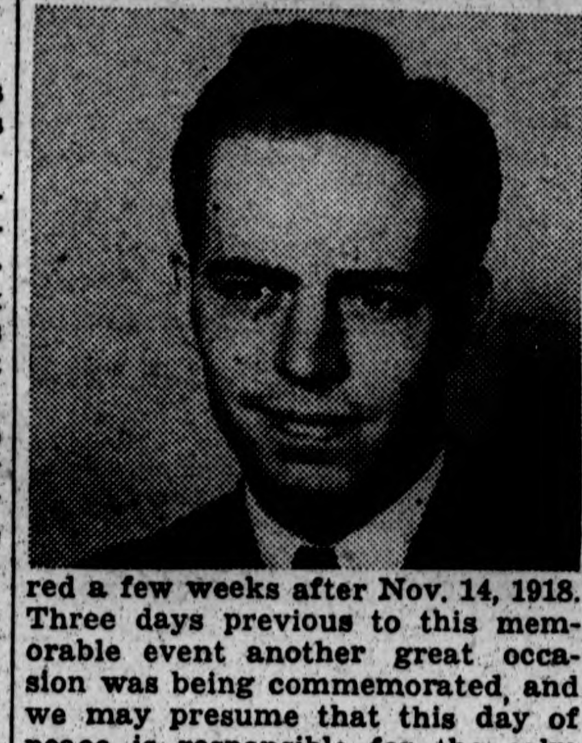
But cheer up, everybody. Things aren't that way. Any day now you're likely to hear our "Alma Mater" as background music for one of the gentler hold-ups portrayed over "Five Star Final," or a "College Days" interlude—without the words, of course—in a Carter's Little Liver Pills ad. And as for those Proctor & Gamble serials—well! The possibilities are overwhelming.

Meet The Boys: Boudon And Keating Whom We Are Feting Are Worth Meeting

By HOWARD A. McCALL

ONE of the more foolish questions asked around the campus these days is, "Has anyone seen Keating of Boudon?" The interrogation seems harmless enough on the surface. The implication it bears, however, is quite serious, for wherever Boudon is there by his side will be Keating. These two seniors are roommates and inseparable companions, and, least it be judged that they are not always together, let it now be decreed, "Thou will not find Keating without Boudon."

The Christian name of one of these students is Daniel J. Keating. This official title was conferred a few weeks after Nov. 14, 1918. Three days previous to this memorable event another great occasion was being commemorated, and we may presume that this day of peace is responsible for the calm reserve that is Dan's.



Another "Prepper"

His early school days were happily passed at St. Leonard's Academy in the great metropolis of Philadelphia, his birthplace. Dan's next scholastic venture was spent at the "little red schoolhouse," located at 17th and Stiles Sts. in the center of the city. The edifice is generally known as St. Joseph's Prep. Here Dan confined his activities to basketball and in this sport he has the record of three years' varsity competition.

D. K. planned to join his father in the contracting business at an early age, and this fact more than any other influenced him to matriculate at Villanova to study engineering. Since his registration, Dan has served on the Sophomore Cotillion and Orientation committees, and has been selected this year to assist on the Senior Dinner Dance committee.

Election High Spot

Dan's poplarity among his classmates was revealed at the election polls last year when he was elected president of the junior class, one of the higher honors in the collegiate social whirl. This position automatically made him a member of the Student Council.

Throughout his four years Dan has been in the engineering fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, and this year was appointed sergeant-at-arms of that organization. The local chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers has also enrolled him for the year 1940-1941.

Why's He So Good?

Intramurals have claimed quite a bit of Dan's attention, and his merits in this field are written in the All-Intramural basketball annals of the past three years. Perhaps his agility and endurance in the latter are the result of those energy-filling midnight snacks he enjoys at the expense of some other Austinite's nocturnal jaunt to the pie shop. I'm sure that the heretofore innocent victims of his appetite will be interested to know that Dan promises to make the trip in the near future—for a nominal fee.

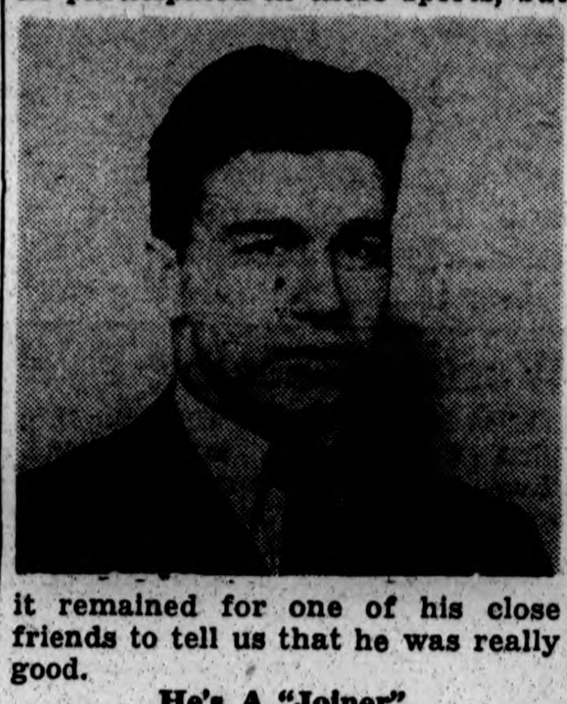
THE other co-owner of "that home" in Austin hall, room 121, is Robert G. Boudon. This lad hails from Port Allegany, (Pa., for all you city folks) where he was born on Oct. 21, 1919, raised, and educated in the fine art of home town publicity.

Setting The Background

Port Allegany is a thriving industrial town, noted as a glass manufacturing center, and it was amid these surroundings that Bob received his elementary and secondary education. An indication of the personality of this mechanical engineering senior may be presented by the recollection that he was twice president of his class in high school.

He played varsity football and basketball while attending the local institute. Bob mildly admitted that he participated in these sports, but it remained for one of his close friends to tell us that he was really good.



He's A "Joiner"

Since he came to Villanova four years ago Bob has served on the Orientation and Junior Dance committees. Like his roommate, he joined the local chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers this year.

For the past two terms he's been a member of Phi Kappa Pi, and was appointed chairman of the smoker held by that fraternity last fall in the Blue Room of the field house. In the sportlight, Bob has played intramural baseball and softball, and is now diving for the college swimming team.

"Guard, I'm Drowning!"

The mere mention of the word "swimming" reminds us of Bob's occupation during the summer months. It is one of those envious positions which we find so many college students seeking at this time of the year, namely, lifeguard.

For the past two years Bob has turned to the pools during vacation where he instructs the young, supervises filtration, and (merely conjecture) makes numerous social contacts. This last is only a guess, because we understand that Bob has a certain one in far-off Detroit.

To the fellow from the big city and the small town, respectively, we wish happiness and success.

Deserted

By ANDREA J. D'ANGELO

UPON that hill, beside the silenced stream,
A mongrel dog against the looming sky
In tawny stark relief, howled to the moon
In loneliness and misery.
The ebbing Night-Wind heard the plaintive theme
In reminiscent mood, and with a sigh
She bore along the dimming path this tune
Like a mournful dirge in minor key.
As though from some forgot ethereal dream
Of faithless faith and hopes that live to die
I heard the song, and then strove to maroon
Its chords without, yet it came to me
Again. I shut my heart and sought the gleam
Of fire's warmth; the flames seemed to decry
My deed; they spluttered, waxed and waned, and soon
Deserted me unmercifully.

I whistled to the dog; he ran in fright.
I called the Wind; a mocking echo rang
In the still silence. The song they sang
Alone was left—hanging in the night.

A Kaleidoscopic View Of Villanova's '40 In Review From January To December. Do You Remember?

DAVID N. REARDON

IN retrospection, let's review the highlights which featured the scholastic, social, and athletic year of 1940 here on the Villanova campus. For twelve months one thing has followed another with the rapidity of a blitzkreig. Briefly we reminisce.

To start the New Year right Jim Collins was elected Editor of the VILLANOVAN to be ably assisted by Joe Barnes, Tom Doyle et al . . .Murray Zealor was named Chairman of Mother's Day activities. . .Duke Duzminiski and Mike Lazorchak aided in spreading court fame for the basketeers. . .Senior Prom a huge success under Bob Wilderotter's chairmanship. Scintillating rhythms by Jack Teagarden's orchestra . . . Seniors' Dinner-Dance at Aronimink C. C., an unforgettable memoir. . .Election of Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., to Presidency of Association of American Colleges.

Headaches of mid-year exams followed by a heartening retreat with Rev. Charles McCarron, O. S. A., and Rev. Joseph E. Heney, O. S. A.. . .Johnny Maher heading a group of victorious trackmen on the wooden way. . .Doc Jacobs tutoring his diamond squad indoors . . .Jim Collins again headlining as Chairman of Junior Week to work with George Coupe, Junior Prom head. . .Activities along fraternity row including Lambda Kappa Delta's initiation, Phi Kappa Pi's banquet, Epsilon Phi Theta's smoker, and Delta Pi Epsilon's successful reorganization after finding the long-dormant charter. . .Honor Rolls released enumerating class leaders. . .

News of the Month!! Clipper Smith and Vince McNally, announce resignation but eventually decide to remain as coaches of the Wildcats. . .Cliff Randolph named Blazer Chairman and John McGuire, Junior Dinner-Dance head . . .Scholastic swim meet captured by St. Francis Prep of Brooklyn. . .Open House chairmanship goes to Fred Stellar. . .Tex Connors elected first D. P. E. president; orchids to George Flannery for reorganization work. . . Basketballers complete whirlwind season taking 17 out of 19 games in a difficult schedule. . . Dr. Hartman's Washington trip with government students. . .Intra-mural basketball competition with Fedigan Hall's stalwarts emerging as champions. . .Joe McNamara wins the Murtaugh Oratorical Contest Medal. . .Juniors signing Van Alexander and Leighton Noble for their Prom. . .On the athletic field — Baseballers bump Quakers in opener; gridmen start spring training on Austin Field; thinclads rounding into shape. . .Frosh elections result in Tom Muraski's presidency. . .

Dr. Peter J. W. Debye, noted German Scientist, named recipient of Mendel Medal. . ."The Tavern" an outstanding dramatic success due to Prof. Frayne's excellent coaching of a talented cast. . .Bill Howlett elected to lead class of '42. . .

In competition, Joe Bongiovanni named valedictorian of Senior Class. . .Degrees given to John C. Kelly, advertising executive, and William I. Schaffer, Chief Justice of Pennsylvania's Supreme Court . . .Adieu, class of '40. . .Summer elapses. . .Return to school.

VILLANOVAN attains All-Catholic rating in journalistic contest . . .Soph Cotillion, under Jim Walsh's guidance, first good time of the Fall season. . .Followed in succession by L. K. D. dance and Owl Hop, both well-attended and socially successful. . .Villanovans dance orchestra better than ever under leadership of Joe Rozum and Fred Kull. . .Wildcat gridiron forces embarked on reasonably successful season with Nick Basca's passes featured. . .

Rosemont-Villanova choral concert a vocal success. . .Dramateurs Reception applauded heartily.

With Scouting Thomas

By Tom
Moore

IN the recent post-season game played between the North and South, Villanova's versatile Nick Basca played a game that will remain long in the memory of those who witnessed this repetition of the Civil War victory. Nick practically won the game by himself for the Blue, and yet not one of the announcers even referred to his exploits as being outstanding; perhaps they have long since grown used to seeing him do a one-man job of winning ball games.

OBITUARY:

With the completion of this column comes the literary demise of yours truly as far as the VILLANOVAN is concerned. No longer will it be necessary to search frantically through the various college publications left for the examination of the exchange editor. No longer will it be necessary to wonder why a point of literary sterility is reached so easily; why fifty-four lines are as hard to fill as an equal number of pages.

Sometimes, quite the opposite situation would exist. There were times when it seemed that some form of the gag rule ought to be imposed on all columnists in order to preserve space in the paper for news items.

To say that it has been interesting would be like carrying coals to Newcastle. There is nothing quite like the feeling obtained from seeing one's thoughts in print. Whether they are meaningful or not is incidental to the fact that they are published; and whether they are read or not, the record still remains.

English teachers have from time immemorial attempted to inculcate the essential rules of composition into whatever writing their students might do. The editors of publications have for an equal length of time tried the same thing, with varying results. All these efforts are to no avail unless an opportunity is actually given for writing.

No less than eight English texts are unconcernedly marking the passage of time collecting dust in ye author's book case and all the sound advice contained therein are as words unspoken when the deadline approaches, and the space has to be filled.

Columnists can be a boon to any struggling editor—and none struggle more alone than editors of college papers—if they can be counted on to complete their assignment. "At least," they sigh, "that's something we don't have to worry about." At least this bit of wishful thinking is sometimes entertained.

My object has been to pass on interesting bits of information about colleges near and far. Sometimes a personal interpretation was given to the facts; but then why write merely to reiterate the words of another? Addison and Steele expressed the work of the columnist when they said. . .

> "Whate'ver men do, or say,
> or think, or dream
> Our motley paper seizes for > its theme."

This has been true only insofar as the escapades of college students have been concerned, and no one group is more widely known for cutting capers.

Here's hoping that Bruno Talvacchia who will have the privilege of having his picture grace the top of this column in the Feb. 4 issue will enjoy the work as much as yours truly. Here's wishing the new staff the best of luck and to the retiring editors, may your work on the VILLANOVAN be a stepping-stone to future success.—30—

Subversive Activities Discussed Today By Intelligence Officer

Members of the History Seminar will have an opportunity to obtain a cross-section view of governmental methods of combating subversive elements in the nation this afternoon at 3:30 in Simpson hall when Lieutenant J. J. Tooey of the 4th Squadron Intelligence Office of the Pennsylvania Motor Police will address them.

Due to official regulations, Lieutenant Tooey will not be able to disclose all of the intricate methods of trapping these "termites of national security" but will explain in general terms the importance of "preventative national defense" against espionage and sabotage in the Federal government's national defense program.

To the seminar, which has been experiencing its most active year under Dr. Harold F. Hartman, he will outline the dangerous results of underestimating the power of subversive organizations and the necessity of complete civic cooperation in eliminating them.

At the seminar's meeting last Tuesday, the President's address to the 77th Congress was read and studied. The approval and disapproval of various newspapers throughout the nation and of Congressional members were discussed. Future repercussions from the warring nations were also noted.

Hallahan Alumnae Sing Standard Pieces Before Music Group

A choral group consisting of eleven young ladies who graduated from Hallahan High School, Philadelphia, during the past four years featured the last Music Seminar of the winter season last Wednesday evening in Simpson hall.

Miss Bernice Criqui and Miss Rosalie Wilson took leading solo parts in "They Did Not Believe Me," by Kern, and "Mother," ("My Maryland"), by Murray. The Negro spiritual, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," with the solo being sung by Eleanor Diamond, was rendered.

Miss Adeline Marr directed the group. The chorus was accompanied by Mr. Eugene Sullivan through whose generosity the seminar also had the pleasure of listening to a mixed quartet just before the holidays.

The group was formed while the girls were in high school and has remained intact ever since. Weekly practices are held and the girls sing "just for fun." They appear at the Robin Hood Dell during the summer and have sung at Ocean City and at the Hotel Dennis in Atlantic City.

Frosh Debaters Meet To Plan For Semester

Yesterday afternoon, for the first time this year, the Freshman Debating Club under the direction of Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., held an organization meeting.

Fr. Sullivan gave the group a general idea of the purpose of the organization and the activities planned for the coming semester. A goodly number of students turned out for the meeting and the moderator expects much new oratorical talent to develop.

Last year's freshman squad met opposition in the freshmen of such colleges as Princeton, St. Joseph's and numerous other well-known schools. A somewhat similar schedule is anticipated for this year.

Work of 'Seeing Eye'

Miss Edith C. Newlin, a thin wisp of a woman, totally blind, stood confidently before the Science Forum last Thursday and told of the wonders worked by the "seeing eye" dogs of Morristown, N. J.

The lecturer had nothing but praise for the Seeing Eye Institute and her dog, "Blitzen" as she explained in detail the work of this organization and the wonderful effect it has had on her life.

Science Man Explains Spectroscopic Analysis

James Samuels, freshman science man, was the principal speaker at the last meeting of the Research Seminar last Wednesday. His paper dealt with a brief review of Spectroscopic Analysis.

"The first step in this now firmly-established science was taken by Sir Isaac Newton," said Samuels, "when he placed in the path of a ray of sunlight admitted through an aperture into a darkened room, a glass prism. Newton then discovered the principle of light dispersion resulting in the decomposition of composite white light into its many components. This phenomena he called the spectrum of the sun."

The next meeting of the Research Seminar will be held tomorrow in Simpson hall at 4:15 P. M.

By JOE BARNES, Sports Editor

DEAR DAD: In the realm of newspapers the number "-30-" signifies "the end." For a full year now I have been putting the thirty on yellow copy. Tonight, Dad, they put the thirty on me. Tonight is when the staff, in a polite but firm way, will in effect say, "scram Barnes, you're washed up." And Barnes will scram — but not without cashing in on the opportunity to say "Youth must be served!"

Yes, Dad, it's all over, including the shouting and in a few weeks this sheet and its readers will forget there has ever been a guy named Barnes — but the guy won't forget the sheet.

You remember, Dad, a few years back when I embarked on this hectic career. You remember me speaking of my first boss, Joe Pagano, and you probably remember my next one, Phil Dunn, even better. Joe and Phil, perhaps unfortunately, were the moulders who produced this past year of VILLANOVAN Sports.

And of course you feel that you almost know the real genius behind this paper — the real reason that it's a darn good sheet. Father McKee, of course, is the man. I just can't grasp the words to thank him with, but I think that he knows how we all feel about his work. It's tops.

My first years on this sheet as a sports scribe were memorable ones, Dad, and I can still vividly remember the first by-line. Boy was I the stuff! My best memory is that of the "Open Letter" to "Clipper" Smith after the first Villanova defeat in three years on the football field. I think that that was the only time I every really hit the keynote of the "Spirit of Villanova." That letter, Dad, came from my typewriter — but it was really written by every Villanova man. That's why I like to think of it so much.

This past year really has been the producer of the most memories. It has been a hectic, glorious period, a period filled with action, experiences, mud-slinging, praise and whatnot. I wouldn't have skipped it for all the beer in Milwaukee. I wouldn't even trade one day of it for an "A" from Doctor Hartman, and boy oh boy I have been trying for four years to get one of those, as unfortunately you well know!

You have often asked me, Dad, why my writing is so often critical and, as Jim Haughton puts it, so vitriolic. Well, Dad, I have always been a firm believer in the Westbrook Pegler and Boake Carter schools of journalism. Praise, Dad, goes to the head and makes one topheavy. Criticism goes to the feet and provides a solid foundation. And besides we Irish are always hotheaded.

Of mistakes, Dad, I have made plenty — probably more than my share. I could blame them also on my Irish impulsiveness, something I have never been able to control—but I won't, because I can't think of one single mistake that hasn't resulted in some form of good for me. It may seem a funny statement but I will say that some of my best friends are the products of my worst mistakes. God watches over babies, drunks, and newspapermen!

You may wonder, Dad, what I think of sports now after a year of close contact. Well, sport, like everything else, has its share of drawbacks. There are too many things wrong — so many in fact that there can be no hope of a complete reformation, at least not so long as the urge to cheat, to discriminate, and to practice like evils remains in the set-up.

It seems to me, Dad, that the best thing to do is to attempt to remain calmly ignorant of what is going on. Then you can really enjoy the glory of competition. From now on that is my resolution, As far as Barnes is concerned everything is hunky-dory.

When I think of sport in the future I shall think of men like our "Clipper" Smith. You have heard me speak much of him, Dad, but you can never realize the esteem in which we at Villanova regard him. The

Desmond Garners Honors

Frank Desmond, Intercollegiate Outdor Motorboat Champion from Villanova College, has added greater glory to his already brilliant career by being awarded the Rochester Gold Medal for being the first amateur in the country to ever score the most points in a season's racing in two classes.

Along with this distinguished honor Frank also won the $5000 Colonel Green Trophy for compiling highest number of points in all classes with and without point bonuses.

Although Clinton Ferguson of Wabon, Mass., was crowned the National Amateur Champion for having the most points it should also be said that Ferguson raced in four classes and with point bonuses while Desmond only raced in two classes and had the most points without bonuses.

While obtaining the above-mentioned honors Frank amassed an astounding number of titles and trophies during his 1940 campaign. Heading the list is the Intercollegiate Championship, followed by the Rochester Two Class Medal and the Colonel Green High Point Trophy. Then follows the President's Cup Title in Class B and second place in Class A. Also he is Adirondacks Champion in both Class A and B and holds the New Jersey State Crown for high scoring.

Frank's calmness and modesty about these achievements is as amazing as the achievements themselves. This summer he intends to do quite a bit of racing out West and undoubtedly will net many of their coveted titles to add to his already vast variety.

Kelley Wins Two As Natators Lose

The "Wildcat" natators opened their tank season Friday with a heartbreaking defeat at the hands of Rider College of Trenton by a 42-33 score. It was anybody's meet with the outcome depending on the result of the final event, the 400 yd. freestyle relay. Rider's first three men gained a substantial lead but the "Wildcat" anchor man, Bill Hooper, put on a desperate spurt at the end. However, it was hopeless for Rider had too big a lead.

The winners took five events to Villanova's four. They cleaned up in the 220 and in the 150 yd. backstroke, taking first and second places in both events. Villanova was strong in the 200 yd. breaststroke and in the sprints. Sophomore Frank Desmond showed plenty when he splashed home in the former in 3 min. 5 seconds.

Walt Kelley, recently elected captain, had little difficulty in winning his favorite events, the 50 yd. and 100 yd. freestyles. Reilley of the home team took third in the former and Hooper was third in the latter.

Kelley and the rival captain, Irwin Goodman, were the outstanding stars of the meet. Each scored 13 of their team's points. Goodman won the 220 in the fast time of 2 minutes 25.5 seconds, finished second to a teammate in the 150 yd. backstroke and also won the 440 yd. freestyle. Kelley besides winning the sprints took second to Goodman in the 440.

The meet was very well contested and the spectators were provided with several thrills by close finishes. The "Wildcats" looked a bit rough from a lack of practice, but they have the material for a good team. Coach Leahy thinks he can whip the team into shape by the next meet when the Blue and White meet Loyola of Baltimore. Little is known of the Maryland team but advance reports state that they have the nucleus of a good club. The meet is scheduled for February 7.

Other meets scheduled are Franklin and Marshall and the University of Penn. Contacts with other schools are still being made.

440-Yard Free Style Relay—1, Rider (Jim Berta, Bill Ritter, Arnold Watrons, George Hornyak); 2, Villanova (John Pholeric, Bob Koness, Ed Reilly, Bill Hooper). Time, 3.58.7.

Varsity Quintet Faces Seton Hall At South Orange

Jersey Five Boasts Streak of 34 Straight Victories; Sellout Crowd Expected to Witness Meeting

By BOB FUNABASHI

Tomorrow night two great teams clash in an intersectional court attraction at South Orange. At stake is a forty-four game winning streak held in joint account by Villanova's "Wildcats" and Seton Hall's "Pirates."

Tickets for the Seton Hall game will be on sale today only at the Field House from 9 - 12 A. M. and 1:30 - 5 P. M. Prices are $1.00 for reserved seats and 50c for general admission.

Seton Hall will bear the more mature list of the undefeated streaks with 34 games tucked safely away, extending over a two-year period. Add nineteen games of last year to four the previous year and eleven this season and you have the amazing record of the Setonians. And just five years ago, the college rated as an even match for a good high school club.

Meanwhile the 'Cats are in no rut either for they have captured ten straight victories in their own backyard and look now to the Seton Hall game as the game of the year for them. The only discomforting note for the Severance outfit is the fact that his club will be playing in foreign territory, which involves a tiresome trip and unfamiliar grounds. But the 'Cats seem to rather favor the idea of playing against a team with such an impressive record. A few years back, Villanova went to New York to play N. Y. U. who were under simialr circumstances and they toppled the Violets on their home court utterly ruining a winning streak that dated back six years.

Hit the Headlines

Coach John "Honey" Russell, the doctor of that long string of wins and his cohorts at Setonia also have definite plans about tomorrow nights' tussle and will have their strongest guns aiming at the 'Cats. At the South Orange homestead, he has carefully nurtured basketball from its infant stages until now, where they have hit the headlines.

Along with the student body and Alumni, Russell claims one of the best basketball teams in the East. Add the fact that Seton Hall will be playing eighteen of the nineteen games on its schedule in the new Seton Hall gymnasium and you have what looks like the greatest basketball season the South Orange College has had in its history.

What rolls Seton Hall on its undisturbed path might well be defined as a coach's dream. For after last season's nineteen won and none lost record eleven veterans returned to the court this year. His excellent coaching make-up, plus the array of seasoned players makes Seton Hall loom as a pow-

Elliott Arranges Indoor Schedule

Nine Meets for Board Track Season Include Toughest Foes Ever Faced by 'Cats

By FRED CLARK

Coach Jim "Jumbo" Elliott has completed arrangements for his indoor track squad to tackle one of the toughest and yet one of the choicest schedules in the history of the sport at Villanova. The boardpounders will compete in most of the major meets in this section of the country and will be pitted against the best runners in college ranks.

Nine meets in all are on the card. In between the opening dual meet with Penn and the Inquirer Invitation Meet, which will bring down the curtain on the indoor track season, the runners will take part in four meets in New York City, one in Washington, D. C., and one in Jersey City.

Meet Penn Outdoors

As has been the custom in recent years, the season will get under way when the local charges meet the University of Pennsylvania in an informal dual meet in Philadelphia. This meet has appropriately been called a polar bear meet since it is held on the Penn outdoor track. Not too much emphasis is placed on time in this meet and no score is kept since it is really a scrimmage for the big name meets that start a week later.

The season officially opens with a bang on February 1, when the team makes its first trip to New York City to take part in the Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden. During the same week two other meets are on the schedule for Coach Elliott has entered his team in the Seton Hall Meet at the new armory in Jersey City and the Penn A. C. Meet at Convention Hall, Phila., on February 3 and 7 respectively.

After returning to New York in two successive weeks for the New York A. C. and National A. A. U. meets, the team splits up on March 8 — some members journeying to Washington for the Catholic U. meet and others returning to New York for the K. of C. meet. The season comes to a close on March 15 with the running of the recently inaugurated Inquirer Invitation Meet in Philadelphia.

Formal practice for the team started last Monday although most of the candidates have been working out over a cross-country distance for the past few months. Middle distance runners form the nucleus of the squad and Coach Elliott hopes to come up with a crack mile-relay from Jim Brady and Bill Carey, members of last year's team, and John Di Carlo, Harry Kieffrider, and Stan Nazian, sophomore stars coming up to the varsity from last year's fine freshman relay quartet.

The Schedule

Second Half Open In Mural League; C. & F. Five Strong

Dayhops Win Opener, 40-34 Over Mendel Commuters As Coupe Tops Scorers; Austin Romps Over Fedigan Five

The Intra-Mural hoopsters came back in fine fettle after a long holiday, and began the second half of their court card with an action-packed game, as the C. & F. commuters chalked up a 40-34 victory over a fighting Mendel day-hop team.

Mendel extended the game into an over-time period before going down to defeat. High scores for the C. & F. men were racked up by Coupe, Meehan, and McGurk with 16, 10, and 10 points respectively. The losers were paced by De Persio and Amicone with eight points apiece.

Tuesday night Austin, first-half champions, romped over Fedigan by a one-sided score of 48-31. The Fediganites were considerably weakened by the absence of Jim Forkin, one of their key men.

Keating, Moore and Martin racked up 10 points for the victors, and Joe Daly of Fedigan split the cords for 18 points and the best individual scoring record of this season.

Alumni Loser

In the second game the Mendel residents defeated Father Dunne's Alumni team by a 33-25 margin. Nante, Fenton and Connely bracketed 6 points apiece for Mendel, while Molnar and Kohnlein scored 7 and 8 points respectively for Alumni.

Thursday afternoon saw the men of Austin eke out a 54-50 victory over the C. & F. dayhops in a closely contested game. Top scorers for Austin were Brown with 15 points, Moore and Keating with 11 each. Tobin, playing his first game of the season for Austin, was a brilliant performer throughout the game. Leading the C. & F. scoring was Meehan with 17 points followed closely by Coupe with 16.

Depersio Star

Alumni recovered its stride in the second game Thursday night to vanquish the Mendel day-students 40-29. Key man for Mendel was Bob DePersio who annexed 14 points, while Hin and Scalzetti looped in 8 points apiece for Alumni.

Game schedules for January 16 will be played on the 14th and this will mark the finish of intra-mural competition until after the mid-year exams and retreat. The next playing date will be Jan. 31.

Austin Hall Leader In Race For Trophy

From present indications it seems that the intramural trophy will again rest in Austin Hall this year. So far the Firemen have annexed 44 points in the race.

Austin's leadership has come from four first places, in Tennis, Basketball first-half, Amateur Night, and swimming. The forty points thus garnered, added to four in the Decorations test have netted Austin their count.

Following the Firemen come their perennial rivals from cross campus, Fedigan Hall. The Gigilos have amassed 26½ points with outstanding performances in the Decorations, Swimming and Basketball departments. They have also taken 2½ counters in the fall tennis trials.

Father Dunne's Alumni frosh have shown their versatility in placing fairly high in several events to amass a 17 point total at this stage of the race.

Mendel Residents, also a frosh troupe, have garnered 15½ counters to barely eclipse the 15 racked up by the Commerce and Finance Day-hops. Far behind and practically out of the running are Mendel's not-too-active commuters.

man possesses every trait that can be desired in a man. He is without doubt the greatest man I have ever met in sport and win, lose, or draw I'm behind him 100%.

I only wish, Dad, that there was someway I could really thank the "Clipper" for the wonderful cooperation he has given me since my early days on the VILLANOVAN. Suffice it to say Dad that I know that on walking into "Clipper's" office on any Monday morning I was treated with the same graciousness, the same welcome, as Grantland Rice would get there. There are millions of words I would like to write about him, Dad, but space limits me only to echo the words of Father Sheehan at the football banquet. I too sincerely hope that all of "Clipper" Smith's remaining days shall be spent here at Villanova, for Villanova could never really replace him.

There are others in Villanova sport whom I shall never forget either, Dad. Vince McNally, the Clipper's assistant, is one. Quiet and immensely likeable Vince has "that certain something" on the ball. Then there is Al Severance, who turns out those "miracle men" of Villanova basketball, who only rate headlines when they lose, which in the past five years has been very infrequently.

Al has been this column's greatest critic and I mean critic! To even matters up a bit he has also been the main reason for this column coming close to getting on the map! Yes, Dad, I am going to miss Al, especially when I see him backing Bob Funabashi up against a wall and putting on a terrific monologue. That's going to raise memories of my back being up against the wall with Al letting me have it with both barrels.

Then, Dad, there is the genial Dutchman of Villanova sport, Doc Jacobs. He lost a freshman football game back in twenty-nine when you got taken over with that Mexican rubber stock that bounced all over the place. Well, you still have the stock and "Dos" hasn't lost a game since, which is just about the best coaching record in existence anywhere! And, besides that he produces college baseball players who are annually grabbed up by the pro leagues. My hat's off to "Doc," as the Chicago boys say, "than which there is none whicher . . ."

Jim Elliott, so infested with the spirit of Villanova, that he has never lost the "old college fight" is another to whom I bow. "Jumbo" has brought track to a new plane here and as trainer of the football team he has been an infinite success. I only regret that I can't stay around a few years until Jim hits the top of the ladder to which he is definitely headed.

There are others outside the Villanova circle whom I have come to know in the past year, Dad. You doubtless recall the worn saying that a newspaperman "meets such interesting people!" It's true Dad, but usually all the interesting people are other newspapermen. And so it is that I salute the men who cover Villanova and say a regretted goodbye to Tommy Lovett, Ross Kauffman, Jim Gallagher, Kerby Cushing, Byron Saam, Perry Lewis, Frank O'Gara and to Stoney McLinn, who is one of those friends I acquired under unfortunate circumstances, and found to be a fine friend. Thanks, Stoney, for that day in your office!

And then Dad there are those men of Villanova, without whose help the editing of these pages would have been most difficult. I mean Bob Whelan, the best athletic manager this side of the Pacific and a swell guy if there ever was one; Ray McKeon, our tub-thumper (press-agent to you), whose help was invaluable, and to Val and Tony of the gym staff, and all the rest associated with Villanova sport.

Well, Dad, the end is coming close and soon I am going to write the last "30" and sports editor Barnes will be no more. It has really been wonderful this association with the men who compete in Villanova sport but it is to be no more. So -30-

Cats March On During Holidays

Five Victims Added to Blue String as Detroit, Niagara, Geneva, Kansas State, Loyola Fall

As the 1940-41 basketball season at Villanova swings into its final month of play, it becomes more apparent with each game that Coach Al Severance has moulded a quintet which is far superior to the mediocre rating it received in preseason predictions. What was supposed to be the team's glaring weakness—too many sophomores on the first string, has boomeranged into a definite asset.

Those pessimistic pre-season prognosticators who predicted a gloomy future for the varsity five have been made to eat their words and usually it was one of these first string sophmores, Art Spector, Bill Wood, or Bob Kelty, who caused this consummation of the English language.

Although the team has a record of ten straight victories, it is the more recent games that have put a smile back on Al Severance's face and a hope for an undefeated season in the hearts of Wildcat rooters. During the Christmas vacation the team really found itself and defeated five major opponents in such a manner as to erase all doubt concerning the ability of the Wildcats to compete with the six top-flight opponents remaining on the schedule.

The first victim of the Wildcats during the holidays was Loyola of Baltimore. The Greyhounds possess a greatly improved team over last year as was shown by their upset victory over a highly touted Georgetown U. quintet. However the steady attack of Villanova proved too much for the Greyhounds and they were defeated 39-34.

Next on the card were four home games against Niagara, Kansas State, Geneva, and Detroit, which teams represented four different sections of the country. All were defeated by decisive margins, but had it not been for the fact that Coach Severance substituted freely when the first team ran up a large lead, chances are that the scores would have been more one-sided.

Niagara arrived on the Main Line fresh from a startling victory over C. C. N. Y., perennial power of the courts in New York City, but the Purple Eagles proved easy victims for the improved Wildcats and bowed by the score of 41 to 31.

Detroit, well-known for their football rivalry with Villanova, were met on the basketball court for the first time, and, as can be expected whenever these two foes meet in any sport, this was the hardest fought game of the season thus far. In defeating the Titans 49 to 37, Al Severance's charges atoned slightly for the defeat Villanova suffered on the gridiron at the hands of Detroit last fall. "Chuck" Yund led the Wildcat attack in this game but no individual can be picked out as a star because the team excelled as a unit and not-as individuals. Nugent, Woods, Spector, Kelty, and Gray all played fine games for Villanova.

Columnist

FRED CLARK, a Commerce and Finance Junior from Brooklyn, N. Y., Clark will succeed Jim Haughton, '41, as conductor of the "Here and There" sports column, a regular feature of the VILLANOVAN Sports section. Clark has been a staff writer for the past two years.

Tops Freshmen

"Chuck" Drizen, flashy guard of the "Kitten" quintet and former Brown Prep player leads the yearling squad in scoring with 102 points.

In second place is angular Ted Rapella with 86 markers scored on 38 goals and 10 fouls, for a 9.5 game average. Rapella has only one goal less than Drizen but Drizen has had more chances from the foul line.

The scoring is as follows:

Player	Games	G.	F.	P.	Av.
Drizen	9	39	24	102	11.3
Rapella	9	38	10	86	9.5
Lords	9	27	7	61	6.7

HERE AND THERE

By JIM HAUGHTON

THE ASCAP will beg our pardon but "We're Stepping Out With a Memory." For what was our weekly contribution in prose known as Here & There will hereafter be just a memory, but a very pleasant one.

This marking the last time we contribute to collegiate journalism, there are many suitable subjects to write about. We could become very vitriolic and issue a scathing column on certain situations. We could offer a report which might attract the metropolitan papers and gain publicity. But today we pass over these opportunites for a little epistle labeled "Our Memoirs" or "How Did We Get This Far."

When the writer recalls four years spent on this sheet, many pleasant and some unpleasant memories are revived. For instance, there was the time we wrote an Introducing article which seemed satisfactory. But some wit in the office managed to get hold of the copy and inserted the word 'radical' to describe a lad mentioned in the story. Few noticed it, but the described youth was greatly perturbed and promised to put an end to our journalistic ambitions. After much explaining, the original and tampered copy was found. Our neck was saved but a good lesson had been taught.

Then too, as a cub we recall cases when we ran after club heads seeking material for assignments. But once we got a byline it changed us. Now, we figured, the club leaders should come after us if they wanted publicity. Funny thing, but they never did show up.

People have funny notions about newspapers, especially college publications. They claim to hold little respect for the paper but give them a 'shot of ink,' as Jack Donahue calls it, and they love it. You can talk to individuals and it doesn't even phase them. Put it in print and it's a different story.

Last year when we first took over this corner we penned the remark, "The writer hopes this column will be both interesting and entertaining." That has been our purpose and we hope the bill has been filled. It is an easy job to criticize. But that has never been our aim, chiefly because we never felt capable of the task. For we have regarded it as somewhat of a privilege to put our thoughts in print.

The offerings of this department have run the gamut of essays on The Art of Donut Dunking to very serious works on the need of support for the one-fifties. But it has all been very pleasant. Some contributions have been well received, others have been subject to criticism. But both have helped. The praise made us feel fine while the other forced us to try to do better work. As to what posterity can record as being constructive from this bureau is still a matter of opinion.

During our stay here we were fortunate enough to see Villanova make its great strides in the athletic world . Clipper Smith's Wildcats have gained nation-wide recognition as one of the nation's best elevens. Basketball, more than anything else, has rapidly advanced to the point where the 'Cats need not play double-header ball and still draw crowds. And prospects seem even brighter for the future.

Baseball has always been a high ranking combine and last season found the club rated among the best in the nation and tops in the East. The minor sports, as golf, tennis and swimming, have been making steady gains and should continue to do so.

To have good teams you need good athletes. And there have been many fine ones here during our stay. It has been a pleasure to write about such swell lads and we wish them the best of success. To Jim Collins, Joe Barnes and the rest who have been helpful we say "Thanks."

MURAL NOTE

Intramural basketball games scheduled for Thursday, January 16, will be played on January 14 due to the proximity of semester examinations.

Kittens Win Five During Holidays To Stay Unbeaten

Freshman Five Triumphs Easily In All Contests; Lincoln Prep, York Institute Among Victims

The Frosh courtmen are following in the footsteps of the varsity by maintaining an undefeated record. Over the holidays they ran their streak to 9 by winning 5 games.

The "Kittens" had little trouble winning their contests. Lincoln Prep gave them their toughest battle, the Frosh triumphing 34-20. In this game Ted Janeczek led the scoring with 4 goals and 3 fouls for 11 points. McDonald and Lord scored 8 apiece as did Lawson, chief threat of the losers.

In their first game York Collegiate Institute was easily beaten and then the St. George five was taken in the same manner by a score of 47-14. Rapella scored eleven points mostly on his famous "tap-in" shots, while Stolsitz, Lord, and Drizen took care of the rest of the point-getting.

Penn Evening was defeated 54-26. Janeczek this time teamed with Rapella to supply most of the points.

The tall Mitchell & Ness team provided the last morsel for the "Kittens." In this fray the Frosh got away to an early 8-0 lead and were never threatened, thereafter. Joe Lord played his usually good floor game while Drizen took care of the scoring when he banged the cords for 8 field goals and 9 fouls, the season's highest individual total.

"The Cat" Nears Court Finale As Member Of Villanova Quint

By PAUL McCANN

It is a rare and enviable pleasure interviewing so affable a personality as Ernie Robinson, stellar guard of the high-flying Villanova basketball team. Modest, unassuming, and congenial best describes this handsome resident of 227 Fedigan.

Ernie comes to us from Richmond Hill—suburb of New York City—where he was born and where he schooled at Richmond Hill High School. He played three years of grade-A basketball and baseball there—being named on the All-League team in the court sport and that's a plenty tough circuit that Richmond Hill competes in. The big rival of the Hill has always been John Adams High School which has contributed to Villanova such stalwart basketeers as Duzminski, Gerland and Murphy—all of whom were opponents of Ernie in his high school days.

Wide "Rep"

Ernie's basketball reputation became quite wide-spread and he had the opportunity to enroll in any of a great number of the better colleges in the East. He chose Villanova because he wanted to matriculate at a good Catholic college outside of New York City. Accordingly, he has never regretted his selection.

Here at Villanova Ernie is majoring in Marketing in the commerce and finance school and is a member of Delta Pi Epsilon, C. & F. Fraternity.

Around school he is affectionately known as "The Cat." Said monicker came about as a result of his being in receipt of a number of anonymous letters a couple of summers ago. The letters apparently were intended for a namesake, the famous fighter, Ernie "The Cat" Robinson. At any rate the pseudonym has stuck to our hero. While on the subject of nicknames, we might mention that he is the author of several of the choice salutations which call many of his classmates to attention.

Among his many diverse interests are: penny collecting, sports promoting, and "beating my roommate, Joe Finn at Pinochle," as he puts it.

Sports Promoter

Reference to sports promoting deserves a little elaboration. During the Summer months Ernie takes a hand in directing the destinies of a pretty fair amateur baseball team on Long Island and last summer he successfully promoted a couple of night baseball contests.

We are indebted to the aforementioned Joe Finn for much of this information and for one of the most typical stories about Ernie.

This is about a night when "The Cat" really ran wild. Two years ago Villanova had another crack basketball contingent. On this particular night the team was playing C. C. N. Y. at the famous Madison Square Garden in New York City for Eastern honors. Ernie, at this time, was not thought enough of to be listed on the program but was sent into the fray late in the game when the Wildcat cause appeared lost. His marksmanship, superb passing, great leadership, and fine poise sparked his teammates to a stirring rally that brought victory. Noting the absence of the star's name from the program Nat Holman, eminent C. C. N. Y. coach, visited the Villanova dressing room after the contest and inquired of Coach Severance if he brought in a "ringer."

Indiana Best

Ernie, before and since that occasion, has played fine basketball against many of the nation's great teams. His nomination for the best team he has played against is the National Championship Indiana University quintet of last year. The best individual player met, according to him, was Hull, star of the illustrious Ohio State five of two years ago which edged out Villanova for the National Championship at Convention Hall in Philadelphia.

erful quintet and a possible favorite for this intersectional tilt.

All Veterans

The all veteran line-up will include Bob Davies and Frank Delaney at the forward positions, Ken Pine at the tap-off position and Bob Holm and Ed Ryan at the defensive posts. Davies is the apple of Russell's eye, being a flashy but skillful passer and leads the offensive parade. He is only a junior and comes from the Keystone State. His mate Delaney has a respected left handed shot, very deadly on the Seton Hall court. Together they form part of the high scoring talent of Setonia, which averaged about 50 points per game last year.

Ken Pine displays the finest backboard work on the squad and is unanimous for the center spot, and the two guards, Holm and Ryan, are excellent floormen known for their ability to break up plays.

The Pirates have dusted off quite a few outstanding teams during this prolonged streak which featured teams from all parts of the country. Tulane, Florida, St. Francis, Brookline College, Davis & Elkins, Kansas State, and Illinois Wesleyan are a few of the teams who have been struck down by Setonia's attack.

Illustrous Ancestry

Bob Holm, star guard on Seton Hall's court aggregation, is a nephew of the beauteous Eleanor Holm—(Mrs. Billy Rose)—former Olympic swimmer and now famous pro swimmer as a result of the famous "champagne incident."

Court Scoring Evenly Divided; Villanovans Excel In District

Although idle for the past week, Villanova's cagers still top the Philadelphia scoring parade with their season record and individual scoring.

Of the seven teams centered in the Philadelphia area the 'Cats are on the top of the heap with a ten-game winning streak. Likewise in the individual scoring race four of Coach Severance's club hold top berths.

Chuck Yund, co-captain of the varsity courtmen, is second only to Larry Kenney, St. Joseph's ace who heads the list with 113 points for an 18.8 point average per game. Yund in all the ten games has compiled 86 points for an 8.6 average a game while close behind him is Paul Nugent, other co-captain of the 'Cats who has mustered 85 points in ten contests.

Bill Wood and Art Spector, two sophomores who broke into the line-up this year, hold the fourth and fifth positions with 76 and 75 points, respectively. Bob Kelty, another sophomore star, holds ninth place making the fifth Villanova player who ranks within the first ten in the Philadelphia district's individual scoring race. He has compiled 60 points thus far.

Holding forth at the twenty-first place is Dick Gray who has totaled 30 points. Fred Gerland completes the picture of those who have scored more than 10 points with 12 markers.

The 'Cats' next performance is with Seton Hall which promises a lot of free scoring for Yund, Nugent, Woods and Spector. Thus far Severance's dribblers have rung up 432 points to opponents' 319.

Individual Scoring

	Games	G.	F.	Pts.	Ave.
Yund	10	33	20	86	8.6
Nugent	10	33	19	85	8.5
Wood	10	27	22	76	7.6
Spector	10	29	13	71	7.1

Rice Called

Lloyd Rice '40, former basketball and baseball star, and now a leading slugger in the Eastern Shore pro baseball league has reportedly "received the bad news from the draft board." Rice was being groomed as a future member of the Philadelphia Athletics, having caught the eye of Mack scouts while at Villanova.

Speech Society Men To Form Radio Club

Thursday, at 1:00 P. M. in Simpson hall, all members of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society and of Beta Gamma, varsity debating society, are invited to participate in a discussion of the possibilities of the reorganization of the Radio Club on the campus. The large amount of suitable equipment on hand—recording apparatus, microphones, etc., will be offered to the group for use in the work if it decides to attempt activity in this field.

Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will participate as moderator of the club and lend his technical knowledge of the radio field to the endeavor. "The extent, advantages, and possibilities of amateur work in the field of radio on the Villanova campus," he said, "as offered to the two societies which should benefit most from it, alone will be discussed. Plans for actual experiments will be made later. Now we want to see how many are interested."

Even if the Thursday meeting cannot be attended by interested, eligible parties, Fr. Vrana should be contacted so that he may gauge possible membership.

Frat Initiates

Phi Kappa Pi to Hold Annual Pledging Banquet in Mendel Hall February 10

Freshman engineers will begin their new semester with what is commonly known as "shocking results" when Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering fraternity, holds its annual initiation banquet to pledge them on Feb. 10. As before, the initiation will be held in the evening in the Mendel hall engineering labs and will be followed by a banquet in the college cafeteria.

The initiation will be attended by the engineering faculty and upperclass and alumni members of the frat. A number of speakers are scheduled for the banquet.

Frat president Raymond Vener promises plenty of fun for all and emphasizes that the freshmen should join this year. He urges that all applications be filled out and turned into him or to any other officer of the fraternity as soon as possible. Those who have not applications as yet still may obtain them.

Flying Cadet Board In City Until Sunday

The Army Traveling Flying Cadet Examining Board will be in Philadelphia all this week from Jan. 13 to 19, according to Lieutenant S. Semans, who is Advance Publicity Agent for the Board.

For the physical examination the examining board will be located on the ground floor of the Custom House, situated at Second and Chestnut Sts. The Board is from Langley Field, Va., and consists of two Air Corps Officers, Captain James Sutton, President of the Board, and Lieutenant Fred Pugh; two medical officers, Captain A. A. D'Amore and Lieutenant N. L. Lippman; and three enlisted men as clerks.

Young men who are eligible for call under the Selective Service Act may make application for the Flying Cadet training and, if accepted, take this training in place of the military service of the draftee.

Lieutenant Semans urges all interested students to contact him at the Custom House so that the applicants may become eligible to meet the examining board while they are here.

K. G. S. Sets This Friday For Application Deadline

In a meeting held yesterday, it was announced that the deadline for applications for admittance into the Kappa Gamma Sigma Society will be extended until Friday, Jan. 17. George Weber, chairman of the Board of Admissions, has announced that this is definitely the last day for all applications.

Law," which we in America have adopted, is the most independent of Roman Law among the nations of Europe. It once used to be the custom for British patriots to protest stoutly that their legal tradiion was entirely unique. Nowadays, though, a rather extensive dependency is openly admitted. And it is only reasonable For besides the great likelihood of survivals from the four centuries of early Roman domination in Britain, there are the following facts to be considered: the fact of the Norman influence; the fact that the first scientific English jurists went to Roman sources; the fact of the great influence of ecclesiastical courts in medieval England; the fact that the office of Royal Chancellour of England was held by Church prelates in unbroken succession up to the incumbency of St. Thomas More.

The force of these latter arguments based on ecclesiastical influence can be appreciated only in proportion as one realizes how vastly Church law represents old Roman law. It would be interesting, but obviously impossible, to outline the connections here and so present a representative treatment of Church law itself. Outside of merely mentioning that the scientific treatment and codification of Church (Canon) law was inaugurated at the law revival of Bologna and has had its last mile-stone in the great New Code of Canon Law of 1918, we shall be content to come to a close with a significant citation from Pope Benedict XV's Bull of promulgation of the New Code. He says:

"The Church in the process of time) was at pains not only to abrogate the laws of barbarous nations and to reduce their rude customs to civilized form, but, trusting in the assistance of divine light, she tempered the Roman law itself, that wonderful monument of ancient wisdom which has deservedly been called 'written reason', and, having corrected its defects, perfected it in a Christian manner to such a degree that as the ways of public and private life tended to greater perfection, abundant materails were supplied for the making of new laws both in the Middle Ages and more recent times."

Professional Groups

Preliminary study based upon the returns of a questionnaire sent to the 1930-1940 graduates of the School of Engineering shows that 25% hold membership in national professional societies and that 31% are registered for or have completed advanced work, engineering dean J. Stanley Morehouse announced yesterday.

Ten percent of the graduates are licensed professional engineers and 21% have earned professional degrees. Those engaged in engineering work total 63%, leaving the other 37% doing non-engineering work.

Mechanical engineers hold the lead in membership in national professional societies with 48% participating, followed by electricals with 31.7%, chemicals with 16.2%, and the civil engineering graduates with 7.4%. Electrical engineers lead the field of those registered for or having completed advanced work with 42.9%, followed by the civils with 33.1%, chemicals with 29.8%, and mechanicals with 13.1%.

College Extends Defense Program

Engineering Subjects Taught To Workingmen

As part of its cooperation in the national defense program, the college has undertaken the teaching of engineering courses for national defense to high school graduates who either work or are unemployed and to college graduates who seek advanced training. The courses will be taught in Philadelphia Catholic high schools, on the Main Line, and in the New York Shipyard in Camden, in the evening.

Villanova is one of twelve regional colleges doing simlar work. Each college will train applicants for the courses according to the number making application in each district.

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the engineering school, yesterday submitted to Washington his proposed set-up for these tuition-free classes run by Villanova wherein engineering courses of college grade will be conducted. Classes will begin soon after official approval is received, probably next week.

Courses in engineering mathematics and physics, and mechanical drawing and design for high school graduates will be given three hours a night, three nights a week, and on Saturday afternoon, on the Main Line and in Philadelphia.

All engineering college graduates in who are interested in teaching engineering mathematics, engineering physics, or engineering drawing and design in the evening in conjunction with the special engineering defense training schools, are requested to confer with J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering.

This will net a total of twelve hours instruction per week. The Main Line school will be located either at Lower Merion High, Radnor High, or at Villanova, depending on which area has the greatest number of applicants. The Philadelphia schools will probably be situated at Southeast Catholic, Northeast Catholic, and West Catholic High Schools.

College engineering graduates who seek advanced training will be taught thermodynamics, heat transfer, steam turbines, air conditioning, and hydraulics at the New York Shipyard, three hours a night, two nights a week.

Mr. Morehouse will have charge of selecting instructors, schools, students, and types of instruction. There will be twenty-five students in each section, or class; additional sections will be established for each new group of twenty five applicants.

Second Group Of C.A.A. Fliers Begin Course This Week

This week the second group of prospective fliers taking the primary course offered under the supervision of the Civil Aeronautics Authority will begin training. The first group, who recently completed the primary course, may take advanced training under outside direction.

Although this new group, whose basic training will be completed by June 1, is practically filled, William G. Slaughter, college administrator of the course, has announced that those who still wish to take the training have a chance to do so, either as alternates or as regulars.

The price of the course to the student has been lowered from $50 to $25. Other regulations regarding the course remain the same.

California Alumni Form Villanova Club

"Villanova Clubs now extend from coast to coast," it was announced from the Alumni Office yesterday.

The Villanova Club of Southern California was given formal recognition on Jan. 7 at a dinner meeting in the Hotel St. Francis in Los Angeles. The first meeting was attended by the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., who was out on the coast to address the annual meeting of the Association of American Colleges.

Officers of the new club, all of whom received their degrees from the engineering school, are: president, George McGrath, '33; vice-president, Hubert Langlois, '23; treasurer, Richard Schleicher, '29; and secretary, Frederick Rappleyea, '40.

Annual Expands

New features to be incorporated into the 1941 Belle Air College annual, were announced yesterday by Thomas J. Moore, editor-in-chief.

Activities in the arts, science, engineering, and finance schools will be portrayed in several pictorial and literary layouts. Another addition to the annual will be a conclusion, which will show how Villanova activities promote the ideals to which the book is dedicated, namely, the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of Man.

Schubert, Fullam, Bee Assume Posts On Editorial Board

To complete the VILLANOVAN editorial literary board, William E. Schubert has been appointed managing editor and John P. Fullam, feature editor. Joseph F. Bee will serve in his former position as art editor.

Schubert, a junior in the School of Arts, has been a member of the VILLANOVAN staff for three years. He has been promoted to his present post from the position of copy editor, which he held last year.

Fullam, a junior education student, has also served as a member of the paper's staff for three years and is the first to receive the title of feature editor since Harold "Scoop" Keating held that position in 1935. His duties will include the selecting, assigning and writing of feature articles.

As art editor, Bee, a junior in the engineering school, will continue to create the editorial cartoons. Bee has served in this same capacity during the past year; he joined the staff as a freshman.

Dr. Stanford Tells Educators That Democracy Requires Free Colleges

By WARD GUNCHEON

Expounding the idea that, as long as free and independent institutions of higher learning flourish, "there will be no 'bottleneck' in the defense program as far as education is concerned," Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova, addressed a joint meeting of the Association of College Presidents of Pennsylvania and the Association of Liberal Arts Colleges of Pennsylvania last Friday in Harrisburg.

In his address, an exposition of the theme of the Association of Presidents' annual meeting, "Long Range Defense in Higher Education," Dr. Stanford pointed out that, "without freedom in education democracy cannot long endure."

"If it is true—and I firmly believe it is—that the greatest danger to our safety as a democratic nation lies within, rather than without, then the importance of preserving our free and independent institutions of higher learning is a priority of the first rank," he said.

After asserting that that freedom of education is inseparably tied up with the God-given prerogatives of freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly, and freedom of religion, Dr. Stanford propounded four beliefs "which may well be considered our Creed for Higher Education."

Free Colleges Necessity

As he explained it, the creed consists of four articles:

"We believe that our privately supported colleges are the depositories of our Christian and cultural traditions . . . that they are a bulwark of defense for the philosophy of democratic government . . . that they protect the integrity and freedom of publicly controlled institutions . . . and finally, that they provide the opportunity for that complete education which means a harmonious development of the whole man, body, mind, and soul.

"If our conception of national defense is the short range view that pictures the enemy already within sight of our shores, we may well consider this creed to be extraneous to the picture of total defense. But, if our conception of national defense is the long range view, these beliefs will contribute much to a clear understanding of the real needs of total defense in a democracy," Dr. Stanford declared.

Warns of Short-Sightedness

"As intelligent citizens of this country," he continued, "we must all be watchful lest in the process of achieving the military, industrial and economic objectives of a defense program which is obviously necessary, we lose sight of our goal and betray the genius of our

All Seniors Requested To Fill Out New Forms; Bethlehem Steel Interviewer Here Today

All seniors who have previously registered with the Placement Service and those who wish to register are requested by William G. Slaughter, Director, to call at his office 111 Mendel hall, to fill out new forms. Today a representative of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation will interview interested seniors.

In the past few weeks representatives from General Electric, Seagram Distilleries, R. C. A. and the Philadelphia Electric have interviewed seniors of the various schools.

Science students were consulted by the representative from Seagram Distilleries, while Commerce and Finance seniors with majors in accounting were interviewed by the representative of R. C. A. and seniors of the electrical engineering course met with the representative of General Electric.

Last Friday, the Director of Personnel from the Philadelphia Electric Company met seniors from all schools who were registered with the Placement Service.

Annual Play Is 'Margin For Error'

Belle Masque Holds First Readings Today for Parts in Booth Problem Comedy

"Margin for Error," Claire Boothe's recent Broadway success, has been chosen as the annual presentation of the Belle Masque, student dramatic society, It was announced today by Mr. Anthony J. Frayne, M. A., director of the organization.

First tryouts for the cast will take place today in the form of preliminary readings to be held in room 111 at 3:00 P. M. All those interested in taking part in the play are invited to be present. Previous experience or affiliation with the Belle Masque is not necessary.

Although "Margin for Error" is primarily concerned with the problem of racial distinction, it is by no means a deeply philosophical study. Its intricate plot involves a murder, but it is not essentially a mystery play. The introduction of a substantial amount of comedy tends to relieve the tension created by the swiftly moving dramatic events.

In addition to "Margin for Error," which has just completed a successful run at the Playhouse in New York, Miss Boothe is noted for her Broadway and Hollywood hit "The Women." No feminine monopoly, "Margin for Error" has a predominance of male parts. The female roles will again be handled by students of Rosemont College.

Most of the leading players of last year's successful production, George M. Cohan's "The Tavern," have been graduated, thus leaving the field open to all applicants. The dates for the presentation have been set for April 24, 25 and 27.

Ex-Editor Recalls Chiefs, Scoops, Associates Of Journalistic Career

By JAMES P. COLLINS
(Former Editor-in-Chief)

THE setting in which I write this, my last copy for the VILLANOVAN, is peculiarly fitting to the occasion. I am alone. The office is silent except for the irregular staccato beat of this typewriter. Be it sentiment's thorns or a cold radiator, I experience chills running over me. The day is dismal; so much so I would even enjoy a bit of Bill Toy's incomparable heckling. But not even that questionable honor is for me now. I am alone in the very corner where I pecked out my first story four years ago.

Four years ago. Joe Toland was the chief editor then and a good one, too. He and Bowker and Kennedy, Simons, Cole, Mackin and others. . . .They were the main cogs of the VILLANOVAN machine and particularly friendly and helpful to a backward freshman with orientation number 222 and initials J. P. C. Just the mention of their names recalls happy incidents and warm friends.

Then there were Bob Howe and Jim Tofani. A pair of characters if ever there were such things. Of all the number one men associated with the paper, these co-editors helped me the most. They were fine. I can still hear Bob's brusque, unintelligible instructions on the writing of a lead and little Jim's blatant expressions.

John Harrington took over and drew me as his college editor. However, the brunt of the work was done by the "Mighty Mite," as the

A Private Matter

EVERY newspaper, whether or not it really has the right to do so, makes use of its space to pay tribute to members of its organization. When a press photographer of the Philadelphia "Inquirer" wins an award for the excellence of his pictures, when a war correspondent of the N. Y. "Herald Tribune" writes a notable story, when the composing-room head of the Kansas City "Star" dies: all receive tributes in the columns of "their" papers.

All of which leads up to the point. Here, the new VILLANOVAN staff takes advantage of the space at its disposal to render sincere appreciation to the senior members of the staff, whose duties terminated with the last issue of the paper.

Not only do the new members of the staff express their appreciation for the truly fine work and teaching of the outgoing editors—Jim Collins, hard working editor-in-chief, on whose slim shoulders the burden of everything rested; Joe Barnes, sports editor who achieved a good deal of fame around the Philadelphia area; Gus Mancuso, head photographer deluxe for three and a half years; Andy D'Angelo, fiery editorial head; Bob Schisler, director of the circulation crew; Murray Zealor, ex-managing editor; Tom Moore, columnist in charge of the exchanges; and Jim Haughton, sports columnist—but in a good measure to the writers who were responsible for part of the copy that was turned in: Bill Toy, George Flannery, Harry Goodman, Joe Santaniello, Bill Epifanio, Walt Brown, Dave Morse, and Vic Corbett.

America To . . .

AMERICA to Russia to Germany. No, this is not a new double play combination; rather, many profess it to be a new international "double cross" combination.

Observers point out that, in sympathy with Great Britain as we are, it seems rather stupid for us to continue trade relations with Russia. Many confess that they are completely bewildered that we still transmit American-manufactured goods to Russia, who is in turn commercially aiding Germany in the war against Great Britain. We are sending, they admit, much war material directly to Britain, but they decry the fact that many of our products are being inadvertently shipped via Russia and Germany, and are arriving in Britain under forms which are not welcomed by the British.

In view of the emphatic opinions of our statesmen who are constantly uttering that, unless we send immediate aid to Great Britain, Greece, and China, these countries will be forced to withdraw from their respective conflicts, our policy is indeed puzzling. Another instance which plunges us into deeper concern is the recent oil and fuel shipments sent to Japan.

All of which is truly regrettable. The present situation is to be considered, however, as being the less of two evils. All of us certainly prefer a Russia at least nominally neutral, to a Russia which would be openly belligerent toward Britain. Continued American-Russian trade is the price we are paying for Soviet aloofness. And in this manner we are very constructively aiding Britain. Faced with a choice between two evils, our diplomats made what appeared to them the wiser selection.

Let us hope that America to Russia to Germany does not involve itself into an international keystone combination in which Britain and America will be the unfortunate victims of a "twin killing."

Coordination? Domination?

AMIDST the intelligent and mixed opinions expressed over the question of the proposed Lend-Lease bill during the past few weeks, an incident occurred which many of the local newspapers failed to mention and which thus escaped the attention of the people. This incident, revealed in a special cable to the New York Times from London and printed in the "Times'" Jan. 15 issue, was the establishment, through the agency of Lord Halifax, of a British Supply Council in North America.

According to the dispatch, the purpose of the Council is to direct the work of the British Supply Commission and to deal with all issues of policy concerning supply representations to be made to the United States administration.

In the words of the dispatch, "The establishment of the new council takes the weight of dealing with the detail of purchases off the shoulders of Viscount Halifax, Ambassador to the United States, and his aides, and leaves them free to handle the question of a make-or-break policy that will prove a useful agency in the slow, unseen, development under which the United States and Britain between them will agree on methods of controlling world economy."

The implications which are borne in this release are indeed terrifying. As one interpretation has stated it, the establishment of this council is "a deal between F. D. R. and his aides, on the one part, and the Churchill Government, on the second part, to arrange to become economic dictators of the world." This statement speaks for itself. Admit that it is true, and we admit that all the talk about democracy in our nation is merely a disguise to conceal the fact that it is an economic war for world domination. Follow this confession a little further and we are crushed with the realization that all the suffering of the peoples engaged in this conflict is for naught and that all money appropriated for the battle is wasted and in vain.

It is certainly more pleasant to think that the establishment of this council is merely an aim at coordinating the war efforts of both countries. In the light of this event, however, a hidden reality may lie exposed.

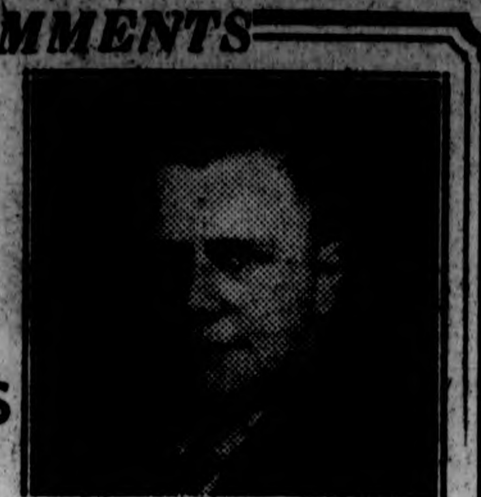
FACULTY COMMENTS

The Ability To Appreciate Human Endeavors



By Dr. Haenisch

THE wail of a juke box may sound dissonant and banal to the lover of classical music. The massive, geometric color patterns of the modern artists are often distasteful to the admirer of photographic reality in pictorial art. The work of a scientist amidst tedious and involved laboratory measurements may seem like an unhappy existence to the scholar who derives pleasure in the literary and philosophical masterpieces.

To condemn any form of art or endeavor because it does not suit our personal tastes is a mark of the lack of understanding, the lack of tolerance, the lack of ability to appreciate. For, appreciation, in the truest sense of the word, is the thoughtful and critical evaluation of how successfully the artist or worker has achieved his purpose in conceiving and completing the endeavor. Appreciation is not to be confused with our tastes, our likes and dislikes. It is possible to appreciate a piece of art, a musical composition or a manuscript without really liking it.

Understanding, Then Appreciation

Real appreciation must be preceded by understanding. When the devotee of swing music has studied the symphony as an elaboration and exposition of simple melodies woven harmoniously together, then he is in a position to evaluate this form of classical music. Until the protagonists of symphonies have grasped the rhythm, spirit and motivation of hot jazz they cannot and should not criticize or condemn it. The composer's purpose and the emotions to which he is appealing must be understood before any true appreciation of the music can be undertaken.

The statements which apply to these contrasting and widely separated musical forms can be extended in kind to all forms of art and human endeavor. There is a definite purpose to every kind of creative work. The greater the artist, composer, author or investigator, the more vividly, vitally and effectively does he portray and execute this purpose in the completed composition.

A Broader Outlook

It will be found that attempts to really appreciate the various forms of art and endeavor are accompanied by a broadening of our tastes. What was once scorned and disliked often becomes well liked and tasteful as understanding is developed. Through studying, reading and listening we can cultivate our ability to appreciate and thus greatly extend our outlooks and horizons.

To do what we like the best, to admire that which appeals the most to our aesthetic senses is but human. To evaluate with thoughtful tolerance and intelligent judgment—to have acquired the ability to appreciate—is the mark of an educated gentleman.

Initiate Weekly Student Poll

Recognizing the fact that it is the province of a college newspaper to reflect the opinion of the entire student body as well as that of its own editorial board, starting next week the VILLANOVAN will include on its editorial page the results of a weekly poll of student opinion on subjects of current interest.

The first question under discussion will be that of American aid to Great Britain. This broad subject will be divided into four allied questions: Should the United States enter the present war? Should we extend unlimited credit to England? Is our safety dependent on a British victory? Will the United States enter the present war? Personal interviewing on this subject has just begun.

In order to obtain opinions representative of the entire student body instead of haphazard individual judgments, a scientific cross-section of Villanova enrollment has been made. Out of the approximately 1000 students registered, proportions for each class and school have been definitely established so that interviews of 100 students (a far higher percentage than that used by national polls) carefully spread among each class and school will produce an accurate indication of student opinion.

That this poll can be considered truly representative of the opinion of the entire student body is definitely shown by careful studies of the results of polls conducted by the paper during the last five years. In every instance, the taking of a small fraction of the total number of ballots submitted has resulted in percentages that had average deviations of only two to four percent from the percentages expressed by the entire total of ballots submitted.

The poll will be under the direction of Edward Borden, sophomore artsman, who will conduct most of the personal interviews and supervise other interviewers.

Wildcat Whirl

By Dave Reardon

WHILE some columnists are considered a disease in themselves, all columnists at some time or another suffer from severe cases of "rumortism." So bear with me; this and future whirls around the wildcat lair are made in a spirit of constructive, not destructive, witticism. Remember, mud slung is ground lost. The platform of this writer will be:

1. To report accurately and and clearly all notable social doings of all the students and engineers, too.
2. To foster strained relationships with local feminine institutions in order to flatter their ego.

CUFF NOTES:

Most of the campus affairs-of-the-heart are kindled at the Rosemont pharmacy; for bright is the flame that feeds on the "coke." The firemen are the nearly extinct Rosa-novans led by Johnny Burke. . . . Phil Malarkey entertained the girl from home Pottsville, Pa.), by showing her the spots in Philly.

Johnny Parson asked his girl for her picture so he could enter it in the Prom queen contest but she gave him the negative . . . Why does, Dick Shinners take Alice to school every morning in his new V-8? We wonder if she is mechanically or romantically inclined. . .

Dick Gray was seen racing down the hall one day. When asked what the hurry was all about, he replied, "Just bought a new textbook and I'm trying to get to class before the next edition comes out."

Joe McCabe, dapper ex-writer of this column, thinks "Jamaica" is a personal question. . . . It's rumored that "Big Deal" Gallagher with Mary K., and "Bird Legs" Halpin with Peggy, and took in the Rosemont New York-New Jersey Alumnae Club's tea dance at New York's Hotel Ambassador.

What member of the debating team used this activity to add to his decreasing social prestige by dating Margy from Immaculata? . . Joe Bee is still tops with Dot from the same campus. . .

Larry McStravog, Bill Mundy, et al, hastily took a powder recently from a popular nocturnal rendezvous because of omnipresent secret operatives. . . . Despite local competition, Andy Melton's heart still belongs to Mary Ann. . . Bill Kelly returned to classes after a brief sojourn in the marines. Welcome back Sgt. Kelly.

Meet The Boys: In This Issue We Have A Scoop; "Private Lives Of Brosmer And Coupe"

By DON HALEY

ALTHOUGH J. Gordon Brosmer expressed the desire not to appear in the same introduction with George Coupe (our stars are so temperamental, you know), the integral part each plays in campus activities makes their combined introduction imperative.

The senior ball chairman is a blond, affable fellow who also guides the destinies of the "Belle Air" as copy editor. "Sandy," one of the many titles to which he answers, is a New Yorker, hailing from Norwich. After sitting on an electrical contraption in 319 Fedigan, your reporter didn't bother to ask him who his roommate was—he knew—it was John Cerulo. This practical joking worthy is middleman for handing down "Romantic Tips to Posterity," compiled and composed by Brosmer.

Meets the 'Boys'

"Sandy" was born on October 17, 1918, in Norwich which, he boasts, is becoming a mecca for winter sports enthusiasts. He received the rudiments of readin', ritin', and 'rithmetic in New York. From there he proceeded to Archmere Academy in Clayton, Del.; here he met Jim Collins and Joe Healy and became infected with the "hustler fever."

Jim and Joe made him Villanova-conscious, a fact which caused Gordon to enroll in the commerce and finance school in the fall of 1937.

Not unlike many another commerce and finance students (boost for the business school), he became thoroughly occupied with extra-curricula activities. While a freshman, he enrolled as a member of the Holy Name Society. The following year he joined the "Belle Air" staff and assisted his class as a member of the sophomore cotillion committee.

Gets Chairmanship

Last year Gordon was initiated into the Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity and the Belle Masque society. Finally (as has been so coyly intimated before), he was named chairman of the senior social highlight, the "Belle Air" Ball.

A man of definite tastes, "Sandy" is a number-one bridge addict. He is an ardent rooter for Beaver College in general and a certain Miss Ann S. in particular. This same young lady uses up most of his spare time and also takes him to the post-office quite frequently, in addition to making him a week-end commuter to the West Oak Lane institution.

In the Army Now

From the pictures on his dresser and the clothes on his back it is apparent that Gordon specializes in beautiful women and sartorial perfection. He has earned the reputation of being an excellent student, especially in research work.

Upon graduation, the draft board has settled the question of Private Brosmer's future for a year at least. Yes, Gordon has received his official notification and will swap his sheepskin for the olive drab this coming July. Exactly what he will do after he has given the army the benefit of exclusive right to his services for a year has not as yet been definitely decided, or if it is he "ain't a-sayin'."

WHENEVER a Villanova student speaks of a "man about campus," there is an immediate inference that he is referring to one George W. Coupe, Jr. Big George is a six ft., three in., husky, 190-lb., senior commerce and finance student. (cf. If you want proof for these last facts ask recent Delta Pi Epsilon pledges.)

Let us trace the tumultuous career of the 1940 Junior Prom chairman. George was born in Philadelphia on May 3, 1919. He received his primary education at Holy Cross Parochial School where football, basketball, baseball, and boxing were favored with his attention.

It was not until high school days at La Salle, however, that George became fully cognizant of his athletic ability. A highlight of his secondary education was the lateral pass he threw which almost defeated Salesianum High. Alas and alack, the Delawarites came back and won the game.

Two Tearing Terrors

Upon entering Villanova, George met Don McGurk and collectively they terrorized the opponents of the 150 lb. team. As if football (the big brute), weren't enough, George was also a member of the freshman track team. The following year our hero augmented his versatility by being on the sophomore cotillion committee.

George W. has been most successful, athletically speaking, in basketball; he has been a mainstay of the commerce and finance team for four years. Recently he has been scouting the double headers at Convention Hall and assiduously amassing copious volumes of notes (as he does in Fr. Stanford's religion class). After studying the method empolyed by Glamack, North Carolina center, Mr. Coupe proudly racked up 14 and 16 points on consecutive game days.

Heads Prom

For the benefit of those who neglected to read the VILLANOVAN last year, it was George who brought you Leighton Noble and Van Alexander for one of the college's most financially and socially successful junior proms.

George "He's Nobody's Baby Now" Coupe has been known to concentrate his affections in the past but that day is definitely gone. George is too big-hearted to be so miserly with his time or attentions; every girl is eligible and as long as she has beauty and charm, age is not considered. Rumor has it that his younger brother, a high school sophomore, only brings his girl friends around when George is not at home; J. A. in particular.

Has Many Virtues

Outstanding among the many virtues of this business administration major are his ability to save money, to drive with extreme care and caution at all times, to avoid exaggeration of any kind, and his devotion to President Roosevelt and all things Democratic. To those of you who believe any of the statements in the last paragraph we can only repeat the words of our retreat master, "Get wise, fellow."

Our interviewee is one of the few Philadelphians who have been accepted to take flying instructions at the naval flying base, Pensacola, Fla., and he hopes to go there come graduation in June. Since the average life of a military plane in war is twenty-four hours we know he can not fail to succeed. Requiescat in pace.

A Poem in Praise of Nothing, or "Let's All Go Skating At The Pond"

By JOHN P. FULLAM

Poetry, they say, is best written under emotional stress. The author of the lines below conformed admirably to this condition. He mingled with the throng of escapists who were heading for some skating at "the pond." What's more, he even tried it himself. Resultant from his experiences was the following authoritative discourse:

Villanova has a pond
Which winter's blasts congeal,
Which graceful youths do slide upon
On shimmering blades of steel.

But some there are who don't succeed
In being wholly graceful—
Whose skating, when they don't take heed,
Grows physically distasteful.
With this last group we are concerned
—We're trying to be helpful—
So that, when how to fall they've learned,
Their skating won't be yelp-ful.

Experience is surely ours,
Both personal and vicarious,
We watched, then tried for several hours
To force our skates to carry us.

The first thing about falling is:
It's certain to take place;
Before on flashing skates you whiz,
You're bound to try your face.

You then try varying remedies
—"Is there a doctor in the house?"—
And your anatomical extremities
With liniment you douse.

This done, the more foolhardy souls
Go out and try again.
But history often repeats itself,
And discretion is no sin.

The true Villanova man, we know,
Is skillful and courageous;
In fog or sunshine, rain or snow,
His war with ice he wages.

So give your local lake a try;
Go skate like Sonja Henie.
Don't let these winter months flit by —The exercise helps plenty.

The important thing is, "Know thyself";
If you can skate, then do it.
Your author eats from off a shelf—
He's tried, and lived to rue it.

Draft Survey Necessary To Judge Deferments

All students, including those whose names have appeared on the college bulletin boards, who have received questionnaires from their local Selective Service Act boards are requested to report to Mr. Paetrus Banmiller, Registrar, room 118, Mendel hall, immediately.

This action is requested to complete a survey of the actions of the various draft boards towards college students. At the present time all college students are deferred until July 1, 1941.

The completed survey will provide a basis in determining whether it will be advisable to give further deferment to those college men who are preparing for an occupation essential to national health, safety, or interest or whose work in the field of science is, in the judgment of the individuals or institutions, of a quality to justify such a request.

This group may also include individuals in other fields, the quality and nature of whose work make their continuance advisable in the best interest of national defense.

Students are also asked to report immediately after receiving any communication from their local draft board other than their questionnaires. This includes notice of deferment and date of physical examination. Complete and punctual cooperation of all students is necessary for the survey.

K. G. S. To Aid 'Open House'

By a unanimous vote, Kappa Gamma Sigma Society agreed at a meeting held last Thursday afternoon that its every facility will be exercised in assisting the Physics department to prepare for this year's "Open House" program.

Nominations for officers were also made at the meeting and elections will be held in the near future.

Tally Ho!

Wherein A New Columnist Starts His Exchange Hunt And Pens A Few Verses

By Bruno Talvacchia

TAKING to our mounts for the season's news-hunt over the nation's campi, we find an eager field awaiting the bugler's get-away signal. Field Master Tom Doyle took the lead at the VILLANOVAN Dinner Dance held prior to exam week.

As Master of the Hounds, this column has the pleasure of placing in the field numerous well-bred and pedigreed publications. Among them are the Daily Princetonian, bred in Nassau's lair, the Notre Dame Scholastic from South Bend, the Plainsman, nursed in Auburn, the Ram of Fordhamland, the Dartmouth, sired at Hanover, and the Loyolan hailing from Los Angeles. Needless to say, we also have in the run the locally-bred issues of the Daily Pennsylvanian, Temple News, Immaculatan, Rambler, Fournier News of Chestnut Hill, Hawk and La Salle Collegian.

To give a parting present to our predecessor in this column, we pen this tribute:

So long, Tom Moore,
We sure will miss yer,
Your words, your wit, and Def'nitely your kisser!

Our policy:
From Princeton choice bits,
From Wellesley a mint:
All the news that fits
TALLY HO will print.

"Objector" Sustained:

"Men are best alive" is the watchword of Michigan State women these days. Since world affairs, politics, and such stuff are commonly considered beyond the feminine scope, the State "News" decided to give the women a break and asked a dozen of them at least one question the men can't answer:

Would you rather have your husband a dead war hero or a live conscientious objector?

Heartening conclusion: Women register an unsurprising lack of interest in dead men, war heroes not excepted.

Who Went Where Last Week:

The following paragraph was found gracing page six of the "Tatler," weekly publication of the College of New Rochelle (for girls) New Rochelle, N. Y. Marguerite Bric in her Jan. 17 column, entitled "Who Went Where Last Week?" writes:

"Joan Crowley spent the week-end admiring a $5,000 cup won by a motor boat enthusiast from Villanova which is now on display at the Hotel Lexington. See Joan for details."

Since when does it take a week-end to admire a cup, Frank? Though, perhaps, a cup worth $5000 does take time to appreciate!

SLOgan HOgan:

Watch the TALLY HO's go by!

"'Joe College' in person arrives on the Bates campus this Saturday to attend the all-college "Flunk-Out" Dance. Prizes will go to the fellow and girl with most snappy outfits who in the estimation of the judges represent their ideas of Mr. and Mrs. Joe College."

This excerpt from the Bates "Student" moves TALLY HO to compose the following ditty in hopes that he may get a commission from Bates to write advertising copy:

All is not clover though finals are over,
A-brooding, lo! are the flunkmen;
Mister Joe College, forget your misknowledge,
A-dancing go—with the Batesmen.

Hail to Michigan:

The University of Michigan is our selection as the school of the week. On January 30, Michigan was in the national limelight on two fronts, the radio and philanthropy.

The Columbia Broadcasting System presented a "Vox Pop" program originating from the campus at Ann Arbor over a coast-to-coast network. Among the students who answered the quizzical questions for prizes was Forrest Evasheski. The football hero won a wedding cake, a traveling bag, and two tickets to Niagara Falls, after admitting that his love affair (she was in the audience) was "sort of serious."

Tom Harmon, his gridiron pal, was in Washington attending the President's Birthday Ball benefit for infantile paralysis victims with "other movie stars."

P. K. P. Initiates Next Monday

Annual initiation and banquet of the Phi Kappa Pi will be held Monday night, Feb. 10, in Mendel hall; the initiation will start at 6:00 P. M. and will be followed by the banquet at 8:00 P. M.

Hugh Boyle, senior electrical engineer, and Hyman Malkin, senior chemical engineer have been appointed co-chairmen for the engineering fraternity's affair.

The P. K. P. initiation is the biggest and most popular event in the engineer's extra-curricular program. It will be attended, along with the initiates, by the current members of the fraternity, past presidents, and the engineering faculty.

Unique in itself, the initiation is to be held in the engineering "labs", where sundry "torture" equipment is available, ranging from pitch and sawdust in the workshop, through suspicion and suspense in the hydraulics lab to electricity and magnetism in the electrical engineering lab.

Following the initiation, there will be served a full course steak dinner, in honor of the new members. As a welcome to them, they will be addressed by members of the engineering faculty, who will tell of their past experiences in connection with the fraternity and the initiation. There will also be, according to Raymond Vener, president of the group, a guest speaker from this vicinity.

Although he expects approximately two hundred at the banquet, Vener can not be sure until all those who wish to go have paid their dues and received their membership cards. By Friday, when all the initiates' applications are to be in and initiation fees to be paid, he expects a total of 75 new members.

"Those", Vener said, "who have been prompted by fear to disregard entering the fraternity have nothing to fear at all. The initiation is all good clean fun with any wrongs righted at the following banquet. One must not put off the opportunity of joining the frat till future years because only the minimum benefits can be derived from such an act."

Analyze Benny Show In New Radio Group

First meeting of the newly organized Radio Work Group took place yesterday at 2:30 P. M. in Simpson hall under the direction of Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A.

Fr. Vrana played a recording of the Jack Benny program heard Sunday night and explained the various techniques employed by the well-known comedian. Script continuity, gag lines, and pauses were explained and discussed. Several members of the club then tried their hands at announcing campus news flashes.

The Radio Club is not interested solely in the technical side of radio but also in the actual production of programs, news flashes, radio dramas, and, in short, all that the radio audience hears. For this purpose a small production room has been set up in an off-parlor of Simpson hall and a large receiver has been placed in the main seminar room.

Anyone interested in this type of work is invited to attend the next meeting of the group, scheduled for Feb. 10 at 2:30 P. M. in Simpson hall.

Trade Group Holds Prize Essay Contest

Villanova students have been invited to participate in a $25 prize essay contest sponsored by the Foreign Traders Association of Philadelphia, Inc., open to students of local colleges.

Three topics upon which articles may be written are offered: "The Consumer's Stake in Foreign Trade"; "Is a Customs Union Practical in the Western Hemisphere?"; and "The Place of Gold in the Post-War World in the Event of a British Victory, and in the Case of a Totalitarian Victory."

The papers will be judged on originality of ideas, enthusiasm of approach, and factual background. The best paper from each institution will be acknowledged by a certificate of merit while the best submitted in the entire contest will receive $25.

history and the heritage of our institutions.

"As far as education is concerned, I am firmly convinced that, if private initiative in education is hampered or destroyed in our land, it will go a long way towards helping to achieve the triumph of totalitarianism."

Treat of Conscription

At the meeting, selective service's effect on institutions of higher learning was discussed by Dr. William M. Lewis, State director of the administration of the act and president of Lafayette College, and Col. Thomas Jenkins, state adviser on occupational deferments. Harry V. Masters, president of Albright College also spoke.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. Clement C. Williams of Lehigh University; succeeded by Dr. Pierce Corson of Dickinson College as president of the association, Dr. Williams was elected vice-president.

A.I.E.E. Men Make Budd, Philco Radio Inspections

The Villanova branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers enjoyed several inspection trips included in the program of the winter convention of that group, held in Philadelphia, from Jan. 27-31.

On Wednesday the group visited the Philco Radio and Television Corporation plant where a demonstration of the two types of broadcasting was given. The tour also included an inspection of modern radio assembly lines.

The process of shotwelding for stainless steel streamlined trains was viewed during a trip to the Budd Manufacturing Company factory on Thursday.

Mass And Communion End 98th Annual Retreat

Villanova's 98th annual inter-semester retreat closed with Mass and Communion on Jan. 29. Classes were resumed after breakfast had been served to the non-resident students.

In several well-received conferences, Rev. William S. Sheedy, O. S. A., and Rev. Francis A. Dillon, O. S. A., stressed the practicality and reasonableness of religion and offered numerous common sense means for living up to religious teachings.

Commerce Frat Head Acknowledges Patronage

George Flannery, Jr., president of Delta Pi Epsilon, announced today that he wishes to thank all those who attended the Financiers' Frolic held Jan. 17, as well as those who acted as patrons for the affair.

According to Flannery, "the dance was a financial success as well as a pleasurable evening. Much credit is due Frank Lombardo and James Jernee, co-chairmen for the event, and their committees.

"Along with these men I wish to thank those who contributed to the entertainment: John Parson, who led the novelty dances, and Ed Kubler, pianist, for his interpretations."

To the left, bottom, is ANDREA J. D'ANGELO, education major, who retires as literary editor after three and a half years of reporting, feature writing, editorial writing and assigning editorials.

At the right, bottom, ROBERT P. SCHISLER appears. As circulation manager during the past year, he was in charge of the weekly distribution of the paper.

Grand Coulee Dam Slides Shown At Chem Meeting

Slides on the Grand Coulee Dam were shown at the meeting of the local chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers in Mendel hall yesterday.

Louis Schneider, senior, chairman of the Program Committee, obtained the slides from the parent A. S. C. E. in New York City. These were the first in a series of such slides which are to be shown throughout the second semester.

Plans for trips to the Springfield Water Works and the Radnor Sewage Disposal Plant were presented by John J. Skelly, Trip Chairman. Permission has been secured to inspect both these plants and the dates for the inspections will be announced as soon as two can be found that don't conflict with classes or other activities.

Book Club Plans Change

Tomorrow afternoon at 3:15 the Book Club will hold its bi-weekly meeting in Simpson hall. During the second semester the time of the gatherings will probably be changed because of the change in the class schedules of several members. The presence of all members is requested in order that a time convenient for all may be decided upon.

With Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., as moderator, the group will continue its work of reviewing and discussing recent novels and the styles of their authors. Arthur Somers will preside.

Editor's Adieu

year book labeled him. His was an indefatigable initiative and boundless seriousness in regard to his VILLANOVAN labors. A thorough editor.

In January of 1940 the weekly struck the worst snag since its birth in 1895. (Editor's note: This sentiment is solely that of the writer, and absolutely must not be considered the opinion of any other members of the staff.) I was in. All my boys were excellent assistants, though, and their great aid pushed the paper through. Tom Doyle, Bill Schubert, "Howdy" McCall, and all the fellows were godsends. The general staff had the stuff and gave it. "Binnie" Barnes certainly handled the sports pages well, too. My job was made immeasurably easier because of them.

Memories Linger On

But it's over. My week-ends will be free now for the first time in four years. Upon looking back, nevertheless, the work dissolves itself into the many pleasantries and sound friendships that were experienced during my period on the staff. My memories are tinted with gay, vivid colors. They're mine, and I'm ever so glad to carry them with me. I'll be a staff member as long as I have them.

The "annual" staff basketball game, which more than likely never got beyond the publicity stage—the ruthless deadlines that were worse than an E in Sociology—the cryptic criticism of printing foreman Whitlock—the big scoop that was promised every week and which inevitably fell through—the Monday morning unfilled space in the dummy which influenced my whitened-hair effect—the VILLANOVAN-sponsored trips to Michigan and Alabama—the fun, the pride of putting Tuesday's issue on the streets of Mendel's halls: all gone, not ever to be reclaimed. Realities merging with mists to become memories.

Well, "Has Been," you're washed up. Pack your pencils ,erasers, and memories. Be gone with your copy basket, gobble up this last bit of work from me. New staff, accept my heartiest for the future. Door, open up.

I'm out.

that "rhythm of tomorrow" which marks him for near-future greatness. With emphasis on finesse and coloring of arrangements, the Chester orchestra strives to play each note in a manner that is not only pleasing to the ear, but adds a certain appeal which "makes you wanna dance."

Hits the High Spots

Yes, greatness! Take a look at some of his engagements. He has just completed an appearance at the Hotel Statler in Boston, as a part of which he broadcast three times weekly over a nation-wide hook-up.

The list of prominent hotels at which he has played in the past is almost never-ending, and reads like a globe-trotter's suitcase. There's the New Yorker and the Essex House, New York; the William Penn Hotel, Pittsburgh; the World's Fair; Detroit's Book-Cadillac, and Palisades Park in New Jersey—to name just a few. He is now on a tour of the Eastern states.

Records Well-Known

In addition to radio, theatre, and hotel engagements, the Chester crew has attained popularity via the waxed disc. The versatility of the orchestra has been demonstrated by their many hit recordings of last year. Such outstanding platters as "The Octave Jump", "May I Never Love Again", "Old, Old Castle in Scotland" and "Pushin' the Conversation Along" prove their ability in swing, sweet, and novelty numbers.

Bob himself is a tenor saxophonist of note. Before organizing his own band in 1935 at the Detroit Athletic Club, he was outstanding in several big-time orchestras—Ben Bernie, Ben Pollack, Paul Specht, and others.

Not a Bad Guy!

And, lest we ignore his romantic aspects, it must be added that he might have been a big-league ballplayer, turning down offers from the "Tigers" and "Red Sox," and that he comes from a wealthy family. And girls, it's been rumored that he's good-looking too! He's the friendly type, ready to do what he can to make the dancers happy, and he loves to mix with the crowd.

No stranger to collegiate frolics, Chester will see action at Lafayette on February 15, and has provided the musical fare for many another "extra-curricular" affair.

Dance chairman Gordon Brosmer, who released Chester's signing last week, has announced that tickets for the Ball are now on sale at $5.00 per couple. They are being vended by Brosmer, James Collins, and the members of the Belle Air Ball committee.

The theme of the decorations for the dance has not been definitely decided, but will be announced shortly before the affair.

MR. Joseph Barnes, spectacled gentlemen of the press, who dabbles through a 48-hour week of sports, embellishes the center spread a few columns over. Mr. Barnes recently retired from pages five, six and seven of this paper and on Friday afternoon, he cleaned out his paper-laden desk and then complacently moved upstairs to the "Belle Air" office where he proceeded to Job II as Sports Editor of the year-book.

All of which makes us bewail his absence but leaves us in the happy state of affairs of being willed his position. Yet, Joe, the possessor of Irish wit and humor, has been our guardian for the past fifty-two weeks and we feel very insignificant without his counsel, when the deadline rolls around.

To make our typewriter yield the Barnes type of story with those autobiographical sketches and candid accounts filled with rhetoric would put us in a delirium of importance. In fact, that last story of his where he signed the —30— mark was about the finest there was and deserves a good substantial cheer. We'll say definitely that the thirty mark will never put on Mr. Barnes, and he'll never be thrown a life-belt when it comes to writing sports.

General rumor has it that Coach Al Severance committed a tortious misdemeanor the other night, in the course of the Vilanova-Connecticut game It deals with the fact that Mr. Severance perpetrated subversive acts in dealing with the outcome of the game. When he failed to use the first team through the entire part of the game, the crowd put the blackball on his coaching ability and feared the loss of the game. All the nail-biters got the jitters and cigarette consumption increased 50 per cent.

The question involved is why Mr. Severance let his second team remain in the game when the dangerous New Englanders pulled up to tie the score and almost knock out the chances of winning for the 'Cats. Connecticut came mighty near to making an upset, if in those last minutes a few of their shots had connected. Well, it would be self-delusion to pretend that there was no significance in doing what Mr. Severance did.

Only a few weeks ago, Villanova got her ears pinned back by Seton Hall, who with their double team combination proved that they could outlast and outshoot a single team that played 40 straight minutes. Basketball, in this modern age is about the fastest of competitive sports, that is for contest that run more than a half hour, and it's no small wonder that an individual can keep up a high rate of velocity on the court, without being replaced by a fresh substitute. Two heads are better than one and two teams are better than one, that's our opinion and anyway Villanova didn't lose but they won — that's what counts in the books.

Wildcat Five Trips Connecticut, 40-35, Scoring Eleventh Victory

By JACK DUDLEY

In its first encounter since the Seton Hall fiasco, Villanova returned to the ribbed court Friday night and defeated a strong University of Connecticut team, 40-35, on the 'Cats home floor, before an estimated crowd of 2,000 fans.

Showing the form that brought it ten consecutive victories, until the Seton Hall defeat, Villanova tok the lead midway in the first half and held it throughout the remainder of the game. However the Connecticut five gave Severance's club plenty of trouble before the Blue emerged victorious for their eleventh win. Johnny Yusievicz of the visitors was the thorn in the side of the 'Cats all night long, with his accuracy at the foul line pulling the New Englanders closer to the scoring margin.

Coach Severance started his second team as a complete surprise to the Connecticut team and they proved their worth by going ahead 11-4 after five minutes of play. Immediately the visitors came back and on successful pivots by Yusievicz, knotted the score at 11-11. With that threat, Severance pulled out his second stringers and inserted the first team.

Paul Nugent and Chuck Nugent started their scoring antics and the 'Cats moved steadily ahead, but never building up a comfortable margin. Matching point for point a good deal of the time, Connecticut managed to keep on the heels of the victors.

At halftime, Villanova had a six point lead over Connecticut, 27-21. Fine backboard work by Art Spector gave the visitors less chance of turning on their offensive power. He consistently got the possession of the ball after the shots and started the drives down floor. Dick Gray, along with Spector, treated the guests roughly by stealing the ball away numerous times, halting their attack.

Connecticut employed a fast break with long passes, typical of the New England type of basketball, and Yusievicz hung to Villanova's basket all night as a pivot man. Converting eight out of 11 shots, he accounted for 14 points to lead both teams in scoring. His teammate, Bob Donnelly, whose first half shooting kept the Nutmeggers in the game, gained 10 points on four field goals and two fouls.

Nugent and Yund High

It was the Co-Captains, Paul Nugent and Chuck Yund who managed to salvage most of the 'Cats points. Nugent tallied 9 points to lead his team's scoring while close behind was Yund who racked up 7 points on three field goals and one foul. Altogether nine players shared in the point-getting. Seeing action but failing to score were Lindy Kolenda, Tom Harford, Barney McAloon and George McFadden. Robinson, Kelty and Wood gave fine exhibitions of defensive work to give the 'Cats their eleventh out of twelve.

By this victory, Villanova returned to the winning side of the ledger and established itself as the leading Philadelphia club and a leading Eastern quintet. A point of interest is that the defeated Connecticut five gave the famed "two point per minute" Rhode

McArdle, Once Associate Of Gene Tunney, Adopts Bill Duffy As New Ring Pupil

Bill Duffy, Villanova's representative to the fisticuff world is doing well in the circles of professional boxing. Quite recently his talents have adopted him to Tom McArdle, who has been associated with topnotchers such as Gene Tunney and Benny Leonard.

McArdle, presumably retired after four decades in boxing as promoter, matchmaker and manager has come back to the fight game with the belief that his new protege, Duffy, has that something which made him famous during his college days at Villanova.

So far Duffy has made twelve professional starts in the welterweight class and won all but one bout, which resutled in a draw. The Bronx Coliseum has been the scene of most of his fights, which offers Duffy a promising step towards big time boxing.

William Francis, a Hartford, Conn., youth, graduated from Villanova in 1940, receiving honors in athletics and education. While here at the Main Line, he was captain of the boxing team for two years and the leading point-maker on the squad. Since boxing was abandoned in 1939, Bill served as trainer and instructor in his Senior year.

At the present he is a substitute teacher in physical science in the Hartford high schools and in his spare time makes the rounds in boxing. If Gene Tunney and Benny Leonard were so successful under McArdle, then the future looks very bright for one William Francis Duffy.

Touring Wake Forest Club Engages Blue Tonight In Critical Encounter

Rated As One of Best Quintets to Face Villanova All Year, Deacons Aim to Upset Severancemen; W. & J. to Follow as Next Threat Friday

By PAUL McCANN

Touted as probably the best quintet to invade the lair of the Villanova Wildcats this season, the Deacons of Wake Forest College, North Carolina will take to the hardwoods at the field house to battle our rejuvenated basket-tossers tonight.

Starting their season a little later than most teams, the Foresters were a little slow to find their stride but now, as they are on a second tour of the Eastern circuit, they are hitting on all cylinders and bid no good for all opponents in their wake. On their previous swing through the east they included among their victims the St. Bonaventure team which they defeated in the feature game of a college double-header in Buffalo on New Year's Day.

Taught a slow, deliberate offense—featuring quick-opening plays—by Coach Murray Greason, the Deacons are masters of the pivot pick-off attack.

Coach Is "Local" Boy

Coach Greason typifies the "local boy makes good" axiom. He was born in Wake Forest and fostered his college education at Wake Forest College. While there, he was a letterman in Football, Baseball, and Basketball for four years and was rated as All-Southern forward during his senior year, in the cage sport. He has had a hand in coaching all of these major sports at his alma mater but now restricts his instructing enterprises to baseball and baseball.

The current court team retains but two members of the starting five of last year's Southern Tournament runner-ups. The hold overs are; Captain Vince Convery, a 5'10" forward from Trenton, N. J. and certainly no stranger in these parts; and Herb Cline, the center and the biggest man on the club at 6'3½". Convery may prove to be as slick a ball-handler as has performed in the field house this season. He is also a dead shot from out around the foul circle. Cline, whose name was prominent in football headlines last fall, is a tower of strength under the basket in his powerful rebound play and is being mentioned as a candidate for All-American honors.

Average Height

The remaining berths on the starting five tonight will probably be held by Jim Bonds, a letterman; Everett Berger, a Soph sensation; and Henry Lougee, another Soph luminary. The squad averages only 5'10" in height so its success depends a great deal upon the ability of its big center to retrieve the ball off the backboards.

The Deacons come to Villanova fresh from a real test of their calibre. They played the Ornbach A. A., eastern representatives in the National A. A. U. Tournament in Denver last year, at New York City last night.

On Friday night at the field house, Severance's sharpshooters will play host to a strong Washington and Jefferson team, who have dropped but one game this year. This will be the first year that the 'Cats have played W. & J. and the debut game is expected to furnish plenty of excitement.

Ivy clad Washington and Jefferson, one-time athletic power, is now strugling to regain supremacy on all fronts and hold the court game as a very important step towards their goal.

Indoor Trackmen Face Large Field In Penn A.C. Meet

Runners in First Test Vie Against Outstanding Array of College Stars on Friday Night

Villanova's indoor track team, fresh from the Seton Hall meet which was held last night in Jersey City, make their second bow on Friday night when they take the boards at Convention Hall in the star-studded Penn A. C. invitation indoor classic.

Jumbo Elliot, mentor of the Wildcats, will start a large group of Blue entrants in the hopes of gaining recognition for the school. This annual affair which draws the greatest track and field stars from all over the country is directed by Lawson Robertson, world-famous track coach and authority.

Notably missing from the list of entrants is Johnny Maher, who two years ago ran a dead heat with Barney Ewell of Penn State to break the unofficial indoor world's record in the 50 yard dash. Maher has been out of school during the fall with a severe case of pneumonia and is unable to compete for another year.

'Cats in Relay

Villanova will be represented in the mile relay and other distances, along with this famous list of track stars. A well-balanced and well-filled program of 21 events, 13 relays and 8 individual numbers will get under way at 8 P. M.

The famous classic, Pennac Mile, will bring together the big names of Chuck Fenske, John Munski, Gene Venzke and Walter Mehl. All have been hitting high strides this winter up in Boston and New York. Last week-end, Mehl captured the Wanamaker Mile in the Melrose meet at Madison Square Garden in fast time. So this race will be number one on the program.

Fast Track

It is possible that a record breaking time may occur, for the 12 lap racetrack at Convention Hall is considered as one of the fastest in the East.

A brilliant line-up is also fea-

Blue Swimmers Meet Strong Loyola Team; Kelley Put To Test

Loyola College of Baltimore will bring her swimming stars to the Main Line pool on Friday to engage Villanova's tankmen for the 'Cats second meeting of the season.

Outstanding stars of the Loyola team are the Steingass brothers, Hank and Eric. Hank, a transferee to Loyola from Temple University excels in the sprints, and is considered as one of the outstanding tankmen of the Philadelphia district. His brother Eric was a mainstay of the Olney High swimming team last year. If Hank swims the sprints, there should be some thrilling races between him and Walt Kelley, ace sprint man of the 'Cats.

Meanwhile Kelley has been competing regularly since the Rider meet and two weeks ago he set a new record in the 60 yard freestyle at Big Brothers in a local A. A. U. meet. He traveled the distance in 30 seconds flat.

Sophomore Ed Reilley will probably swim with Kelley in the 50 and 100 on Friday. In the backstroke race will be John Maher and Paul Farnsworth; in the breaststroke, Frank Desmond, and in the 220 and 440, John Pholeric and Jake Mauch. John Green and Bob Boudon will be Villanova's two representatives in diving. As yet, Coach Leahy is uncertain about his relay teams.

. . . Honorary Captain

Basca Captain, Elected By Mates

Nick Basca, Phoenixville's star representative on the Villanova grid squad for three years, was recently named honorary captain for the past season. At the same time the names of 21 lettermen were announced.

Set South Wild

Basca played at Phoenixville High and then moved on to Pennington Prep where he starred in three sports. A sensation as a freshman, Nick attracted nationwide attention as a sophomore with his brilliant running and accurate passing. He continued this fine play as a junior and senior, capping it in a blaze of glory in the North-South game at Montgomery, Ala. Just two weeks previous when Villanova met Auburn in the same city, Basca set the Southern fans wild with his versatility and they practically requested his return for the exhibition contest.

Nominated By Coaches

Coaches Carl Snavely and Lynn Waldorf, of the North squad, announced that they would recommend Nick for the All-Star game against the National Pro champs to be played in Chicago late next August. Basca has not yet decided whether he will play pro ball although several National League clubs are interested in him. It is also rumored that he is being considered for the vacant coaching post at nearby Pottstown High School.

Besides Basca, six senior gridders and a manager received varsity letters. They are Stan Stress, Len Kolenda, ends; Bill Piscione and Ed Collins, guards; Pete Yankauskas and Ben Morkum, backs. Richard Monsaert, Commerce student, was awarded his letter as manager. William De Grace, of Quincy, Mass., and Steven Aisenbray, Baldwin, L. I., both junior commerce men, have been named to succeed Monsaert.

The others receiving letters are: Juniors — Paul Stenn, Tony Anderson, Ed Kasky, Ed Korisky, Bill Howlett, Elk Murray and Joe Behot.

Yund Holds Lead In Scoring Parade

Although Villanova has won the most games of any of the ten local teams of the Philadelphia area, the nearest position to top honors in the scoring race is fifth place held by Chuck Yund who has tallied 97 points. Following close behind is Paul Nugent with 96 points in eleven games.

With but four games remaining of the schedule for the 'Cats, it seems impossible that any member of the club can catch Larry Kenney, St. Joseph's ace scorer who leads the field with 176 points. Second in the city scoring is Charlie McGlone who has a total of 116 points.

suit and inject the names of Dick Gray and Art Spector as our "Men of the Week" in sports. Though not stand-outs in the scoring parade and hardly ever publicized in print, these two really saved the day for Villanova Friday night. It's been quite some time since we've seen men who were so adept on the defense. Time and again they repeatedly stole the ball from the Connecticut passers and shyly took the applause of the spectators.

Under the basket, Art really hit his stride and took everything that came his way. He seemed to sense how the ball was coming and used his height to a great advantage. After one shot, with Spector obliging, Villanova gained possession of the ball and headed down floor on the offense. Gray, small but elusive, displayed his art of ball-snatching and really left their coach shaking his head.

—V—

William Francis Duffy, pugilist, politician and historian, made his return engagement to Villanova this week-end, handsomely sporting a racoon coat and stylish suit, tailored in New York, where Bill makes his second home. Graduated from here last summer, Bill has three enterprises to consider. From the boxing angle, Duffy is doing well by himself. Recently, Tom McArdle, former manager of Gene Tunney and Benny Leonard, took Bill in and will give him a crack at Madison Square Garden in February.

A close friend of Bill is Lou Ambers, with whom he lives with and spars with every day. The Duffy lad is really serious about his ring career and with that dynamite left of his, Madison Square Garden will really welcome him — but of course with Mike Jacob's permission.

If all doesn't go too well in the fisticuff world, Mr. Duffy will go back to Frog Hollow and announce that he plans to enter the political battles. He has the potential promise of being elected Alderman, that is if the Republican party and Democratic party battle it out to see who gets him.

Don't be so surprised if our ambitious Frog Hollower joins the rank of teachers — and there are enough of them. When his name comes up on the long list of substitute teachers in the Hartford High Schools, he promptly shuffles up there and gives quizzes on Ancient history to the befuddled freshmen.

Fedigan Quintet Overhauls C. & F. With Easy Triumph Over Greenies

Evidence of good and bad basketball was displayed last week as the teams returned to the ribbed court for their first series of games since mid-year exams. Dogged-determination and last second desperation were the keynotes of two of the three games as Fedigan's maroon quintet jumped into the lead over the Commerce team and the Mendel residents.

The two main games were parallel in action and outcome, as C. & F. nosed out the Mendel presidents, 29-28, in the final seconds of play and the Mendel Day Hops came surging from behind to beat out Austin Hall, 40 to 39. In both the contests the team that trailed for the first half of play came rebounding back in the latter half to win out. As indicated by the scores, the margin of victory was but one point and the court was filled with last minute action.

.... McGurk's Shot Wins

C. & F. pulled their game out of the fire, thereby assuming a tie for second place with the Mendel Residents, when Don McGurk, senior forward, tossed in a seemingly impossible one-handed shot from the center of the court to give them victory. That was his eleventh point of the night which made him high scorer too.

As for the Mendel Day Hops, they pulled out their bag of tricks in the person of Bob DePersio who won the game on his "do or die" shot. Apparently beaten in the closing minutes the Mendel lads surprised the confident Austin team by showering the basket with fruitful shots.

Alumni Trampled

The Fedigan Gigoloes completed the day's activity by walking away with Alumni Hall by a 40-20 score. It was a rather surprising outcome for Alumni held a 16-12 lead at the close of the first half, but folded up when the going got tough. Fedigan reversed the proceedings and bombed Alumni's basket the entire time of the second half, scoring 28 points and holding the bewildered Freshmen to a lone four points.

Coupe Leads

George Coupe of the C. & F. Day Students has taken the lead over Dan Keating in the individual scoring standing for the second half of the basketball tournament. Keating who led during the last half has only dropped 4 percentage points with a 12.2 per game average as compared with the 12.6 average of Coupe, who so far has hung up 63 points in the five games to Keating's 61. Joe Daly of Fedigan has a better game average with 13.2 but he has only played in four games because Fedigan is behind one game in the league. Following in third place is Meehan of the C. & F. Day Hops with 59 points in five games for an 11.8 average per game.

C. & F. is really showing its wares this half, having three of the first five high scorers; leading the league in team scoring with 218 points and holding a close second place in the games won standing.

Frosh Basketeers Total 29 Straight

Trim Passon A. A., Friday Night for Amazing Total of Twenty-Nine Games

In their first game since the Christmas holidays, the Frosh basketeers trimmed the Passon A. A. by a score of 44-22, and extended their undefeated record to ten straight for the season. This coupled with the 19 games last year's frosh accumulated gives them a total of 29 straight games.

On Friday night against the boys from West Philadelphia, the Kittens looked a bit ragged. That passing finesse was lacking and they missed on a lot of their shots. However they were never pressed hard and held a comfortable lead throughout the game. The halftime score was 22-11.

Forward Ernie Melafchek, former Bayonne High star led the "Kitten" attack with eight points. He sank three goals and two fouls. Stolsitz, Klotz, Drizen, Rapella, and Lord aided with two field goals apiece. Rullo and Lipsett were the chief threats for the Passon five dropping in three goals each.

In their remaining games the Frosh play a home and home series with the reserves of the Philadelphia Sphas, members of the American Professional League, and finish the season against their arch rivals Brown Prep.

"Shipwreck" Kelley Holds Top Spot As Record Breaker Of 'Cat Natators

Owns 40 Yd. Scholastic Record, National Prep Record and Competes in A. A. U.

By JACK MAUCH

The man of the hour in the VILLANOVAN sportlight during this wintry season is the quiet, reserved Walt Kelley, or "Shipwreck" as he is known among his swimming mates. This complaisant twenty-two-year-old senior, captain of the tank team, is the outstanding natator in Villanova's swimming history. For proof go down to the pool any day in the winter and you will see his lanky form churning up and down the tank making little waves run along the sides just like a speedboat.

Walt, who lives in Upper Darby, Pa., didn't come about his fish-like ability by simply diving into a pool and starting to stroke and kick. It is the result of daily practice over a period of years. Walt received his early education at West Catholic High of Philadelphia, noted for its swimming achievements, and made the squad in his sophomore year, but he tells us honestly, "I wasn't much good; I didn't even get my letter."

However that spring after the season was over Walt continued to practice and under the tutelege of the veteran coach Lou Mais, his times were lowered so much that he became as good as the best men on the varsity, and the next year he was breaking records!

Set Catholic Record

In his junior year Walt annexed the 40 yd. and 100 yd. freestyle crowns in the Catholic league, setting records in each, and throughout that season and the following one he continued to lower his marks.

The captaincy of the team was naturally bestowed on Walt in his senior year and during that season he became undisputed freestyle king of the Philadelphia interscholastic circles, holding records in all the freestyle events, the 40 yd., 100 yd. and 220 yd. distances, and his mark of 19.2 seconds in the 40 yd. sprint stands today.

That same year Mr. Kelley was undefeated in dual competition and placed second in both the 50 yard and 100 yard sprints in the National Interscholastic Championships. One of the important things to be kept in mind is that throughout high school Walt has been in the upper bracket of his class in scholastic standing.

Preps at Hun School

After graduation Walt received a scholarship to Hun school where he further distinguished himself in the tiled tank. That year found him National prep school champ in the century race.

In the fall of 1937 the slim Mr. Kelley was found ambling about the Main Line Campus, from the P. & W. station to the business school, to the gym, and back to the station. He has made quite a name for himself and has helped raise the "Wildcat" swimming standing considerably.

The present pool records of 24 second flat and 54 seconds in the 50 yd. and 100 yd. respectively were established by Walt in his sophomore year; however Walt has done better in other pools and in practice. In these two sprints Walt has lost only twice in dual meets during his college career, and both times it was to Miller of Franklin and Marshall College. Last year he placed second in the fifty in the Eastern Intercollegiates.

The secret of Walt's success is constant and conscientious practice. Keeping in good condition and observing strict training rules are the essential points, claims Mr. Kelley.

National Jr. Star

Besides swimming for Villanova Walt competes every week during the winter season in A. A. U. meets all over the east representing Big Brothers Boys Club where he first started competitive swimming. In 1939 in one of these meets he became National Junior 50 yard champ. He has competed against most of the outstanding swimmers at one time or another and he received his greatest satisfaction when he beat Johnny Macionis, former Yale and Olympic star.

In harmony with his swimming activities Walt spends his summers as a lifeguard at Longport, N. J., his second home as he terms it. Almost every Friday in the spring and early fall he rushes down for the week-end. He has been captain of the beach patrol for two years.

Walt is majoring in accounting in the business school; he is a conscientious student as his record of the past three years proves. He has no definite plans for the future but we know he will succeed no matter what field he enters. His affable manner has made him the friend of all who know him. He is the model of the student athletes.

Baseball Starts Soon

Doc Jacobs, coach of the varsity baseball team, has announced that practice will begin on February 15th in the Field House. The varsity nine will first limber up indoors and when the first sign of good weather approaches, they will take the field to practice for their first game against the University of Vermont.

This year's squad will have a number of veterans back from last year, including the majority of the pitchers.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

IT is a custom and a very pleasant one in this instance, for a new columnist to start off his initial effort with a word of commendation for the former tenant of the column. If the future jottings in this space are as interesting to the sports-minded and as well-written to the literary minded as they were under the reign of Jim Haughton, then this writer's ambition will be fulfilled.

And now, let's get down to the business at hand. Since this paper last went to press, an All-Philadelphia football eleven was chosen by a committee of sports writers and radio sports commentators, headed by Franny Murray and Bill Gunnis. Notwithstanding the fact that the Wildcats had just completed their most disappointing season under the tutelage of "Clipper" Smith, while Penn and Temple enjoyed comparatively successful seasons, three Villanova players garnered berths on the first team. Penn also placed three men on the mythical eleven, while Temple and La Salle were allotted two positions each and P. M. C. one.

Cat Trio Honored

The Villanova players honored by the committee were a trio of linesmen — Tony Anderson, Paul Stenn, and Ed Collins. Stenn was by far the best tackle seen on a Philadelphia gridiron during the past season, and Collins played the smart aggressive type of game that pays dividends under "Clipper" Smith's system.

The choice of Anderson was more or less of a surprise. Not that Tony's ability was ever in question but he was kept on the sidelines by a leg injury for a good part of the season. However, when Tony did see action, he showed the experts a brand of blocking and football in general that demanded recognition. The fact that Tony was given the nod over rivals who played more frequently than he only adds to the prestige and honor that accompanies his selection on the team.

The eleven players, their coaches, and the members of the selection committee were dinner guests of Bill Gunnis at the Melrose Riding Academy.

Basca Jilted?

But something seems to be wrong with the picture — an All-Philadelphia team without Nick Basca in the lineup? Yet that is just what we find. No doubt the committee was confronted with a difficult task in choosing two halfbacks from among three such stellar performers as Reagan of Penn, Tomasic of Temple, and Basca. However I believe it an injustice to exclude any one of these stars from the team merely because custom calls for only two halfbacks in one backfield. After all, the team was not picked to take part in an actual game but to honor the cream of the Philadelphia football crop of 1940, and if Nick Basca does not rate higher than Paul Prettyman of La Salle and Joe Glenn of P. M. C., the other two backfield choices, then the next Miss America will probably be Brenda or Cobina.

The setting was perfect—sports writers from the New York newspapers were present; the brand new gymnasium was literally jammed to the rafters, with the onlookers packed in right to the edge of the court itself; the home team were heavy favorites to add to their victory string of 35 straight contests. If the visiting team could emerge victorious, they would make basketball history.

We refer, of course, to the Seton Hall - Villanova basketball game which took place in the new $800,000 gymnasium on the Setonia campus. It is now ancient history that the Wildcats failed in their Frank Merriwell stunt and instead of snapping the winning streak of the home team, their own victory streak was brought to an abrupt halt at 10.

The game might have had an entirely different ending had not Paul Nugent and Chuck Yund been banned from the contest on personals shortly after the start of the second half. Regardless of this, though, the Cats definitely did not have an "on" night. Usually, if their passing game is stopped, Al Severance's charges can depend on their set shots to swing the score in their favor. Against Bob Davies and Co., even the set shots were not forthcoming.

All this is not meant as an excuse, but it would be interesting to see these two teams meet again this season—only this time on the Wildcats home court. We think the score of this contest would be interesting—yes, very interesting.

'Strikes' And 'Spares' Pair Off In Contest

The bowling tournament sponsored by Bill Epifanio and John Murphy is gradually being realized as two teams, the Strikes and the Spares, will pair off today in an opening round match. The winner of the two will engage the Meds, the third team to enter the new tournament.

Recently composed, the Strikes include Joe Adams, Joe Bogo, Tony Clandra and Mike Kupecki, while the Spares are made up of four experienced bowlers, Ken Whisner, Stan Eusko, Joe Felix and Paul Nugent. The Meds who drew a bye in the opening round have Bob Alpan, Jim Farley, Ray Cacciatore and Bob Boggiano to chalk up the strikes.

George Flannery, president of the C. & F. fraternity, Delta Pi Epsilon, has recently set forth intentions of entering the fraternity into the contest, which will add a fourth team.

The bowling tournament has grasped the interest of many of the students, but there is still an opportunity for many others to sign up before the tournament opens. Awards will be presented for the highest scores of three consecutive games for the month in duck pins and big pins.

tured in the John H. Neeson Two Mile which last year due to Tommy Deckard's blistering stretch drive stole the sow. Gregory Rice, present world's champion of the two mile run, heads the year and hopes to atone for that parade. He was defeated here last defeat by doing some fancy and fast stepping.

In the Half Mile, Robertson has secured the services of Chuck Beetham, last year's winner and a former Ohio State champion, Jimmy Kehoe who apparently is just coming into his own, and the great Negro runner, John Borican.

Ewell in 50

Heading the sprint array is Barney Ewell, world record holder of the 50 yard dash. Last year this Negro lad made the distance in 5 seconds flat but his record was disallowed. Also entered is Eddie Junghans, Penn sprint ace.

In the one and two mile relays, Villanova will face such strong college teams as Princeton, Penn, N. Y. U., Fordham, Columbia, Seton Hall and Temple. There will also be mile relays for high schools and prep schools which brings together local schools in the Philadelphia area. In all, it loks like a great meet for new records and new stars.

Phillies Have Etten

The Phillies will have involved on their 1941 baseball roster two former Villanova baseball players. Nick Etten, former student at Villanova will be coming up from the Baltimore Orioles as a promising first baseman and one of the leading batters in the International League last season and at the present Art Mahan another Wildcat slugger is with them.

Half Beta Gamma Schedule Finished

Beta Gamma debating society has completed in the past three weeks an important part of its extensive 1940-41 schedule; although the retreat and examinations have limited its time, the organization has reached the half-way mark in its program.

Scheduled by the society for Feb. 13 is Penn Evening School, at Villanova. The topic will be Resolved: That the United States should extend unlimited credit to England during their present crisis. Villanova will argue the negative.

On the same topic in another home debate, on Feb. 17, Beta Gamma will engage St. Joseph's College, who will argue the negative.

Beta Gamma will also be host to Scranton University on Feb. 15, when Villanova will present the affirmative side of Resolved: That the United States should form a permanent alliance of nations in the Western Hemisphere for protection from outside interests.

For the second consecutive year Villanova defeated the University of Pennsylvania in a radio debate. The topic this year was Resolved: That the concentration of power in the hands of the Federal government is for the betterment of the nation. In the final tally of votes mailed in by radio listeners, Thomas DeSipin, junior engineer, and Joseph Mahoney, sophomore artsman, representing Beta Gamma, were given victory.

Contests have also been held with Temple University and Drexel Institute of Technology and radio debates with Swarthmore and Loyola College of Baltimore.

Thomas Moore, chairman of the society, has disclosed that two trips are being planned for the near future. One, to New Jersey, will include debates at Upsala and St. Peter's. The other, to up-state Pennsylvania, will include engagements with Misericordiae and Scranton University in a return debate.

Beta Gamma debaters will also be given the opportunity to record their speeches in Simpson hall. The recordings will be played back to enable the speakers to correct the flaws in their styles.

Standings of the teams in the Philadelphia Forensic League will be released shortly by the league secretary. Villanova has won one and lost two of her league debates.

Where The Seniors Will Dine And Dance

Pick Philadelphian

Selection of the Hotel Philadelphian, 39th and Chestnut Sts., as the site of the Senior Dinner Dance to be held Saturday, Feb. 22, has been announced by Edward A. Eichman, chairman of the dinner dance committee.

This marks the first year that the Philadelphian has been chosen by the senior class for the annual affair. It boasts one of the largest ballrooms obtainable, often being engaged for large dances of Philadelphia schools.

Before making this final choice, Eichman and his committee of fifteen seniors considered the offers of numerous hotels and country clubs in order to find a site that would be suitable to all.

BRADY APPEALS

James T. Brady, senior class treasurer, has issued an appeal to those seniors who have not yet paid their class assessments to do so immediately.

Referring to the signing of Bob Chester's Orchestra for the Senior Prom, Brady stated, "Now that we have engaged a good band, the class should do its part by getting in the assessments. The heavy expenses involved in the Ball and Dinner Dance necessitate the prompt collection of all outstanding monies."

Prom Queen

Pictures Pass 200 Mark; Plans of Competition and Award Set

Favorable student reaction to the selection of a "Queen" to reign at the Junior Prom in May has been evidenced in the number of contestants entered, according to publicity chairman Robert J. McIntyre. Over 200 photographs have been submitted by the students.

Preliminary judging of the pictures will be done by interested members of the faculty and the best 25 photographs will be taken to New York for final selection by a well-known artist. He will select the "Queen" (the "date" of a junior) and the six members of her court (who may be escorted by members of any class).

Plans have been made for publication of the "Queen's" picture in the local newspapers, transportation for her and her date in a chauffeur-driven 1941 Cadillac, and an interview over a Philadelphia radio station.

Although final arrangements for the Prom orchestra have not been completed, Chairman John J. Parson promises that the chosen band will provide music that will please all types of dancers, including jitterbugs. Parson also disclosed that he is contacting many famous entertainers with the expectation of having them appear at the dance to provide entertainment during the intermission.

At a meeting of the class yesterday, Parson asked for continued support of the affair and discussed the orchestras available.

Next "Alumnus" Opens Fund Drive

With the next issue of the "Alumnus" on Feb. 24, the Alumni Centennial Fund drive will be formally inaugurated. This issue of the alumni magazine will be devoted entirely to the Alumni Centennial Fund and will stress the importance and merit of cooperation from all alumni.

Pledges to total $40,000 have been set as the goal of the campaign to equip the proposed new library. The drive, the first in the 66-year history of the Villanova alumni, will formally begin Feb. 24.

Plans for this drive have been in progress for the last year and a half. During this time the alumni files and facilities have been thoroughly checked and readied for the drive.

General information, including the Centennial Fund issue of the "Alumnus," will be sent to each graduate. Out of each class has been appointed one class agent for each twenty alumni. The class agents will have personal contact with those alumni assigned to them and will secure the individual pledges. Invitations were sent to the prospective class agents last Thursday.

The Centennial Fund Drive directors will aim to reach their goal of $40,000 by May 1, which has been set as the dead line for all pledges.

As previously announced, Francis X. Robinson, '21, has been chosen as Executive Director of the drive.

"This'll Be A Shock To You"

Release Spring Recital Program

First of eight spring lecture-recitals, a Gilbert and Sullivan program featuring the "Mikado," will be presented by the Villanova Music Seminar on February 12 at 7:30 P. M. in one of the Simpson hall seminar rooms. Dr. Edward L. Haenisch will supplement the music with explanatory remarks.

The second lecture-recital, to be given on February 26, will consist of famous descriptions in music, which will be demonstrated with recordings. Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will supervise the meeting.

On March 5, an all-Brahms recorded program, featuring Brahms' 3rd Symphony and a biographical sound film will be presented. Dr. Haenisch will again entertain on March 12, with an illustrated lecture entitled "The Physics of Music." Guest artists will highlight a vocal and instrumental concert on March 12.

Famous symphonic movements, a recorded program of favorite movements from the symphonies, will be heard on the evening of April 23, followed by an organ recital in the Chapel by Rev. Ralph Handran, O. S. A., on April 30.

The last lecture-recital of the year will be an all-request program, and will be held on May 14.

P. K. P. Treats 90 To Dinner After Volts Last Night

By JOHN P. FULLAM

The annual initiation of the Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, which went its torturous way last evening, was shocking, to say the least.

The setting was the engineering labs, which are, even at normalcy, filled with all sorts of terrifying gadgets. There the poor pledges, ninety strong, were given what is often referred to as the "thoid degree."

To begin with, there was an electric chair, a real one—which, when the pledge sat in it, he wished he hadn't. And it was placed in front of the big switchboard, so as to allow the power of suggestion do its bit.

"Men On Flying Trapeze"

In another part of the subterranean torture chamber, an innocent-looking trapeze was set up. On this the subject, or rather the object, was told to chin himself. When he had done so, a switch was thrown, and current flowed through various wires to the trapeze and finally to the person then involved. Of course, the pledge then loosed his grasp on the trapeze and stepped lightly to the

Belle Masque Production Links Satire To Mystery And Comedy

By DAN HALEY, JR.

Avid enthusiasm has been manifested during the past week by approximately fifty aspirants for parts in the annual Belle Masque production, "Margin for Error." Extensive tryouts are being conducted on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays in room 103 Mendel at 3:00 P. M.

Anthony J. Frayne, director of the group, announced that roles are not confined to members of the Belle Masque; on the contrary, he urges the whole student body to participate. The difficulty of characterizing the Jewish and German roles makes it vital to have tryouts of many students.

The selection of "Margin for Error," a satirical melodrama, has been enthusiastically accepted by the members of the society. Clare Boothe's special gift for satire and her mastery of the "quip" is apparent in this recent Broadway success. It is an exciting, unusually tense drama, and at the same time an interesting comedy and a powerful indictment of Nazi methods and character.

Consul Murdered

Chief character in the melodrama is Karl Baumer, a German consul, to whom policeman Moe Finklestein is assigned as a guard. Finkelstein knows that if any harm comes to the consul, 250,000 Jews in Germany will be punished in revenge. Nevertheless, Karl Baumer is murdered in his library.

The plot of "Margin for Error" concerns the degradation of Baumer, who is so diabolical that he tries to force his secretary, Frieda, to commit suicide in order that his embezzlement will not be revealed. The use of his office as an outlet for valuable information puts him in danger of being recalled to Berlin.

Complications Arise

Knowing of his wife's affection for an American newspaperman, Thomas S. Denny, Baumer rightfully suspects her of being the informer and he threatens that unless Sophie's lover vindicates him through the medium of the press, he will deport his wife to Germany.

Immigrant Dr. Jennings has been giving the Consul money to have his daughter and son-in-law freed from their imprisonment in a German concentration camp. When the Doctor discovers that the money has been misappropriated, that his son has gone insane and that his daughter has died, he promptly murders the Consul while the latter is listening to a radio speech of Fuehrer Hitler. No one in the room saw the crime committed.

Officer Finkelstein, the vastly en-

Six Attend Annual Dinner

Six men prominent in campus activities attended the President's seventh annual dinner to student leaders last Sunday evening in Mendel hall.

Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., and Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., Vice-President, utilize the occasion every year as a means of securing closer student attitude on various matters of campus affairs that concern the student body.

At the conclusion of the dinner, each of the students present gave a short informal talk outlining his suggestions toward making campus life more pleasant. Frs. Stanford and Albers noted these, commented on them, and open discussion followed.

Along with the usual procedure of administration and student cooperation on Villanova matters, this year's dinner witnessed a discussion of personal and campus attitudes on national defense problems as they affect colleges. Nothing definite was intended in this regard, but both the students and the college officers gained a knowledge of the others' views on problems of defense.

Meet On Defense

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., participated in the National Conference of Colleges and Universities meeting on the subject of national defense at the Hotel Mayflower in Washington, D. C., last Thursday.

College and university presidents from 41 states were present at the meeting, whose purpose was to discuss various collegiate angles of the defense problem.

Engineering Profs Conduct Freshman Guidance Program

Second-semester orientation program for the benefit of all freshman engineers, now being conducted in room 215 Mendel hall each Monday morning, has the purpose of helping the student select a particular branch of the general engineering field in which to specialize.

Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar, outlined the method by which quality point ratings are computed at the first meeting. The explanation was supplemented by the actual mathematical computation of the ratings of several students.

Yesterday J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the Engineering School, gave an address entitled "The General Outline of Fields for Which We Are Training Men." This general discussion will be followed in succeeding weeks by talks on the specialized branches of the engineering field.

On February 17 and 24, opportunities in the chemical engineering field will be discussed by Francis J. Limacher, assistant chemistry professor. John A. Oakey, associate engineering professor, and John P. Gallen, engineering instructor, will treat of the civil engineering field at meetings to be held on March 3 and 22, respectively. Harry S. Bueche, professor of engineering, will outline the electrical branch on March 17 and 22.

Mechanical engineering will be discussed by J. Stanley Morehouse at the March 31st and April 7th meetings, while Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, associate chemistry professor, will deal with chemical engineering on Monday morning, April 28.

At the concluding session, to be given on May 12, a summary of the entire program and items of a general nature will be presented by Mr. Morehouse.

Book Club To View Bindery In Phila.; Meeting Time Set

Members of the Book Club will make a field trip to a large Philadelphia book bindery tomorrow afternoon to inspect the processes involved in the mechanical end of producing literature.

At a meeting of the club last Wednesday in Simpson hall, the members decided to change the time of the meetings. Beginning tomorrow the sessions will be held weekly at 1:30 P. M., instead of at the former 3:15 P. M. time every other week.

Plans were laid to have a famous, retired authority on Catholic books lecture at a meeting near the end of the month.

The recently-published book, by Rene Dechambrun, entitled "I Saw France Fall," was the topic of discussion at Wednesday's meeting. Thomas J. Moore, who led the discussion, viewed the book in the light of the writer's career. The author is a direct descendant of Lafayette and a former captain in the French army. For a time he was a member of the Washington Embassy but took up the career of law and intends to return to France to resume his practice.

Two Deans Name Honor Students

Three students have so far gained the distinction of having a perfect 4.00 quality rating for the first semester, according to honor rolls released last week by the engineering and arts schools. They are Thomas F. Devine, sophomore artsman; James J. Donnelly, sophomore engineer; and Frank W. Smith, senior engineer. Devine also attained a perfect rating during the first quarter.

Freshman leaders in the School of Arts were John M. Quinn, James F. Connelly and Joseph J. Carbine. Sophomores, in addition to Devine, are Joseph F. Mahoney, Arthur J. Martin and John J. Hopkins.

David Daly and William Schubert led the juniors with 3.45 ratings, followed by John Maher. Francis D. Vogel was first in the senior class; John M. Bader was second; and James Forkin, third.

In the Education department of the arts school juniors John P. Fullam, Thomas J. McKimmey, Mark E. Fitzgerald and Arthur Connor attained honor roll recognition. Seniors were Andrea D'Angelo, Thomas J. Moore, Ralph Bracken, Wayne H. Hughes, Robert Schisler, Leo J. Kenney and Harry P. Dhue.

No freshman or sophomore students in the Education department made the honor roll.

In the School of Engineering Anthony R. Mastrogiovanni had the highest rating among the freshmen. Other first year men attaining honor recognition were William G. Mordan, W. L. Maruchi, Thomas J. Calpin, William A. Meeley, William M. Theodosia, Robert J. Lukens, Peter Mattioli, Lawrence H. Belz, John S. McManus, Albert W. Durante, Peter F. Mento, Herbert L. Bansback, Thomas A. Dougherty, Jr., Arthur J. Roth, Eugene A. Winiarski, James F. O'Connell, Edward L. O'Hara, William J. Guyton, Joseph A. Matt and Joseph J. McFarland.

Sophomore honor men were James Donnelly, Donald R. Klein, Joseph B. Conway, Malachy V. Boyle, James J. Rodgers, James P. Shelley, George A. Baird, Samuel J. Burruano, Edward L. Manderfield, William J. Myers and Thomas C. Muraski.

Seniors: Frank W. Smith, John F. McKinney, Charles C. Pullen, William J. Appel, Joseph J. Lihota and John F. Maguire, Jr.

The honor rolls for the commerce and science schools have not yet been released.

Maestro Will Broadcast Senior Prom Music on Columbia From 12:30-1:00

Bob Chester's music will be broadcast over a national network from the floor of the Belle Air Ball from 12:30 until 1:00 A. M. Saturday morning, Feb. 22, according to Dance Chairman J. Gordon Brosmer.

Brosmer, who made the announcement late yesterday, stated that negotiations are all but closed for the broadcast; although there is little possibility that the scheduled half-hour will not be made over the Columbia network originating from WCAU, there is a slight chance that the deal will be closed with another network.

This broadcast will mark the first time in the history of Villanova dances that the dance orchestra has broadcast from the floor of the affair.

Dancing will continue as usual during the broadcast; Chester will probably concentrate on his more difficult arrangements to please national listeners, as well as those present at the dance. A well-known Philadelphia announcer will be present to handle the introductions of the songs.

At the present time Chester's orchestra is touring the East. Coming down from a week-end at Cornell, he will stay three days in New York for appearances and recording, move through eastern Pennsylvania and down to Newport News, Va. On Thursday, Feb. 20, the night before the Belle Air Ball, he will fill an engagement in northern Maryland.

Other plans for the affair are proceeding at a rapid pace. The scheme of decorations has been completely worked out and will come as a surprise to the student body. Tickets are being sold at $5.00 by Brosmer, James P. Collins, and the members of the committee.

These and other matters will be topics at a meeting of the senior class today at 1:00 P. M. in the Mendel Amphitheater. Plans for the dinner dance will also be discussed.

Villanova Begins First Defense Class Thursday In Camden

This Thursday, Feb. 13, the first class in the advanced courses taught under Villanova's supervision as part of the national engineering defense training courses will be held in the Cooper Hatch High School building, Camden, N. J.

The class is expected to have an enrollment of fifty men who are now engaged in work at the New York Shipbuilding Co. in Camden. They are to be instructed two nights a week for 14 weeks in one of three courses: thermodynamics, steam turbines, or hydraulics. At the end of that time they will transfer to advanced courses in air conditioning or heat transfer units.

With the purpose of better fitting men to work in plants either directly or indirectly engaged in defense production, these courses are run under the administration of J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering.

In addition to these advanced courses, Villanova will teach high school graduates in Philadelphia Catholic high schools and on the Main Line. Students in these courses will be selected from graduates who are definitely college material but who have been forced to stay out of college because of financial obstacles. Whether employed or not, they may take elementary engineering courses to increase their technical worth.

The proposed scheme on these elementary courses is only awaiting the approval of authorities in Washington, which is said to be forthcoming in the next few days.

Almost 5,000 Philadelphians are expected to be enrolled in the advanced and elementary courses, taught by 12 colleges in this region when they start functioning to the expected degree.

Check On A Lease

SATURDAY last witnessed the approbation by the House of a most important piece of legislation, the Lend-Lease Bill. Momentous in its scope, the passage of this measure by a 260 to 165 vote erected the first steps of authorization for the President to ultimately transfer, lend, lease, or grant war materials to Great Britain or any other nation at his own discretion.

In effect, the bill in its present form still grants to Congress the control of the pursestrings, because it stipulates that the power of the President extends only to military supplies on hand or on order up to a value of $1,300,000,000. In truth, however, it permits the Chief Executive unlimited extension in the future for similar aid.

Seemingly, the bill as it is places the destiny of America and the fate of other nations within the power of one man. It even appears that one man alone could command the duration of the war.

To allay these well founded suspicions and to prevent other grave potentialities, however, Congress implanted an amendment which should be most comforting. It retained the power to revoke, by concurrent resolution, acts by the President which it does not deem essential to national security. This check on the President need be expressed only by a majority and is not subject to veto.

We commend Congress for not relinquishing all its powers, and for its effort to preserve national unity and protect the welfare of America.

Campaigning For Truth

EVEN the least observant among us must have noticed the great number of campaigns being conducted today. Give to this chairty. Aid that war relief fund. Contribute to this or that cause. Sponsored by nation-wide organizations they are heralded by fanfares of publicity and live their short lives nourished by advertisements.

But now yet another campaign has been ushered in, this one in comparative obscurity. February is Catholic Press Month. The month has been set aside to foster an already apparent interest in Catholic literature and to instill that interest in the minds of those to whom it has thus far been foreign.

This campaign has in it a spirit lacking in the others. Not merely a "begging" enterprise it rather gives to those who participate in it. Knowledge and information, enjoyment, all that great literature has to offer can be gained by the reader of Catholic literature. For (and we are especially fortunate in having this consideration so forcibly presented to us in our religion-course reading) Catholic literature is not restricted merely to treatises on religious topics. Scientific publications, daily newspapers, philosophical magazines, western stores — varied as they are and restricted for the most part to secular subjects, they may nevertheless be included within the scope of Catholic literature.

Unheralded and unsung by advertising men, this campaign also lacks high-salaried executives to spread its influences. This work is to be done by volunteers, and, as Catholic college men, we should be among the leaders of the campaign. First we should introduce Catholic publications into our homes if they do not already have a place there. Having "set our own houses in order" we should look afield. Let us tell our friends of the good things to be found in Catholic literature. Pass on the Catholic books and magazines. with which we have finished.

Participation in this campaign doesn't win a feather for the hat or a button for the lapel. We will, however, be guided toward that for which all men are so avidly seeking — truth.

Many Happy Returns

THE members of the VILLANOVAN staff, in the name of the entire student body, take this opportunity to express their appreciation and respect to the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, in extending to him their best wishes on his fourty-fourth birthday, which he will celebrate this Friday, Feb. 14.

You Said It

(Weekly Poll of Student Opinion)

Villanova students believe war is inevitable for the United States. This was revealed during the past week when an overwhelming majority answered yes to this department's question, "Do you think the United States WILL enter the European war?" Percentages were:

81% YES

These figures have been gathered from a careful cross-sectional ballot covering ten per cent of the students in each class and school on the campus. This ten per cent has been apportioned to the individual schools and classes according to their enrollment so that each group is proportionally represented in the poll.

War sentiment was predominant in each department of the college. The greatest war feeling centered in the School of Commerce & Finance, where 88% of the students believe the United States will become involved in this war.

The second question asked was: "Do you think the United States SHOULD enter this present war?"

13% said YES
87% said NO

The commerce school here again set the lead for the majority by turning in a 90% "no war" answer. The highest pro-war feeling was in the School of Science where 20% said we should enter the conflict.

From this the interviewers turned to America's stake in the war by asking the question: "In your opinion, is the future safety of the United States dependent upon a British victory?"

51% answered YES
49% answered NO

Businessmen, artsmen, and engineers all recorded affirmative percentages ranging from 51% to 56%, acknowledging their belief that America's safety is linked with a British victory. The science students, however, voted only 40% for the idea that America's future depends on British victory.

Then, as the final question, students were asked: "Do you favor any extension of credit by the United States government to Britain?"

54% said YES
46% said NO

Answers to this question were the most regular of the four. All student groups showed a slight majority favoring the credit extension, but nowhere was the majority more than 56% nor less than 53%.

It is entirely possible that legislation now being debated before Congress will sharply affect student opinion on these questions, either favorably or unfavorably. Hence these percentages cannot be considered as suggesting any permanent attitudes, but only the student opinion as it has crystallized at this date.

The Good In Literature's "Likable Villains"

By Fr. McShea

THERE is a very simple point about the so-called "likable villains" of literature, but it is often overlooked. This is the rather obvious fact that not their evil but their goodness endears them forever to the reader.

In the villainy of books, no doubt, there are hundreds of shades and degrees. The total wickedness of Iago and the almost innocent weakness of Sarah Gamp are poles apart. A reader's intuition recognizes the difference at once; and just as invariably a reader's sympathy classifies the characters according to guilt, pardons some, and abominates the rest.

Degrees of Villainy

The Victorian-novel offers useful examples of these distinctions. The thoroughly despicable Uriah Heep has a multitude of fawning vices offset by no virtues whatever; the wily, plotting Becky Sharp is possibly no more altruistic, but she is capable of the noblest kind of gesture in refusing to disillusion the slow-witted Amelia Sedley about the integrity of the latter's husband. Heep is evil in the superlative degree, and no manner of computation can make him a sympathetic figure. He favors no one but himself and committed to the least forgivable of vices, hypocrisy, he must go down as the villain without relief. But Becky is honest in her intrigue, if such a paradox is permissible. She makes no unnecessary show of rectitude. She meets her victims on a common ground, in a manner of speaking, and whatever may be their complaint it is never that they have not been forewarned. The reactions of most readers will confirm our point: Heep is utterly indefensible, but Becky has long ago been pardoned.

Divides Classes

We are reminded of this division of villains into two classes by a series of essays written by Robert Lynd. Under the heading, "Scoundrels in Fiction," Mr. Lynd makes some really inspired remarks even though he does not expressly distinguish between the likable and the unlikable. The study of Uncle Ponderevo in H. G. Wells' "Tono-Bungay" is especially memorable. There can be no doubt that Ponderevo is a consummate villain. His career is literally spent in the services of Satan, yet he manages somehow to escape the flames. For, in effect, Ponderevo fleeces his fellow-capitalists, and his fellow-countrymen generally, with an artistry and a pleasure that must surely make his final judgment easier. Dishonesty is at best only a hobby with him. And wherein lies his virtue? In his expansive good humor and laughing enthusiasm. It is difficult to condemn an amiable swindler especially when he makes his victims happy for however short a time.

Vices of "Gentler Sort"

Cousin-german to Ponderevo is, of course, Sir John Falstaff. Paraphrasing an earlier statement by Lord Byron, Augustine Birrell says that Falstaff's vices are "of the gentler sort." They are, indeed. The man may have been boastful, deceptive, and thoroughly unreliable, yet he is always the comedian and comedy has its own standards. His flexible mind pays slight heed to the rigors of truth but he is withal a jocose liar. And, as Birrell indicates, he won the admiration of his servant, Bardolph. This, we have always been told, is the strict test of some worth. His orderly's genuine grief at Falstaff's death is proof of merit far weightier than cowardice in the forest or unpaid bills would ever suggest.

The list of masculine figures from novels who can be considered "likable villains" is fairly large. Sidney Carton, Steerforth, Long John Silver, and Raffles come to mind at once. The same observation is true of the short story. Bret Harte, in fact, worked out a successful formula for this type on the very simple principle that men like Oakhurst and the miners of Roaring Camp, however strange to virtue otherwise, were capable of at least one heroic action. But, conversely, the women of this grouping are relatively few in number. The older novelists have uniformly respected chivalry and have seldom introduced the feminine villain whether her evil be forgivable or not. Not forgetting Eustasia Vye and Beatrix Esmond we believe it can still be said that the really detestable and feline woman is a product of the contemporary novel.

The Modern Villain

Modern fiction has complicated our classifications in another manner as well. Too often, recently, the villain without redeeming traits has been passed off as hero. This is utter confusion and inartistic as well. Villains may be pleasant or repulsive, but without pontificating we submit that it is a perversion of balance to suggest them as heroes. Robert Jordan in Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls" is a horrifying instance of the hero with an absolute minimum of merit and nobility. We fail to see any of the crusading spirit of Byron in a meddling college instructor who devotes his time to Sovietizing Christian Spain. What kind of

Survey Shows Pilots, "Pros" Among Alumni

A survey conducted by the Placement Service recently shows that when you make your final exit from Villanova's portals you can become anything from an airplane pilot to a professional football player. And a moment or so of intensive brain-work should establish the fact that that includes a rather broad range of occupations.

To list all the draftsmen, chemists, teachers, salesmen, lawyers, etc., etc., which Villanova has produced or helped to produce in the last few years would be practically pointless and probably boresome. But a few of our very recent graduates are to be noticed because of the interesting nature of their occupations, particularly in relation to our national defense program.

Villanova's graduates can and do become anything from airplane pilots to professional football players. In the first class we have Thomas Carbine, of the class of '39, a pilot in the Army Air Corps, and John B. Christoph, of the class of '40, who is a Flying Cadet. In the latter classification we have Villanova's erstwhile "little tank," Harry Mazzei, who is associated with the Long Island Indians, and "Handy Andy" Chisick, Chicago Cardinals' center.

In between, the survey reveals a host of other interesting jobs. Of an errant nature is Frederick Rapleyea, '40, who, though he hails from New York, is now in the employ of an airplane manufacturing concern in California.

John J. Raney, '40, serves as a Radio Control Tower operator at Philadelphia's Municipal Airport. Daniel J. Troy, '40, is a chemist at the Frankford Arsenal, while Edward Kirk, '40, is situated in the Philadelphia Ordnance District of the War Department.

The results of the Placement Service Survey which are included above are indicative, not all-inclusive. But they present just a few examples of what can be done with a Villanova education. As the saying is, "it just goes to show you."

Classy Class Arrangements

Variety is the spice of life. And one of the most variable phases of Villanova classes — ignoring for the moment the teachers, the pupils, and the subject matter — is the seating arrangement.

Observation reveals several bases for the formation of geometric patterns by the contrast of the filled with the empty seats in each room. First of all, there is the arrangement based on friendship. Here, great freedom of movement is permitted, limited only by the walls, particularly the back wall, of the room.

Then there is the basis of convenience, in which the seats near the doors are always filled, especially for the last period before lunch. And there are classes in which students have baser motives in sitting where they sit — that is, they want to be behind someone else.

An enumeration of these baser motives might arouse the wrath of the guilty students because their misdemeanors would then be evident to the long suffering profs. (As if they didn't know!) Suffice it to say that the ponies return to their stables and the culprit's face turns several shades of crimson if a wary instructor glances his way.

But some teachers let ancestry decide, by means of alphabetical arrangements. This method can be distinguished at a glance from the others in that when it is used, the front rows are filled.

And finally, there is the informal procedure employed, for instance, in Mendel's Day-Hop room, where not only the arrangement, but even the position, varies. But no matter what the arrangement, the classes are still to be classed as classes.

friendship prompts his obliging murder of the cowardly Russian? And, finally, is it not something like blasphemy to glorify Jordan and his cave-dwelling friends, fresh from the Spanish underworld, against a background which produced Don Quixote?

Evil Not Eulogized

Lest our little thesis be misjudged, let us repeat that from any point of view it is rash to eulogize evil either in life or in books. We have no wish to turn these remarks into a defense of Satan. That task is best left to a bilious old novelist like Theodore Dreiser with his unfortunate prejudice against decency. Nor do we agree with the opinion that only the evil are interesting. This view may have its specious support, but the lives of Saints Teresa of Avila and Thomas More, to name only two, contradict any such assumption. We merely and humbly say after St. Augustine, that it is possible to love the sinner while rejecting the sin. And literary genius, of course, can make even the sinner lovable. None but a first-class writer has ever created a "likable villain."

Meet The Boys: McGarey Uses "Stat" In Sports; Somers Deals With Briefs And Torts

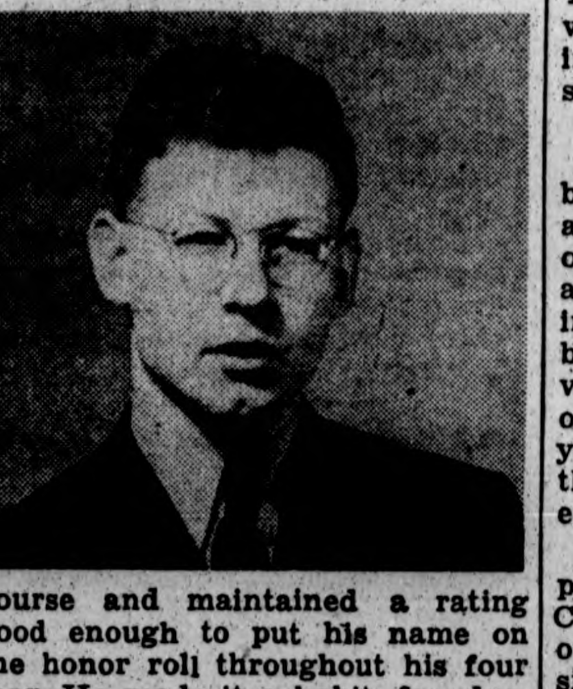
By WARD GUNCHEON

INTERVIEWING the two Commerce and Finance seniors who are under our observation this week requires only a fairly good-sized stepladder and a pair of dark glasses. The broad "a"s drifting down from 6', 3" Art Somers are more easily understood from a high perch, while Jim McGarey's flaming red hair will make the best of eyes bleary unless the eyes are well-hidden behind off-colored spectacles.

Freeland, Pa., claims Jim McGarey: he was born there on November 22, 1919, just 22 days too late to be eligible for 1940's conscription. When the army heard this they heaved a sigh of relief, for camouflaging titian locks such as Jim's will be no end of trouble for them.

A Good "Marksman"

At St. Anne's High School in his native hamlet, he followed the arts course and maintained a rating good enough to put his name on the honor roll throughout his four year. He made it a habit, for, during the past four years, the C. & F. honor roll has been quite consistent in containing his name. For the first quarter of this year he was second from the top in the senior class.



Up to the Presidency

His first contact with Villanova came when he associated with the members of the Wilkes-Barre Villanova Club during his high school course. Jim headed here and got settled before he picked out an activity or two on which to concentrate. For the last four years he's been a member of the Holy Name Society and this year was appointed its president. He also joined the re-organized C. & F. fraternity, Delta Pi Epsilon, last year.

Spare time has found him following the major national sports. It's no longer a hobby but a business. His collection of statistics on various sports and their personalities is outstanding because of its accuracy and completeness. Football, baseball, and basketball are his preferences.

Figures Don't Lie

All the sports at Villanova have been followed and recorded by this sports-minded accountant. Jim claims it's the one solution to "mixing business with pleasure." Any afternoon will find him watching the practice sessions in the vicinity of the Field House. He admits his heart missed a beat at the recent Seton hall game, and stopped cold at the W. & J. fray. According to his "statistical recordings," Villanova had a good chance of coming away the victor in each contest.

"Red" has profited in a moral sense from his sports figures, but this profit was offset by "pecuniary deficits," as he likes to call them. He, along with thousands of others, agrees that "you can't beat the ponies and it costs a lot to try."

Jim is forsaking future life as a C. P. A. to become a federal bank examiner. He plans to take the required test soon after graduation. Undoubtedly, with his hair and personality, he can add a little color and warmth to the cold, drab business world.

THE army lost another good man in Art Somers, for his 195 pounds would lend weight to any controversial matter. But, four days after Jim McGarey became the light of his father's eyes, Art became a Dodger rooter. He still grieves that he wasn't twenty-one until last November 26 since he had planned to vote several times for Roosevelt.

After he graduated from Prospect School in Brooklyn, Art entered the pre-law course in the C. & F. school. Law is right in line with him, for his father has been active in legal procedure and was re-elected to Congress from the 6th District of Brooklyn last November.

Throughout high school and his first two years in college, Art wielded a mean tennis racquet in intramural and varsity contests. He participated in several New York tournaments and, during the winter months, churned the water in the swimming pools to keep in shape.

Likes the Managing End

Last year he held the posts of business manager of Belle Masque and assistant photography editor of the "Belle Air." This year he assumed the difficulties of managing the business end of the yearbook. In cooperation with Fr. Falvey, Art brought about the revival of the Book Club last spring; this year he was elected president of the "Connoisseurs of Current Literature."

Although Art does little flying at present, partly by request of the Civil Aeronautics Board, he has his own plane and has had his license since he was 16.

Another Atlas?

Any time from 6:00 A. M. onward, Art may be seen walking about the campus. Whether he is developing a physique comparable to that of Charles Atlas is not known. Many reasons for these perambulations are floating around the campus.

Although he was of great assistance to Fr. Falvey in forming the Book Club, his aspirations of becoming an altar boy were a source of great worry to the Librarian. After nearing the national record for ringing the bell the most times during church services, he was beseeched by Fr. Falvey to join the Swiss Bell Ringers Association of Lower Brooklyn.

Pennsylvania Railroad stock has jumped many points since Art was a sophomore. He can give you the exact number of telephone poles and railroad-ties between here and Trenton; it could be that a Rosemont alumna lives in that town or it could be that he owns stock in the railroad. The decision is difficult to make, but oh, you Alice!

"A Vote for Me Is . . ."

Perhaps his future law training will enable him to enter suit for lost fares. The Fordham Evening School of Law will be his next stop, as will a position in the legal department of the New York State Milk Market Administration. The avid Democrat refuses to commit himself on a political career, but, judging from his pre-election campaigning on the campus and the vicinity, his name may be seen on the New Deal presidential ticket in 1960. That is, of course, if a certain resident of Hyde Park decides to vacate. Art's one consolation is that "so far no Vice-President has served more than two terms." Maybe it will be Roosevelt and Somers in 1960. We hope so.

In Which We Print An Opinion Of The Gym And Some Practical Philosophy

By Bruno Talvacchia

THE forthcoming Belle Air Ball puts us in mind of an item printed in the Rider News by Bernard O. Bershad in his column entitled "Grist in the Mill." (Chairman Gordon Brosmer, please take note!) Bernie came down from Trenton for the Rider-Villanova game. His analysis of the game read, in part:

"Second Period: I didn't see too much of this chapter. I noticed that the Villanova passing attack suddenly broke the Roughrider ranks. Found myself analyzing the spectators in the balcony as the Wildcats started hitting the gong consistently. My frat brother discovered three good seats—had two damsels with him. What a place for a formal that Villanova Gym would be! And a heck of a large stage. Half-time score was 25-9."

He should see the place with live decorations!

I only wish that we should meet
And then I'll say adieu."

"I say, good Sir, you flatter me,
And I sort of like your way,
Of breaking in upon my life,
But still I can not stay."

Then do your name please state;
I wish some time that we could meet,
When could we make a date?"

The Lambastin' Lampoon:

The editors of the Harvard Lampoon recently published their list of movie worsts of 1940, a sequel to their much publicized episode with Ann Sheridan, whom they chose last year as "least likely to succeed." You will remember how the "oomph" girl retorted with a boast of her weekly pay-check. It seems that the humor mag chiefs at Cambridge are braced for a cyclone, the like of which only Hollywood can foment.

Here are a few of the releases: Miriam Hopkins as its "least desirable companion on a desert island," and Leila Ernst, a Boston deb with a Hollywood contract, as Miss Sheridan's successor. If you want our opinion, we think Leila's in earnest!

Brenda Joyce was selected as the "most insipid" for her part in "Maryland"; Louis Hayward, in "My Son, My Son," received the title of the most "colossal flop"; the Andrews Sisters were singled out as the "most frightening" combination; while Joan Crawford and George Brent were thought to be "most qualified for a pension." Well. . .

L. K. D. Initiation Due Next Monday

Lambda Kappa Delta, science school fraternity will hold its annual initiation of new members on Monday, February 17, at 7:30 P. M. in the old gym of Alumni hall.

The committee in charge of the initiation is headed by Joseph B. Clarken and Joseph Camarda, both seniors. The names of committee members who have been appointed by Joseph Santaniello, president of the fraternity, will be released this week.

Approximately 25 applicants who have been accepted by the board of admissions will have their names posted on the science bulletin board this week. All the applicants were eligible scholastically, having been passed by the offices of the Vice-President, Chaplain, and Dean of the School of Science. Their acceptance or rejection depended entirely upon the board of admissions.

At present the plans for the initiation are in a tentative stage. Pledges will be required to bring their own paddles. After candidates have been initiated, they will be introduced to the various fraternity secrets and will take the oath of the society.

During the past month the pledges were obliged to wear pledge badges, consisting of red and black pieces of ribbon, representing the colors of the fraternity. The purpose of the badges was to make it possible for the fraternity members to single out the pledges and check on their conduct.

Shocking Story

mat below. But alack, alas, this, too, was charged, and the bewildered butt of the whole prank was caught quite literally "between two fires"

The "electric hand" was an ingenious contraption which turned a friendly handshake with the pledge into something far removed from friendship.

Athletic, Too!

For those who felt or appeared athletic, a wrestling mat was provided. And when the wrestlers moved too slowly, electric stimulants conveyed the displeasure of the onlookers and spurred them on to more vigorous efforts.

The fortitude of the entrants was also tested, to remove absolutely all traces of doubt in the minds of the already initiated. The pledge was made to remove his shoes and to climb to a slight elevation. He was then allowed to remove his blindfold enough so that he could see below him a plank filled with upturned spikes. His blindfold returned, he was forced to jump. And the only reason why you don't see a lot of bandaged feet in engineering classes these days is that the plank, spikes and all, was silently withdrawn before the jump was made.

Then It Was Over

Actually, however, no harm was done, except to dignity. The electric shocks, although annoying, were not injurious. And when it was all over, the new members were in good enough condition to be able to do justice to a steak dinner in the dining hall, and to hear the program of speeches which had been arranged for them by Hyman Malkin.

Hugh Boyle was the master torturer, while Rev. John S. O'Leary, O. S. A., faculty moderator, and frat president Raymond Vener were also instrumental in its success.

—Now wasn't that shocking?

The "Villanova Engineer," official publication of the engineering school, will be distributed during the next week, and will feature a description of the photo-lithography or "offset" process used in the printing of the magazine.

Other stories will include a series of photos showing a locomotive being assembled, and a description and explanation of the newly-developed metalectric strain gauge which is used to measure the stress and strain on fast-moving parts. An example of this application is the determination of the amount of stress at the tip of an airplane propellor.

Seek Student Scripts For Radio Club Drama

Yesterday in Simpson hall, the Radio Club held its first meeting under the direction of Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A. Much of the time was devoted to a critical review of a recording of one of the more popular radio programs. Various members then read news flashes of campus interest.

Fr. Vrana wishes to increase the scope of the club by producing radio skits and programs of various types. Those interested in writing radio plays are invited by Fr. Vrana to submit scripts; these scripts will be read and the better ones produced by the members of the club.

Sing Spanish Songs

Tomorrow night the Spanish Club will hold an important meeting in Mendel Hall at 7:30 P. M. Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., the club's moderator, requests that all members report to this meeting.

Last evening the club met in a half-hour session. The meeting was devoted to the singing of Spanish songs and the making of plans for the proposed Spanish Club Banquet

GERMAN CLUB MEETS

The German Club will hold its first meeting of the new year tomorrow afternoon at 1:30. The meeting will be held in Simpson hall.

Plans for the remainder of the year will be discussed and a program drawn up. All members and those desirous of joining are urged to attend.

tertaining Jewish policeman, in endeavoring to solve the crime, slips in some of the shrewdest and most humorous ribbings found in the play. To add to his bewilderment, it is discovered that the Consul was plotting to kill Otto Horst, the American Fuehrer, that he was misappropriating funds from Germany, and that he has also been stabbed and poisoned.

"Margin for Error" is one of the few successful attempts made by a playwright to treat a serious and tragic subject with skill and without much bitterness.

Cash Prizes Offered In Photo Competition

Two photography contests have invited the participation of Villanova amateur cameramen during the past week.

"Look" magazine offers a first-prize of $500 for the winner of its picture-story contest. Entrants are to submit a series of ten photographs telling a story; the pictures are to be accompanied by an explantory story of 2000 words or less.

All types of subject-matter are eligible in this competition. The closing date of the contest is April 15, 1941.

A second contest, the Fourth Annual Salon Competition sponsored by the "Collegiate Digest," offers a first-prize of $25 and several smaller cash awards. In addition, winning photographs will be exhibited at leading college art centers.

Pictures may be entered in one of the following divisions: still-life, scenes, action and candid photos, portraits, and college life. Entries for the Salon Competition must be sent not later than April 1.

Dr. Haenisch Lectures

Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, associate professor of chemistry and chemical engineering, will give a lecture demonstration on "Strange Forms of Light" today before the Men's Guild of the Chestnut Hill Church, under the auspices of Fr. Baumann, O. S. A.

Recently Dr. Haenisch delivered two speeches before students majoring in chemistry at Trinity College. Delivered on Thursday, February 6, they dealt with "Hydrated Ions and Hydrolysis" and "Modern Alchemy."

Railway Electrification Theme Of Skelly Talk

At the first A. I. E. E. meeting of the second semester, held on February 6, John J. Skelly, senior electrical engineer, in the principal talk of the meeting, discussed modern railway electrification.

The talk included statistics on the growth of electrification, a description of substations—which includes the transformers, etc., which are used—several types of catenaries, and some of the more recent highpower electric locomotives.

John C. Dorsey gave a short discussion on a topic of current interest along technical lines.

Dance Pass To Lucky Soph

"All sophomores who have paid their class assessments of $1.50 on or before Wednesday, Feb. 19, will be eligible for the drawing on a ticket to the Belle Air Ball," sophomore class treasurer John Quinn announced at a class meeting last Thursday.

Reminding the class that all the profits of the Sophomore Cotillion have been turned over to the scholarship fund, Quinn said, "We are starting practically from scratch. Payment of class dues is the only means of providing ourselves with a working capital with which to enter our all-important junior year."

The Villanova choral society has tentatively scheduled concerts to be given at Immaculata College and Notre Dame College, Staten Island, New York. Definite dates have not been arranged but both concerts will probably be given during April because of the intervening Lenten period.

Mile Team Beaten In Penn A. C. Meet As Ewell Takes Carey In Final Leg

Elliottmen Lose Relay After Holding Lead for 14 Laps; Di Carlo Beaten

Sportorial

By Bob Funabashi
Sports Editor

Philadelphia fans received a refreshing bit of action last Friday night, as a star-studded array of track and field champions made their presence on the boards of Convention Hall. Only once during the winter months does the Quaker City play host to such a group of touring trackmen and mainly responsible for this parade of talent was Lawson Robertson, who takes the role of director of the meet and at the same time, takes the time to coach his track team at the U. of P.

In this same hall where the Republican convention convened last summer and where the lights burn for five of the seven evenings a week, came Philadelphia's track minded citizens. And what they paid out for, was well worth seeing.

Promptly at 8 P. M., the meet got under way with tall and blond Fred Wolcott, stepping high and handsome over the hurdles for a new world's record. And so all through the remaining hours, hundreds of athletes paraded back and forth from the starting post. For variety, the Penn A. C. had an unlimited group of speed-merchants. Young and old, with the range from 10 years to 30 years.

Rice Superb

Probably the finest performance of the night was put forth by barrel-chested Greg Rice, formerly of Notre Dame, who captured the famous two mile run. For the tenth straight time he blazed around the boards in amazing fashion to win over Don Lash, Tommy Deckard and Jimmy Kehoe. The fans though not surprised with his victory watched Greg burn up the track in those last two laps to cross the finished line by a good 35 yards.

The best of the intercollegiate mile relays was the one in which Villanova, Temple, Penn State and Rutgers participated. That is, for excitement and spectacular finishes. It seemed that after 11 laps had gone by, the 'cats would certainly take top honors, but Barney Ewell of Penn State, who had previously run the 50 yard dash, put on his famous finish and beat out Bill Carey, Villanova's anchor man.

By the looks of things now, Villanova's undefeated Frosh team will do wonders to Coach Al Severance's health when the next basketball campaign rolls around. With only two more games remaining on their schedule, the Frosh, in the opinion of Villanova followers, have one of the finest quintets that have ever come into the Main Line institution.

Reserve Strength

What Mr. Severance lacks this year in the way of strong reserve strength, the Frosh will give him when they become eligible for varsity competition. In their team, it is very well evidenced, that all have sharp shooting eyes and can ably defend their baskets with the best of them.

With the ribbed court nearly coming to the climax, one good note of the season was the fact that injuries did not play a bugaboo part against the team. But last Friday night Bob Kelty ,one of

In their second meet of the season, the Wildcat relay team finished second to Penn State in the most hectic intercollegiate mile relay of the evening.

Almost 7000 fans yelled themselves hoarse as the lead handed to Bill Carey, Villanova anchor man was gradually whittled down by Barney Ewell, running last for the State College outfit.

Running in the fifty-yard dash, sophomore Johnny Di Carlo, a victim of a bad start, was eliminated in the first heat. The final in this event saw diminutive Tom East of Cheyney State Teacher's College tie the world's record in winning in 5:2.

Nazian Loses

Faring the same as Di Carlo was Stan Nazian, Wildcat hurdler, who, although tying last year's winning time, was also eliminated in his heat. A brilliant field in this 50-yard hurdle event was responsible for this, as Fred Wolcott beat him in the new world record time of 6:1. Wolcott duplicated this time in the final.

In the mile relay the Wildcats, in finishing second to State, polished off Rutgers, and Temple University, the Cats' arch-rivals.

Di Carlo Takes Lead

Leading off for the Blue and White was Johnny Di Carlo who had come back after his 50-yard dash, and handed the stick to Bill Hooper with a good seven-yard lead. Johnny remained in the pack 'till the last lap, when he hurriedly pulled away.

Hooper, not content with this, pulled in at the finish with a few more added yards, to send Harry Keefrider on his way.

Keefrider seemed to cinch things, as he passed the stick to anchor man Bill Carey. But then the dynamite exploded.

Carey anxious to stretch the lead, started out with a burst of speed and tried to keep it going. Barney Ewell, the state speedster, and three-event I. C. A. A. champ, had his own ideas about going places, but he had about twenty or more yards to make up from his last place position.

Carey Falters

He followed the bunch around the first and second laps, but as soon as the gun went off he let go with a phenomenal burst of speed to challenge the now-tiring Carey.

Racing down the back stretch with the screams of the crowd in their ears, both Carey and Ewell were fighting hard; Carey to hold off Ewell, and Ewell to go ahead. Bill managed to stay in front of Ewell down the back stretch, and around the final turn, but now the Penn State man was coming stronger and stronger while Carey grew the opposite.

With the crowd now on its feet, Carey struggled to hold his fast-fading lead, but Ewell had too much left, and about twenty-five yards from the tape passed the Wildcat to win by a couple of yards. The time for the race equalled last year's meet record of 3:33:8, and Ewell was unofficially timed in 50.4.

This event concluded the Wildcat running for the evening.

New York Meet Next

This Saturday night the Villanova trackmen will resume their indoor season when they take part in the New York A. C. meet at Madison Square Garden.

Mentor Elliott has announced that Johnny Di Carlo will run in the 60 yard dash. Besides this Johnny will also help to make up the mile quartet.

Frosh Seek Clean Slate For 2d Time

Once again for the second season in a row, it seems that Villanova's freshmen team will go undefeated along the ways of the ribbed court. Only two more games remain on the schedule and if the Frosh are successful they will increase their undefeated streak to 13 games.

The two remaining contests are against the SPHA reserves, whom they licked Friday night, 40-35, and Brown Prep of Philadelphia, always a tough opponent to the Kittens.

Considered as one of the finest professional teams in the Quaker City, the SPHA reserves, little brothers to the SPHA's of the professional circuit, were humbled by the Kittens at the Field House as lanky Ted Rapella tossed in twenty points to pave the way for the 11th straight game.

Playing their second game since the mid-year lay-off, the Frosh looked like a nigh-perfect club as they performed before a packed house. With that victory and the nineteen that the Frosh established from the previous year, the winning streak extends to thirty games.

At halftime, Villanova was ahead 23-15. The Reserves put on a belated rally in the second half, but the Kittens could not be overhauled. Rapella kept his team out in front with his steady scoring. All night long his pivot shot around the circle was successful. Ably assisting Ted was Chuck Drizen, who accounted for nine points. Joe Lord was good for six markers and for the losers, Cohen was high man with eleven points.

The Reserves encountered trouble getting used to the rules of intercollegiate basketball but their form could not match the high-flying Freshmen.

This Saturday night the Frosh will travel to Philadelphia for a return engagement with the Reserves. Following that, they will close the season with Brown Prep.

Snavely Praises Basca

Coach Carl Snavely of Cornell and one of the two coaches who directed the North-South game this past year, told reporters at a recent luncheon in Philadelphia that Nick Basca was one of the finest players he had ever coached.

Basca, who performed so notably in the annual game, will undoubtedly get an offer to play in next year's charity game between the College All-Stars and the Professionals.

Rumor That Smith Will Go To N. D.

In full swing once more is the annual rumor season on the future destiny of Villanova's "Clipper" Smith. Occasion of the rumors this year is the vacancy left by Elmer Layden's retirement from the Notre Dame grid coaching slot.

Smith, along with several other Notre Dame grads including Buck Shaw of Santa Clara and Joe Bolland, Philadelphia lad who assisted Layden at South Bend, is supposedly a leading candidate for the job, which as Smith terms it "is the end of the road for every Notre Dame man."

However the Clipper contends that he has not been approached in any way upon the subject and right now he is preparing for the Villanova spring practice sessions to start late in February. In answer to rumors that Villanova was scouting for a new mentor to replace "Clipper" on his supposed "departure" for N. D., Clipper said that he knew of no reason for such action unless it be because of last year's poor season. Obviously this would be Villanova's last reason for "Clipper" seems to have his bed made here on the Main Line and will definitely sleep in it as long as he wishes.

Denies Reports

Father Alberts, moderator of athletics, totally discredited the reports dealing with any Villanova overtures in search of a new coach. Villanova is definitely satisfied with Smith and will keep him if possible. Naturally the authorities will not stand in his way, however, if there is a better position open and he wishes to take it.

Smith's connection with the N. D. vacancy seems to exist mainly because of the "Clipper's" reputation as being the closest counterpart of the "old master", Knute Rockne. A master in dealing with men and with a grid coaching ability unsurpassed among contemporaries, Smith has had amazing success in football despite a few lean years brought on mainly by dearth of material. He has definitely produced amazing results with the material he has had not only at Villanova but also at Santa Clara, Gonzaga and other stops on his ascendency to fame.

Whether or not the present rumors have any better foundation than the dozens of previous years remains to be seen. Villanova hopes not.

Answer To Problem

Many of the students are somewhat in the dark about the lights behind the backboard in the Field House. The explanation is that during the course of the basketball games, a man is seated at the officials' table on the floor and when a basket is successful he pushes a button which lights the bulbs behind the backboard, indicating a score. Many believe that the system is automatic.

By PAUL McCANN

Villanova's hard-luck courtmen experienced and up-and-down time of it this past week. On Tuesday night they were as hot as Safari in July and all but blew the well-regarded Deacons of Wake Forest College right out of the field-house as they swept to a 50-33 triumph for their 12th win in 13 starts.

But, on Friday night, like the weather, they too changed, and, unable to cope with a shooting slump and bad breaks, bowed to a clever Washington and Jefferson College team, 25-24.

In the Tuesday night triumph, the Wildcats flashed their best form of the season and were out in front from the opening whistle. The Deacons threatened to make quite a battle of it in the early stages but, in spite of the amazing long range shooting of their captain, Vince Convery, were thoroughly routed by the last half spree of Severance's sharpshooters.

Accurate Shooting

The Villanova tossers performed with machine-like precision. They were terrific as they drove in for numerous lay-ups and on the occasions when they were unable to work the ball in close, they riddled the basket with deadly accuracy from outside the foul circle.

The opening half was a nip-and-tuck affair for the most part, due to the fine gunning by Convery who was the only Wake Forest man to connect consistently in the face of the well-balanced Villanova attack.

The score was tied three times (at 6-all, 8-all and 10-10), and it appeared for a while that the teams would match points in an issue that might not be decided until the final whistle. But when Nugent broke the 10-all deadlock with a gorgeous long set-shot, he set the spark which spurred his teammates to a sally of baskets which brought them a 25-18 half-time lead.

Foresters Falter

The Foresters rallied valliantly at the outset of the second half and at one time trailed by only 27-24 but once the Villanova attack again got under way the game developed into a run-away.

The set shooting of Bill Wood, who garnered 12 points and Paul Nugent, who dropped in five long ones, was a sight to behold. Tht rebound play of Art Spector, who amassed 9 points, was an inspiring exhibition of the art of playing the center position. The all-around play of Gray, Yund, Kelty, Gerland and Murphy cannot be overlooked in estimating the team's success.

Convery, with eighteen points, topped the individual scoring.

W. & J. Break Streak

The more than 3,000 fans who were on hand at the field-house Friday night to witness the invasion by the high-flying Washington and Jefferson College team were treated to one of the most thrilling games ever played on the Villanova court. The Presidents came here with a record of 9 wins and only one defeat — boasting conquests over such ranking quintets as Penn State, Geneva, Wittenberg, Carnegie Tech and Waynesburg. Their outstanding record marked them as a distinct threat to the

Tank Meet Postponed

The swimming meet scheduled for last Friday between Loyola College of Baltimore and Villanova was cancelled because the eligibility rules of the Colleges differ and the colleges could not come to an agreement. There is a possibility that the meet may be arranged later in the season.

The "Wildcats'" next meet will be on March 1 at Lancaster, Pa., when they encounter the "Diplomats" of Franklin and Marshall College. This will be the toughest meet of the year for the Blue and White, for the "Diplomats" have one of the strongest teams in this sector.

With three weeks of practice the tankmen should be in top shape in all departments and Coach Leahy expects to atone for the defeat that Franklin and Marshall inflicted on his team last season.

Austin's Fast Pace Halts Fedigan To Gain Blue Tie With Mendelites

Maroon Team Loses I-M Lead As They Bow to Revamped Austin Five, 47-28, Mendel Residents Also Move Up Into First Place Although Defeated by Alumni

Fedigan Hall's one week stand as the campus leader in the Intramural basketball league came to an abrupt halt, Thursday night, as Austin's blue squad with a revamped line-up came back strongly to whip the maroon five, 47-28.

With that victory, Austin, winners of the first-half, moved into a tie for first place with the Mendel residents, who, although defeated remained at the top position. Each team has won 4 games and lost 3 in this hotly-disputed campaign.

The big upset of the week was the triumph of the fifth place Alumni Greenies over the Mendelites, who are really pointing for this half's championship. After a 10-8 lead at the close of the first half, Alumni with Scalzetti leading the way came back to nose out Mendel, 23-20. Donovan of Mendel led the evening's scoring with 8 points to take top honors. In this battle, the lead changed rapidly and it was not until the final moments that the Greenies gained ground to come through with victory.

C. & F. Loses Twice

Adding to the upsets of the week, the last place Mendel Day Hops pulled a surprise by trouncing the Commerce and Finance basketeers, 57-32. C. & F. never had a chance as the Day hops lost little time and piled up a huge advantage. The Mendel team was paced by Burke and Boyle who chalked up 12 and 9 points respectively. Meehan led the losing cause for his side with 10 markers.

Not content with knocking C. & F. out of second place, the spunky Mendel Day men stepped right into the slot vacated by the Business men by staging a brilliant second-half rally to overcome the Greenies from Alumni by a 27-22 score. The freshmen were leading Mendel 12-2 at the half, setting a new record by holding a team to only two points in 20 minutes. But the Day Students led by Depersio and Weber staged a thrilling comeback scoring 25 points to win from the amazed freshmen.

Austin Gains Lead

C. & F. suffered their second loss of the week at the hands of Austin Hall on Thursday afternoon by a 49-39 margin. The game was a nip-and-tuck affair throughout but the Blues who have a strong eye for the championship put on a strong spurt midway in the second frame and easily turned the tide of victory.

That same night Austin turned in its second win and thereby gained first place when they bowled over Fedigan in an easy manner, 47-28. Holding the maroon team to a slim 11 points, the Blue evidenced their strength by turning on the power in the second half.

recently-restored prestige of the Villanova passers.

The play was rough, ragged in spots, but there were enough instances of brilliant performances to keep the crowd in a state of frenzy throughout. It was a battle of two great defensive teams in which the breaks were the deciding factor.

The first-half was one of the lowest scoring periods seen in this area in some time. The point-getting aces of both clubs were kept in check by aggressive defensive play—the like of which is seldom seen.

After five scoreless minutes during which time both clubs were handicapped by nervous tension and over-anxiety, Spector dropped in a foul shot to be followed by Nugent's successful heave from mid-court. Geiseler countered shortly with a two-pointer from side-court. Shots were few and far between as both outfits doggedly stressed possession of the ball.

When Nugent dropped in another mid-court pretty following successive foul points by Wood and Yund to give the Cats an 8-4 lead, Pierre Hartman, a 6', 6" sub center, was injected into the W. and J. line-up. He promptly made his presence felt to the tune of two sensational left-handed hook shots which, added to a foul toss by Duthie, gave the visitors a 9-8 half-time lead.

BILL WOOD

The second half was also an impressive defensive show. Point-production was stepped-up appreciably, however, due to magnificent shot-making on the part of both teams. Chuck Yund featured the Villanova offense with brilliant running hook shots and Al Reece was the big gun for the opponents.

'Cats Lose Lead

With seven minutes to go, the Wildcats were enjoying a seven-point lead, 24-17. W. and J. suddenly came to life as Hartman and Reece scored on lay-ups and Tidrick stole a Villanova pass and dribbled the length of the floor to put his mates only one point behind.

The exciting minutes that followed were featured by impregnable defensive play. Then, with only a little over a minute remaining, Reece scored on a nice pass from Tidrick to put W. and J. in front, 25-24. When Villanova failed at the free throw line and subsequently was unable to work the ball into scoring range, its chances for victory had gone with the proverbial wind.

Metzinger Lends Hand To Train Boxing Men

First call for the annual Intramural Boxing and Wrestling Tournament was issued last week by the co-directors of the meet, Fr. McKee and Fr. Dunne.

Always a thrilling and rough-and-tumble affair, the Boxing and Wrestling show will be held on the evening of March 3rd at the Field House. During the night, celebrities of the ring and mat world will make their appearances under the spotlight.

At the present the names are not for publication due to the fact that some are only potentialities but it is certain that the contestants will be of the best. Tommy Loughran, a former boxing champion, and Harry Nugent will be some of the prominent guests. Also Bill Duffy, who is fighting pro in New York City, will be available for exhibition matches. Duffy expressed his desire to fight and at the moment is being urged bring several of his boxing colleagues to spar in exhibition matches.

McGinley to Train

Training sessions will be under the direction of Bob Metzinger and Vince McGinley. Metzinger is one of the few members of the disbanded boxing team of 1939, while McGinley, who hails from St. Benedict's Prep, is a reputable fighter.

Other contestants include Buzz Mowen, Austin Hall's fist-slinging champion; Bill Nocco of Alumni Hall; Bill Walsh, 165 lb. star, and Bill Fenton, light-heavyweight entrant. Mowen was also a former member of the boxing team, representing the 'Cats in the 120 pound division. He fought against opponents from Wisconsin, Catholic U., Fordham, Rutgers and C. C. N. Y., and was successful in half his meets.

In the heavyweight class, several members of the varsity football team will don the gloves for the night to stage some real slugging.

A Suggestion

A suggestion has been made to this department that the Swimming meets held in the pool be started one-half hour earlier due to the fact that the stories sent in by the reporters of the papers will not make the evening issue at such a late hour. If started sooner, the better for Villanova, for the publicity will be expanded more and the stories will not become negligible.

Basketball Team Has "Will To Win" And Competitive Spirit — Severance

Team Has Come Along With Hard Work and Has Achieved Success

By AL SEVERANCE
Head Basketball Coach

"Time! the corrector where our judgements err." How true has the above become to many with whom I discussed the hopes of this years' team before the start of the present season.

When at the close of last season such worthy and game seasoned men as Duzminski, Lazorchak, Rice, Sinnott were lost via graduation and Johnny Stanton, who incidently will grace the Loyola lineup on the 19th of this month withdrew from school, there remained but two regular starters, Nugent and Yund.

Around these two stalwart players was to be found the trio who were to carry the present campaign. Four men had given indication that they might carry the "Mail," Dick Grey, a junior, Bob Kelty, Art Spector and Bill Wood. The last three mentioned were sophomores, who had never tasted of varsity competition and it remained to be seen, if in the heat of competition, they could retain their poise and balance, so necessary, to achieve ultimate victory.

Injuries Hurt Team

There still remained that old bug'a'boo and bane of many high hopes "injuries." The latter must always be reckoned with in estimating the success of any team. Taking all of the above into consideration, I must admit that my predictions took on the character of "the crying towel."

Teams made up of human beings cannot always be held to what is beyond their capacity and strength, for at times the accomplishments and execution may be beyond their power. However, there was one factor that became evident from the start of the practice sessions: It was evidenced on the floor and off the floor it literally became the mark that identified this years team. "The Will to Win." Their application to fundamentals, their capacity for work, industry and zeal to forge themselves into a cohesive unit, with one objective, to play hard, clean, and spirited ball, come what may.

Early games indicated that they would always be in there giving their all and that if lady luck saw fit to nod the other way on occasions they could always leave the floor heads high with a deep satisfying feeling of a job well done.

Praises Team

The score book shows the balance 12 on the pleasant side and two on the side of the wolves. And it is especially after the more recent game that I would call to the attention of the younger men of the team those famous words of Goldsmith. "The greatest glory consists not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall." I feel most fortunate in having had the association of such men who played the last game in which it looked as if things were going to be sunshine and roses but for a few lapses turned to gall and temporary gloom.

There will always remain a pleasant memory of this game afforded by the boy, Bill Wood, who, as the saying goes, "played his heart out," this to take no credit from any of the other men who participated.

There is yet another chapter to this year's team. The men who have been out there month after month practicing along with the starters and who have not had the glory of the night lights but for whose work those who get the starting call would not have performed so well, men like Robinson, Murphy and Gerland and all the others. The assistance of Messers. Corbett, Murray and last but not least Mr. Skaff is just another indication of fine spirit and cooperation, which, in final, has caused by early dubious predictions, to return and haunt me. For truly this year's contingent has the competitive spirit and will to win.

Invitations Sent To Sixty Swim Teams

It was announced last week by the Athletic Association that all entries for the annual Catholic Interscholastic Swimming Meet held here on February 22d have been sent out. In all, some 60 invitations have been sent to the leading Catholic high and prep schools of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, and Delaware.

Some of the outstanding teams invited are: St. Francis Prep, St. John's Prep, and Brooklyn Prep, all of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Harrisburg, Pa., Catholic, York, Pa., Catholic, and Central Catholic of Allentown, Pa. All the Catholic High Schools from the Philadelphia district will compete.

Last year's winners, St. Francis Prep, are expected to defend their title, with the runners-up, North Catholic of Phila. and Brooklyn Prep also expected.

The deadline for entries has been set for Saturday, February 15.

Pholeric Gets Role Of "Thin Man" Trying To Shed For 150-lb. Team

Swimming Star Once Tried to Lose Half His Weight to Make Lightweights

By JACK DUDLEY

The corridor outside the Office of the Dean was filled with students waiting to hear the result of their semester's efforts. Like a long line of condemned men ready to walk the last mile, they moved slowly but steadily toward the door. No one seemed to be in any hurry to get there.

We saw John Pholeric in line, and he was laughing — even the impending crash couldn't dim the high spirits of this jovial senior. He was in a more serious mood by the time he was able to see the carpet on the floor of the office, but he was still able to put a smile on the face of Tony Sachetti, whom he followed.

John came out of the office smiling more broadly than ever, more than willing to show everyone his report. When we took a look at those B's and C's on that piece of paper we knew the time had come for an interview.

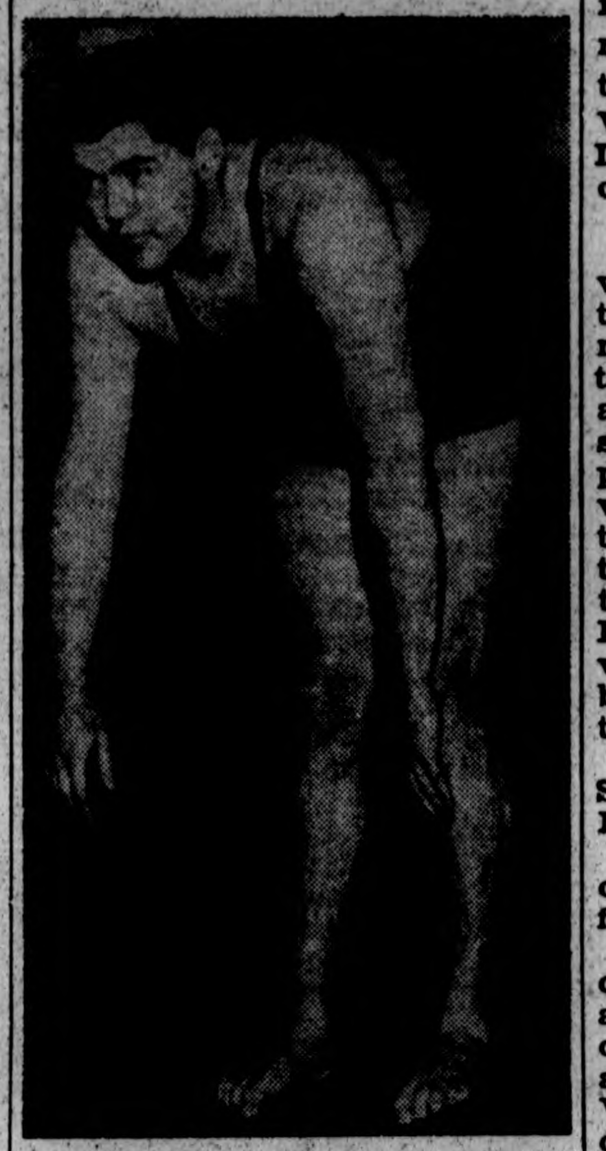
Pholeric and Kelley

Pholeric dayhops to Villanova from Eddystone, located a few miles down Chester Pike. John parks his new Buick across from the Field House each morning and hurries over to the Commerce Building where he is majoring in Accounting. At 2:20 P. M., he goes to swimming pool with Walt Kelley to practice his specialties, the 220 and 440 races.

The combination of Pholeric and Kelley is known as the "Axis," and if the Secret Service reads this — they're not dangerous, really they're not. The prime purpose in life of the "Axis" is to wage constant war upon and to exterminate, if possible, one 'Roger Ranger,' known scholastically as Bill Hooper, swim star. Even as we jotted down notes on our conversation with Pholeric with one hand, we were using the other to ward off the aforementioned "Roger Ranger" who was intent on snatching John's lunch — and what an effect going without his lunch would have on John.

Betty Grable Fan

A true sportsman he is. John has taken an active interest in all the popular pastimes. It has been said that he even tried to go out for the One-fifty pound team, but after shedding 50 pounds he still had a good way to go, so he gave it up as a bad job.



He is a true Villanova man too. He prefers the not too fast recordings of Tommy Dorsey — dresses conservatively, and he likes to read the works of Kenneth Roberts. Also, he has never been known to miss a Betty Grable picture. Those are admirable tastes.

Many are the days that John slips behind the wheel of his slick 1941 super and drives over to Rosemont in order to take Mary home.

If he had any plans for the immediate future upon graduation they will be laid aside for a year. When July comes, Johnny is going to get his gun and go marching off with the others who have been called to the service. We envy the division that John will be in. They will have many a good laugh to thank him for. Just as he has gotten along and made many friends at Villanova he will go far in the army and in all his other endeavors on the great disposition that he possesses.

Court Success Of Loyola Attributed To Emil Reitz, Former Villanovan

The varsity basketball team from Loyola College of Baltimore is enjoying its most successful season in many a decade, and this success can be attributed mostly to the work of Coach Emil "Lefty" Reitz. Reitz graduated from Villanova in 1937 and since he has served as Athletic Director for two years and varsity basketball coach for three years at the Jesuit school.

Since his arrival at Loyola, Reitz has created a marked improvement in the athletic accomplishments of the school. He is now one of the most popular and efficient figures in Maryland collegiate sport circles. His most notable accomplishment is his success with basketball. Last year "Lefty" guided the "Greyhounds" to the Maryland Collegiate Championship, and this year he hopes to lead his squad to the championship of the newly formed Mason-Dixon Conference.

Defeated By 'Cats

Their record so far this season seems to indicate that they will win the Conference title. They have lost only two games in twelve starts. One of their defeats came at the hands of coach Reitz's own alma mater, Villanova, and the other was to La Salle College of this city. One of the "Greyhounds" biggest boasts is their victory over the powerful Georgetown team in their second game of the season.

Loyola has eight contests remaining on their schedule of twenty games and six of these are conferences matches.

Last year's Evergreen team turned in a record of fourteen victories and eight defeats, not too impressive but then again not too bad. However those wins guranteed the League championship for the Baltimore team for the first time in their history, and this year it looks as if they are going to repeat in the conference.

Severance's ace forwards was put on the casualty list when he sprained his ankle in the first half of the game. With that sudden turn for the worse in the beginning, we might lay the loss of the game to that fact. With Kelty definitely out, Villanova's chances of beating Loyola of Chicago takes a drop in optimism.

Fans Converted

When the season first got under way, some said with skepticism that Kelty wouldn't be the proper man at the forward position. Then the fans were Duzminski-conscious and believed that after Duke, someone like him had to fill that position. But faith comes along with time and experience and now the fans have been converted to the belief that Kelty is the something-special to watch on the court. His height and long legs combined with some acute shooting have been constant and efficient over this span of months.

We really sympathize with Coach Severance and hope that the loss of Kelty won't be too hard to take.

People always clamor for success stories and we'll give you one filled with all the facts.

Seldom do you hear of Doc Jacobs as the man behind the scenes and the one who has put Villanova on the baseball map. Of the team, and rightly so, it's often said that Villanova put out one of the best diamond clubs in collegiate circles. Adding proof to that, look at the record and notice that the Wildcats lost but one game out of sixteen last spring. In 1939, the record was 14 out of seventeen.

Outlook Bright

In another few weeks another chapter of baseball will commence. This time the prospects are greater than ever. Pitching is abundant and experienced men will shape the outcome. It look sgood and will be good for the skipper, Doc Jacobs, will make it so.

There's not many a person who knows the set-up more than the good doctor. He knows his baseball players inside-and-out, tells them how to think and act on the diamond and gathers their friendship easily. Doc possesses a critical eye and can easily detect a weakness in any one of his players. He has also done more to advance his players in the big leagues and other professional units than a good deal of coaches.

Doc has always arranged a prominent schedule for the team and thereby draws the proper publicity and with all this in mind we can't see how he can miss.

Carnegie Tech Tackles Passers Thursday Night

Carnegie Tech's not-to-successful basketball quintet heads eastward on Thursday where they will tackle Villanova that night at the Villanova Field House. So far the Tartans have had a poor season, in fact, one of the worst seasons that the school has seen.

Villanova should not have too much trouble with Tech, but there is always a possibility that the Tartans will have an on-night and score an upset. Therefore, the 'Cats have been preparing for the last few days and will try to redeem themselves for the loss handed to them by Washington and Jefferson.

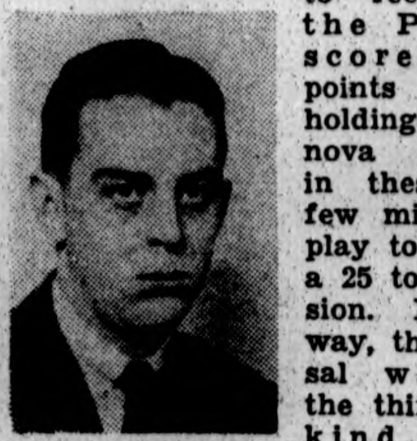
HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

Last Friday evening the once-beaten Villanova basketeers dropped their second decision of the waning season to the strong defensive quintet from Washington & Jefferson College of Washington, Pa. This fact in itself does not constitute a startling sports story, although it is news when the Wildcats do lose a basketball contest because of the rarity of the occasions on which Al Severance's team emerges on the short end of the score. However, an incident that occurred after the game seems worthy of comment.

With only five minutes remaining in the ball game, the 'Cats held a six-point lead over the Presidents and the onlookers began donning their hats and coats, confident that the Wildcats' thirteenth victory of the current campaign was "in the bag." However, the old saying that "the game is not over until the final whistle" applied very fittingly here and it is unpleasant repetition to recall that the Presidents scored six points while holding Villanova scoreless in these last few minutes of play to eke out a 25 to 24 decision. By the way, this reversal was only the third of its kind suffered by the Wildcats in their home lair since early in the 1937-38 season.



Sander's Statement

Although the game was hotly contested throughout and tempers flared up at times, the only discordant note of the evening was sounded when Coach Sanders of Washington & Jefferson made a statement after the game. "I thought we were at least 10 points better than Villanova," he said, "and we would have showed it except for the official interpretations. We're not used to such 'homer' decisions." Coming from a coach whose team had just put on a last-minute scoring spree to earn a one-point decision over their closest rival for the mythical state championship, that statement does not digest easily. I wonder what Mr. Sanders' comment would have been and his team failed to overcome the Wildcats' lead?

Well, let's look at the record. The officials called nineteen fouls in the contest — eleven on the Presidents and eight on Villanova, This is not a staggering amount when you consider that the teams were never separated by more than five points throughout the entire contest and so neither could afford to rest on their laurels or coast along on the crest of a sizable lead.

Gray Ejected

The record also shows that Dick Gray, a smart defensive ball player and the best ball-handler on the Villanova team, was ejected from the contest early in the third quarter, while no Washington & Jefferson player was given the thumb for this reason. This does not seem to indicate that the officials were lending a helping hand to the home club.

An incident occurred in the second half of the game which further contradicts Coach Sanders' statement. Three or four of the players from both sides got themselves — tangled up on the floor while striving for possession of a free ball, so that for a minute the game resembled a free-for-all wrestling match. The inevitable result was that somebody's feelings were hurt and a few of the boys emerged from the scrimmage with fists flying. These things are bound to happen in the excitement of a close game and it is very difficult for the officials to single out any one player as the one who started the fireworks.

Coach Rebuked

But the point I wish to bring out is that, in this instance, with the stage all set for a "homer decision," it was a Villanova player, Chuck Yund, who bore the brunt of the officials' wrath and was the recipient of a personal foul. Here the officials did not seem to wear the cloak of prejudice with which Coach Sanders would have them garbed.

Betty Bradley, Brooklyn Beauty, Picks Chester's Sweet Over Swing

By JOE McCABE

One reason why men leave home and women turn gray might easily be Miss Betty Bradley, vocalist featured with Bob Chester, the senior ball bandmaster. A ravishing burenette, Betty is a native of that famous "bed of beauty," Brooklyn.

Usually, female vocalists with popular orchestras have spent part of their lives in convent schools and taken up singing as a mild form of "adventure"—but not Betty. She's one of those individuals who comes by it naturally; in fact, it's in the family. Her aunts were among the original Mack Sennett girls, and were stalwarts of the early motion picture era. Her cousin is Lew Leslie, the well-known stage producer who made "Blackbirds" an important part of our theatre picture. Small wonder now that she's a "natural."

As to previous experience, our charming guest sang with Gray Gordon and Johnnie McGee before joining Chester's musicians. While kept busy singing, she nevertheless found time to grace the silver screen through the medium of several shorts and to appear in numerous theatres for personal presentations of solo numbers. She also sang for Victor and Varsity recordings.

To all who enjoy throaty warblings to the accompaniment of wailing saxophones and muted-trombones, the sound of Betty's voice will be just what the doctor ordered for the relief of lovesickness. Although she prefers sweet lyrics to those of the "scat" nature, nevertheless when the occasion demands even Betty Hutton takes a back seat.

It's strange, but oh, so nice, to learn that female vocalists are both beautiful and young and that our heroine is no exception. She looks like a double for Arleen Judge of the movies and confesses to but a nineteen-year stay on this earth.

Alumni Serve

Wallach, Schermerhorn and Lyons Stationed at Camp Shelby, Miss.,

By P. N. G.

Uncle Sam has chosen three more ex-Villanovans to aid in his defense program. Three of the alumni are now members of the 166th Field Artillery stationed at Camp Shelby, Mississippi.

Saul Wallach, a member of the class of '40 and a graduate of the C. & F. school, was the first chosen by the Penna. National Guard. Having entered many activities, among which he acted as playing manager of the tennis team, Saul made himself well-known around school.

J. Beatty Schermerhorn, a classmate of Wallach in the commerce school, was the second. During his four-year stay at Villanova he was a familiar figure in intramural sports, in addition to being on the tennis team for three years.

The last of the soldiers-to-be is James Lyons, of the class of '38 and another graduate of the C. & F. school.

"BULLETIN" ARTICLES

The Mendel Bulletin, quarterly publication of the School of Science, which will be issued by the end of this month, will include among its features an article on "Bats," by Joseph Camarda, senior science man, and one on the "History and Purpose of the Wistar Institute," in which Dr. John A. McClain, assistant professor of biology, is guest in the laboratories at the University of Pennsylvania.

Scranton Debaters Here Saturday Night

Beta Gamma, varsity debating society, will engage the debating team of Scranton University, next Saturday night in Simpson hall at 8:00 P. M.

Villanova will be represented by Charles Callahan and Edward Manderfield. The topic for the evening's debate is Resolved: That the United States should form a permanent alliance of the nations in the Western Hemisphere for protection from foreign influences. Beta Gamma will uphold the affirmative.

Thomas J. Moore, chairman of Beta Gamma, is making plans to meet Scranton U. in a return debate in Scranton and, on the same trip, to engage the debaters from Misericordiae College in Dallas, Pa.

Relations Members Discuss Destroyer Trade

The Anglo-American transaction which involved the exchange of fifty American destroyers for the right to lease eight British colonies in the Western Hemisphere was the topic of discussion at the International Relations Club meeting last Wednesday in Simpson hall.

After considering the trade in the light of International and National Law, the members concluded that this transaction was singularly indicative of our government's present policy of painfully free interpretation of laws.

Negotiations are underway to promote joint meetings of the group with clubs of neighboring colleges.

A.S.M.E. Hears Talk On Schuylkill Plant Today

Mr. Ernest Hopping, chief mechanical engineer in charge of operations with the Philadelphia Electric Company, and chairman of the student relations committee of the A. S. M. E., will address the society today at 1:00 P. M. and 2:15 P. M.

Topic of his talk will be the recent change made at the Schuylkill power plant from a pipe line resisting 400 pounds to one resisting 1500 pounds pressure.

Magazines were distributed and plans for future field trips were discussed at a meeting of the society yesterday morning.

Frosh Debaters Prepare For Future Competition

The Freshman Debating Club held its second meeting of the year last Thursday in Simpson hall to make preparations for coming debates.

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., moderator of the group, presented several basic points to be considered by the debater and showed methods of presentation and rebuttal of an argument. To illustrate more clearly what had been explained, John P. Fullam, a member of the varsity debating team, gave an argument used against Boston University last week. Criticism of the speech was then made by the members of the club.

The next meeting of the team will be held this Thursday at 3:15 P. M. in Simpson. It is expected that a definite date will then be set for the first debate.

Week-End To Witness Senior Socials

Name Faculty Committees On National Defense

Selective Service, Engineering Training and C. P. T. Boards Will Facilitate Functioning of Programs

The College furthered its policy of complete co-operation with the National Defense Program with the appointment last Saturday by the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president, of three faculty committees to supervise the various phases of the program relating to the college students and faculty members.

The three committees will deal with selective service, engineering training, and civilian pilot training, and will attempt to facilitate the functioning of these three programs on the campus with the aim of eliminating any difficulties which might arise.

While these three committees are the only ones necessary at present to aid in the defense cooperation, other committees will be appointed as the need arises.

Fr. Crawford Draft Chairman

The faculty committee on Selective Service will be under the chairmanship of the Rev. John H. Crawford, O. S. A.; its purpose will be to advise and to give whatever assistance may be required to handle the many problems that will shortly arise in connection with the application of selective service to members of the faculty and the student body.

Other members of this committee include Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar, who will act in the capacity of secretary; Rev. James A. Donnellon, O. S. A.; Patrick J. Dougherty; and Rev. Edward M. Dwyer, O. S. A.

Dean Morehouse Directs

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the Engineering School, is chairman of the faculty committee on Engineering Training for National Defense. The aim of this group will be to advise and give whatever assistance may be required to aid in the program now under way in co-operation with the United States Office of Education.

Mr. Banmiller will also serve as secretary of this committee, which will be composed of Dr. Edward L. Haenisch; Rev. John F. Hammond, O. S. A.; John A. Oakey; and Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A.

To Aid in C. P. T. Program

The committee on the Civil Pilot Training Program will advise and give whatever assistance may be required to facilitate the carrying out of this program in connection with the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

William Slaughter, co-ordinator of this program at Villanova, will be chairman of the committee. He will be assisted by William G. Driscoll, ground instructor for the course, who will act as secretary; Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S. A.; Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A.; and Leo H. Schaefer.

Dinner-Dance At Philadelphian Saturday Night

Esquires Will Play For Class of '41's Last Affair

To put a fitting conclusion to their social careers at Villanova, seniors will attend their annual dinner-dance Saturday evening in the spacious ballroom of the Hotel Philadelphian. Dinner will be served at 8:00 P. M. and dancing will continue until 1:00 A. M.

This will be the last social event of the class of 1941. It is open only to seniors and their guests.

Believing that a well-known local band, valuable favors for the seniors' dates and good cuisine will provide the perfect combination for the "perfect" evening, dinner-dance chairman Edward A. Eichman and committee signed Don Crist and his Esquires to provide the melodies for the evening.

The seven Esquires are well-known and have proven their ability in Philadelphia and suburban social circles. Handling the lyrics will be a vocal trio, while a clever instrumental quartet will provide satisfaction for those who prefer their music "in the groove." Occupying a prominent place in the evening's entertainment will be several selections played by the marimba soloist of the Esquires.

Favoring an atmosphere of congeniality, committee members have made it possible for the seniors to reserve tables for their parties. Reservations for these parties must be in the hands of the committee members before Wednesday evening. Frederick Steller, 211 Fedigan hall; Daniel Keating, 122 Austin hall, and Edward Eichman, 217 Fedigan hall, will supervise the arrangement of the reservations.

There will be no main table or definite arrangement of tables. Instead, tables will be grouped around the ballroom, each with its own floral centerpiece. No addresses are scheduled for the evening.

All seniors who have not paid their class assessments as yet, and who desire to attend the dinner-dance are requested to notify the committee of their intentions in order that reservations may be provided.

"In past years, much confusion and discomfort has resulted from the failure of seniors to secure their reservations. This confusion and discomfort can be eliminated only with the complete co-operation of all seniors," chairman Eichman explained. These seniors may notify any of the previously-mentioned committee.

The Hotel Philadelphian is located at 39th and Chestnut Sts. Seniors traveling from the college will find the shortest route to be in Lancaster Pike to 63rd St.; down 63rd to Chestnut; and in Chestnut to 39th St.

Prom Vocalist

BILL DARNELL, who, with attractive Betty Bradley, will take care of the words to Bob Chester's music at the Belle Air Ball Friday night.

History Seminar Holds Federal Court Review Tomorrow

Charles Urie, sophomore commerce student, will conduct a discussion on the subject: "Federal Courts: Problems of Constitutional Interpretation," at a meeting of the History Seminar tomorrow at 2:15 in Simpson hall.

It is the purpose of this consideration to familiarize the student with the court's application of basic constitutional doctrines in recent decisions. In connection with this a number of important Supreme Court decisions will be analyzed.

At last week's meeting the members discussed various factors which will affect the foreign policy of the United States in the next ten years. Among those mentioned were: the outcome of the present war; the increase in our merchant marine; a possible spirit of imperialism in this country due to a large army and military equipment on hand; the leasing of foreign bases, by the U. S.; the trade agreement program with South America; the possible admission of Puerto Rico to statehood, and the change of the U. S. from a debtor to a creditor nation.

An essay on this topic, being written by Raymond Valentine, Charles Miller, and James McGarey, will be entered in a contest sponsored by William and Mary College.

Studies Start For 60 Ship Workers

Sixty employes of the New York Shipbuilding Company were present at Villanova's first class in engineering training for National Defense, held last Thursday night in Camden. These men will receive advanced instruction in engineering each Monday and Thursday evening.

While the necessary government authorization for training high school graduates in basic engineering courses has not yet come from Washington, it is expected that it will arrive in time to start the first section at Northeast Catholic High School tomorrow night, with an enrollment of 89 students.

Classes at Hallahan High School and Villanova will not begin until a later date, as it is desired to have more men enrolled before the commencement of a class. However, the date for the beginning of the Hallahan class has been tentatively set as February 24.

At present 28 prospective students have registered at Hallahan, and 12 have enrolled at Villanova.

These courses in basic engineering subjects for high school graduates will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. Tuition will be paid by the government, but students must furnish their own books.

Bob Chester Plays Friday In "Southern" Field House

Belle Air Ball Will Feature Holiday Resort Decorations; Dancing From 10 'Til 2; Tickets Sold at $5.00

C. B. S. TO BROADCAST FROM DANCE FLOOR

By WARD GUNCHEON

Stepping into the luxurious warmth of southern climes, men of Villanova and their guests will dance to the music of Bob Chester at the annual senior Belle Air Ball this Friday evening in the Field House.

From the unusual setting of a colorful holiday resort, Chester will present his "rhythms of tomorrow," featuring Betty Bradley and Bill Darnell in the lyric melodies, from 10:00 P. M. to 2:00 A. M.

His music, which will consist mostly of "sweet" and dreamy" selections with a few of his well-known "swing" arrangements, will be broadcast direct from the dance floor over the Columbia Broadcasting system from 12:30 A. M. to 1:00 A. M. The half-hour program, the first broadcast ever to be made from a Villanova dance, will be accompanied by a running description of the dancers present and the unusual decoration of the Field House.

Tickets on Sale

Tickets are being sold at $5.00 per couple by dance chairman J. Gordon Brosmer, the dance committee, and James P. Collins. The sales have accelerated rapidly in the last few days and a large turnout is expected. Those who have not yet purchased their tickets are requested to do so in the next two days, so that no complications may arise through heavy sales the night of the Prom.

A rainbow hued fountain placed in the center of the dance floor will be the feature decoration of the ball. Multi-colored lights in the base of the fountain will illuminate the falling spray. Clustered about the fountain will be myriads of varied-colored summer blooms.

New Lighting Idea

Concealed spotlights will cast their manifold glows on the draped ceiling. These shaded lights will replace the usual chandelier lights used for illumination at previous dances.

In accord with the tropical atmosphere, realistic surf illuminated from behind the scene will be placed along the walls. To protect the dancers from the crash and dampness of the waves, a white wooden picket fence will encircle the floor for a few steps before the billowing combers.

Beach chairs, tables and umbrellas will be placed along the edge of

Denies Science Opposes Society

Research Seminar Student Speaker Explains Its Close Relation to Life

"The apparent dissention which exists today between society and science," said Carmen Ciatteo "is based upon a misconstruing and false interpretation of facts and aims." This statement was made during the presentation of a paper, "The Influence of Science on Society" at the meeting of the Research Seminar last Thursday.

Ciatteo continued by pointing out that the apparent conflict was caused by the abuse rather than the use of science.

"However, an integral part of man is constituted by greed, jealousy, and an eternal struggle for power and self; and this base motivation is the principal cause in the production of social evils ascribed to science," he said. "It is thus seen that the use of science is not responsible for these conditions but rather the pathology rests upon the abuse of scientific accomplishments."

The next meeting of the seminar will be held on Thursday, Feb. 20, at 4:30 P. M. and will be devoted primarily to a presentation of a paper by John J. Bongiovanni, sophomore science man, upon evolution and the Darwinian theory of the Origin of the Species.

"This topic," states Rev. James A. Donnellon, O. S. A., moderator, will be a presentation of a subject which holds one of the spotlights in the scientific world of today, and thus will enable the student to become familiar with the topic in other than didactic measures."

Debate Here Next Monday

Beta Gamma to Meet Penn Evening School in Fourth League Contest; Princeton, Upsala on Schedule

Beta Gamma, varsity debating society, will engage Penn Evening School next Monday evening at 8:00 P. M. in Simpson hall. This will be the fourth debate for Beta Gamma in the schedule of the Philadelphia Forensic League.

The topic for the evening's debate is "Resolved: That the United States government should extend unlimited credit to England during the present conflict." Representing Villanova and arguing the negative will be David N. Reardon, junior in the commerce school and John P. Fullam, junior education student.

Four days later, on February 28, Beta Gamma will be host to the forensic society of Princeton University. The "Western Hemisphere Alliance" question will be argued; the negative side will be upheld by Villanova. On the same night another team from the college will travel to Upsala where they will argue the same question.

Thomas J. Moore, chairman of the debating society, has announced that plans are in the making for a dinner-dance to be conducted by the Philadelphia Forensic League. The social affair is to take place immediately following the close of the league's season.

At the dinner a loving cup will be presented to the highest standing member. In past years the social affair has been held at one of various schools which belong to the league. This year it is expected that Temple University will be host.

Villanova's team met the Scranton University debaters last Saturday afternoon in a no-decision debate in Simpson hall.

Tables Turned On Five Seniors

Practice Teachers at Local High Schools Forced to Solve Difficult — But Interesting — Problems

By JOHN P. FULLAM

For five of Villanova's seniors, the formal classroom side of college education is over. They now find the tables turned; instead of sitting back and "taking it all in," they must try to impart their knowledge to others, the adults of tomorrow.

They are Practice Teachers. They've been at it for two weeks now, and although their scholastic world is completely reversed, they remain outwardly unchanged—still just some of "the boys."

John McCann, Robert Schisler, Mark Fitzgerald, Andrea D'Angelo, and Ralph Bracken — or, rather, Mr. McCann, Mr. Schisler, etc. — have undergone some highly interesting experiences. The first three are at Radnor High School, while Upper Darby High is the scene of the activities of the latter two.

Why the Destraction?

Professor McCann was wondering one day what made his Radnor history class inattentive. Realizing full well that it couldn't possibly be his lecture, he sought some exterior cause and sure enough, there was one. An artist in a nearby room was hard at work painting a living model, female in character. And ever since then, little boys and girls, one room in Radnor High School has had its shades drawn all day long.

McCann also reports that in one of his History classes there are two English refugee children who tell all sorts of interesting stories

Education Is Preparation

THE MEANING of the present crisis across the seas is every day impressed upon the people of the American Union by the almost frantic expenditures in the industrial and labor circles of our nation, by the enactments of our administration, and by the periodic departure of "our boys" for training camps. An issue of concern to us and the other million like us, however, has not been so clearly defined, nor so concretely implied, as the importance of our "be prepared" campaign.

This question, which requests an answer through the voice of our government, can with candor be stated: "Is the provision in the Selective Service Act of 1940 in regard the deferment of students actually enrolled in colleges in September, 1940, until completion of the college year, but not later than July 1, 1941, worthy of extension and would it be favorable to the national welfare?"

Our answer is: yes.

The act itself carefully provides for a limited period of service; it regulates the number of men to be called annuallly; it provides for liberal deferment in order not to interfere with essential services.

It was ordained as a peace time measure, and it is imperative that we keep in mind that it was conceived under this condition. This fact destroys all credence that deferment will amount to exemption, for in time the student will be inducted to serve the limited period stipulated, and will receive no advantage in the time duration of his service.

Again, at the present time the most urgent need of our nation is not men, but materials, marine equipment, and mechanical instruments. The "slogan" of the present emergency should not be "we want military men," but "we want men who will insure the conservation of the family, the normal services of the government, and the various moral and educational services that are designed to make better and more intelligent citizens, and consequently better and more intelligent soldiers."

This last contention is well supported by the various military services in their preferred selection of officers from men with at least two years of college education. If a program interferes with the educational life of our nation, it can not be termed beneficial to the democratic form of government which we pride.

Anything which is detrimental to the ultimate welfare of our system of rule must of its nature be amended, or modified to fit our standards. Admitting these truths, it is only fair and just that this provision of the Selective Service Act be extended.

It's For YOUR Safety . . .

CAUSING considerable concern to authorities of the college and officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad at the present time is the serious problem of trespassing on the railroad tracks by Villanova students.

Large numbers daily cross the tracks on their way to the Post Office from Mendel hall, from Austin hall, and from the Commerce and Finance building.

The danger that lies in this trespass is quite evident. The Villanova station is located on the Main Line of the Pennsylvaina system and sees crack expresses pass at frequent intervals at speeds of 60 and 70 miles an hour. As many will testify by past experience, these electric trains are so silent as to give no warning of their approach.

When first they start their offenses, students "look carefully up and down" before crossing; but soon carelessness grows through many safe crossings and they no longer bother with precautions. In fact, the majority reach the point where they don't even look for a train until they are on the track itself!

With such a number crossing daily, and whether they are careful or not, "accidents" are bound to happen.

You can't win against tons of steel that are on top of you before you hear them.

So we're putting it to you in an editorial and through personal efforts of members of Student Council: we're asking you to use the tunnel every time rather than cross the tracks even once. We're doing this before promised radical means are employed by the College and the Railroad to stop the offenses—and, though we sincerely hope not, before bound-to-happen disasters occur.

Actually, the safe route is only a hundred or so feet longer; the "short-cut" is the way to a short life.

You Said It

(Weekly Poll of Student Opinion)

"Do you favor the adoption of the 'lend-lease' bill?"

This was the leading question asked Villanovans during the past week by the student poll interviewers. Answers received averaged:

65% NO

More than two-thirds of the student body do not approve of the adoption of this bill. The three largest schools on the campus turned in definite "no lend-lease bill" answers; only in the School of Arts and Education was there a majority of affirmative replies. Percentages by schools were:

	YES	NO
Commerce and Finance	31%	69%
Engineering	35%	65%
Science	35%	65%
Arts and Education	60%	40%

As can be seen, the engineers and science men hold opinions in the exact proportion as that of the total student body, while the commerce students only deviate 4% from the arithmetic average of all the students. The artsmen, however, register entirely different views on the subject by deviating 25% from the college average.

Relating directly to the desirability of the lend-lease bill considered in the first question was the second query:

"Do you consider the bill a step toward war?"

Total college answers were:

In making a cross-section count of the answers received to this question, it was found that 69% of the students who had acknowledged their approval of the bill in the first question also answered YES to the second, indicating clearly that, even though they favor the measure, they still believe the bill is a step toward war.

Of those students who disapproved of the bill in the first question, 76% admitted in the second question that their reason for holding the opinion of disapproval was that they consider the measure as likely to lead us nearer to war.

In taking note of the percentages expressed in this poll, it must be borne in mind that only 10% of the student body is interviewed weekly.

An Open Letter To An Old Grad

By Fr. Crawford

Feb. 15, 1941.

Dear Jim:

A FEW DAYS ago I met your son Jimmie for the first time. Although he has been a Freshman here since September our paths did not cross until now. You see, Jim, Villanova is a much larger place now than it was in 1920 when you were in my class. Jimmie tells me that you have never had an opportunity of returning to your Alma Mater since you left on Commencement Day in 1921. If you should return now you would find a great many changes. Many of the old familiar landmarks have gone and new buildings have been erected.

Undoubtedly you read of the fire in 1928 which destroyed the main wing and the west wing of the old College building. The dining-hall and good old "Garrett Hill" where you roomed as a "Frosh" were damaged but were soon repaired. Of course "Hogan's Alley" and "Murderers' Row" as well as "Philosophers' Row" literally went up in smoke, never to be replaced. The new college building, now known as Mendel Hall, after the great Augustinian biologist, is given over entirely to classrooms, laboratories, and offices. Fedigan Hall was built at that time to provide dormitory space. It is located on the site of the old tennis courts near the west gate.

Grows With Villanova

Do you remember the little "Pie Shop" that Louie had next to his barber shop, just outside the dining hall? Well, Louie has grown with Villanova and he now has a complete and modern cafeteria in the basement under the dining-hall. The boys can get anything from a "coke" to a full course dinner there, and believe me, his steaks are tender and juicy.

The old Academy where the Prep boys used to live is still doing excellent service as a "Frosh" dorm. But the "new gym" as it was in your day is used now for intramural basketball and has been replaced by a beautiful and spacious Field House located just west of the Stadium. Pardon me, I forgot that you have never seen the Stadium. It was built in 1925 and 1930 on the Pike east of Ithan Ave. I believe corn used to grow there in 1920.

There is a swimming-pool of regulation size connected to the Field House, which has a beautiful basketball floor where most of the varsity games are played. In your day there was no varsity team in basketball, but in spite of the few years that it has been a major sport, it has taken its place with baseball in helping to spread the fair name of Villanova in the athletic world.

You will be sorry to learn of the passing, several years ago, of Charlie McGeehan who turned out so many fine baseball teams here. His place has been ably filled by "Doc" Jacobs, one of his proteges and so one of our own alumni. The basketball team, too, is capably coached by "Al" Severance, another alumnus, whose record during the five years that he has been coaching stands at the amazing figure of .853.

C. and F. Largest Now. . . . .

Jimmie told me that he is taking the C. and F. course. I suppose you want him to learn something about business methods so that he can help you to expand the construction company you have so successfully developed away out there in the wide open spaces of Montana. That C. and F. course that Jimmie says he likes so well began just after you graduated and has developed under the guidance of Fr. Bartley until it is now the largest school on the campus. Like the graduates of the other schools at Villanova, the C. and F. alumni have found that they are well equipped to take their places in the world of business and make rapid progress towards successful careers.

So Jimmie is the eldest of your five children and the only boy. I am sure that you are a happy father and that you often look back upon your days here and thank God and your good Catholic parents for the golden opportunity of a Catholic education. The Math that you learned from Fr. O'Leary, who is still here, the Roofs and Bridges given by Dean Humphrey who has passed on, the Heat and Light of Prof. Sweeney, who is now in industry, and the Electricity and Magnetism of "Bill" Slavin (he's still teaching it), have no doubt served you well.

Catholic Tradition Remains

But the Catholic atmosphere and background as well as the four

Wildcat Whirl

By Dave Reardon

NOW that you young swains have valentined your favorite lassies, don't forget to collar her for the Senior Prom this Friday. Should be a swell dance with a smooth band. 'Nuff said.

MUTTERINGS:

Tom Morgan, Tony Anderson and Bert Goldberg, three commerce he-men, were seen purchasing huge, red, silk valentines in Bryn Mawr, the sissies. . . Tom McKimmey and Frank Buckley, after traveling from one end of the city to the other via the trams, were pretty tired of it all. Tom disgustedly queried, "Say, who laid out this city, anyhow?"; to which Frank replied, "Nobody, it ain't quite dead yet." . .

The Rosemont-Immaculata basketball game (it looked more like volleyball), induced droves of the lads to yonder campus where a ravenous good time was had by all the wolves, including Pholeric, Zamlynski, O'Connor, Beasley, Dillon, Dougherty, Rafetto, etc., etc., etc. . . At the P. K. P. initiation, Bill Doyle among others couldn't sit still because he had amps in his pants. . .

Johnny Sandonato is back in school after a lapse of a year. . . Two debonair frosh, Bob White and Joe Daley, New Yorked it last week-end and took in the Glen Island Casino with Charley Spivak's orchestra. Barbara's car sure came in handy, didn't it, Bob?

ODE:

Whatever trouble Adam had,
No man in days of yore
Could say when Adam told a joke,
"I've heard that one before."

NECH-NACHS:

Bernie Swartz hopes he has conciliated things with Ialine from Atlantic City. . . Bob Hursh insists he's not fat, he just has broad shoulders. . . Neil O'Mahoney, Don Kehoe, Frank Bagot and Walt Mason took in "The Philadelphia Story" matinee last week. . . Ed Eichman started out for a night's bridge in St. David's that turned out to be an extended soiree. . .

Jim McMenamin and Herm Steiret should get together and decide which one of them is going to take Peggy to the Senior Ball. . . Immaculata's tea-dance was a Wildcat success; in fact, there were so many fellows and girls there that you had to go outside to change your mind. . . Dan Haley's housewarming party reached a kindling point when the host walked in with Madie. . . Phil Malarkey recently made and broke three consecutive blind dates. Three strikes and you're out, Phil. . .

Bob Ayerle should get on the ball concerning the beauteous addition to the population of his neighborhood . . . Vince Cassivielli, in accord with his science course, has become socially-minded about a nurse's home in Philly. . . Stan Stress has been added to the list of gridiron Ivy Leaguers. . . Al Skaf thought the bat that flew in the chapel last Wednesday night was a carrier pigeon bringing chapel cards from the infirmary. . .

Vince "Loopie" Murphy, alias the "Legal Eagle," received his monicker for more reasons than one from the Fedigan Irish Colony. . . Where do Barney "Character" MacAloon and Anselmo "Summer School" Manitou go every Friday P. M.? Bloodhounds have lost their trail somewhere in mid-Philly.

Just as we never pass out any knocks in this column, so we're always willing to give a guy a break. Under the heading of "break department" might go a notice that, contrary to previously printed information, Art Somers, who "does little flying at present," does not do so "partly by request of the Civil Aeronautics Board." In fact, the board leaned the other way and has requested his active cooperation after he graduates.

Meet The Boys: Among The Seniors Who Head Our List, Jim And "Errol" Can't Be Missed

By BOB CANFIELD

AFTER spending many long hours roving the campus in search of that elusive sportsman, James Forkin, we finally traced our quarry to the Alumni hall gym where he was busily engaged endeavoring to prove that Fedigan's basketball team is the best team in the league. After much persuasion, Jim finally consented to enumerate his vital statistics.

According to Jim, "It all started on August 23, 1919, in Netcong, New Jersey." Early in his career he gave promise of an adventurous life, for by the time he was two years old, he and his family had migrated to the heart of the coal regions and settled in Scranton, Pa. Cathedral Catholic Grammar school taught our boy his three R's.

Stars in Basketball

Next he entered St. Thomas High where his true self began to emerge. Here he played on a championship basketball team for three seasons and was elected captain in his senior year. Jim also played varsity football to use up his spare time.

Not content with athletic achievements, he turned to politics and became president of his freshman class and vice-president in his sophomore year.

On the sage advice of his brother, Joseph, a Villanova alumnus of the class of 1935, Jim made that memorable journey from Scranton to Villanova for the first time. Continuing to show his prowess on the court, he was a member of the freshman basketball team, has played in the intramurals for the past three years, and was voted one of the best players in the league.

Frat Reorganizer

Perhaps his greatest contribution to our alma mater was his invaluable aid in reorganizing Epsilon Phi Theta, arts fraternity. The success of this fraternity's dinner last year was largely due to his efforts as chairman of the committee.

This man of the hour has also been an active member of the Sanctuary Society for four years and is its present vice-president. To top the list, he was class treasurer in his junior year. His skill with a hammer and saw will also be attested to by Bob Dooley, with whom he is constructing the sets for the coming Belle Masque show, "Margin For Error" (maybe we'll get a ducat for this plug).

Despite his varied activities, and his desperate struggles with French and Latin, this "Scrantonotable" quently adds his name to the honor roll.

Open to Offers

Although registered, Jim has not yet received his draft questionnaire and prefers to await the advice of Uncle Sam before deciding on a career.

When we carefully broached the subject of social life, Jim was as dark and mysterious as his hometown coal mines. He left it up to his arch-conspirator and boon companion, Johnny Green. According to Johnny, his voice is not unknown to the halls of Rosemont and Immaculata. We might even go out on a limb and mention "Tex" or Evelyn as conspicuous names on his calendar.

Jim's sartorial appearance has led his many friends to give him the name of that famous comic strip character, "The Spirit." Attired in his new green Stetson and dark overcoat none can deny the resemblance.

IF we are to believe the rumors that have been cast our way recently, whenever a Rosemont or Immaculata lass hears the name Errol, she immediately expects to meet none other than Daniel A. O'Mahoney. For here we have a genuine man-about-town.

"Sonny" O'Mahoney (that's what his father calls him) first saw the light of day on August 6, 1919, in that mecca of New York commuters, Plainfield, N. J.

For the past three years Dan has shared his room with previously mentioned Jim Forkin, their present abode being 207 Fedigan hall. Despite the unceasing efforts of several of our secret operatives, we have been able to compile very little information concerning "Sonny's" early life.

Scholastic Life Begins

Suffice it to say that he toddled his way through the Maxon School and graduated from the Plainfield Public High School. Here he met another Villanovan-to-be, husky Joe Camarda of the science school, the paddle wielder of Lambda Kappa Delta (ask last night's pledges).

Dan is enrolled in the pre-law course, but rather than go to law school, he has a secret desire to follow in his father's footsteps and enter the dining-car business. Who has never heard of the famous O'Mahoney Dining Cars?

Strictly a social-lion, Dan has restricted his extra-curricular activities to allow frequent visits to other local colleges. His interest in classical music is evidenced by his regular attendance at the music seminar; and when he isn't listening to Beethoven or Wagner, Dan agrees with "The Spirit" that T. Dorsey is "tops."

Night and Day Scholar

A writer for the VILLANOVAN in his freshman year, he became interested in (and I quote) "social reconstruction" and aided R. Deverall in publishing a Catholic action magazine. At the end of his freshman year, Dan transferred to the business school and has been working overtime to make up his credits. He is one of the few students who has the distinction of having attended both Saturday school and Night school. Dan's name recently appeared on the senior honor roll of the commerce and finance school. Never one to allow his social life to interfere with his religious duties, Dan has been Sacristan for the past four years.

Mt. Pleasant finds him a regular visitor during the summer months and here his six feet, one inch and 180 lbs. stand him in good stead when he indulges in his two favorite sports: swimming and lacrosse. At this point we come to what may be called a paradoxical situation. His roommate tells us that he not only has never swum in the Villanova pool, but he has never even seen it.

Business and Pleasure

For the past two summers Dan has also clerked in a grocery store. It has been said that, "with his line he could sell oil-burners to the South Sea Islanders." All agree that he is a businessman of the first order.

From what little we could learn from this secretive gentleman and his conferees, we find that Briarcliff Manor, and Chestnut Hill loom large on his social horizon. Specifically mentioned were the president of the Chestnut Hill student council, Kay M., and a certain little miss named "Fillette," nor has Dan ever been known to go unnoticed while in Bryn Mawr. But "Sonny" decided all this was stepping on too dangerous ground and bid a firm adieu.

For Inside Story of A Great Time, Let's Peek At "Joe College's" Diary

By JOE McCABE

IF "Joe College" were ever to enter his thoughts and secret ambitions in a diary and if he were faithful with his entries, the notation for next Saturday, Feb. 22, would prove most interesting, particularly if he were in attendance at the Villanova Senior Ball. And so if one would look closely enough we catch a glance at page 52 and discover . . .

"Dear Diary:

Well, here it is Saturday morning, and if the thousand demons who are playing the "Anvil Chorus" on my skull will cease, maybe I can remember last night and all that happened.

A Heavenly Daze

Tessie arrived around five o'clock and she looked more beautiful than Lana Turner, although that may sound like stretching a point after so many weeks of monastic existence. After seeing her safely situated I returned to school and proceeded to dress—yes, I said dress, even though the room looked like Macy's bargain-counter with ties, shirts, etc., draping the furniture.

After completing the arduous task there still remained time before seeing Tessie again, so detouring I met some of the boys and as a result picked her up fifteen minutes late. At that point it was up to the Prom to make her forget my tardiness.

And that Gym!

Norman Bel Geddes and Hollywood have reputations for doing things on a big scale but they're small time compared to the artists responsible for the transformation of the Gym.

During past years entrance to the dance was an ordinary process, but not last night. Even before we reached the lobby we saw powerful spotlights criss-crossing in the sky, and once inside we were aware of a multitude of soft lights and effective decoration in the usually drab lobby. If this weren't enough, once entrance was made to the "ballroom" we were transplanted.

Florida on the Main Line

Here it was February in Philadelphia, but you'd think it was June in Palm Beach. To begin with, along the walls there were cabanas in back of which mountains of blue waves gave invitation "to come on in." Tessie and I sauntered around and found ourselves sitting beneath a multi-colored beach umbrella and all the while I'm acting like a sightseeing guide at Coney Island.

Since this was a dance we thought it about time to get whirling around to Bob Chester's music. You know, that boy Chester really has a smooth band and little Betty Bradley, his vocalist, almost caused me to lose my neck. They say that she's quite a health addict, even going so far as to get the members of the band to take up handball and swimming.

Over Too Soon

All too soon it came the time for the band to pack up their tools and for the "summer colonists" to go forth to brave the cool night. Poor Tessie, I don't think she'll get over it for quite a while, possibly due to the fact that she didn't think such a swell time would be had by one person.

Well, that about concludes yesterday's doings which, as you can see, were a bit out of the ordinary. Now where's the aspirin so recovery can begin?"

A COLLEGE GIRL'S SPARE TIME

The editor of this paper took care of a letter from Rosemont last Saturday addressed to a non-existent column, "Listening-in." It purported to give us a touching little story of what a few unknowns considered news of the utmost importance: one of their sophomores is "that way" about one of Villanova's muscular football heroes.

Usually, neither we nor our columnists would mention such a silly epistle. We don't give a good gosh darn about the struggle for recognition by sophomoric — and we don't mean "wise fool"—Rosemont persons who can find no better way to waste their many spare hours.

But this particular missive showed a much lower level of intelligence than those written by the average college girl.

We thought we'd mention it to you men of Villanova to let you know how we feel about mutton-heads who write letters to columns that don't exist, fill it with pointless trash, and not only lack the universally-recognized good manners of signing it but call themselves by the now-trite appellation of "The Fifth Columnists."

Also took it out with the rest of the stuff in the waste-basket.

Tally Ho!

Friday night's the nite;

When Belle Air's steamer sails
With V. C. men in tails.

Friday night's the nite;
Five dollars per is right.
Calm down, you'll lose your frown
When you see her brand new gown.

Friday night's the nite
You'll find your heart's delight;
Bob Chester with baton in hand,
And Betty Bradley on the stand.

What's the Story:

A recent issue of the Crimson-White, student weekly of the University of Alabama, published a schedule for their forensic group. At first sight, the schedule appeared to be the ideal football schedule.

The debaters will meet such teams as those of Tulane, Southern Methodist, Notre Dame, University of Vermont, Northwestern, Miami and the University of Florida. We agree with them whole-heartedly when they write:

"A well-rounded forensic schedule it is—one which should prove to the other colleges of this country that Alabama is definitely at the top in debating."

As a matter of fact, this column suggests that you be given a bid to the Rose Bowl if you succeed in running that gauntlet undefeated!

Lyrical words of wisdom are here reprinted from Northeastern News, Northeastern U., Boston, Mass., for the specific benefit of the "Main Line Cafe Society," or the Villanova seniors come Friday night.

Say it with flowers,
Say it with drink,
But never, oh never Say it with ink!

'NOTHER POME

"I draw the line at kissing,"
Said she with fiery intent.
But he was a football player
So over the line he went.

"Welcome" to Hanover:

Dartmouth College is to be congratulated on the success of its thirty-first Winter Carnival. The annual event, a credit to American educational institutions, arouses international interest.

The Dartmouth, oldest college newspaper in America, deserves mention of its individualistic manner of welcoming this year's Carnival guests:

"They're coming again, 959 strong.

Some of them are wearing those (censored) red and green full-length stockings that Life advocates. Some are veterans. Some never saw a houseparty before. And some of them just read Cosmopolitan. They travel amazing distances to get here from Oshkosh, Kalamazoo and Hoboken, and Hanover gives up to them restaurants, dorms, fraternity houses, ski slopes and students.

A few guests have reached Hanover already; today will see the deluge. Formal dances, barn dances, skis await them.

It won't be a sewing circle."

Yours Truly's a Junior:

From last week's Rosemont Rambler we take two instances of poems we think worthy of note. They were written by Rosemont freshmen under the strain of an English literature course:

"On a white fence there sat a bird,
His words were full of strife,
Because his enemy, the cat,
Had eaten-up his wife."

Math Club

Program for Second Term Lists Illustrated Lecture and Student Talks

Evening meetings held on the second and fourth Fridays of each month will be the main activities during this part of the year for the Mathematics Club.

Donald Klein, sophomore engineer, presented the first of this new series last Friday evening, Feb. 14. His lecture, dealing with "Number Systems," was intended to illustrate the various systems of numbering which have been in vogue in the past. He also demonstrated the relationships between these systems and the system of numbering which we have at present.

Highlight of future meetings will be an illustrated lecture on Feb. 28 by Doctor Schilling, a member of the faculty of St. Joseph's College. His lecture will deal with "Pedal Curves," a method of synthetic projective geometry. Plans have been made by Joseph Dorsey, chairman of the program committee, to have representatives of the Math Club of the College of Chestnut Hill present at the meeting.

Next in order on the list of speakers will be Thomas C. Muraski, sophomore engineer, who will talk on "Non-Euclidean Geometry." Following him, on March 28, Edward Manderfield, another sophomore engineer, will discuss "Operation Methods of Heavyside Calculus."

In April, Joseph Dorsey, junior engineer, will demonstrate "Practical Applications of the Operation Methods of Heavyside Calculus." Last speaker on the program, James Donnelly, sophomore engineer, will speak of the "Principles of Stereographic Projection."

The annual banquet of the Math Club is tentatively scheduled for the week of April 25. At it, keys will be distributed to sophomores meriting them.

Mr. Emil Amelotti, M. S., moderator of the club, was assisted in the organization of the term's program by Dr. Rudolph Drenick, instructor in mathematics and physics.

about air-raid shelters, evacuations, and conditions in France.

Getting Familiar

Professor Fitzgerald, whose field is mathematics and the sciences, was at the blackboard one day when he was swiftly brought from the abstract world of x's and y's by a shout of "Fitz!" which almost threw his class into an uproar. An "understanding" with the miscreant was speedily reached.

Co-education present no serious problem to most of the incipient pedagogues. A few said that "Oh, maybe some of 'em give ya the eye now and then," and one remarked that they talked as continuously as the boys, but not too much more so.

The importance of first impressions was noticeable to all and they could almost feel the pupils "trying to figure you out."

Under New Plan

D'Angelo teaches English and German, Bracken teaches English and Social Studies, and Leonard Kolenda, who has not yet begun, will teach the latter subjects at Bridgeport High.

The new plan for Practice Teaching was instituted in the Education Department last year. By it, the seniors in the department whose grades are sufficiently high and who have completed enough school work devote the entire second semester to teaching in one of three nearby high schools. They take part in the activities of the school, have the same hours, and in general are on the same plane as the regular teachers in the school.

Program Successful

Each is under the supervision of a teacher in the same field and each is required to make reports to Dr. William H. McHugh, head of the Villanova Education Department. However, they are "on their own" in most of their classes and, in addition, have charge of several study-halls.

Many letters of commendation have been received by the Education Department on the records established by last year's practice teachers. "Courteous, appreciative, and adaptable," said one letter of Alfred Wood and Michael Sabrinsky. And on the whole, the comments indicate that Villanova's teaching program is definitely successful.

And the comments of the subjects of the program, or victims, depending on the view-point, all add up to this: it's fun to turn the tables on your teachers.

Bert Passanante, '39, Finishes Air Corps Basic Course At Randolph Field On Way To Army Flying Commission

Former "Villanovans" Leader Nears End of Intensive Training

A graduate of the class of '39 will soon be wearing Army Air Corps wings, the coveted emblem of Uncle Sam's fighting eagles.

Bartholomeo A. Passanante, a resident of Philadelphia who entered Villanova in the School of Science and graduated with a B. S. degree, completed his basic flight training at Randolph Field, Texas, on February 7.

After graduation, Bert entered the University of St. Louis School of Medicine, but became interested in flying and filed application to become a flying cadet. Upon passing the rigid physical and mental examination required, he was assigned to Randolph Field for primary training last fall.

BERT PASSANANTE

Having completed this primary course at the "West Point of the Air" Saturday week ago, he, with 334 fellow-students, has been assigned to a final ten-weeks advanced course at Kelly Field. When this latter course is completed, he will be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant in the Air Corps and will be awarded the much-sought emblem of military pilots, the pair of gold wings.

The United States now has more than 10,000 trained airplane pilots, but an additional 12,000 officer-pilots are to be trained in the coming year, according to Air Corps plans. Each of these pilots-to-be will be given the same course of instruction that Passanante has received at Randolph Field.

Intensive Basic Course

Bert started his flight training last September at one of the 18 primary flying schools located in various sections of the country. During his ten-weeks course at this school, he logged 65 flying hours, about half of it solo. This training was done in a rugged primary training plane powered with a 200 horsepower motor.

Late in November he reported to the "West Point of the Air" with the rest of his class for basic instruction in a racy low-wing monoplane, powered with 450 "horses." He logged an additional 70 hours aloft while at Randolph, mastering such maneuvers as chandelles, loops, spins, and snap rolls. He also got his first taste of night flying at the Texas airdrome, spending three hours on landings and take-offs from the darkened flying field.

Commission in Sight

the final advanced training in navigation, both day and night, advanced instrument flying, and formation flying. Then will come the golden bars of Second Lieutenants, wings, and duty with bombardment or pursuit squadrons alongside veteran Air Corps officers.

While at Villanova, the future "eagle" was by no means "grounded" in the way of extra curricular activities. He was copy editor of the VILLANOVAN on the Tofani-Howe staff and served on the Junior Prom and Belle Air Ball committees.

Bert was leader of the "Villanovans" orchestra and an outstanding member of the college band, acting as leader on various occasions, notably that of the Manhattan game in his senior year when he presented his baton to Mayor LaGuardia on the steps of New York's City Hall.

"Runway Clear — Take Off!"

Cadets at Uncle Sam's giant "West Point of the Air", at Randolph Field, are poised for flight in these low-wing monoplanes with 450-horsepower motors, used exclusively for basic training at the Texas airdrome. They get 70 hours flight time in these craft, more than half of it solo.

A. S. M. E. Holds "Student Night"

N. E. Funk, vice-president of the Philadelphia Electric Company, will be the principal speaker at the annual student's night of the Philadelphia section of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers next Tuesday, Feb. 25.

At this meeting, to be held in the Engineers' Club in Philadelphia, student members of the A. S. M. E. will be entertained with a dinner and Mr. Funk's illustrated lecture on "Modern Power."

Students from Villanova will be present, together with students from Swarthmore College, U. of Penn, U. of Delaware, Haverford College, and the Drexel Institute of Technology.

The next field trip of the Villanova chapter of the society will take place on Thursday, Feb. 27, when the students will travel to the main plant of the Schuylkill Power Company in Philadelphia. There they will view the recently-completed superimposed turbine as it was described to them by Mr. Ernest Hopping, chief engineer in charge of operations at the Philadelphia Electric Company, last Tuesday. Another trip is planned in the near future to Connewingo Dam on Route 1 near Baltimore.

The local chapter is also making plans to attend the annual convention of the society in New York City during the last week of April. Members are preparing papers, one of which will be delivered at the convention before the assembled representatives of approximately twenty engineering colleges and universities in the East.

Interview K. G. S. Applicants

The Board of Admissions of the Kappa Gamma Sigma Society will meet tomorrow at 1 P. M. to interview the applicants who wish to join the society.

To be eligible for admission, individuals must have a good scholastic standing and must either have taken or be taking one year of college physics. The applicants will be decided upon after they have been passed by the offices of the Vice-President, Chaplain, and Dean of the School of Science.

Immediately following the acceptance of new members, the election of the society's officers will take place.

Relations Members Discuss Far East

Present conditions existing in the Far East will be analyzed at a meeting of the International Relations club to be held tomorrow in Simpson hall.

At the last meeting, Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., moderator, gave an historical sketch of the events which led directly to the present conditions of unrest in the far eastern nations.

Fr. McCarthy explained the unfavorable social conditions existing in China during the last century, the general disunity of the country, and the systematic rise of Chiang Kai-Shek which resulted in his control over the major part of China.

Pass L. K. D. Initiation

Last night, in the old gymnasium of Alumni hall, pledges to Lambda Kappa Delta, science fraternity, were initiated and accepted into the fraternity. Run under the direction of seniors Joseph Camarda and Joseph Clarken, the traditional tests were applied to candidates.

years of religious instruction that you had, these I am sure now appear much more important than they did twenty years ago. The outward appearance of Villanova has changed, many of the men of a quarter of a century ago are gone, but the tradition of Catholic education and the fundamental principles of Catholic living are still to be found here. And God grant that Villanova will long continue to cherish these principles and transmit them to her loyal sons.

Good luck, Jim, and God bless you.

Start $40,000 Drive Next Monday

Dinners Will Be Held for Alumni Class Agents During Campaign to Equip Library

The Alumni Centennial Fund drive of $40,000 to equip the proposed new library will open next Monday when every graduate receives notice of it through the "Alumnus." The committee in charge of the drive will follow this up on March 3 and 10 by mailing literature to keep the members of the alumni body informed of the progress of the fund.

During the campaign, which will rely heavily for its success on the class members in charge of 20 of their classmates in their vicinity, progress will be checked at short intervals until the drive closes on May 1.

All class agents living in the vicinity of New York City will attend a dinner at one of that city's leading hotels on March 18. The following night, the agents from the Philadelphia area will also have a dinner. Prominent members of the alumni and the Augustinian order will speak at these affairs, among them J. Stanley Smith, Esq., Martin J. McLaughlin, Very Rev. John T. Sheehan, O. S. A., and Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A.

The third and final mailings will be sent to the alumni on April 7 and 21 and the class agents will solicit the men assigned them for a final check-up. Each agent will make a report at a smoker on April 7.

Each alumnus will be requested to pledge as much as he can afford. If he so desires, he may make a down payment and spread the balance over a period of two years.

Book Club Weighs Worth Of Modern "Best Seller"

Postponing their scheduled trip to a book bindery in Philadelphia last Wednesday until a later date, members of the Book Club, instead, participated in a lengthy discussion of the qualities of the best seller in comparison with other works of literature.

Decision of the group was that "books-of-the-day" are not usually high in literary value, but attain their status through skillful advertising and social demands on the reader.

FRANK LEAHY went back home to South Bend last Saturday and affixed his signature to a lengthy-termed contract. Amid the thunderous din of the Notre Dame student body, young Mr. Leahy, ex-Boston College coach, stepped from the train and once again surveyed the grounds where he was a student some 11 years previous. In fact, Frank Leahy was once a member of Knute Rockne's immortal eleven of 1930.

And so the biggest sports story of the month reached its end and the new coach of the Irish, who declares, "It was my duty to go back" begins his duties on the Indiana campus. But up in Beantown where Frank and his Boston College Eagles really had the hearts of all the Bostonians, all doesn't go too well. What student body wouldn't be a bit disheartened when a coach who has compiled such a record as he has, and is the apple-in-the-eye of all the old grads, just packs up and goes the way of fate.

Cycle Begins

Thus the unending cycle of new coaches begins again. The post at Boston College has been deserted but it will be filled. Who will take over? Undoubtedly, a name-coach must fill the position and quite certain he will be a Notre Dame man. Again the problem arises, and the newspapers pick it up and start their rumors. Telephones and telegrams will issue back and forth from the front office of Boston College and Boston's tranquility will be replaced with a hum of fervor and excitement.

Our Mr. Smith of the Main Line didn't go to N. D., and we did have a slight fear that he might have. But soon over-wrought stories will find their way back into the sports pages to the effect that Clipper Smith is a likely prospect for the B. C. post and that Villanova will need a new mentor. Well, then, we might dig-up a pipe-dream and see what stirs in the minds of others. If Clipper did go, then Villanova would need a new coach. And where would he come from? Well, of course, from another college and then following the course, the other college would be minus a coach —and so on into the night. Now you see what we mean by an unending cycle.

Villanova's men of the hardwoods who have donned the court for the past three months in their Blue and White jerseys can take a well-deserving bow tomorrow night when they close a successful but unpublicized season against Loyola of Chicago. It was only a short season of sixteen games and dropping but two games so far leaves a handsome margin of profit.

Catholic Swim Meet Draws Sixty Teams Here On Saturday

Leading high and prep school swimming teams in the East will meet this Saturday in the Villanova Catholic Interscholastic Swimming Meet, to be held in the college swimming pool.

St. Francis Prep of Brooklyn will attempt to annex its fifth consecutive title in this, the seventh annual meet. The opposition this year promises to be the best since the meet was inaugurated. Philadelphia entries to be watched are West Catholic and Northeast Catholic, currently pacing the Catholic League.

Last year the "Frannies" had things their own way winning easily with 32 points. North Catholic took the runner-up position with 25 points, while Brooklyn Poly finished third, scoring 21. Seton Hall and St. Thomas divided the fourth spot with 17 points apiece.

No marks fell in last year's meet and none were tied. Some of the more important ones still standing are the times for the 200 yard relay and the 100 yard free style of 1.44.8 and 55.8 seconds, respectively. St. Francis Prep holds the former, while Henry Steinglass of La Salle and "Hank" Donahue of St. John's Brooklyn share the latter.

Curtain-Closer Features Loyola Tomorrow Night; Seniors In Finale

Basketball Squad Reach Their Goal Against Strong Chicago Team at Field House on Wednesday, Co-Captains Yund and Nugent Bid Farewell to Fans

By JACK DUDLEY

Villanova basketball, enjoying the bright light of public attention, bows out tomorrow evening when the successful Blue quintet, with a record of 13 games and 2 defeats make their last stand against the invading Loyola University of Chicago in the Main Line Field House.

In this curtain-closer comes the finish of six varsity men who have reached the climax on the hardwoods. Co-captains Chuck Yund and Paul Nugent, along with Ernie Robinson, Len Kolenda, Barney McAloon and John Murphy will play their last game for Villanova with a jam-packed house watching.

Loyola U., who defeated the 'Cats in 1939 in Chicago will bring their touring squad into the Field House boasting one of the strongest quintets in the Mid-west. Having no gridiron squad this Jesuit Institution concentrates its time and energy on basketball — and wtih marvelous results.

Title Holders

The Ramblers who display the colors of Maroon and Gold are claimants to several prominent basketball titles. From 1936 to 1939 they were the Catholic University Champions of Illinois and in '39 went to the finals of the Intercollegiate Championship Invitation Tournament where they met Long Island University. In that Madison Square Garden attraction they lost to L. I. U., which was the first defeat of that season. Previous to that they had captured twenty-one games in a row.

The probable starting lineup for the Ramblers will have Captain George Wenskus and Mickey Rottner, a junior and the leading scorer on the team at the guard positions. Six foot six inch Mike Dougherty will be at center. Holding down the forward posts will be Dan Cahill, a junior, and Sophomore Jack Stanton, once at Villanova, who, breaking into the lineup two weeks ago, has ben a consistent high scorer. It will be interesting to watch this boy against his former mates.

Defeated 'Cats Before

Loyola, probably the best team in Chicago, is featured in the double-header bills at the Coliseum. In the 1939 season the team scored 1029 points in 22 games, more than in any other season in their history. The Ramblers play a fast brand of basketball, featuring plenty of short snappy passes, and intricate ball handling. The last meeting of the two schools was a decisive 51-32 win for the Ramblers. Present Wildcat seniors playing their last game will be out to avenge this defeat occurring in their sophomore year.

In fifteen games this year, Villanova has come out ahead thirteen times, losing only to two of the leading teams in the East. Still ranked as one of the best teams in this part of the country, the 'Cats are anxious to top their intersectional rivals. Although they will miss the scoring ability of Bob Kelty, they have in Dick Gray an aggressive type of player who will help solve the Loyola attack.

Two Great Stars

Taking the floor for the last time in their collegiate careers are two of the greatest stars Villanova has ever known, Co-Captains Chuck Yund and Paul Nugent. For three years these two have been steady varsity performers. In their final year they have turned in many victories by their brilliant floorwork and high scoring. Bowing out also are Ernie Robinson and Len Kolenda, two valuable reserves.

It it hoped that when the Field House lights are dimmed for the last time this season, into the record books will go fourteen wins for a successful season.

Their Courting Days Are Over

'Cat Quintet Sinks Carnegie Tech With Thrilling Last-Half Comeback

By JACQUES MAUCH

An unpredictable Wildcat quintet roared from behind last Thursday night to overcome a 19-point, halftime deficit and whip a weak but inspired Carnegie Tech five, 40-36. After trailing at the half, 28-9, a score which left the 1500-odd spectators mumbling among themselves in mingled surprise and disappointment, the quint of Dick Gray, Bill Woods, Art Spector, Chuck Yund, and Paul Nugent provided plenty of excitement with their steady, accurate bombardment on the Tartan basket in the second half. At the same time they applied a defense that was very annoying to the visitors and which permitted them to score only twice from the field.

It was co-captain Paul Nugent, leading scorer for the Wildcats who started the rally by dropping in a pair of goals. These coupled with 2 goals and 3 fouls by Woods and Yund and Spector's three charity tosses brought the count to 28-23 before the visitors could score a point.

Tartans Weaken

Carnegie maintained a five point advantage until the score reached 32-27. Then Gray scored on a set shot and Yund followed on a beautiful break down the center, bringing the count to 32-31. With six minutes remaining Spector put the Cats ahead 33-32 when he scored on a pass from Gray. From here on they never relinquished the lead, and a goal by Yund and a pair of fouls by Nugent in the final two minutes sewed up the victory for the Blue and White.

The first half started in quite the reverse manner. After Ernie Robinson's opening foul Randy Burch, Tartan captain, snapped three quick lay-ups through the strings to make it 6-1 before the Wildcats knew what happened. They increased this to 9-3, but Fred Gerland, playing his best game of the season, kept the home team in the game with two goals and a foul.

'Cats Come Back

With the Tartans leading 12-8 the first team which had remained on the bench from the start, were rushed in and then the anomalous situation was created. Carnegie proceeded to rack up sixteen points while holding the 'Cats to one lone foul. Conspicuous in this splurge were Burch with 5 points, and Smith and Neiderberger with 4 apiece. Incidentally Captain Burch was the evening's high man with eleven points on 5 goals and one charity toss. He scored all his markers in the first half. Nugent led the Wildcat scorers with eight points. Close behind were Gerland and Yund with seven each followed by Gray and Spector with six points apiece.

The only explanation of the lop-sided half-time score was that the visitors were definitely "on," everything they threw up went in, while the over-confident Wildcats couldn't seem to find the basket. No doubt they missed the fine defensive play of their regular forward, Bob Kelty, who was injured in the last game.

Call For Boxers

A call has been made by the two directors of the forthcoming Intramural Boxing and Wrestling Show, Fathers, McKee and Dunne, to the effect that all those who are interested in becoming entrants in the tournament should submit their names to them. All divisions of the boxing show are still open with the weights ranging from lightweight to heavyweight, and also the wrestling program is still incomplete and welcomes all matmen.

Smith Makes Initial Call For Gridmen

By JACK COLEMAN

Blue and White draft-threatened gridders will begin Spring practice the latter part of this week, it was announced by Coach "Clipper" Smith through Assistant Coach Vince McNally.

The first call will come for freshmen backfield aspirants and the linemen for indoor workouts. These exercises will continue till about the first of March.

Then the varsity candidates will combine with the freshman outdoors, in the most strenuous session that has ever been carried on here at Villanova.

Eight Graduate

Graduation will erase eight names from next year's game programs. Those receiving diplomas this spring will be Captain Nick Basca, smart left halfback; Pete Yankauskas, a fullback sidelined by injuries most of last year; Bill Piscione and Ed Collins, mainstays in the center of the line at guards; Stan Stress and Lindy Kolenda at ends; Ben Morkum at quarterback; and Harry Dhue at tackle.

Veterans who will return in the backfield for another season of "swing time" football are: Sal Rosato, George Smith, Joe Behot, Bill Howlett, Tom Morgan, Joe Yednock, Ben Danik, and Ted Bickey who is expected to come through in great style next year.

Returning linesmen are: Elk Murray, Steve Pritko, Tony Anderson, Paul Stenn, Ed Kasky, Sam Bray, Ed Korisky, Joe Neiman, Bill Prohovich and Roy Simonson.

Versatile Freshman

Members of this year's freshman team are expected to see a lot of action as sophomores next year. Among these are: Joe Pezelsky, a very fast back, Joe Sullivan and Lou DePalo, a pair of fine ends; Zig Zamslinski and Joe Koproski, two better-than-average fullbacks; a pair of centers in Dick Baraldi and Jim Magee; Gabe Mosca, a promising punter; Harry Simonsen, Charles Vogt and John Kozlowski at tackles; Joe Buckinmaier, Bob

Nugent Takes Lead

Paul Nugent took over the lead in the individual scoring parade of the basketball Wildcats last week. His fourteen game total of 116 points represents an average of 8.3 per contest. Following in close pursuit is the former leader, Chuck Yund, with 114 points in fourteen contests. His game average is 8.1. Next in line is Bill Wood who has a fourteen game aggregate of 103 points.

Following is a tabulation of those who have scored 40 points or more:

League In Mix-Up As Mendel Leads In Final Drive

First Place Changes Hands For Third Consecutive Week; Austin's Double Loss Takes Highlight of Games

The fast-moving, hard-fighting, Mendel Residents' basketball team forged into the lead in the final lap of the Intramural Basketball Championship as they toppled over the first place Austin Hall and the second place Mendel Day Hops during the past week's campaign.

Led by their sharp shooting guards, Andy Mante and Kenny Byrne, the freshmen downed their fellow Mendelites, the Day Students, by a 37-22 score. The Residents led throughout the game, taking a 21-16 lead at tho half and added 16 more in the next half while holding their opponents to one field goal and four foul shots. Depersio was the mainstay of the losers, playing a fine game and garnering 9 points.

Austin Loses Lead.

Next to bow before the league leaders were the Austin Firemen. Playing a rough-and-tumble game in which there was plenty of action and thrilling play, Austin took a 45-32 trimming to drop down into a tie for third place. There were 28 fouls called in the game, 14 on each team. Of these only 13 were completed, 8 by Austin and 5 by Mendel. Once again the stellar Andy Mante carried the freshmen through, piling up 16 points and playing a bang-up game. Mendel got off to a good start and led all the way taking the lead at 18-16 at the half. The closest Austin came was within one point in the second half and then the freshmen dropped 6 points in a row to forge ahead again and win 37-22.

Alumni Hall added to the downfall of Austin by handing them a 55-43 setback despite the valiant attempt of Dan Keating to stem the tide of the Alumni attack. "Big Dan" rang up 19 points against the freshmen but Alumni couldn't be held in check as Pete Hind garnered 15 and Molnor 10 to lead the freshmen. Father Dunne's Greenies gained a substantial lead of 33-22 at half time which was too much for Austin to cut down. Alumni then added 23 more in the second half to make the final count 55-43.

Fine Play by Clark

The Fedigan Gigoloes stayed in second place by nosing out the Commerce and Finance team in a hard fought game by a 35-31 margin. Always strong in the first half, C. & F. led at the middle point by 5 points having a 17-12 count in their favor. Inspired by the fine play of Fred Clark who was high with nine points along with Meehan of C. & F., the Gigoloes tied the game up at 28-28 and surged ahead in the final minutes to clinch the game.

Keating Receives Unanimous Choice Gaining I-M Team For Fourth Year

Judges Ballot 12 Pts. to Place Him on All-Star Squad; Di Persio Selected for Third Straight Year, Forkin, Meehan and Byrne Get Honors

Dan Keating, tall blonde star of the Austin hall's intramural basketball team, first half champs, led in the voting for the 1940-'41 All-Intramural court team. Keating, last year's league high scorer and leader in the race so far this season, made the team for the fourth consecutive year.

He was chosen unanimously by the six judges: the team moderators, Fathers McKee, McGuire, Dunne, Sullivan and Boyle, and the official time-keeper, George Fitzgerald. In the voting two points were given for each first team vote and one point for each second team vote. This lanky senior's play was responsible for many of Austin's victories, and he is the chief reason why they were champs the first half. His flashy all-around work stood out all season.

DiPersio's Third Year

The only other repeater was Bob DiPersio, center of the Mendel Day School team. This is his third year on the All-Stars. He along with freshman Ken Byrne of the Mendel Residents were the other unanimous choices besides Keating. The guards are Jim Forkin, Fedigan hall senior with 11 votes, and Jim Meehan, C. & F. Day School Sophomore, who received 10 votes.

Villanova basketball fans will have a chance to see the All-Stars in action against the Freshmen team tomorrow night. They will play in the preliminary to the varsity's game with Loyola University.

The All-Star second team also contained much court talent. Leading the race for positions were forwards Art Martin of Austin hall and Charles Molnar of Alumni hall, both unanimous choices. As a freshman last year Martin made the first team, but was nosed out in this year's voting. Other members of the team are George Coupe, center, C. & F.; Joe Daly, Fedigan, guard; Dan Dalina, Fedigan, guard; and Andy Mante, Mendel D. S., guard. Daly had 4 votes and Dalina and Mante each received 3.

Five Receive Mention

Receivers of honorable mention were: Ed D'Ippolito, Austin, 2 votes; Ray Amicone, Mendel D. S., 2 votes; Tony Scelba, Fedigan, 1 vote; and Angie Scalzitti, Alumni, 1 vote.

Sophomore Duke King of Austin who made the All-Star team as a freshman last season was forced to give up playing in the intra-mural league because of a bad heart. Through this misfortune Austin lost a fine player and the league lost a good sportsman.

of victories wasn't a means to the end. For, from the uniformed, the remarks come flying fast and nasty because they believe that Villanova will be the doormat of eastern basketball if they don't hasten back to the double-header program. In an attempt to grasp the comprehension of the matter, we find that since the Wildcats dropped out of basketball at Convention Hall, the sportswriters of New York and Philadelphia disfavor our team, coach and school. Pick up the paper and see if we get the publicity we deserve. The reason seems quite evident. Certain parties who hold controlling interest in double-header basketball are partly responsible and hold the magnets over the typewriter.

The demagogues of Convention Hall and Madison Square Garden hold the leading aces and crack the whip the hardest. By their persuasive powers, they can make or break any team. For accurate examples, seek out our own coach, Al Severance and you'll find the answer.

Time Will Tell

Perhaps if we wait until next year when basketball opens another chapter we might find the possible solution. By then our question of, "Should Villanova play at Convention Hall?" should be answered. Only time holds the answer.

The postman rang twice last week and we heard from a man whom we discussed in our first column, Bill Duffy. Last week Bill jumped on the band-wagon of the hit parade by signing up for a six-rounder with an undefeated Texan as a preliminary for the Ambers-Jenkins bout on the 28th of this month. Duffy's new manager, Tom McArdle, made possible Bill's opportunity and we can see him going up that ladder of fame very soon.

With some thousands of fans witnessing that left of his, popular demand will bring him along in the ways of boxing. This column would like to send Bill the best of luck and we'll be watching for the headlines.

Daily Workouts Held By Tankmen

Next week on March 1st, the Blue and White swimmers will meet the stiffest test of their short campaign, when they engage the Diplomats of Franklin and Marshall College at Lancaster, Pa.

The tankmen have been practicing almost daily and should be in good shape for the contest. The line-up scheduled for the Loyola meet will probably be used by Coach Leahy.

Three Stars

Leading the Lancaster array of swimmers will be Dick Price, free-style distance ace. Last year he placed in the 440 in the Eastern Intercollegiates and in the 1500 meter swim in the National Championships at Yale. He will probably swim the 220 and 440 against the Wildcats. Other stars are Leon Macionis and Bill Gager, who take care of the sprints.

Incidentally Captain Walt Kelley swimming for Big Brothers beat both Macionis and Gager last Saturday night in a 100 yard race at Lancaster. His time was 54.4 seconds. Kelley also took second in the 150 yard individual medley.

Pro Grid Offers

Nick Basca is again back in the limelight. This time, information has been received to the effect that Nick has been approached by the Detroit Lions, New York Giants, Pittsburgh Steelers, Chicago Cardinals and lately the Brooklyn Dodgers, all professional football teams demanding his talent.

Basca, who starred on Coach Clipper Smith's Wildcat elevens for three years, will be graduated in June.

Several men will have their positions changed when and where it is needed to strengthen the club. Weaknesses in the quarterback position will have to be patched up before next September. Experimentation will also take place at the guard spots with the freshmen given every opportunity to make good.

Several new variations in play will be introduced in order to fit the player's individual ability. The much discussed "T" formation will also be added to the books of the Wildcats.

Negotiations are still under way concerning next year's schedule. Center will take the place of P. M. C. for the opening game. Florida is tentatively scheduled for Philadelphia although previously announced for Florida, and Manhattan may be played on Friday night in New York. Several of the eleven members who have received their draft questionnaires are Ed Korisky, Joe Behot, Sal Rosato, Stan Eusko and Joe Adams.

Doc Jacobs Views Successful Nine As Villanova Ushers In 72nd Season

Team Meets Today to Begin* Practice Session; Have a Wealth of Material

When coach Doc Jacobs held a meeting at the field house yesterday to address the candidates for the 1941 varsity baseball team, the opening note was sounded, heralding another season at Villanova, of America's number one sport.

This, the 72d campaign on the diamond for the blue-stockinged batters promises to be one of the most successful during the illustrious regime of the amiable Doc, and, thereby, indicating one of the greatest seasons in Villanova history.

While four regulars were graduated from last year's great club, a wealth of veteran material at hand and a fine crop of sophomores coming up, finds the Doc looking forward to the coming season with but few misgivings. True, Cliff Choquette, Mike Lazorchak, Lloyd Rice and George Flood were important factors in the compilation of the great 1940 record when only one game, a 5-4 decision to Fordham, was dropped, but several talented veterans and sophomores will be fighting it out to fill these vacancies.

Returning Infield

Based on last year's performances, it seems fairly safe to assume that the infield combination will remain the same except for finding a shortstop to replace the agile Mike Lazorchak. Tony Calandra, who performed sensationally for last year's freshmen, probably will complete the quartet with Joe Yednock, guardian of the hot corner; Woody Reitmeier, dependable second baseman; and Jack Donoghue, hard-hitting first sacker. Art Spector, stellar sophomore basketeer, may display his baseball talents in a fashion that will challenge Donoghue for the first base position.

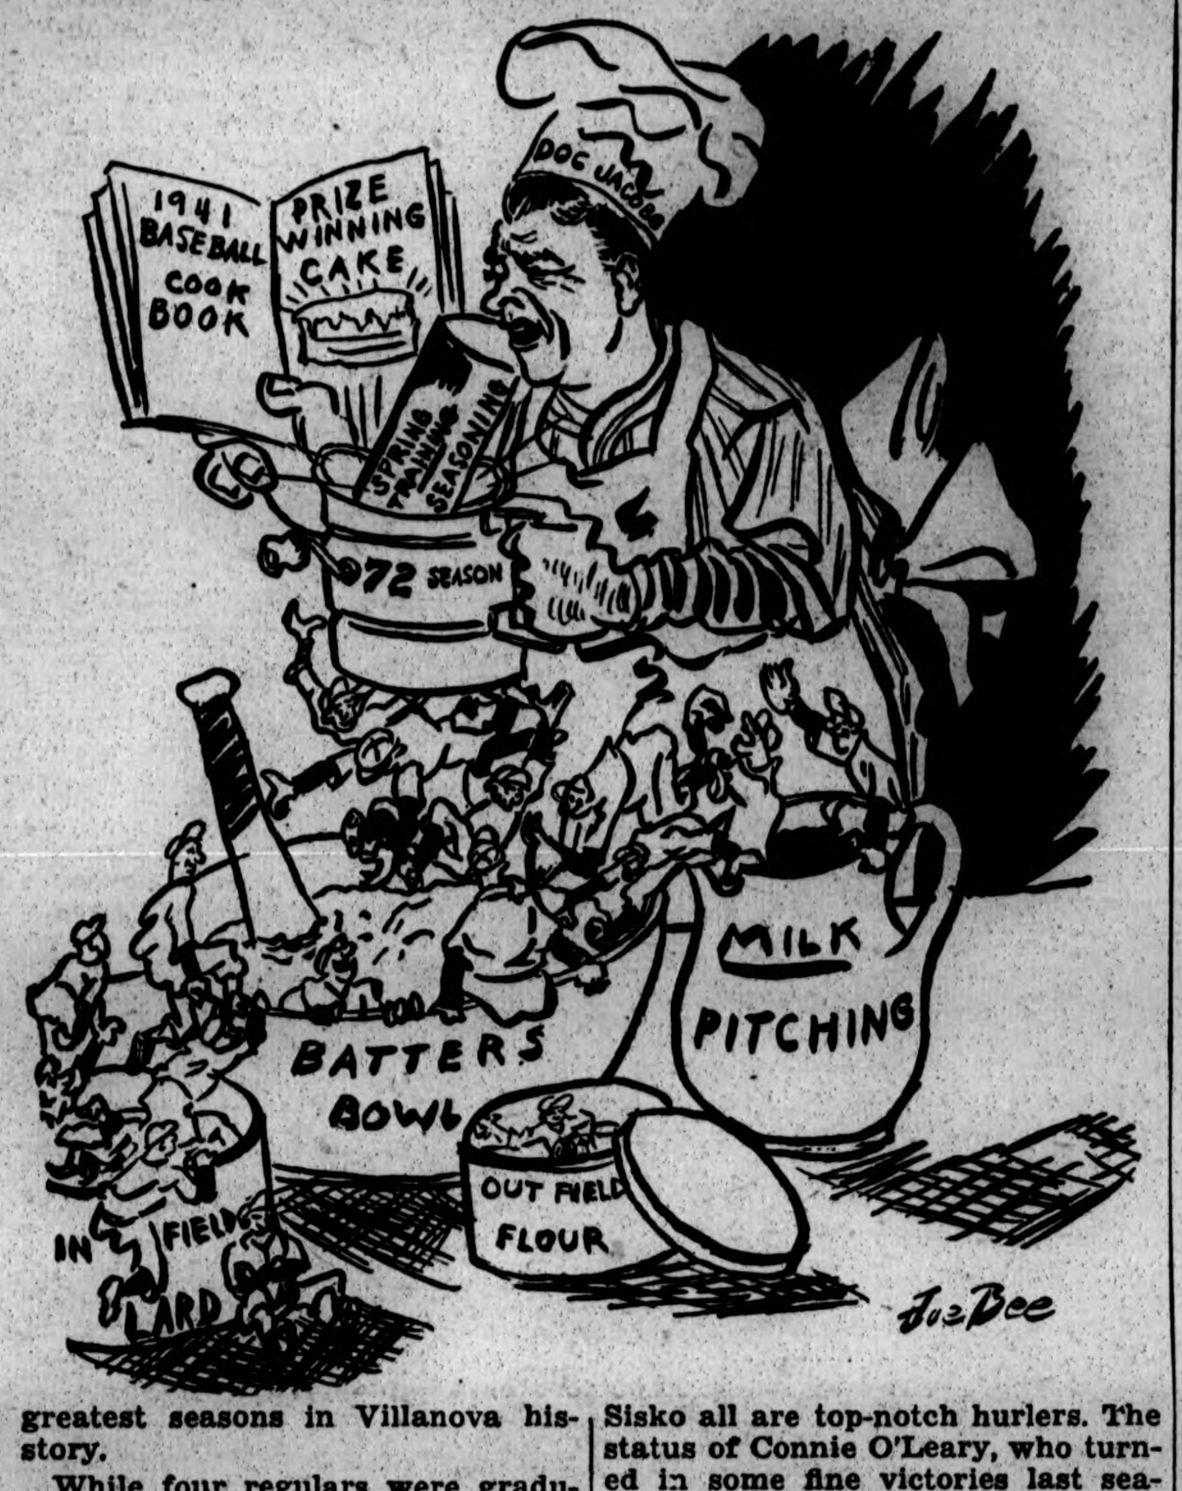
Catcher's Berth Contested

The battle for the catcher's berth will, in all likelihood, be the most hotly-contested of the pre-season practice sessions. Johnnie Murphy, who understudied George Flood last year, will have Al Skaff, George Fitzgerald and sophomores Ted Bickey and Jimmy Dykes, son of the famed major-leaguer, to contend with.

The pitching staff, except for the loss of Choquette, remains pretty well intact. Bill Howlett, Connie Nicholas, Jim Lattanza and Andy Sisko all are top-notch hurlers. The status of Connie O'Leary, who turned in some fine victories last season, depends on how well his ailing arm has healed.



Point to Fordham

Other sophs aspiring for positions include: Bill Wood, a pitcher; Joe Hagerty, infielder; and Mike Kupecki and Roy Simonson, outfielders.

As soon as weather permits, Doc expects to take his squad outdoors, where the battle for positions promises to be an exciting preliminary to a campaign against several of the major college teams in the East. The main objective this year is Fordham, which spoiled an otherwise perfect season in 1940.

The schedule, as yet unconfirmed, is listed tentatively as follows:

April
7—*Vermont U.
9—Lehigh.
11—Ursinus.
16—Loyola of Baltimore.
17—*Providence.
19—*Western Maryland.
23—*Temple.
25—St. John's of Brooklyn.
26—C. C. N. Y.
30—*Loyola (Baltimore).

May
3—Fordham.
7—Pennsylvania.
10—Williams.
11—Providence.
12—Boston College.
20—*Manhattan.
23—*Ursinus.
24—Temple.

Freshmen Post Two Victories During Week

Villanova's Frosh basketeers emerged victorious against the SPHAS Reserves Saturday night in Philadelphia and by so doing completed a successful week. Earlier in the week the Kittens defeated the Y. M. H. A. at the Field House, putting on a wonderful exhibition of shooting.

Each of these games was rather closely contested during the first half, but in the latter frame the opponents seemed to slow up to some extent. In the game against the Y. M. H. A. the Frosh emerged with a 51-26 victory with the attack being led by Ted Janeczek who tallied with seven field goals for a total of fourteen points. The Y. M. H. A. tried desperately to retaliate, but could not bridge the gap. A play which brought the audience to their feet was a pass from Klotz to Lord, who tapped the ball to Rapella making the basket.

Rapella Excellent

In the second game of the week the Kittens defeated the Sphas Reserves before a crowd of 4,000 people with the score standing 42-32. This was the second defeat suffered at the hands of the Frosh.

The scoring honors were divided between big Ted Rapella who tallied for a total of 23 points and Joe Lord who dropped five baskets for a total of 10 points. The game was a fast moving affair with both teams playing good defensive ball.

At the rate the Kittens are going now they should wind up the season with another perfect record. Up to now the Frosh quintet has not lost a game since the 38-39 season. The Blue and White Kittens are one of the best freshman ball clubs to play in the Philadelphia area in the past few years.

Well-Earned Win

The most interesting of the two games was the Reserve game which was played on a smaller floor and it was interesting to see how quick the players became accustomed to the smaller court. At the half-time the Frosh were leading by a score of 24-19. One of the most spectacular shots of the evening was Melafchik's one-hand basket which was executed from half the court.

With the cooperation of the players this season Al Severance has produced a team which has been worthy to represent the school and moreover the freshman class.

Indoor Runners Busy

After the recent New York A. C. meet held in Madison Square Garden in which the Wildcat relay team finished third to Colgate University, Jumbo Elliott's runners will face some strenuous competition in the ensuing weeks. They will travel to Baltimore on March 7, then head for the K. of C. meet in New York the following night and go to Washington the following Monday.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

UPON picking up a daily newspaper these days and referring to the sports pages, we notice that baseball is once again pushing its way into the headlines and forcing basketball, hockey, and the other winter sports to take a back seat in the minds of the sports-minded public. Although the opening day for the big leagues does not arrive until mid-April, the play-for-pay boys will be limbering up the old money arms when the grapefruit league starts in a few weeks.

It's a funny relationship that exists between the great American pastime and the fans who pay to see their idols performs. Come September each year and the disgruntled grandstand manager, whose team has failed to live up to expectations, swears by the ghost of Abner Doubleday that he will never again come to see "those bums" play. But after three or four months have passed, the memories of last season's errors and mistakes become dimmed with time, and Mr. Fan once again predicts that the home town club is a cinch for the first division and with a few breaks they might even cop the pennant. These fond expectations are augmented by articles in the daily newspapers which paint a rosy picture of the team's future status.

Outlook at Villanova

However, when we consider the prospects of the Villanova baseball team for the ensuing campaign, we need not resort to any such tactics in order to predict another successful season for Doc Jacobs' ball-chasers. Nor do we need a crystal ball to hazard a guess that 1941 will go down in the books as one of the most prosperous seasons that a Wildcat baseball team ever enjoyed, although it will be a difficult task to improve on last season's record which shows that the Wildcats dropped only one game—a one-run decision to Fordham University, and also that they were the uncrowned college champions of the east.

Graduation, the nemesis of all college coaches, did not take a great toll, for we find the nucleus of last year's powerful team returning to the wars once again. Three regulars — Shortstop Mike Lazorchak, Outfielder Lloyd Rice, and Catcher George Flood received their sheepskins last June, and although it would be a reflection on their fine work of last year to say that they will not be missed at all, nevertheless Doc Jacobs' smiling countenance seems to indicate that he is not worried about filling their positions.

Strong Infield

The infield will be an all-veteran combination, except at shortstop, where Tony Calandra, a Sophomore, seems to hold the inside track for the job. Joe Yednock at third base, "Woody" Reitmeier at second base, and John Donaghue at the initial sack complete the inner defense and Wildcat fans can look forward to some fancy fielding in that section.

In the outfield, George Balmore and Nick Basca have the center and right field positions sewed up, while the left-field slot is wide open to all competition.

The pitching chores should be well-handled by a trio of veteran campaigners, Connie O'Leary, Connie Nicholas, and Bill Howlett, while the catching assignment will be taken over by either "Reds" Murphy, Al Skaff, or Ted Bicky.

To Play Duke

The schedule has been completed and it contains one important addition to that of last year — Duke University, sometimes referred to as the Philadelphia Athletics' junior varsity squad, because of the presence of many ex-Duke players on the A's roster. The Dukes come up with a powerful club each year and will undoubtedly provide the stiffest opposition of the season for the Wildcats. Among the other prominent college nines that will be met are Fordham, Boston College, University of Vermont, Pennsylvania, and Temple.

League In Mix-Up As Mendel Leads In Final Drive

First Place Changes Hands For Third Consecutive Week; Austin's Double Loss Takes Highlight of Games

The fast-moving, hard-fighting, Mendel Residents' basketball team forged into the lead in the final lap of the Intramural Basketball Championship as they toppled over the first place Austin Hall and the second place Mendel Day Hops during the past week's campaign.

Led by their sharp shooting guards, Andy Mante and Kenny Byrne, the freshmen downed their fellow Mendelites, the Day Students, by a 37-22 score. The Residents led throughout the game, taking a 21-16 lead at the half and added 16 more in the next half while holding their opponents to one field goal and four foul shots. Depersio was the mainstay of the losers, playing a fine game and garnering 9 points.

Austin Loses Lead.

Next to bow before the league leaders were the Austin Firemen. Playing a rough-and-tumble game in which there was plenty of action and thrilling play, Austin took a 45-32 trimming to drop down into a tie for third place. There were 28 fouls called in the game, 14 on each team. Of these only 13 were completed, 8 by Austin and 5 by Mendel. Once again the stellar Andy Mante carried the freshmen through, piling up 16 points and playing a bang-up game. Mendel got off to a good start and led all the way taking the lead at 18-16 at the half. The closest Austin came was within one point in the second half and then the freshmen dropped 6 points in a row to forge ahead again and win 37-22.

Alumni Hall added to the downfall of Austin by handing them a 55-43 setback despite the valiant attempt of Dan Keating to stem the tide of the Alumni attack. "Big Dan" rang up 19 points against the freshmen but Alumni couldn't be held in check as Pete Hind garnered 15 and Molnor 10 to lead the freshmen. Father Dunne's Greenies gained a substantial lead of 33-22 at half time which was too much for Austin to cut down. Alumni then added 23 more in the second half to make the final count 55-43.

The Fedigan Gigoloes stayed in second place by nosing out the Commerce and Finance team in a hard fought game by a 35-31 margin. Always strong in the first half, C. & F. led at the middle point by 5 points having a 17-12 count in their favor. Inspired by the fine play of Fred Clark who was high with nine points along with Mechan of C. & F., the Gigoloes tied the game up at 28-28 and surged ahead in the final minutes to clinch the game.

Based on last year's performances, it seems fairly safe to assume that the infield combination will remain the same except for finding a shortstop to replace the agile Mike Lazorchak. Tony Calandra, who performed sensationally for last year's freshmen, probably will complete the quartet with Joe Yednock, guardian of the hot corner; Woody Reitmeier, dependable second baseman; and Jack Donoghue, hard-hitting first sacker. Art Spector, stellar sophomore basketeer, may display his baseball talents in a fashion that will challenge Donoghue for the first base position.

Catcher's Berth Contested

The battle for the catcher's berth will, in all likelihood, be the most hotly-contested of the pre-season practice sessions. Johnnie Murphy, who understudied George Flood last year, will have Al Skaff, George Fitzgerald and sophomores Ted Bickey and Jimmy Dykes, son of the famed major-leaguer, to contend with.

The pitching staff, except for the loss of Choquette, remains pretty well intact. Bill Howlett, Connie Nicholas, Jim Lattanza and Andy Sisko all are top-notch hurlers. The status of Connie O'Leary, who turned in some fine victories last season, depends on how well his ailing arm has healed.

Point to Fordham

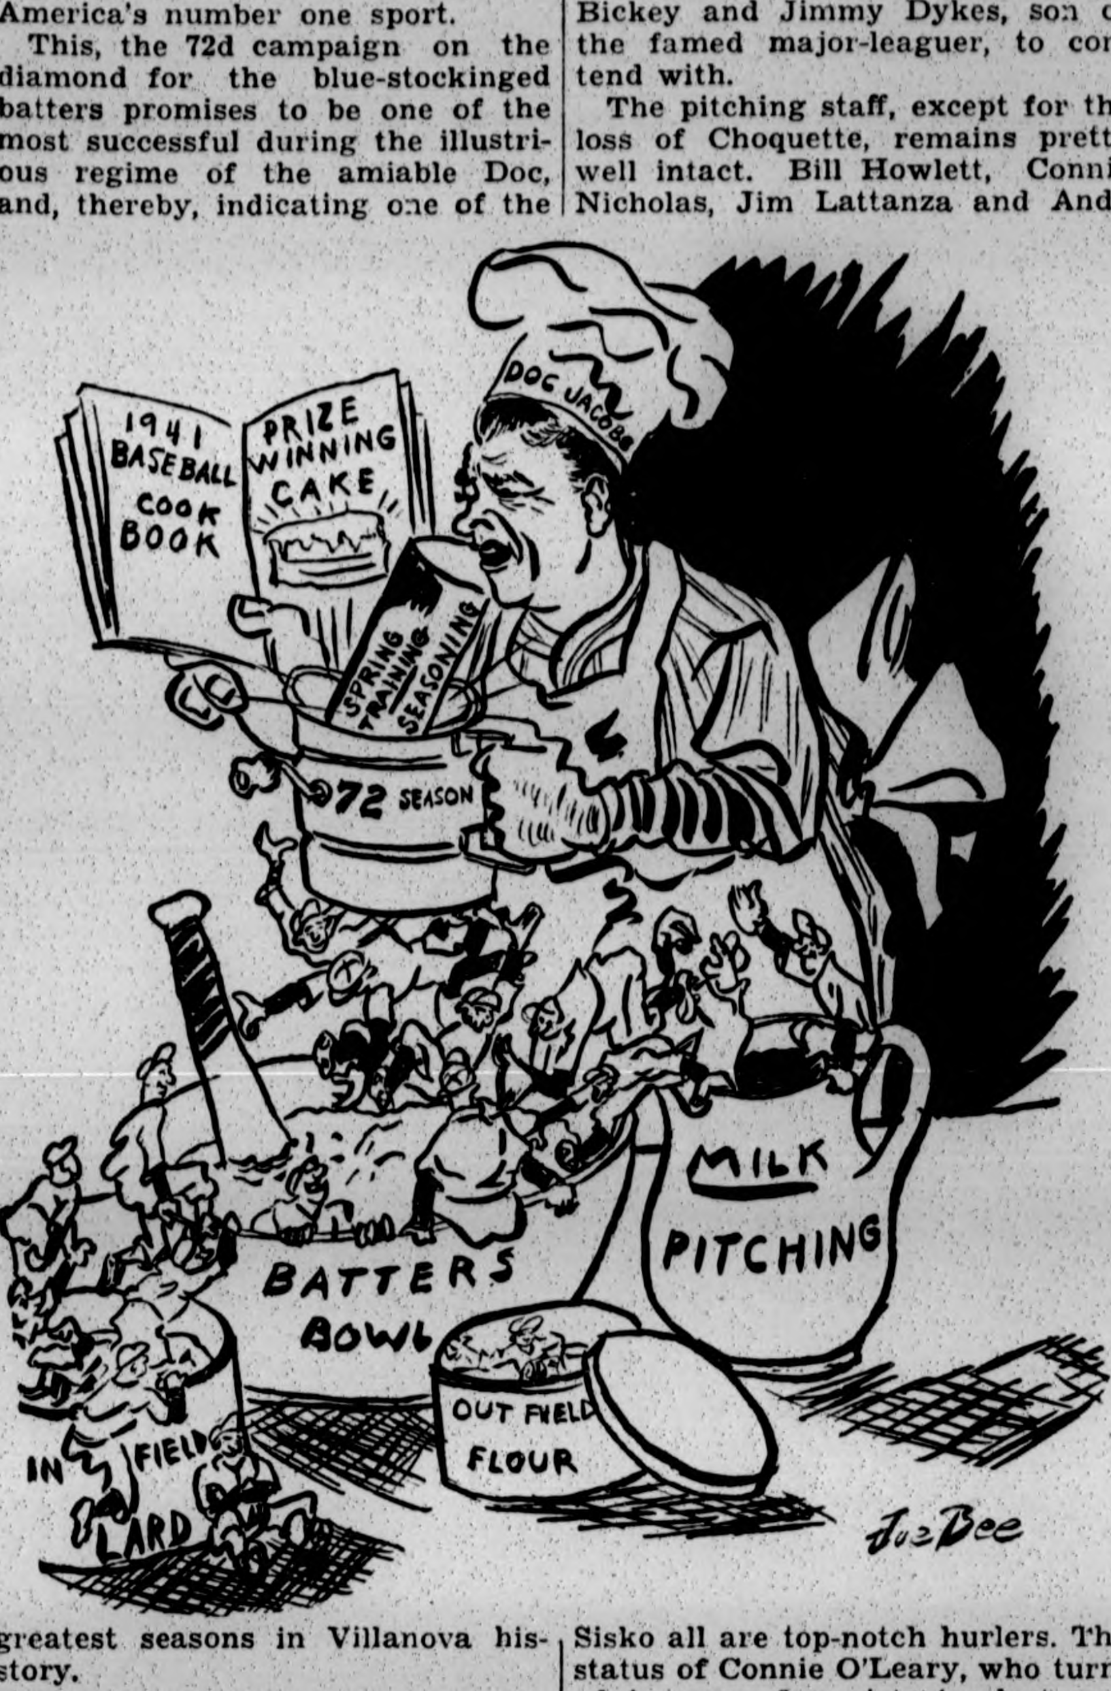
Other sophs aspiring for positions include: Bill Wood, a pitcher; Joe Hagerty, infielder; and Mike Kupecki and Roy Simonson, outfielders.

As soon as weather permits, Doc expects to take his squad outdoors, where the battle for positions promises to be an exciting preliminary to a campaign against several of the major college teams in the East. The main objective this year is Fordham, which spoiled an otherwise perfect season in 1940.

The schedule, as yet unconfirmed, is listed tentatively as follows:

April
7—*Vermont U.
9—Lehigh.
11—Ursinus.
16—Loyola of Baltimore.
17—*Providence.
19—*Western Maryland.
23—*Temple.
25—St. John's of Brooklyn.
26—C. C. N. Y.
30—*Loyola (Baltimore).

May
3—Fordham.
7—Pennsylvania.
10—Williams.
11—Providence.
12—Boston College.
20—*Manhattan.
23—*Ursinus.
24—Temple.



Freshmen Post Two Victories During Week

Villanova's Frosh basketeers emerged victorious against the SPHAS Reserves Saturday night in Philadelphia and by so doing completed a successful week. Earlier in the week the Kittens defeated the Y. M. H. A. at the Field House, putting on a wonderful exhibition of shooting.

Each of these games was rather closely contested during the first half, but in the latter frame the opponents seemed to slow up to some extent. In the game against the Y. M. H. A. the Frosh emerged with a 51-26 victory with the attack being led by Ted Janeczek who tallied with seven field goals for a total of fourteen points. The Y. M. H. A. tried desperately to retaliate, but could not bridge the gap. A play which brought the audience to their feet was a pass from Klotz to Lord, who tapped the ball to Rapella making the basket.

Rapella Excellent

In the second game of the week the Kittens defeated the Sphas Reserves before a crowd of 4,000 people with the score standing 42-32. This was the second defeat suffered at the hands of the Frosh.

The scoring honors were divided between big Ted Rapella who tallied for a total of 23 points and Joe Lord who dropped five baskets for a total of 10 points. The game was a fast moving affair with both teams playing good defensive ball.

At the rate the Kittens are going now they should wind up the season with another perfect record. Up to now the Frosh quintet has not lost a game since the 38-39 season. The Blue and White Kittens are one of the best freshman ball clubs to play in the Philadelphia area in the past few years.

Well-Earned Win

The most interesting of the two games was the Reserve game which was played on a smaller floor and it was interesting to see how quick the players became accustomed to the smaller court. At the half-time the Frosh were leading by a score of 24-19. One of the most spectacular shots of the evening was Melafchik's one-hand basket which was executed from half the court.

With the cooperation of the players this season Al Severance has produced a team which has been worthy to represent the school and moreover the freshman class.

Indoor Runners Busy

After the recent New York A. C. meet held in Madison Square Garden in which the Wildcat relay team finished third to Colgate University, Jumbo Elliott's runners will face some strenuous competition in the ensuing weeks. They will travel to Baltimore on March 7, then head for the K. of C. meet in New York the following night and go to Washington the following Monday.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

UPON picking up a daily newspaper these days and referring to the sports pages, we notice that baseball is once again pushing its way into the headlines and forcing basketball, hockey, and the other winter sports to take a back seat in the minds of the sports-minded public. Although the opening day for the big leagues does not arrive until mid-April, the play-for-pay boys will be limbering up the old money arms when the grapefruit league starts in a few weeks.

It's a funny relationship that exists between the great American pastime and the fans who pay to see their idols performs. Come September each year and the disgruntled grandstand manager, whose team has failed to live up to expectations, swears by the ghost of Abner Doubleday that he will never again come to see "those bums" play. But after three or four months have passed, the memories of last season's errors and mistakes become dimmed with time, and Mr. Fan once again predicts that the home town club is a cinch for the first division and with a few breaks they might even cop the pennant. These fond expectations are augmented by articles in the daily newspapers which paint a rosy picture of the team's future status.

However, when we consider the prospects of the Villanova baseball team for the ensuing campaign, we need not resort to any such tactics in order to predict another successful season for Doc Jacobs' ball-chasers. Nor do we need a crystal ball to hazard a guess that 1941 will go down in the books as one of the most prosperous seasons that a Wildcat baseball team ever enjoyed, although it will be a difficult task to improve on last season's record which shows that the Wildcats dropped only one game—a one-run decision to Fordham University, and also that they were the uncrowned college champions of the east.

Graduation, the nemesis of all college coaches, did not take a great toll, for we find the nucleus of last year's powerful team returning to the wars once again. Three regulars — Shortstop Mike Lazorchak, Outfielder Lloyd Rice, and Catcher George Flood received their sheepskins last June, and although it would be a reflection on their fine work of last year to say that they will not be missed at all, nevertheless Doc Jacobs' smiling countenance seems to indicate that he is not worried about filling their positions.

Strong Infield

The infield will be an all-veteran combination, except at shortstop, where Tony Calandra, a Sophomore, seems to hold the inside track for the job. Joe Yednock at third base, "Woody" Reitmeier at second base, and John Donaghue at the initial sack complete the inner defense and Wildcat fans can look forward to some fancy fielding in that section.

In the outfield, George Balmore and Nick Basca have the center and right field positions sewed up, while the left-field slot is wide open to all competition.

The pitching chores should be well-handled by a trio of veteran campaigners, Connie O'Leary, Connie Nicholas, and Bill Howlett, while the catching assignment will be taken over by either "Reds" Murphy, Al Skaff, or Ted Bicky.

To Play Duke

The schedule has been completed and it contains one important addition to that of last year — Duke University, sometimes referred to as the Philadelphia Athletics' junior varsity squad, because of the presence of many ex-Duke players on the A's roster. The Dukes come up with a powerful club each year and will undoubtedly provide the stiffest opposition of the season for the Wildcats. Among the other prominent college nines that will be met are Fordham, Boston College, University of Vermont, Pennsylvania, and Temple.

Plans Laid For Reception of 200 Atlantic District Engineering Educators

More than 200 members of the Atlantic Section of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education will attend the spring meeting of the society, to be held at Villanova on May 3, J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering, announced yesterday.

Educators from colleges, universities, and technical schools in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland will attend the session, which will be held the week before Open House.

Activities from 9:30 in the morning to 8:00 in the evening have been planned by the Program Committee, headed by Mr. Morehouse.

Inspection of the campus and laboratories with the aid of student and faculty guides will follow registration in the morning. The main feature of the morning's activities will be the general session, which will follow the inspection and will last until lunch time

Afternoon conferences will be followed by entertainment at five o'clock. Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., is chairman of the entertainment committee, and will be assisted by Anthony J. Frayne, M. A., and Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A.

Committees of faculty members have been appointed by Mr. Morehouse to handle the details of the meeting.

Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, associate professor of chemistry, is in charge of registration and publicity; he is to be assisted by P. F. Banmiller, Registrar, and other members of the faculty.

John A. Oakey, M. S., head of the civil engineering department, has general charge of such campus arrangements as lunch, parking, and guides.

Co-ordination of the meeting with the Open House program is in the care of Rev. John H. Crawford, O. S. A., of the physics department. H. S. Bueche, M. S., head of the electrical engineering department, is chairman of the Dinner Committee.

the floor for those who wish to sit and enjoy the cool breezes arising from the surf while they chat of this and that. To complete the effect of a southern beach, huge red and white shingles will extend from the balcony, giving the appearance of surrounding cabanas.

Music from the Stage

Deviating from the custom of the past, the music of the orchestra will eminate from the stage. This elevated position of the band will, in the opinion of the decorations committee, present more opportunities to highlight the band, and to carry out the tropical terrace theme through the use of stage scenery and lights.

Betty Bradley and Bill Darnell will offer their interpretations of the nation's favorite melodies from a raised spotlighted platform in front of the orchestra.

Proclaiming the festivities within the Field House, two huge spotlights will weave their beams in the sky above the campus. The lobby, usually devoid of decorations, will carry on the "premiere" atmosphere of the entrance. Contrasting with the red-and-white color scheme of the dance floor proper, the soft blue and white lights scatter through-out the lobby will presage the riotous color and merrymaking within.

Blue Room Modernized

The Blue Room, traditional source of refreshments, will be modernized for the occasion. New modernistic furniture has been obtained for the comfort of those taking time out for a drink and cool blue lights will be installed to blend with the surroundings. A wider selection of refreshments than has been the custom will be offered.

According to chairman Brosmer, all plans for the dance have been completed. Programs and distinctive favors have already been obtained and are ready for distribution Friday night. The decorations committee, headed by James Jernee, has erected the stage decorations and will swing into full-time activity immediately following the basketball game Wednesday evening in order to have everything ready by Friday afternoon.

Poster Prizes

Prizes of three and two dollars will be awarded to winners of a poster contest being sponsored by Belle Masque in connection with its annual production, "Margin for Error," according to James Jernee, chairman of the poster committee.

The competition is open to all students, and no awards will be made unless a minimum of five men enter the contest.

Joseph McCabe has announced that there will be a reduction in the price of the tickets for the performance this year. Tickets will sell for 50 cents.

'TheMikado' Tomorrow

A condensed version of last Wednesday night's Music Seminar on "The Mikado" will be presented at the day-hop seminar tomorrow afternoon at 12:40 in Room 215 Mendel. Edward L. Haenisch, Ph. D., will provide the commentary and dialogue slides will be shown.

Dr. Haenisch, associate professor of chemistry and chemical engineering, presented the first of the spring series of resident music seminars last Wednesday in Simpson hall. Gilbert and Sullivan's ever-popular light opera was the subject of the discussion.

The libretto of the opera was summarized and the entire musical score was played on records. As the music was being played, specially-made slides were shown so that the members of the seminar could follow the humor of Gilbert's famous lyrics.

Special consideration was given to the more famous characters of the opera. The comic "Ko-Ko," the pompous "Pooh-bah," and the "Mikado," whose "object most sublime is to make the punishment fit the crime," were described and depicted by means of the slides.

Due to the basketball game tomorrow night, the next meeting of the resident seminar will not occur until Feb. 26. At this time, Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., moderator of the group, will present a recorded program of famous musical descriptions of common occurrances.

Dr. McHugh Gets Educational Post

Villanova Professor Named Chairman of Middle Atlantic States Visiting Committee

Dr. William H. McHugh, head of the Department of Education, has been named chairman of a Visiting Committee by R. D. Matthews, Executive Secretary of the Middle States Commission on Secondary Schools.

Dr. McHugh's appointment was made on the basis of his extensive experience in the field. He has served on similar committees for the past three years, and before that was employed by the state as inspector of secondary schools in the Pittsburgh district.

The Visiting Committee inspects secondary schools for accrediting purposes. It is composed of from five to eight members, and its membership frequently varies with the schools visited. The training of new members with a view toward making them qualified to serve as chairmen in the future is another important function of the group.

Dr. McHugh and his committee inspected Southeast Catholic High School in Philadelphia on Jan. 30 and 31, and have also completed an examination of Upper Merion High. John P. Gallen, instructor in Villanova's engineering department, served as a member of the visiting board on the former occasion. Definitely scheduled for the future are visits to the North Wales High School on March 18 and 19, and to Radnor High School on May 26 and 27.

At times experiments are tried to determine the reliability of the judgment of the committee. At such times two committees, working entire independently of one another, inspect the same school and the results are compared. This procedure was followed in Bartram High School last year, when Dr. McHugh was also a member of the inspecting body. The findings checked almost exactly.

Costa Named

Joseph Costa, a junior, has been appointed chairman of a committee to secure guest speakers to address D. P. E. fraternity members on subjects relating to the modern business world. The selection was made at a meeting of Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce school fraternity, last Wednesday.

George Flannery, Jr., president of the group, also appointed a committee consisting of John DiCarlo, Edward Bennis, and William Friel, sophomores, and Charles Clancy, a senior, to supervise the purchase of fraternity pins.

Give Two C & F Honor Rolls

Freshman and sophomore honor rolls released yesterday by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the School of Commerce and Finance, place Vincent Bradley, with a rating of 3.81, first in the freshman class and George McFadden, with 3.44, at the head of the commerce sophomores in studies.

Following Bradley are: Richard Ryan, 3.44; Herman Drizen, 3.40; William Gatti, 3.25; Edward Reardon, 3.19; Wilfred Gagen, 3.06; Edward Milde, 3.06; Robert Young, 3.06; Thomas Horan, 3.06; John Bambrick, 3.00; and William Sullivan, 3.00.

Sophomores making the honor roll, after McFadden, are: second, Loring Jones with 3.19; and, tied for third with 3.00, William Dillon, Harry Keefrider, and Paschal Russo.

The honors rolls of the School of Science and the junior and senior classes of the commerce school are to be released this week.

St. Joe's First

On Freshman Debate Schedule; Will Be Met February 27

First debate of the year for the Freshman Debating Club, training-ground for future members of the Beta Gamma Society, will take place on Thursday, Feb. 27, when the freshmen of St. Joseph's College will be met.

The first-year forensic team has taken rapid organization strides during the past two weeks under the direction of Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A. Robert F. Young, commerce freshman, has been elected secretary of the group; he has contacted numerous prospective opponents in order to secure stiff opposition for the number trying out for the team.

Four of the members of the squad held an informal debate last Thursday afternoon in Simpson hall to demonstrate to the other members the debating technique of presenting the points of the arguments. Rebuttals were contributed by all present at the demonstration and discussion was held on rebuttal presentation.

Next meeting of the freshman squad will be held this Thursday in Simpson at 3:15 P. M., when four more members will present an informal debate for the benefit of the group. All freshmen who would like to debate and have not yet done so are invited to attend.

Practice as a freshman debater is stressed as an aid in learning the procedure and technique used in varsity competition.

Agency President To Pick "Queen" Of Junior Prom

Walter Thornton Will Present Gold Trophy to Winner at Dance; Ten Entrants Left in Contest

BY WARD GUNCHEON

Plans for the Junior Prom next May are rapidly moving along, chairman John J. Parson, Jr., announced today, revealing that Walter Thornton, president of the Thornton Model Agency, New York City, will act as one of the final judges in the selection of the "Queen" of the affair and will present a gold trophy to her on the night of the dance.

A former sculptor and model, Thornton, through his long association with photographers and artists, is well-equipped to determine the "true" beauty of an individual from a photograph. It was because of this experience and his knowledge of beauty and photography that he was chosen by the dance committee to be one of the final judges.

Thornton, called the "Merchant of Venus" by those in his profession, has in his employ many of the most famous models in the United States. Their pictures have been seen in a majority of the world's publications.

Services in Demand

Entering the business eleven years ago, he has built up an agency indispensable to artists, photographers, and advertising companies. He has supplied models to such foremost artists as Henry Raleigh, John La Gatta, Rolph Armstrong, and Arthur William Brown,

Chemical Society Hears Norton Describe Nylon

Calling it "the miracle cloth of modern synthetic chemistry," Joseph Norton, senior engineer, yesterday discussed Nylon in a talk before the members of the Chemical Society.

Norton classed the material as a triumph of modern industrial chemistry as important to the chemical engineer as the Panama Canal is to the civil engineer. He described the method employed in the production of Nylon from such common and abundant sources as coal, air, and water.

As an example of the products that can be made from Nylon, Norton mentioned Exton, an improved tooth-brush bristle that is non-sogging, stronger than former bristles, and resistant to abrasive action. Other products the speaker described displayed similar improvements over former substances.

Propaganda

History Seminar Members Will Discuss Role of Subversive Literature in a Democracy

"Propaganda: Its Role In A Democracy" will be discussed at a meeting of the History Seminar tomorrow at 2:15 P. M. in Simpson hall.

Purpose of the topic's choice is to determine the fundamental characteristics of propaganda and how it functions in a democracy, and to analyze certain types of propaganda currently operating in the United States.

At the group's meeting last Wednesday, the members discussed the organization and administration of federal and district courts and the problems incurred in the interpretation of modern legal questions.

The court's power of judicial review evolved as the main problem considered by the members. Although this power is not specifically mentioned in the Constitution, it was agreed that its main purpose was to settle conflicts which arose between legislative acts and the Constitution.

Present trends toward an extremely liberal interpretation of the words of the Constitution were traced; and members described the modern tendency to decide judicial questions according to their probable effects rather than to decide whether or not they are valid according to the Constitution.

The seminar members agreed that this course of action was "harmful to the best interests of the democratic process, because such a practice indicates the assumption by the courts of the powers specifically delegated to the legislative branch of our government."

Cast Roles

Of "Margin for Error" This Week; Choices Narrowed Down to Few

Final selections for parts in the cast of Belle Masque's presentation, "Margin for Error," will be made this week and announced next Tuesday, Anthony J. Frayne, moderator, said today.

Competition for the parts has exceeded that of former years and it has been difficult to narrow the choices for each part down to one person. At present there are at least two still in the running for each male role.

Robert Hursh and Victor Corbett are competing for the part of the German consul, while Robert McIntyre and Logan Phillips are being considered for the role of Otto Horst, the American Fuehrer.

Four Try for Cop

Finkelstein, the comical Jewish policeman, will be portrayed by Frank Buckley, Joseph Carbine, James Bonner, or Theodore Galysh. Edward Eichman, James Collins and Gordon Brosmer are trying out for the part of Baron Max, secretary to the consul.

William Toy or James Donovan will take the part of the doctor. Candidates for the role of Denny include James Halpin, Joseph McCabe, George Sutch, and David Reardon.

Among Rosemont students being considered for the female parts of Frieda and Sophie are Patricia Rice, who will be remembered for her work in "Room Service," the 1939 Belle Masque production; and Patricia McDonald, Mary Ambrose, and Susan Cissel, who took part in last year's play, "The Tavern."

Begin Work on Set

Robert Dooley, stage manager, has begun work on the library of the German consul, the set of "Margin for Error." To equal the realism and effectiveness of the tavern set of last year's drama, details of the library scene have been worked out carefully and will be carried out with strict attention to realism.

"Margin for Error" will be given on the evenings of April 24, 25 and 27.

Weekly Sermons Planned For Lent

Fr. Handran Will Speak Next Monday; Three Masses Said Daily

First of a series of Lenten sermons will be delivered by Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., next Monday evening, March 3, in the college chapel. During Lent, which begins tomorrow, sermons will be given every Monday evening.

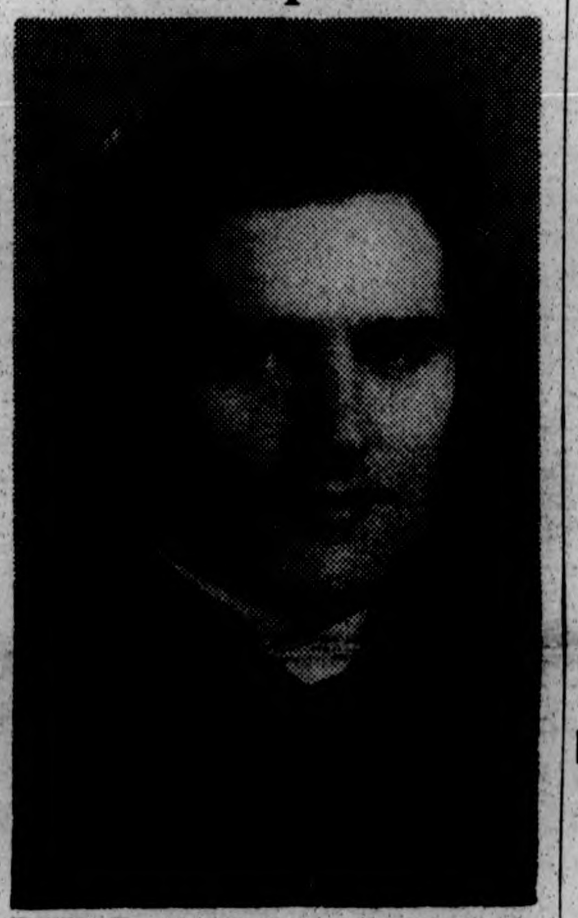
Mass will be said every morning at 6:45, 7:15 and 8:35 during the penitential season. This schedule has been arranged so that all students, resident and day, may attend the Holy Sacrifice. Confessions will be heard during the Masses.

"Some of us may be exempt from the obligation of Lenten fast," Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., Chaplain, in announcing the religious exercises, said, "but no one is excused from prayer.

"Frequent attendance at Mass, hearing sermons, meditation on the Passion of Our Lord, and, above all, the reception of the sacraments of penance and Holy Eucharist are the chief forms of prayer most acceptable to God during this season of prayer and penance. By attending these sermons and receiving the Sacraments, students may make a worthy preparation for the greatest of all Church feasts, Easter."

A new missal which will be of material aid in assisting at Mass, prepared by Fr. Stedmann, may be obtained at Fr. Boyle's office or at the college book store.

First Speaker



REV. R. J. HANDRAN, O. S. A.

Musical Descriptions Subject Of Seminar

Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will present a program of famous descriptions in music at tomorrow night's meeting of the Music Seminar in Simpson hall. A motion picture shown in connection with the playing of the "1812 Overture" will be featured to exemplify scenes in music.

"On the Trail" and "William Tell Finale" will also be played to illustrate scenes. Other selections will include: "William Tell Overture," "Grand Canyon Suite," and a selection from Beethoven, which will be contrasted to explain the authors' moods and abilities in descriptions, mainly those of storms.

The river descriptions contained in "Rhinegold" and the Mississippi Suite" will be heard. To help illustrate the non-rational creatures of creation, the lecturer will play the "Flight of the Bumblebee" and Saint-Saens' "Carnival of Animals."

Next week will bring an all-Brahms recorded program, featuring the master's Third Symphony. A biographical sound film will also be shown.

Honor Rolls

Samuels and Nelson Attain Perfect Quality Ratings; Valentine Leads Sr. Commerce Students

Melvin Samuels, a freshman, and Joseph Nelson, a junior, gained the distinction of having perfect 4.00 quality ratings for the first semester, according to honor rolls released last Friday by Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, O. S. A., Dean of the Science School.

Other first year men attaining honor recognition were William Hadfield, Robert De Revere, Charles Hefele, and Louis Fares.

Eugene Labowski led the sophomore class with a rating of 3.94, followed by James Johnson, John McGee, George Weber, and Joseph Turner.

Junior honormen, excluding Nelson, were: Salvatore Campo, Isadore Merlinsky, Theodore Orloff, James Traitz, Leonard Bortin, and Joseph Koch.

Senior leaders were: Raphael De Horatius, Columbus Gangemi, Theodore Kraus, Harry Goodman, Robert Kiley, Eugene Eichman, Armand Castagna, John Begley, John Lipka, Charles Dolan, William Piscione, and Frederick Steller.

In the School of Commerce and Finance, the senior honor roll released by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean, showed Raymond Valentine leader of his class with a rating of 3.93. Other senior honor men were: Walter Brown, William Epifanio, James McGarey, Daniel O'Mahoney, Robert Mentzinger, Cornelius Nicholas, Edward McKay, and Joseph Wood.

The junior honor roll for the commerce school will be released this week.

Busy Day

For Debaters Friday; Teams to Meet Princeton, Upsala, and St. Peter's

Members of Beta Gamma, varsity debating society, undertake a heavy schedule this Friday, Feb. 28, when they meet three teams of New Jersey colleges; Princeton, Upsala, and St. Peter's of Jersey City. Princeton will be engaged at home; Upsala and St. Peter's, away.

Highlighting the day will be the home contest with Princeton University, to be held in the seminar rooms of Simpson hall at 2:30 P. M. Topic of the debate will be the "formation of a permanent Western Hemisphere alliance" question; Robert J. McIntyre and David N. Reardon, junior commerce students, will argue the negative for Villanova.

Two for Other Team

At the same time, in East Orange, N. J., a contingent of Blue and White debaters will engage Upsala College, with Burt L. Collins, sophomore engineer, Charles J. Callahan, sophomore commerce student, and Thomas J. Moore, senior artsman, upholding the affirmative of the same resolution. Immediately after the Upsala match, this team will travel to Jersey City to meet St. Peter's College in an evening debate.

Thomas J. Moore, chairman of Beta Gamma, announced that plans are being made for a round-table discussion to include the College of Chestnut Hill, Immaculata, Rosemont, St. Joseph's College, the Catholic University of America, and Villanova.

Round-Table Planned

Debates with St. Joseph's College and Catholic U. are scheduled for the evening of March 5, and it has been arranged to present the St. Joseph's debate before the assembled council, to be followed by a round-table discussion. The topic of the debate and discussion will be "Resolved: That the United States should extend unlimited credit to Great Britain during the present world crisis." Beta Gamma will uphold the affirmative.

Last night, Beta Gamma made its fourth appearance as a member of the Philadelphia Forensic League, meeting the University of Pennsylvania Evening School on the "unlimited credit to Britain" resolution. John P. Fullam, junior artsman, and David N. Reardon argued the negative of the question.

Vincent Gordon To Direct Junior Dinner - Dance

Howlett Appoints Active Engineer to Chairmanship of May Affair; Seven Will Aid Him on Committee

BY T. A. SULLIVAN

Making the first junior class appointment since December, William J. Howlett, president of the class of '42, today named Vincent J. Gordon, junior engineer to the chairmanship of the Junior Dinner-Dance Committee.

Along with the announcement of Gordon's appointment, Howlett also released the names of seven men to serve under him on the committee. They are Natalino C. DiPetrillo and Joseph M. Scornavacchi, science students; Philip J. Malarkey and James E. Cashin, engineers; Robert J. Funabashi and David N. Peardon, commerce students; and William E. Schubert, artsman.

VINCENT J. GORDON

The group will handle all details involved in planning the dinner-dance, including the selection of the site and orchestra.

Chairman Gordon, a day-hop who attended St. Joseph's Prep, Philadelphia, is majoring in mechanical engineering, and is well-known on the campus. Active in extra-curricular activities and a consistent honor student, he is vice-president of Phi Kappa Pi, secretary-treasurer of the local branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and a member of the 150-pound football squad.

Last year he served on the Orientation Committee and was president of the Mathematics Club. He was also a member of the Sophomore Cotillion Committee, gaining experience for the position to which he has now been assigned.

Mixed Band To Begin Joint Concert Practice

First joint rehearsal of the Villanova Symphonic Band and musicians from Immaculata College will be held Thursday evening in the C. & F. auditorium.

A concert, to be given during Lent, will be presented by the mixed organization. Immaculata College will contribute three trumpeters, two clarinetists, two oboeists, four drummers, and one pianist to the Villanova Symphonic Band.

"Monastery Garden," by Ketelby, and "The Ramparts We Watch," from the motion picture of the same name, will be featured on the program. Also included will be selections played by three small ensembles: clarinet quartet; flute, oboe, and clarinet; and a flute trio.

Use Campus Walks

EVERY day the Villanova campus receives imprinted evidence of the two most ravaging passions of the student body.

A mere glance around the grounds of the campus is sufficient for anyone familiar with the location to determine just what pastimes our college boy lends himself to most avidly. Two long barren tracts and a short well-trodden path bear mute testimony of the unrestrained appetites which have besieged our otherwise beautiful campus.

The two lengthy trails are behind Mendel hall and Saint Mary's hall, respectively. The less extensive plot is in front of the monastery. The first two lead to the post office, the other to the dining hall. They are each different sites, but each betrays the same offense—a spirit of inconsideration, and a lack of good will.

These, of course, are not the only trails blazed by our collegiate "pathfinders." But the others, particularly those leading to Simpson hall, are due to physical conditions rather than to any lack of consideration on the part of the trespasers.

When spring is with us we feel certain that these three avenues of barren soil will stand out in decorative contrast to the surrounding green of the campus. We are equally certain that the campus walks to the post office and the dining hall will not lose any of their stability or become unclean should you choose to use them. And, incidently, these walks are just as short as your now infertile lanes.

There is no complaint about your eagerness for these two pleasantries, but the fault lies in the means that are used to satisfy them. We take pride in the campus of Villanova, and we wish to keep it beautiful. Small signs have been placed around the grounds to this effect, but apparently they have been ignored. Those who persist in this offense are reminded that fines will be levied in the future.

Outlaw Red Influence

DURING the past week the Dies Committee has received indirect support in its investigation of un-American and subversive activities from many various sources which, it is heartening to note, have finally become aware of the danger and menace accompanying the proponents of a certain philosophy whom we have harbored and coddled like infants.

Two bills which would outlaw Communism and Nazism in the United States, applying to citizens and aliens alike, were introduced into the House early in the week. Bringing the issue closer to home, a bill jointly sponsored by the Republican and Democratic members to bar from the ballot any party advocating overthrow of the government (admitted to be aimed at the Communist party) was reported to the floor of the State Senate on Tuesday.

A still more local issue was the action taken by the American Federation of Teachers against the Philadelphia local which, it charges, has communistic teachers in its personnel. All of these measures are commendable, and it is especially favorable that they have been instigated at this moment.

Now, more than ever, it is necessary that we be free from outside threat in the nation-wide production task confronting us. And now it is that these opposing forces have merged with us to obstruct our aims. Even more important than their presence in industry is the realization that the children of America are subject to their atheistic, hammer and sickle ideology.

It is essential for the future generations of Americans that we liberate the elementary, secondary, and collegiate institutions from the influence of this creed and all that it signifies. No half-way methods will serve the purpose of these investigations.

For Christ And Man

TOMORROW the world will initiate a new campaign for victory in battle and an eternal peace. Tomorrow we commemorate Ash Wednesday; we begin a period of recollection and preparation in memory of the passion, death, and resurrection of our Savior; we think once more of God—a duty which the universe has forgotten and neglected. Tomorrow is the first day of the Holy Season of Lent.

It is well that such a period commences now, for, in the mad scramble by nations throughout the world to rearm and mobilize troops for the existing crisis, mankind has forsaken the Creator, and has shunned or relegated to the background his moral, ethical, and religious obligations. At the nativity of our Lord angelic choirs announced through the heavens "Peace on earth . . . " Men did not understand, or they did not heed these words. Perhaps tomorrow, when we start to prepare for His last days on earth, the vocal symbol of this day, "Dust thou art, and to dust thou shalt return," will help man understand to whom he owes allegiance.

When Christ, by His supreme obligation, opened the gates of salvation, He ordained that we should attain it by the precepts of love, sacrifice, and brotherhood. Now we find that man has established his own distorted principles for deliverance from sin and death—principles of bloodshed, lust, and Godlessness which can only end in physical and spiritual destruction.

Burdened by these rebellious conditions, we enter another war against sin tomorrow. In this battle our leader is Christ, our banner bears the emblems of love and sacrifice, and our army is comprised of God-fearing, peace-loving men. Our every work, our every self-denial, our every expression of love we offer to our leader and those who need it most, the nations engaged in that other conflict. We do our acts in the name of these unfortunate people that they may soon know peace among their lands, and that they will return to the teachings of Christ for true peace.

FACULTY COMMENTS

NOT ABOUT "BOOGIE-WOOGIE"

By Fr. Handran

CARNEGIE HALL on a Saturday afternoon. A packed house. The stage dark except for a small pool of white light, startling against the blackness. Sharply defined in the circle, a figure slightly hunched over a piano. Rachmaninoff.

Beautiful rippling melody changes to flowing harmony. A sudden firmness in the tonal texture. The music flows no more. It roughens—becomes hard—begins to build itself up viciously. It mounts higher, higher—an ominous mass of swirling dissonance that thunders—and whines—and thunders again. A great harmonic force rolls in from the echoes and launches itself against the tremendous mass. A throat-tearing climax. A sudden hush. The end.

Seekers of True Beauty

We look around us in the furiously applauding audience. These people have something worth while. Something intangible but something worth while—a love for beauty, perhaps—true beauty.

Here on our right is a stodgy looking man—a minor executive in somebody's flourishing grain business, we guess. Across from us are two young men, obviously collegians, and—we say it with a kind of awe—obviously not bored. Our eyes wander over the house—thousands rendering tribute to an artist for the kind of music that he brings from the piano. Yes, these people have something worth while — appreciation of music — response to the vital imagery in tone.

This recognition of true beauty in blended sound, and delight in it, is a subtle thing—indefinable. You won't find it in the college curriculum. It's a bit higher—closely allied to that other something which colleges can't supply wholesale—culture.

Colleges impart education, more or less successfully. They can sometimes insinuate an impulse toward the finer things of life and a desire to take one's pleasure among those things which reach up toward sublimity. Thus far they may go, but no farther. Desire for this or that is bound up with free will, by which a man can make of himself a priceless idiot whatever his opportunities, and by which there are boors and bores with no end of college degrees.

Mark of Culture

Love for good music is a queer thing. Good music, remember. Every collegian in Christendom has a favorite waltz which always wafts him into wall-eyed ecstacy, or a bit of "boogie woogie" that goes to his feet. We're talking about good music. It supplies a gauge by which a man may be judged, in part at least. Every man who appreciates true musical beauty is not necessarily a cultured man, but every cultured man is necessarily one who likes good music, because devotion to the more refined things is a mark of true culture.

Here is a curious fact, and one which carries food for thought for the educator. Your average modern college student sits down and labors over, let us say, an assignment for a class on the following day. He finishes his task after perhaps an hour or more of real study. He considers the time well spent in adding something to his store of knowledge—and rightly so. That's why he came to college. But when the same student turns on his radio and accidentally tunes in on a classical music broadcast he twists the dial or punches the buttons feverishly until a clever concoction of minor moans seeps out and begins to swing about.

No Time Wasted

He considers that time spent in learning to appreciate the better music would be absolutely wasted. In other words, time spent in making him more educated is spent wisely. Time spent in making him more cultured is thrown away.

Thirty or forty years ago there was little opportunity to hear good music, and there was less incentive to learn anything about it. It became, in this country, something esoteric — something that "them high-toned people" liked. And the musician was regarded a long-haired chap who wandered precariously on the brink of insanity and indulged in periodic fits of artistic temperament.

Good Music for All

But now the thousands of listeners of the great opera and symphony broadcasts, and the thousands of people who attend the various low-price concerts in the summer testify to the American's love for the finer things in music. A love which the college man should certainly share.

Good music portrays beautiful thoughts in beautiful tonal forms. And why is appreciation of good music important to the college man? Because it becomes a part of his life. A modern essayist gives us the whole argument in a sentence: "I want beauty in my life itself, rather than in such chances as befall it."

AFTER last Friday and Saturday nights' affairs, it's easy to understand the bedraggled expressions on the boys' countenances. The Prom and the Dinner-Dance were financial and social successes. If you don't believe me, try to buy a bicarbonate of soda from Louie or borrow two bits from a Senior.

The profuseness of orchids at the dance served to prove the old adage that "a sugar-daddy is a form of crystallized sap." The girls from home were unexpectedly nice and threatened to rival our local belles. Of course, the soft lights and the tropical decorations were in their favor.

Bob Chester's swing was so hot that many of the fellows' faces were flushed . . . from dancing. Fashion note: tails are now being worn with red collars. If this cynicism doesn't stop, this column probably will.

Tommy Dorsey Tops at Villanova; Jitterbugs and Jivers In Minority

By EDWARD F. BORDEN

PICKING Tommy Dorsey's orchestra as their favorite by a large majority, Villanova students last week expressed their opinions on three questions reflecting musical and terpsichorean tastes. The fact that only three out of every ten students here "jitterbug" and that over half of them enjoy both classical and popular music rather than either type of music alone were also revealed.

In the first question asked students interviewed by the pollers, "T. D." received almost 40% of the entire vote for orchestras. Glenn Miller, formerly the nation's as well as Villanova's, number one choice, has been relegated to a rather poor second place. Following the pair are Jimmy Dorsey, Kay Kyser, and Artie Shaw.

College percentages on the question, in which 10% of the student body were asked to name one choice only, are:

Tommy Dorsey	39%
Glenn Miller	21%
Jimmy Dorsey	10%
Kay Kyser	7%
Artie Shaw	6%
(All Others)	17%

"The Sentimental Gentleman of Swing" led in each of the four schools. His greatest campus popularity was shown to be among the engineers, where 52% of their enrollment believe him to be "tops." He also holds strong favor in the commerce school, where 41% voted him their favorite, and in the arts and science schools with percentages of 37% and 31%, respectively.

Glenn Miller, the college's second choice, has his largest following among the businessmen, where, with 36%, he ran a close second to Tommy Dorsey's 41%. Jimmy Dorsey, the third-ranking choice, tied Miller and Shaw for second place in the School of Engineering; Kay Kyser tied Miller for second in popularity among science men.

Along with the question on favorite orchestras were asked the two questions: "Do you 'jitterbug'?" and "Do you enjoy classical or popular music or both?"

Returns on the question showed that 31% of the students engage in the currently-popular form of fast dancing, while 69% do not. The engineers do the least "jitterbugging" of any group in the college; artsmen and educators do the most, turning in the largest percentage, 45% stating that they "jitterbug."

Totals on the question of students' tastes in musical types are:

36% prefer popular music
56% enjoy both

Artsmen and educators, the students most fond of "jitterbugging," possess by far the highest percentage in favor of the classics.

Items On Flunking Exams And How To Act On A Date, Mixed With Assorted Wit

NOW THAT the last semester's grades have struck home, and probably in more places than one, this column would like to pass on a bit of honky-tonk found in the Varsity News of Detroit University:

Dear Dad . . . It hurts me deeply,
When in your note I see
No usual news so cheery,
No usual check for me.
I thought that I would write you
Before I'd packed my grip,
With hope I might convince you
I'm unworthy of the trip.
Dad! How much you were misguided
When you wrote to me last time,
You said, "I'm disappointed;
Your report card is a crime."
Dad! I'm here for getting knowledge
And the card shows plain as day,
I've got lots to learn in college,
So, gosh, why can't I stay?

Sing a Song of College Days:

Last week's Collegiate Digest carried a picture of the "radio burning" held on the campus of the University of California at Los Angeles. It seems that the students have the jitters because most of their favorite jitter-and-jive numbers are included in the ASCAP "must not play on the radio" list. What's more? most of the well-known colleges' songs are included in the ban.

Among the restricted school tunes are "On Brave Old Army Team," "Anchors Aweigh", "On Wisconsin," "Fordham Ram," "Fight on, Pennsylvania", "Maine Stein Song", "Notre Dame Victory Song", "Hail to California", "Harvardiana", "Hail to Pitt", and "Roar Lion Roar."

Jeepers creepers! It's about time ASCAP and BMI got together for a truce. What will Ted Husing do during lulls in next season's football games?

"My Date":

From the Immaculatan, we cull the following interesting extract of the column "Spice, by Snoop". It puts us in mind of the La Salle Collegian's constructive column on the various points to be included in a girl for the ideal "date," except, of course, that the Immaculatan writes about the lads and is constructive by pointing out things to be avoided:

"I don't like Hubert, he is like lots of other boys.

He is always to be seen on the campus before a big dance, my dance. He has a wonderful line that should work on me; it has on dozens of other girls. . .

He's coming to the dance; so he arrives fifteen minutes ahead of time. As I rip into my gown and smear hurried dabs of make-up across my face, he sits Sphinx-like in the living room, smoking Dad's cigarettes furiously. To every pleasantry ventured by distressed parents, he answers in a monosyllable; then relapses into silence. Perhaps his reveries are induced by a few stops he has made en route. . .

At the dance we are surrounded by his cronies, whom he has forgotten to introduce to me. Conversation centers around un-mutual friends, while the details of the last big game are discussed with the furtive whisperings accorded a state secret.

We dance. He can't. That doesn't stop his endeavor at zany trick steps, or his condescending attitude when I fail to follow suit. He decides not to hold that against me, and hums, off key and off beat, into my tortured ear for the rest of the night.

Where we go after the dance is a subject of much debate, Hubert can never make up his mind. Alone, I must struggle in and out of my coat, pull out my chair, and give my order to the waitress. She and the cashier are the beneficiaries of Hubert's attentions, to which, by now, they are welcome.

At very long last, we are at my door. Hubert cannot understand why I refuse to be amiable. He says that he will call me next week, though of course, neither of us believes it. That is the thought which consoles me.

Meet The Boys;

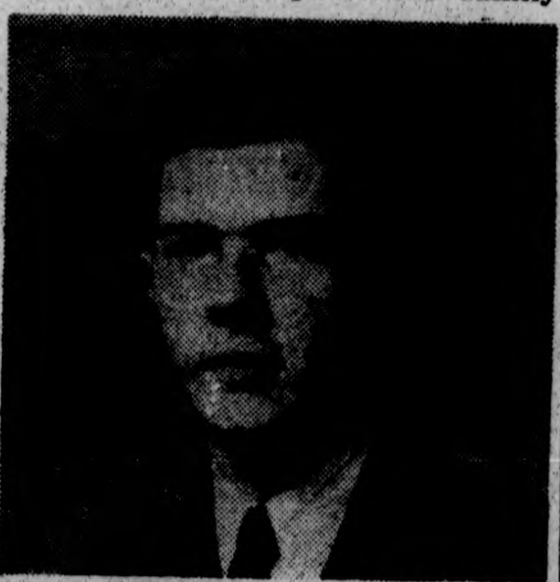
Paint Your Car? Need A Gal? Tim Or Bob Will Prove A Pal

By ED BENNIS

TIMIDLY approaching room 106 Fedigan in search of Timothy F. Donovan and Robert P. Schisler, your reporter found Tim engaged in the process of eating an apple and rather reluctant to discuss his past life. After he lit a cigarette, he seemed more at ease and agreed to give us—with a little persuasion on our part—the facts we deemed necessary to portray him as he was, and is.

It seems that Tim first saw the light of day in Haverhill, Mass., on March 19, 1919; according to Mr. Donovan, "Haverhill is not farm country, as some people may think." We'll take his word on this.

At the tender age of four, Tim gave the family an inkling of what they could expect from their toddling son when he attempted, without his parents' consent, and with little success, to paint the family car a bright yellow. Let it suffice to say that he couldn't sit down for three days after this little episode.



TIMOTHY DONOVAN

Nothing Else To Do

Attending the local grammar school, he was taught the fundamentals of learning and achieved recognition as one of the leaders of the "campus" during the customary eight-year stay. Still within the bounds of Haverhill, he registered at St. James' High and continued his high scholastic work. According to our informant, the high school was rather small and there was not a great deal a youth could do but study.

Upon his graduation, Tim made known his wish to study engineering and began to cast his glance in the direction of M. I. T. By chance he happened on a Villanova catalogue and decided, after reading it, to pursue his further studies at Villanova.

A Saxophonist

Although scholastic work has taken up much of his time around the college, Tim has found time to indulge in a few extra-curricular activities. He confesses to playing the saxophone and has been assistant band manager for the last two years. A member of the A. S. M. E., he was a staff writer for the Villanova "Engineer" in his junior year. He joined the Phi Kappa Pi for a year and takes a great interest in its current affairs. Despite these activities, he's found time to keep his marks above average.

During the summer vacations, Tim travels to Hampton Beach, N. H. (the Atlantic City of New England) and takes part in divers occupations. They have included clerking in a grocery store and painting houses. He's also spent a great deal of his vacation time tinkering with any old car he can get his hands on.

That's What Ford Did

Tim numbers among his hobbies drawing and photography. Your correspondent was struck by a shining example of his drawings—a sketch of a rather beautiful young lady named Hedy Lamarr. As mentioned above, he also finds relaxation in tinkering with rundown jaloppies.

In the case of young Mr. Donovan, vs. Life, it would seem that his first tendencies were reliable indications of where his abilities lay. Beginning with that notable occasion upon which he applied that first coat of paint to his father's unoffending automobile, he's had a life-long ambition to get into the automotive industry and is working toward that end now.

On the subject of his social life, this half of "Meet the Boys" is rather quiet; he claims that nothing notable has happened along these lines and that he's too busy at the present time to pay much attention to the weaker sex. Although he's known to be interested in a certain Brooklyn lass, he states that social affairs are taken care of almost entirely by his roommate.

WE now come to that man about the campus, Bob Schisler, or "Fly Feet" as he's called by intimate friends. This future teacher was born on February 11, 1919, in Canton, Ohio; a plump, squealing bundle of heaven. He received his early education at two Canton grammar schools, during which time nothing notable happened; after he matriculated at St. John's High, his true self came into being. Bob was class president his first two years and vice-president in his junior and senior years, besides being on the basketball team.

After graduation he decided to come to Villanova on the recommendation of his uncle, a former teacher here. Our informant entered the School of Science but, after a year, transferred to Education which he claims was his first love anyway.

Our Ex-Colleague

Bob has been playing clarinet in the band for four years, was on the orientation and sophomore cotillion committees, is secretary of the Arts fraternity, a member of the senior ball committee, and has just ceased his arduous task as circulation manager of the VILLANOVAN. Besides these activities, he's found time to make the honor roll. Whew!

With regard to his activities as circulation manager of this "sheet," we might mention that under the rule of "Chief" Schisler records were set both for the number of copies printed and the brevity of time required for distribution. Maybe it was interest in his work or perhaps he just wanted the folks back home in Ohio to know what he was doing.

ROBERT SCHISLER

Bob has had a variety of positions the last two summers, ranging from a truck driver to assembling window screens. But these jobs weren't so all-occupying as to prevent him from engaging in his beloved social pastimes.

Studies "Jive"

Although Bob professes to no particular hobby, it's known that he's a great swing addict and one of Benny Goodman's most loyal devotees. In spite of this, he maintains that he's not a common jitterbug; ah, the irony of it all. He's also the most avid local reader of "Canton Repository," some form of a hometown daily. In fact, we might go so far as to say that he's the only local reader of that laudable publication.

Digging deep into the history of his social life, your roving reporter uncovered some rather interesting facts. Our hero can be seen about the campi of Bryn Mawr and Harcum and may often be seen in North Philadelphia. At the time of this writing, however, his flame is a pert little brunette—"just call her Betty"—from the hills of Glenside. But, like most of us, he also confesses to a weakness for blondes. It's also known that our man-of-the-hour used to carry on a rather large "scented" correspondence in his freshman year. But he's a senior now.

More About Women

Looking about room 106, we noticed many pictures of the more beautiful members of the movie colony. It seems that Bob has a blonde or a brunette for every day in the week on the wall of the room and yet claims he knows nothing about the pictures!

At the present time, he'd like to teach after he graduates; Uncle Sam may have something to say about that. Bob probably will be called up to the army in the near future, thus postponing his plans for a year. Hopeful, however, he's now practice-teaching at Radnor High where, he claims, he doesn't get flustered by the many pretty girls staring at him.

Use Campus Walks

EVERY day the Villanova campus receives imprinted evidence of the two most ravaging passions of the student body.

A mere glance around the grounds of the campus is sufficient for anyone familiar with the location to determine just what pastimes our college boy lends himself to most avidly. Two long barren tracts and a short well-trodden path bear mute testimony of the unrestrained appetites which have besieged our otherwise beautiful campus.

The two lengthy trails are behind Mendel hall and Saint Mary's hall, respectively. The less extensive plot is in front of the monastery. The first two lead to the post office, the other to the dining hall. They are each different sites, but each betrays the same offense—a spirit of inconsideration, and a lack of good will.

These, of course, are not the only trails blazed by our collegiate "pathfinders." But the others, particularly those leading to Simpson hall, are due to physical conditions rather than to any lack of consideration on the part of the trespasers.

When spring is with us we feel certain that these three avenues of barren soil will stand out in decorative contrast to the surrounding green of the campus. We are equally certain that the campus walks to the post office and the dining hall will not lose any of their stability or become unclean should you choose to use them. And, incidently, these walks are just as short as your now infertile lanes.

There is no complaint about your eagerness for these two pleasantries, but the fault lies in the means that are used to satisfy them. We take pride in the campus of Villanova, and we wish to keep it beautiful. Small signs have been placed around the grounds to this effect, but apparently they have been ignored. Those who persist in this offense are reminded that fines will be levied in the future.

Outlaw Red Influence

DURING the past week the Dies Committee has received indirect support in its investigation of un-American and subversive activities from many various sources which, it is heartening to note, have finally become aware of the danger and menace accompanying the proponents of a certain philosophy whom we have harbored and coddled like infants.

Two bills which would outlaw Communism and Nazism in the United States, applying to citizens and aliens alike, were introduced into the House early in the week. Bringing the issue closer to home, a bill jointly sponsored by the Republican and Democratic members to bar from the ballot any party advocating overthrow of the government (admitted to be aimed at the Communist party) was reported to the floor of the State Senate on Tuesday.

A still more local issue was the action taken by the American Federation of Teachers against the Philadelphia local which, it charges, has communistic teachers in its personnel. All of these measures are commendable, and it is especially favorable that they have been instigated at this moment.

Now, more than ever, it is necessary that we be free from outside threat in the nation-wide production task confronting us. And now it is that these opposing forces have merged with us to obstruct our aims. Even more important than their presence in industry is the realization that the children of America are subject to their atheistic, hammer and sickle ideology.

It is essential for the future generations of Americans that we liberate the elementary, secondary, and collegiate institutions from the influence of this creed and all that it signifies. No half-way methods will serve the purpose of these investigations.

For Christ And Man

TOMORROW the world will initiate a new campaign for victory in battle and an eternal peace. Tomorrow we commemorate Ash Wednesday; we begin a period of recollection and preparation in memory of the passion, death, and resurrection of our Savior; we think once more of God—a duty which the universe has forgotten and neglected. Tomorrow is the first day of the Holy Season of Lent.

It is well that such a period commences now, for, in the mad scramble by nations throughout the world to rearm and mobilize troops for the existing crisis, mankind has forsaken the Creator, and has shunned or relegated to the background his moral, ethical, and religious obligations. At the nativity of our Lord angelic choirs announced through the heavens "Peace on earth . . ." Men did not understand, or they did not heed these words. Perhaps tomorrow, when we start to prepare for His last days on earth, the vocal symbol of this day, "Dust thou art, and to dust thou shalt return," will help man understand to whom he owes allegiance.

When Christ, by His supreme obligation, opened the gates of salvation, He ordained that we should attain it by the precepts of love, sacrifice, and brotherhood. Now we find that man has established his own distorted principles for deliverance from sin and death—principles of bloodshed, lust, and Godlessness which can only end in physical and spiritual destruction.

Burdened by these rebellious conditions, we enter another war against sin tomorrow. In this battle our leader is Christ, our banner bears the emblems of love and sacrifice, and our army is comprised of God-fearing, peace-loving men. Our every work, our every self-denial, our every expression of love we offer to our leader and those who need it most, the nations engaged in that other conflict. We do our acts in the name of these unfortunate people that they may soon know peace among their lands, and that they will return to the teachings of Christ for true peace.

FACULTY COMMENTS

NOT ABOUT "BOOGIE-WOOGIE"

By Fr. Handran

CARNEGIE HALL on a Saturday afternoon. A packed house. The stage dark except for a small pool of white light, startling against the blackness. Sharply defined in the circle, a figure slightly hunched over a piano. Rachmaninoff.

Beautiful rippling melody changes to flowing harmony. A sudden firmness in the tonal texture. The music flows no more. It roughens—becomes hard—begins to build itself up viciously. It mounts higher, higher—an ominous mass of swirling dissonance that thunders—and whines—and thunders again. A great harmonic force rolls in from the echoes and launches itself against the tremendous mass. A throat-tearing climax. A sudden hush. The end.

We look around us in the furiously applauding audience. These people have something worth while. Something intangible but something worth while—a love for beauty, perhaps—true beauty.

Here on our right is a stodgy looking man—a minor executive in somebody's flourishing grain business, we guess. Across from us are two young men, obviously collegians, and—we say it with a kind of awe—obviously not bored. Our eyes wander over the house—thousands rendering tribute to an artist for the kind of music that he brings from the piano. Yes, these people have something worth while — appreciation of music — response to the vital imagery in tone.

This recognition of true beauty in blended sound, and delight in it, is a subtle thing—indefinable. You won't find it in the college curriculum. It's a bit higher—closely allied to that other something which colleges can't supply wholesale—culture.

Colleges impart education, more or less successfully. They can sometimes insinuate an impulse toward the finer things of life and a desire to take one's pleasure among those things which reach up toward sublimity. Thus far they may go, but no farther. Desire for this or that is bound up with free will, by which a man can make of himself a priceless idiot whatever his opportunities, and by which there are boors and bores with no end of college degrees.

Love for good music is a queer thing. Good music, remember. Every collegian in Christendom has a favorite waltz which always wafts him into wall-eyed ecstacy, or a bit of "boogie woogie" that goes to his feet. We're talking about good music. It supplies a gauge by which a man may be judged, in part at least. Every man who appreciates true musical beauty is not necessarily a cultured man, but every cultured man is necessarily one who likes good music, because devotion to the more refined things is a mark of true culture.

Here is a curious fact, and one which carries food for thought for the educator. Your average modern college student sits down and labors over, let us say, an assignment for a class on the following day. He finishes his task after perhaps an hour or more of real study. He considers the time well spent in adding something to his store of knowledge—and rightly so. That's why he came to college. But when the same student turns on his radio and accidentally tunes in on a classical music broadcast he twists the dial or punches the buttons feverishly until a clever concoction of minor moans seeps out and begins to swing about.

He considers that time spent in learning to appreciate the better music would be absolutely wasted. In other words, time spent in making him more educated is spent wisely. Time spent in making him more cultured is thrown away.

Thirty or forty years ago there was little opportunity to hear good music, and there was less incentive to learn anything about it. It became, in this country, something esoteric — something that "them high-toned people" liked. And the musician was regarded a long-haired chap who wandered precariously on the brink of insanity and indulged in periodic fits of artistic temperament.

But now the thousands of listeners of the great opera and symphony broadcasts, and the thousands of people who attend the various low-price concerts in the summer testify to the American's love for the finer things in music. A love which the college man should certainly share.

Good music portrays beautiful thoughts in beautiful tonal forms. And why is appreciation of good music important to the college man? Because it becomes a part of his life. A modern essayist gives us the whole argument in a sentence: "I want beauty in my life itself, rather than in such chances as befall it."

AFTER last Friday and Saturday nights' affairs, it's easy to understand the bedraggled expressions on the boys' countenances. The Prom and the Dinner-Dance were financial and social successes. If you don't believe me, try to buy a bicarbonate of soda from Louie or borrow two bits from a Senior.

The profuseness of orchids at the dance served to prove the old adage that "a sugar-daddy is a form of crystallized sap." The girls from home were unexpectedly nice and threatened to rival our local belles. Of course, the soft lights and the tropical decorations were in their favor.

Bob Chester's swing was so hot that many of the fellows' faces were flushed . . . from dancing. Fashion note: tails are now being worn with red collars. If this cynicism doesn't stop, this column probably will.

Tommy Dorsey Tops at Villanova; Jitterbugs and Jivers In Minority

By EDWARD F. BORDEN

PICKING Tommy Dorsey's orchestra as their favorite by a large majority, Villanova students last week expressed their opinions on three questions reflecting musical and terpsichorean tastes. The fact that only three out of every ten students here "jitterbug" and that over half of them enjoy both classical and popular music rather than either type of music alone were also revealed.

In the first question asked students interviewed by the pollers, "T. D." received almost 40% of the entire vote for orchestras. Glenn Miller, formerly the nation's as well as Villanova's, number one choice, has been relegated to a rather poor second place. Following the pair are Jimmy Dorsey, Kay Kyser, and Artie Shaw.

College percentages on the question, in which 10% of the student body were asked to name one choice only, are:

Tommy Dorsey 39%
Glenn Miller 21%
Jimmy Dorsey 10%
Kay Kyser 7%
(All Others) 17%

"The Sentimental Gentleman of Swing" led in each of the four schools. His greatest campus popularity was shown to be among the engineers, where 52% of their enrollment believe him to be "tops." He also holds strong favor in the commerce school, where 41% voted him their favorite, and in the arts and science schools with percentages of 37% and 31%, respectively.

Glenn Miller, the college's second choice, has his largest following among the businessmen, where, with 36%, he ran a close second to Tommy Dorsey's 41%. Jimmy Dorsey, the third-ranking choice, tied Miller and Shaw for second place in the School of Engineering; Kay Kyser tied Miller for second in popularity among science men.

Along with the question on favorite orchestras were asked the two questions: "Do you 'jitterbug'?" and "Do you enjoy classical or popular music or both?"

Returns on the question showed that 31% of the students engage in the currently-popular form of fast dancing, while 69% do not. The engineers do the least "jitterbugging" of any group in the college; artsmen and educators do the most, turning in the largest percentage, 45% stating that they "jitterbug."

Totals on the question of students' tastes in musical types are:

36% prefer popular music
56% enjoy both

Artsmen and educators, the students most fond of "jitterbugging," possess by far the highest percentage in favor of the classics.

Items On Flunking Exams And How To Act On A Date, Mixed With Assorted Wit

NOW THAT the last semester's grades have struck home, and probably in more places than one, this column would like to pass on a bit of honky-tonk found in the Varsity News of Detroit University:

Dear Dad . . . It hurts me deeply,
When in your note I see
No usual news so cheery,
No usual check for me.
I thought that I would write you
Before I'd packed my grip,
With hope I might convince you
I'm unworthy of the trip.
Dad! How much you were misguided
When you wrote to me last time,
You said, "I'm disappointed;
Your report card is a crime."
Dad! I'm here for getting knowledge
And the card shows plain as day,
I've got lots to learn in college,
So, gosh, why can't I stay?

Sing a Song of College Days:

Last week's Collegiate Digest carried a picture of the "radio burning" held on the campus of the University of California at Los Angeles. It seems that the students have the jitters because most of their favorite jitter-and-jive numbers are included in the ASCAP "must not play on the radio" list. What's more? most of the well-known colleges' songs are included in the ban.

Among the restricted school tunes are "On Brave Old Army Team," "Anchors Aweigh", "On Wisconsin," "Fordham Ram," "Fight on, Pennsylvania", "Maine Stein Song", "Notre Dame Victory Song", "Hail to California", "Harvardiana", "Hail to Pitt", and "Roar Lion Roar."

"My Date":

From the Immaculatan, we cull the following interesting extract of the column "Spice, by Snoop". It puts us in mind of the La Salle Collegian's constructive column on the various points to be included in a girl for the ideal "date," except, of course, that the Immaculatan writes about the lads and is constructive by pointing out things to be avoided:

"I don't like Hubert, he is like lots of other boys.

He is always to be seen on the campus before a big dance, my dance. He has a wonderful line that should work on me; it has on dozens of other girls. . .

He's coming to the dance; so he arrives fifteen minutes ahead of time. As I rip into my gown and smear hurried dabs of make-up across my face, he sits Sphinx-like in the living room, smoking Dad's cigarettes furiously. To every pleasantry ventured by distressed parents, he answers in a monosyllable; then relapses into silence. Perhaps his reveries are induced by a few stops he has made en route. . .

At the dance we are surrounded by his cronies, whom he has forgotten to introduce to me. Conversation centers around un-mutual friends, while the details of the last big game are discussed with the furtive whisperings accorded a state secret.

We dance. He can't. That doesn't stop his endeavor at zany trick steps, or his condescending attitude when I fail to follow suit. He decides not to hold that against me, and hums, off key and off beat, into my tortured ear for the rest of the night.

Where we go after the dance is a subject of much debate, Hubert can never make up his mind. Alone, I must struggle in and out of my coat, pull out my chair, and give my order to the waitress. She and the cashier are the beneficiaries of Hubert's attentions, to which, by now, they are welcome.

At very long last, we are at my door. Hubert cannot understand why I refuse to be amiable. He says that he will call me next week, though of course, neither of us believes it. That is the thought which consoles me.

Meet The Boys:

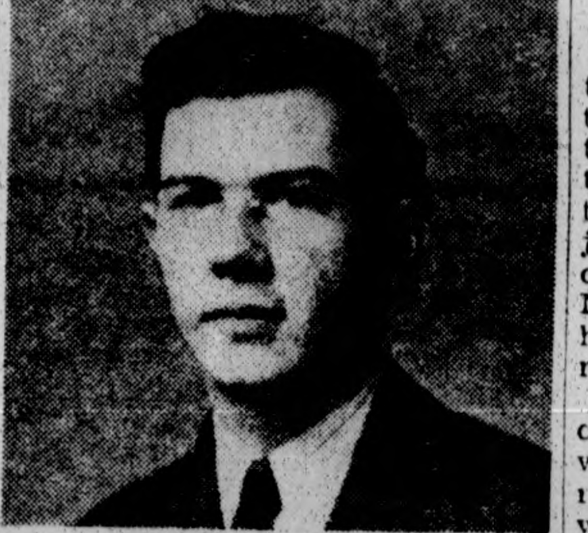
Paint Your Car? Need A Gal? Tim Or Bob Will Prove A Pal

By ED BENNIS

TIMIDLY approaching room 106 Fedigan in search of Timothy F. Donovan and Robert P. Schisler, your reporter found Tim engaged in the process of eating an apple and rather reluctant to discuss his past life. After he lit a cigarette, he seemed more at ease and agreed to give us—with a little persuasion on our part—the facts we deemed necessary to portray him as he was, and is.

It seems that Tim first saw the light of day in Haverhill, Mass., on March 19, 1919; according to Mr. Donovan, "Haverhill is not farm country, as some people may think." We'll take his word on this.

At the tender age of four, Tim gave the family an inkling of what they could expect from their toddling son when he attempted, without his parents' consent, and with little success, to paint the family car a bright yellow. Let it suffice to say that he couldn't sit down for three days after this little episode.



TIMOTHY DONOVAN

Nothing Else To Do

Attending the local grammar school, he was taught the fundamentals of learning and achieved recognition as one of the leaders of the "campus" during the customary eight-year stay. Still within the bounds of Haverhill, he registered at St. James' High and continued his high scholastic work. According to our informant, the high school was rather small and there was not a great deal a youth could do but study.

Upon his graduation, Tim made known his wish to study engineering and began to cast his glance in the direction of M. I. T. By chance he happened on a Villanova catalogue and decided, after reading it, to pursue his further studies at Villanova.

A Saxophonist

Although scholastic work has taken up much of his time around the college, Tim has found time to indulge in a few extra-curricular activities. He confesses to playing the saxophone and has been assistant band manager for the last two years. A member of the A. S. M. E., he was a staff writer for the Villanova "Engineer" in his junior year. He joined the Phi Kappa Pi for a year and takes a great interest in its current affairs. Despite these activities, he's found time to keep his marks above average.

During the summer vacations, Tim travels to Hampton Beach, N. H. (the Atlantic City of New England) and takes part in divers occupations. They have included clerking in a grocery store and painting houses. He's also spent a great deal of his vacation time tinkering with any old car he can get his hands on.

Tim numbers among his hobbies drawing and photography. Your correspondent was struck by a shining example of his drawings—a sketch of a rather beautiful young lady named Hedy Lamarr. As mentioned above, he also finds relaxation in tinkering with rundown jaloppies.

In the case of young Mr. Donovan, vs. Life, it would seem that his first tendencies were reliable indications of where his abilities lay. Beginning with that notable occasion upon which he applied that first coat of paint to his father's unoffending automobile, he's had a life-long ambition to get into the automotive industry and is working toward that end now.

On the subject of his social life, this half of "Meet the Boys" is rather quiet; he claims that nothing notable has happened along these lines and that he's too busy at the present time to pay much attention to the weaker sex. Although he's known to be interested in a certain Brooklyn lass, he states that social affairs are taken care of almost entirely by his roommate.

WE now come to that man about the campus, Bob Schisler, or "Fly Feet" as he's called by intimate friends. This future teacher was born on February 11, 1919, in Canton, Ohio; a plump, squealing bundle of heaven. He received his early education at two Canton grammar schools, during which time nothing notable happened; after he matriculated at St. John's High, his true self came into being. Bob was class president his first two years and vice-president in his junior and senior years, besides being on the basketball team.

After graduation he decided to come to Villanova on the recommendation of his uncle, a former teacher here. Our informant entered the School of Science but, after a year, transferred to Education which he claims was his first love anyway.

Our Ex-Colleague

Bob has been playing clarinet in the band for four years, was on the orientation and sophomore cotillion committees, is secretary of the Arts fraternity, a member of the senior ball committee, and has just ceased his arduous task as circulation manager of the VILLANOVAN. Besides these activities, he's found time to make the honor roll. Whew!

With regard to his activities as circulation manager of this "sheet," we might mention that under the rule of "Chief" Schisler records were set both for the number of copies printed and the brevity of time required for distribution. Maybe it was interest in his work or perhaps he just wanted the folks back home in Ohio to know what he was doing.

ROBERT SCHISLER

Bob has had a variety of positions the last two summers, ranging from a truck driver to assembling window screens. But these jobs weren't so all-occupying as to prevent him from engaging in his beloved social pastimes.

Studies "Jive"

Although Bob professes to no particular hobby, it's known that he's a great swing addict and one of Benny Goodman's most loyal devotees. In spite of this, he maintains that he's not a common jitterbug; ah, the irony of it all. He's also the most avid local reader of "Canton Repository," some form of a home-town daily. In fact, we might go so far as to say that he's the only local reader of that laudable publication.

Digging deep into the history of his social life, your roving reporter uncovered some rather interesting facts. Our hero can be seen about the campi of Bryn Mawr and Harcum and may often be seen in North Philadelphia. At the time of this writing, however, his flame is a pert little brunette—"just call her Betty"—from the hills of Glenside. But, like most of us, he also confesses to a weakness for blondes. It's also known that our man-of-the-hour used to carry on a rather large "scented" correspondence in his freshman year. But he's a senior now.

Looking about room 106, we noticed many pictures of the more beautiful members of the movie colony. It seems that Bob has a blonde or a brunette for every day in the week on the wall of the room and yet claims he knows nothing about the pictures!

At the present time, he'd like to teach after he graduates; Uncle Sam may have something to say about that. Bob probably will be called up to the army in the near future, thus postponing his plans for a year. Hopeful, however, he's now practice-teaching at Radnor High where, he claims, he doesn't get flustered by the many pretty girls staring at him.

Translating Chester's Music Into Steps

Couples dancing above are part of the large crowd that waltzed and "jitterbugged" to the music of Bob Chester during the broadcast from the Senior Belle Air Ball last Friday night. The Class of '41 concluded its social activities at a dinner-dance the following evening.

Friday Night's Belle Air Ball: "One Who Was There" Reminisces

THE seniors — and a large crowd of underclassmen — brought their "dates" to the Field House last Friday evening to dance away the night to the strains of Bob Chester's rhythms.

Pessimistic predictions of the attendance were proven unfounded by a crowd larger than at most of the senior proms of other years. Explanation: a record box-office sale was responsible. Evidently, a majority of those present either decided on a last-minute "date" or held off for fear of snow or a hurricane.

There was no hurricane inside the Gym, but the approximation of some of the traditional hurricane-center resorts of Florida was close enough to make a few of the attendees just a bit wary. The striking decorations were well-received; everything—surf, beach-chairs, tables, cabanas, plants, bright red-and-white sideboards, sailboats, and the colored fountain —were reminiscent of a southern playground. Also greeted with approval were the new ideas on lighting — the soft lights in the lobby and the spotlights in the Field House floor — and the modernization of the Blue Room. Much more room was provided by the band's sitting on the stage, and the musicians were more easily seen.

Chester's music included every type of piece but Fifth Symphonies.. His "Octave Jump" was demanded; "Chester's Choice" and "When It's Beau Time in Hotchkiss Corners" and others of his current recordings were featured; and, of course, there were many of the beloved slow pieces in demand by the majority of dancers.

The maestro really brought along some good arrangements of the Villanova songs, which were played twice during the evening. At the close, when Bob led the singing of the campus pieces, some of the boys were a little shame-faced before their "dates" because they had forgotten the words just a bit; others blushed because they knew the words but could not put them into a pleasing rendition.

Some of the best numbers of the night were rendered during Chester's broadcast over Columbia. Handling the arrangements and announcing the program was Hugh Ferguson, who attended Villanova a few years ago. It was "old home week" to him.

The affair was reminiscent of dear old England with flares popping every few seconds. It was the usual battery of "Belle Air," VILLANOVAN, and amateur photographers getting their shots.

After the event, the seniors still had enough energy left to flock to the Philadelphian for the Dinner-Dance on Saturday night. "Eating rare foods" (without "heady wines"), they danced to an orchestra prominent in Germantown, Mount Airy, and Chestnut Hill: Don Crist and His Esquires.

Thursday Date Of First Frosh Debate

Villanova's Freshman Debating Club will meet the first-year forensic group of St. Joseph's College this Thursday on the topic of the conscription of industry by the United States government. Members of the local team have been selected and are preparing papers for their first debate of the season.

As preparation for the contest, the freshman group held an informal debate last Thursday on the same topic. The affirmative and the negative were argued by two members on each side and the rest of the club presented rebuttals and criticism of the speakers.

For debates in the near future, secretary Robert F. Young has contacted Princeton University, the University of Pennsylvania, St. Joseph's Prep, and other institutions.

Dr. Drenisk Speaks On German Youth Programs

"German Youth Movements" was the topic of an address given by Dr. Rudolph Drenick, instructor of physics and mathematics, at a meeting of the German Club held last night.

Dr. Drenick traced the origin and history of the movement, its rise to prominence under the present regime, and its various features. He spoke from actual experience, having been in Vienna at the time of the Anschluss.

During the meeting, a special committee presented the final draft of a proposed constitution for the approval of the club. Upon the approval of the the proper authorities, the instrument will become effective.

Relations Club Makes Survey Of Modern China

Continuing a discussion of Far Eastern problems, members of the International Relations Club will make a thorough survey of the people, classes, religion and education of China from the nineteenth to the twentieth century, at a meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon.

At last week's meeting, Russia and Korea were considered in their relation to the development of Japan as a world power in 1905. The Rev. E. J. McCarthy, moderator, described Japan's campaign against Russia in 1905, the impressive conquests of Japan, the intervention of Theodore Roosevelt and the consequent recognition of Japan as a world power.

Describing Korea as a constant source of dissension between China and Japan, Fr. McCarthy commented upon its former government and stressed the importance of its geographical location in relation to the defense of Japan.

Science Forum Convenes

Rev. Francis A. Diehl, O. S. A., spoke before those present at the weekly Science Forum, held last Thursday morning, Feb. 20. He talked on psychology, illustrating his lecture with concrete examples of specific cases mentioned.

Thomas C. Muraski, president of the sophomore class, was appointed chairman of the Organizing Committee of the Philadelphia Region of the National Federation of Catholic College Students at the meeting of the group held in Philadelphia last week.

Under the direction of Miss Gertrude Kirk, president of the National Organization, the meeting of representatives from all the Catholic colleges in this region was held in order to draw up plans for a Philadelphia Chapter. Formerly, the schools in this vicinity were under the supervision of the New York chapter, but the great distance between the New York and Pennsylvania schools made co-operation difficult.

The representatives at this meeting elected two students from each school members of an organizing committee to start the Philadelphia region on its way. The second Villanova representative was John Quinn, sophomore chemical engineer and treasurer of his class.

The N. F. C. C. S. is a member of the National Catholic Youth Council and its moderators are the Most Rev. Emmet M. Walsh, D. D., and the Most Rev. John A. Duffy, D. D. Father Mooney is the National Chaplain.

The purpose of the organization is to "assist both the colleges and the various student groups to give energetic and practical application to the teachings of the Holy Father and the Church's leaders regarding the formation of a Christian - minded apostolate among the Catholic laity; to contribute to the spreading and deepening of a highly trained Catholic opinion, by:

a. assisting in the development of Student Councils or their equivalent in Catholic institutions of higher learning;

b. acting as a medium for the exchange of ideas and experiences on the part of affiliated units;

c. providing the membership with suggestions and practical material in the field of authentic Catholic action;

d. representing the Catholic Student body in national and international life."

Chairman Muraski and his organizing committee will seek to fulfill this purpose by bringing the Philadelphia region to an active stage of participation in the organization.

"Alumnus" Fund Issue Out In Color Cover

Opening the drive to equip the proposed library, the Centennial Fund Issue of the "Alumnus" appeared last week with a full-color plate cover.

In the issue, which contains full coverage of the $40,000 campaign in regard to its necessity, explanation of and pictures of the proposed building, and the organization and mechanics of the drive, are articles by Rev Edward V Stanford, O. S. A., Rev Daniel P Falvey, O. S. A. and Edward J. Burke, Ph. D., '23, on the drive.

J Stanley Smith. Esq., '93, contributes "Memories of Alma Mater"; Rev. Thomas F. Gilligan, O. S. A., '26, an article on the objectives of the college, "Why Villanova?"

The plight of the private colleges is discussed by John P. Keffer, '25, in his essay, "Invest in America"; Merton D. Nason, Jr., '34, writes of football games in the first part of the century in his "Stalking the Wildcats" department, while William G. Slaughter, '38, contributes "Thisa and Thata."

Out of 225 men selected, up to date 128 have agreed to act as class agents of the fund drive.

Copies of the issue have been mailed to all alumni. Seniors may obtain a free copy by calling at the office of William G. Slaughter, alumni secretary, 120 Mendel.

This issue is the last one under the editorship of Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar. The new editor of the alumni publication will be announced in next week's issue of the VILLANOVAN.

Donates Two Items For College Museum

Last week Rev. Patrick O'Shea, O. S. A., donated two articles possessing religious associations to the projected Villanova Museum.

A rosary taken from an English soldier dying on Flanders Field during the First World War is one item. Another English soldier took this rosary and sent it home to his sister, Mrs. Joseph Broodbent, of Oldham, Lancaster, England, shortly before he himself was killed on the same battlefield. Mrs. Broodbent sent it to the only Catholic in the family, Mr. John Broodbent, of Lawrence, Mass., who subsequently gave it to Fr. O'Shea.

The other article donated is a white marble stone bearing the inscription: "Rock from the Tomb of the Holy Innocents of Bethlehem." It was long in the possession of Fr. Farrell, who was prior of St. Mary's hall until his death in 1929.

The donor of the two items, Fr. O'Shea, was formerly assistant rector of St. Thomas of Villanova parish. He is now stationed at St. Mary's in Lawrence.

A.I.E.E. Starts Study Of Problems Of Illumination

Student papers and demonstrations concerning illumination problems and potentialities will feature future meetings of the Villanova chapter of the A. I. E. E.

Motion pictures were shown at yesterday's meeting through the courtesy of the General Electric Co.

"A Modern Zeus" with artificial lightning produced by the 10,000,000 volt lightning generator in the General Electric High Voltage Laboratory at Pittsfield, Mass., demonstrated the destructive effect of natural lightning discharges and showed devices which have been built to protect electric power systems and service from lightning.

A second film, "Power Transformers," gave a review of thirty-five years of engineering and manufacturing progress in the building of transformers. A comparison of the earliest transformers, weighing only twenty pounds, with the modern twenty-ton transformers gave an indication of the progress made in this field.

The next meeting of the A. I. E. E. will be held Monday, March 10.

Attends Educators Meeting

Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., attended a committee meeting of the University and College Department of the Eastern Region of the National Catholic Educational Association at Manhattan College, New York, last Saturday. The committee met to discuss educational problems in the Eastern Region.

Made His Choice

ranging from sophisticated, exotic types to the sweet and innocent.

The gold trophy which Thornton, together with the band leader, will present to the "Queen" at the Prom has been donated by Enwright Jewelers of Philadelphia; it is 36 inches high and is adorned with a figure symbolizing the unsurpassed beauty of womanhood.

Ten Entrants Remain

A total of 316 photographs representing 36 states was submitted to the Prom committee for judging. Preliminary eliminations have selected for final judging the photographs of ten entrants.

Representing the faculty in this preliminary judging were Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the commerce school, Rev. Richard J. McNally, O. S. A., and Rev. Jerome A. Mahoney, O. S. A.; Robert G. Whelan, William G. Slaughter, and James F. Elliott were the lay judges from the college administration.

Three out of the series of final judgings have already been completed. Orchestra leader Sammy Kaye, during his recent theatre engagement in Philadelphia, was interviewed by Parson and during an evening performance, made his choice from the photographs submitted.

Judged in Philadelphia

Miss Ethel Barrymore Colt, niece of John Barrymore and daughter of Ethel Barrymore, also participated in the judging. She has been appearing recently in Miami and, at the time of reviewing the photographs, was at the Embassy Club in Philadelphia. A star of the stage, opera, and popular singing, she is now in New York for an operatic engagement.

Last Wednesday Evening, Mort Lawrence, announcer of the "Dawn Patrol" over radio station WIP, devoted his program to the selection of the "Queen." After broadcasting descriptions of the contestants, he combined his opinion with those embodied in telegrams received from listeners and delivered it to the committee.

"Queen" Publicized

Several other outstanding personalities will be contacted before the announcement of the final decision, the committee stated, since the judging has been very close. Arrangements have been made for the "Queen" to be interviewed over several radio stations in Philadelphia; in addition, pictures of the winner will be published in local and national publications and she will be interviewed by two prominent model agencies.

The choosing of the Prom orchestra will not take place until the nation's leading bands have released their schedules for the month of May. Though the selection of the orchestra is not in any way close to being completed, four bands have found definite favor with the committee.

Other plans for the dance will be released during succeeding weeks. Th chairman and the committee have settled on several ideas relating to entertainment, decorations, and features of the dance. They have gotten an early start in order that all arrangements for the affair be completed several weeks before the Prom itself.

DID you ever stop to think out how baseball was played here at Villanova way back some 72 years ago—in 1869? Well, we've often let our imagination get the best of us and delved back into the past to consider the state d'affairs of the game and the players. From that game of yesteryear we can paint a humorous and satirical picture, but, of course, fictitious in characters and plot, of that first game on a Sunday afternoon in the year of 1869. Well—

Chapter One

The family had gathered in the parlor that Sunday morning, right after Church, and the room seemed to be sensed with an air of excitement with squabbling voices relating the chances of the baseball game in the afternoon; when Villanova would meet State Teachers College in the battle of the century. Well, life with father was unbearable that day. He had the leading interest in the game, for didn't he serve the Villanova boys their sodas and sweets at his confectionary store, and didn't he know all the boys by their first names — Tom Finnegan, who played first base and Michael O'Toole, the pitcher and Joe Casey in the outfield?

That afternoon I went with father to the game. We hitched up the old mare to the wagon and headed down the Pike to the Villanova field. When we got there the game was almost ready to get under way. All the gentlemen from our town and even from Philadelphia, who had bet their next year's crop of hay on the outcome were present, and in their special Sunday suits, with the loud checks and brown stripes. The bands blared away and all the town's sports were there.

We took our stand at the sidelines and then . . . zounds! Father turned his head and what did he see, but Miss Nellie Bligh, the town's prettiest damsel. And what was she doing here unaccompanied? Well, certainly the old gossipers would hear of it and—but enough of this—here came the Villanova students marching down to the game to see their Blue and White nine fairly assault the opponents.

Now it was game time and umpire McCuddihy, a favorite of the Blue, stepped out and in his boisterous voice announced the pitchers and catchers. Father's eyes fairly sparkled with ecstacy for out on the mound, for the Blue, went Mr. O'Toole, indeed a handsome gentleman who gave a slight twist on his mustache and then was off.

Two hep, heps! and then the Villanova boys broke into a cheer. O'Toole wound up and blazed his fast one over the middle. "Str-r-ike one" called McCuddihy, and the crowd responded with a lusty yell. Now father was really smiling.

Well, the game proceeded along until the late innings with the score at 2-2, and only interruptions by college cow and the loss of the ball temporarily put a halt to the activities. Now in the last half of the seventh inning, Casey stepped to bat for our side.

The gentlemen from Philadelphia became a bit uneasy as McDougall of State looked down from the mound — and the d--- splinters

Freshman Five Run Winning Streak To 32 Games As Court Season Ends

Trim Intramural Stars, 44-31, to Close Second Unbeaten Campaign; Coach Severance's Frosh Teams Have 114 Wins and 4 Defeats Over A Five Year Span

Villanova's great Freshman Basketball team closed the season last week with a decisive 44-31 win over a valiant but uncoordinated All-Intramural team and with this victory they stretched their winning streak to 32 games, extending over a period of two years.

Coach Al Severance started his second team which played the complete first half and they left the floor with a slim 11-10 margin. The same combination widened this gap as the second half wore on and with a few minutes left to go and the game safely tucked away in went the first team probably to give the last crowd of the year a glimpse of the great quintet.

McDonald Delights Fans

The All-Stars started the game at a great disadvantage, due not only to the fact that they had not played together before, but also that they engaged in no strenuous schedule as had the Frosh.

For the greater part of the game it was little Bob "Major" McDonald who tormented the "Stars" and delighted the fans with his tricky ball handling and play-making. Leading the scoring was Paul Dowd who tossed in four field goals and a foul for the victors. McDonald scored four field goals for eight points. George Coupe and Art Martin scored six points apiece to lead the losers. Great individual performances were turned in by most of the All-Stars, which made it apparent that all they lacked was the unity that comes from playing a season together.

After the outcome of the game was no longer in doubt, interest in the struggle waned and although the entry of the regulars seemed to be heaping insult upon injury, it gave the crowd something new to watch. This powerful five composed of Drizen, Rapella, Lord, McDonald and Klotz amazed everyone with their uncanny passing and pushed farther ahead of the tiring All-tSars. Ted Rapella, the lanky Kitten center, managed to hold on to his position as the leading scorer on the team.

Amazing Record

Undefeated in the last two years the Villanova Frosh have a five year record under Coach Al Sever-

"Believe It Or Not"

Impossible but amazing things happen in the sports world and right here on our campus we have a "believe it or not" episode to relate.

Jimmy Brown who stands no higher than 5 ft., 2 inches in his stocking feet set a new record for scoring in the I-M basketball games last week when he totaled 45 points against the Mendel Day Students. We grant Mr. Hank Luisetti of Stanford such a remarkable bit of scoring so would you please show us the books!

Campus To See Intramural Boxers Trade Punches Next Monday Night

By JIM NUNEMAKER

The fanfare that surrounds the indoor sport of boxing and wrestling will be shifted to the Field House next Monday night when the campus will witness another chapter of the annual Intramural Boxing and Wrestling Show.

That night where fistania rules supreme, a colorful card of talent will parade the ringside. The bouts this year will be for the faculty and students, which is a little different than the previous programs that have been presented. The evening's card will be under the direction of Fr. J. R. Dunne and Fr. E. B. McKee, who are the moderators of the Intramural program.

Seek Third Win

The "Greenies" from Alumni will be out to make this year's slugfest their third straight victory in the field of pugilism. Last year Alumni was well represented with boxers in every class. One of the very classic boxers that appeared in the previous card was Bill Noco who fought in the welterweight class. The matchmakers will try to furnish the audience with 15 bouts and a number of wrestling matches.

Due to the fact that the contestants have to be in good physical condition, it is important that participants are in good shape. In order to enter the bouts it is imperative that every boxer report to the gym for training. This may be accomplished every afternoon by doing exercises, working with the light and heavy bags, and by sparring a few rounds. There are two students that are well trained in the field of boxing who will give assistance and they are Bob Mentzinger and Conde McGinley.

Gadsby to Referee

The bouts will be presented in a way that the fighters are evenly matched. This will be conducted

Pitching Staff Start Workouts At Field House

Looking forward to their 21 game schedule, the Varsity nine held its first indoor practice yesterday afternoon in the Field House. With Doc Jacobs' giving the glad-eye to a large number of diamond aspirants, the team settled down for a long workout in preparation for the opening game against Vermont University who come here on April 7.

Included in this 1941 edition are three new faces: Duke University, George Washington and Vermont. All are stellar teams in the Intercollegiate circuit and add to the headaches which Doc must undergo during the forthcoming campaign.

Ten Home Games

A ten game home schedule will include Vermont, Providence College, Western Maryland, Temple, Duke, George Washington and others. In the touring tilts the 'Cats will face C. C. N. Y., St. John's, Penn, Williams and Boston College along with others.

Yesterday's practice consisted in the pitchers warming up and with the rest of squad limbering up also. In uniform there were four pitchers, Bill Howlett, Connie O'Leary, Connie Nichols, and former freshman star Bill Woods, all of whom should see a great deal of action this season. With Tony Calandra, freshman star of last year, the infield combination looks to be rather strong. The remainder of the quartet will probably include Joe Yednock, Woody Reitmeier, and Jack Donoghue.

Consistent Winners

Again this year the 'Cat nine will probably face Ed Alex, the fireball artist from Fordham, with revenge in their eyes. This will be due to the fact that he was the only one to defeat the Blue and White team last year.

As past performances have proved, Villanova always has a baseball team that is recognized as tops in collegiate circles. This year's team should help even more to prove the fact to the baseball world and moreover to the people of the Philadelphia area.

Loyola's Zone Defense Halts 'Cats As Court Campaign Reaches Climax

Blue Tossers Draw Curtain by Succumbing to Ramblers, 38-32; Handicapped by Ailing Nugent and Kelty; Record of 13 Wins in 16 Games Impressive

BY PAUL McCANN

The curtain dropped with a thud upon the 1940-41 basketball season for the Villanova Wildcats last Wednesday night at the field house. The sad finale was not at all fitting to what has been a highly successful campaign. The boys in blue made a gallant fight of it in a game stretch but their opponents' strong opening surge, and a very unorthodox but very effective 2-2-1 zone defense, employed by the Ramblers of Loyola University of Chicago, proved too much for them as they succumbed to a 38-32 defeat.

Handicapped at the outset with two ailing regulars, Paul Nugent and Bob Kelty, on the bench, the Villanova tossers ran into trouble early in the person of one Mike Dougherty who performed all too masterly as goal-tender in the Loyola defense. Dougherty, a six foot-6 pivot man, was an immovable tower of strength under the basket and during the course of the evening knocked out at least eight sure-fired Villanova goals. Nugent and Kelty did enter the fray late in the opening half when it appeared that the spectacular shooting of the westerners might turn the affair into a rout and they performed heroically in the Villanova cause.

Unlucky Shooting

The opening half was reminiscent of the Carnegie Tech contest as the Chicagoans blasted the Wildcat defense with some fancy set-shooting and down the middle lay-ups from pick-off plays. Most of the Villanova shots which were not batted away from the basket by the Loyola jumping-jack rimmed the basket but just wouldn't drop through the cords.

Bob Dwan set the stage for Loyola's first half spree by looping in two one-handers. Wood countered with a nice set-shot from the side to be followed by a long range stab by Fred Gerland to knot the count at 4-all. Rottner took the situation into his own hands at this point and gave the Ramblers an 8-4 lead with two long sets. Dwan sandwiched in a foul between Art Spector's two free throws and Gerland's tap-up to keep Loyola in the van. The mid-westerners then forged into a long lead on the strength of three bell-ringers by Dwan and one each by Rottner and Wenskus. So, with but five minutes to go in the opening stanza, the Wildcats were behind, 8-19. Chuck Yund, for the main-liners, and Jack Stanton, for the visitors, exchanged foul tosses

Gridmen Begin Spring Training

Indoor Work Features Lessons in "Shifts"; N. Y. U. and Lehigh Listed for Tilts

Freshmen football candidates donned their moleskins for limbering up exercises yesterday, in preparation for what is scheduled to be the toughest Spring session held in the Main Line Stadium in many a day.

The main job of the Freshmen is to put themselves in good physical condition and to become familiar with the system taught by Coaches "Clipper" Smith and Vince McNally. This includes the intricate, yet colorful backfield and line shift. Mastery of these "shifts" proved to be the hardest assignment for the 1940 edition of the Wildcats. The Freshmen will be joined by the varsity about the first of March for the beginning of outdoor workouts.

Three Practice Games

This year's seedtime sessions will include three practice games. The Cats will again meet Franklin and Marshall College, and New York University in informal meets, with Lehigh U. also listed for a tussle.

Franklin and Marshall provided some very stern opposition last Spring while New York U. was taken over without much trouble. The match scheduled with Lehigh last Spring was rained out on three successive Saturdays and was finally called off.

Fedigan Sweeps To Second Half Intramural Title

Pulling themselves up from fourth place where they were a few weeks ago, the Fedigan Gigoloes won the second-half title last week as the Mendel Residents dropped the deciding game to C&F while Fedigan was downing Alumni.

Fedigan won 7 and lost 3 and Mendel followed with 6 and 4. This puts Fedigan in the playoffs with Austin Hall who won the first hilf title. The tournament is a two out of three affair with Austin as the favorite. Those who have followed the league closely are picking Austin due to the fact that the Firemen have beaten the Gigoloes every game in their four encounters this year.

Play-offs Next

The first game was close 29-28 but the second was practically a run-away, 47-31. The third was rather tight 29-24 but the last encounter, which should show both teams at their best after working together for a whole season, was another run-away for Austin 47-28.

Another factor in favor of Austin's team is that they are much better shots than Fedigan, as proved by the high scoring statistics which place three of them in the first ten in the league, with Austin's star, Dan Keating. He heads the list with 221 points while Fedigan only has one man in the first ten. Also Austin has scored far more points in their favor having almost the same team that won the tournament last year and being one of the best defensive teams in the league. The play-offs are being run off now with two more games remaining if the tournament goes to three games, one Wednesday and the last on Monday.

Complete Careers

The big upset of the weeks contests was the defeat of the first place Residents by the fourth place Businessmen. Playing in their last intra-mural game after four years, Coupe, and Dwyer completed their careers with a brilliant game each scoring 10 points to sink the first place Mendel Residents. Although C & F was only leading by a slight 18-16 score at the half, they held the lead until the end, running it to ten points before the final gun.

With Mendel one game behind them, all Fedigan had to do was to beat Alumni and clinch the title. This they did, downing the frost team 35-28 as nearly a complete senior team played its last game with Scelba starring by scoring 10 points followed by Daly and Forkin with five each.

Brown Sets Record

The final game of the year was between Austin and the Mendel Day Students. The Firemen took the game with ease as Jimmy Brown set a new scoring record with 45 points. This included 20 field goals and five foul shots. Austin took a good lead at the half 27-16 and then Mendel went to pieces as Austin rang up 48 points to take the game at 75-49 to close the league for this year.

even made them more jumpy. Applying a bit of spittle on the ball, McDougall cocked his arm back and then let loose the pellet. The ball came sailing down the midway and as it neared the plate it took a brutal curve and landed square in the back of the batter.

The gentlemen forgot themselves, the Blue and White forgot themselves and the ball-yard turned into a battleground.

Mr. McCuddihy defiantly roared to the players to start the game, but alas, his appeasements were in vain. It was a free-for-all and everyone had a nice time. But there's always a traitor to the cause and one gentleman who frowned upon skirmishes on Sunday hopped on his nag and rode swift and straight for the arms of the law.

By the time the protectors had reached the field, the situation was well in hand. The Blue had earned a moral victory and the State nine and their adherents had fled on the run in nigh less than five minutes. You might say they were ushered out in a very informal manner.

Mr. O'Toole and Mr. Casey were hoisted high on the shoulders of the crowd and marched triumphantly towards the lockers. Father smiled even more so and promised the players a round of sodas on the house. McCuddihy vowed he'd never umpire a game here again and I was allowed to stay up until ten o'clock that night.

The End

Duquesne Game

Villanova will meet Duquesne University in football next fall on Friday night, October 31, according to the recent release of the Dukes' schedule. The Dukes defeated the 'Cats this past year at Shibe Park, 10-7, and this year the scene of the game will be shifted to Pittsburgh. Duquesne will play seven night games in contrast with the previous schedule which featured Saturday afternoon games.

Co-Captain Nugent Captures Scoring

In the season just concluded, the Villanova Wildcats amassed a total of 647 points to their opponents' 527 points while winning 13 of their sixteen games. This represents a per-game average of 40.4 points to 32.9 for the opposition. High total for one game was registered in the Upsala encounter when Severance's sharpshooters sent 53 points through the cords. The lowest aggregate in one game for the 'Cats was experienced in the Washington and Jefferson debacle when only 24 markers showed on the right side of the ledger.

The team scoring was quite well distributed with four of the marksmen ringing the bell with 100 points or better. The final leader, though, was Co-captain Paul Nugent, who tossed 128 points through the hoop. Fellow co-captain, Chuck Yund, was not far behind by virtue of 123 markers. Nugent led in the field goal department with 52 bullseyes. Sophomore Bill Wood was supreme at the fifteen-foot line as he made 36 successful tosses there.

Elliott Pleased By Performance Of Track Squad

By BILL CAREY

With the present crop of Freshmen track stars shaping up so well and the varsity showing promise in recent indoor meets, Coach Jumbo Elliott has good reason to believe that his track squad will break into prominence no later than the indoor season of 1942.

Having such men as Bill Hooper, Bill Carey, Bud Jones, John DiCarlo, Harry Keefrider and Stan Nazian to form the nucleus of an outdoor team, Elliott believes that the coming spring season will start his men on their way to the top.

At present the Freshmen array of runners are not eligible for varsity competition but they are out every day working with their big brothers and hold informal meets with them. In a few weeks the Freshmen will move outdoors to prepare for their schedule which mentor Elliott has arranged.

Hooper, a Surprise

Bill Hooper is the big surprise of the current winter campaign. A former record-holder for the prep school quarter-mile swim, Bill has abandoned swimming and is making sensational strides on the mile relay team. Another relay mate, Johnny DiCarlo, is living up to his expectations forecast in his Freshman year. He was the former multi-record holder of sprints at West Catholic High and at present is the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. 220-yard champion.

Harry Keefrider, another member of the relay team, is rapidly improving in his races since he moved up from the quarter-mile run to the half-mile and mile race. Keefrider is expected to take a leading part in the success of this year's outdoor team.

Hurdlers Hold Titles

In the hurdles we find two former champions in Stan Nazian and Bill Carey. Nazian was the Philadelphia Catholic league titlist in both high and low hurdles in 1939, while Carey won the National Catholic title for hurdles in 1938. Both attended Catholic high schools in Philadelphia.

Bud Jones, a lean six ft. high jumper will be watched carefully this spring and with a bit more practice he should clear the bar with the best of them. He will defend his title in the indoor meet at Catholic University in March.

According to Coach Elliott, this year's yearling team promises successful feats in the future, mainly because of Dixie Dunbar, Bob O'Sullivan, George Guida, Jack McCarthy and Ed Manning. All hail from the Quaker City area.

Captured World's Record

Dunbar and O'Sullivan are former middle-distance champions from West Catholic and Cheltenham High, respectively. Dixie holds the National Catholic quarter-mile title and the Penn Invitation Interscholastic 440 dash and O'Sullivan was a leading point-scorer at Cheltenham. Dixie joined Keefrider and DiCarlo, while at West Catholic, in capturing the World's Interscholastic Mile Relay Championship.

O'Sullivan himself has run the half-mile run in 1:58 and is on his way to prove that he can lower that time by a few more seconds. Guida, another Freshman, runs the quarter-mile and is carrying on his feats from South Catholic High.

In the half and mile race, McCarthy from St. Thomas More and Manning from Glen-Nor High seem fast enough to thwart any competition they meet.

in a manner according to weight and ability. The contests will comprise of only students and all are encouraged to enter.

As a feature attraction of the evening, Villanova's former boxing coach, Ray Gadsby, will be the referee for the bouts. At present Ray is assistant coach of boxing at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. Ray at one time was a member of the Olympic team to represent the United States in 1926.

Strong Bouts Expected

Undoubtedly this year's crop of boxers and wrestlers will top the former years in performance and thrills. Competing in the boxing matches are the following: Ted Buckenmaire vs. John Kozloski, Fred Kaczynski vs. Paul Dowd, Charles Lozowski vs. Frank Dowd, Logan Phillips vs. Jack Faraci, Jim McGee vs. Hank Christman, and L Gorman vs. Nat DiPetrillo. Unmatched as yet but listed as entrants are Bill Noco, Buzz Mowen, Bill Sullivan, Joe Adams, George Flannery and Bill Piscione.

Trading Punches

Sparring off for a couple of rounds in preparation for the Boxing Show are Con McGinley and Bill Fenton, both light-heavyweights.

Seton Hall Wins Catholic Swim Meet, Ending Reign Of St. Francis Prep

By JACQUES MAUCH

The four-year reign of St. Francis Prep of Brooklyn as National Catholic Swim Champions was brought to an abrupt end last Saturday afternoon in the Main Line pool by Seton Hall Prep of South Orange, N. J.

Seton Hall finished far ahead with 47 points, while St. Joseph's and North Catholic, both Philadelphia teams, battled it out for second and third places, scoring 30 points and 29½ points respectively. St. Francis was fourth with 14 points.

The South Orange team composed of ten men was very well balanced and showed up well in every event. In the number of first places they were tie with St. Joe at three apiece, but they managed to place second in four events while St. Joseph's could only get minor places.

Three New Records

Bill Crocker won the 220 yd. freestyle in 2.31.1, and his teammate Frank Montprode completely outclassed the field in the backstroke setting a new record of 1.06.8 for the 100 yd. distance. He knocked four-tenths of a second off the five-year-old mark. Their other first came in the 150 yd. medley relay. The team of John McDonough, Joe Liga, and Henry Stricker finished in 1.27.4. These boys also took seconds in the backstroke, breaststroke, and 50 yd. freestyle respectively.

Besides the backstroke two other meet records were smashed. Ed Giesz of North Catholic knocked 2½ seconds off the breastroke mark when he splashed home in 1.09.7. The St. Joseph freestyle quartet of Mike Goglia, Joe Leaming, John Goldschmidt, and Tom McCloskey established a new mark of 1.44.3 in the 200 yd. relay, breaking St. Francis' record of 1.44.8.

Final Standings

1, Seton Hall, 47; 2, St. Joseph's High, 30; 3, North Catholic, 29.5; 4, St. Francis, Brooklyn, 14; 5, West Catholic, 12; 6. St. Thomas More, 9: 7, Roman Catholic, 7.5; 8, Brooklyn Prep, 4.

Campaign

to complete the first half scoring with Loyola enjoying a 20-9 lead.

Inspiring Game

Co-captain Chuck Yund, playing his last game for Villanova and a courageous figure throughout, sparked an inspiring last half drive which had the capacity crowd on its feet most of the time by dropping a beautiful long set. This was followed by Co-captain Nugent and Kelty occupying the stage in hero roles by matching Wenskus' one-man rally and keeping the Wildcats in the ball game. Then when Kelty made a nice follow-up, Gray pushed in a one-hander and Nugent all but ripped the mesh out with two successive lofty heaves from near mid-court and Villanova now was very much in it.

Following Nugent's and Kelty's free throws, Yund gunned one from side-court to put the fighting 'Cats only a point behind. Stanton stemmed the tide with his first two-pointer of the game. Rottner added to the Villanova plight by dropping a charity toss. Then with only three minutes of play remaining, Stanton banked-in a running one hand shot to give Loyola a 33-27 lead and the outlook was decidedly ominous for the home folks.

'Cats Hopes Raised

Nugent, a glorious figure in defeat, raised the Wildcat hopes with a great shot from outside the foul circle. Kelty, who also distinguished himself in the lost cause, immediately scored on a two-handed pivot shot to enable the Villanova quintet to draw within two points again. But that was the last dying gesture for the Wildcats. The strain of the valliant last-ditch rally had taken its toll, for Nugent's foul was all that was left to try to match successive goals by Stanton and Dwan and Wenskus' foul toss.

Dwan paced the scorers with 13 points while Nugent was top point-getter for Villanova with 10 markers.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

As the saying goes—"All good things must come to an end"—and so the Villanova varsity basketballers completed their 1940-41 season last Wednesday when they bowed to Loyola of Chicago. The season record of thirteen victories as against three defeats is an impressive one and earns for the team high ranking in the ratings of Eastern college quintets.

And so, with this impressive record and high rating in mind and in view of the fact that Villanova lost, it may seem derogatory and ambiguous to say that the game last Wednesday was typical of the brand of basketball displayed by the Wildcats throughout the entire season. However the typical feature of the game was not that the team lost but rather that, although trailing by a score of 20 to 9 at half time, the Wildcats came back in the second half and cut down that lead until, with six minutes of play remaining, only one point separated the two teams.

No Disgrace In Defeat

True, the midwesterners put the game on ice with a last desperate rally — but not until the Villanova quintet had shown that they possessed the perseverance and intestinal fortitude to play hardest when the going is the toughest and the game seemingly lost. There is no disgrace in a defeat of that sort.

This spirit and fight was never more evident during the campaign than in the Carnegie Tech skirmish. Against the "Skibos", the Wildcats made up a nineteen point deficit in the second half to turn a rout into a glorious victory. But would it have detracted any from the commendation and praise due to the team, had it fallen a few points short in this rally and lost the contest? We do not think so.

Coach Al Severance's November prediction that the Wildcats would be far below par and lucky to win half their games must now be placed in the same category with that famous magazine poll which showed that Landon would take Roosevelt by a country mile and Bill Terry's fatal remark—"Are the Dodgers still in the league?"

But Al was not just crying the blues when he made that remark, for back in November the varsity did look ragged while scrimmaging the freshman quintet. He could not possibly know at that time that this same freshman squad was to develop into the smoothest working frosh quintet seen in this vicinity in many a moon. It is the opinion in this corner that many a college varsity team would have all they could do to keep pace with the Kittens.

It must be a consoling thought for Al Severance to consider that this year's freshmen become next year's varsity material. With Drizen, Klotz, Lord, Rapella and Co. to take the place of the six departing seniors, somehow we do not believe that Al's prediction next November will be quite as dire as this year's!

All-Stars Good

The intra-mural All Stars, who played a surprisingly first-rate game against the freshmen last Wednesday evening in the preliminary to the Loyola game, deserve a word of commendation. Considering that it was the first time the All Stars ever played as a unit, their feat in holding the high-scoring frosh to a mere 41 points was all the more creditable.

The Seton Hall - Long Island University basketball contest which takes place in March looks like a natural to this department. Barring any mishaps before that date, Seton Hall will be fighting to protect a winning streak of 40 some-odd games, and the Blackbirds need this one in order to corral a bid to the National Invitation Tournament, which starts at Madison Square Garden on March 18. It has been the custom of the selection committee in the past to choose only two Metropolitan teams to take part in the tournament, and L.I.U. is a possibility.

School of Engineering, After Study, Raises Requirements For Promotions

By THOMAS A. SHALLOW

Higher quality-point averages will be necessary for promotions in the School of Engineering, effective with the present freshman class, in accordance with new standards adopted at the February meeting of the engineering faculty, it was announced yesterday by J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the school.

Freshmen must have an average of 1.5 to enter the sophomore year; second-year men 1.75 to go to the third year, and juniors 1.9 quality-points in order to be permitted to enter the senior year.

Result of Survey

The new requirements are a result of a study of the subject by the faculty extending over the last two years—since the letter system replaced the percentage system of grading.

Investigation has shown that students who have had averages lower than those which the new regulations require have not been able to keep up with their classes.

At the end of each semester, any student whose rating is below that specified for promotion shall be placed on probation.

Dismissal the Penalty

Students on probation must raise their grades to that required for promotion by the beginning of the next academic year or be subject to dismissal.

Exceptions to the regulations may be made when a student has passed all his required subjects but has not the necessary grade-point average. In such a case, the student is given a probational promotion.

Extra-curricular activities of a student on probation may be curtailed by his advisor after consultation with the moderator of each activity.

Dismissal is the penalty for any freshman whose average is below 1.00.

Marks Given Values

In figuring a student's grade average, numerical values are assigned to the letters in the grading system. An "A" is worth four quality-points, a "B" three, a "C" two, and a "D" one; "E's" "F's," and "N's" have no value.

For each subject, the quality-points are multiplied by the number of credit hours assigned to the subject; the sum of the products for all the subjects is then divided by the total number of credits to find the quality-point average.

This method of computation assigns proportional value to major and minor subjects. As the marks are now decided, an "A" in a minor subject, since it has fewer credit hours assigned, will not carry as much weight as an "A" in a major.

Thus, a quality average of 4.00 is the highest that can be attained, representing a straight "A"; seniors will have to average "C" to have the 2.00 quality-points necessay for graduation.

Register For Jobs

William G. Slaughter, Placement Director, today reiterated a request that all seniors register with his office as soon as possible.

Mr. Slaughter, who is in charge of the service assisting both alumni and undergraduates to locate permanent positions and in securing part-time employment, is unable to make any recommendations to firms seeking college graduates if seniors do not register immediately.

No registration fee is charged applicants for part-time employment; a fee of two dollars is assessed each registrant for permanent employment.

Student Pilots Register Today

Registration for the second series of primary flying courses of the current school year given under the supervision of the Civil Aeronautics Authority will take place today.

Approval from Washington, delayed until yesterday, has finally been received, according to William G. Slaughter, co-ordinator of the course at Villanova.

Slaughter, in requesting that all students who have any desire or intention to learn to fly do so at once, states that the course which is now beginning may be the last offered to students. He warns those who contemplate taking the course next summer or next year of the likelihood that this spring-term course will be the last offered by the Civil Pilot Training Program.

Villanova's quota for the course is 20 students and is not yet filled. Those who desire to fly are advised to register as soon as possible this week. If the quota is filled, the cost of the course to each student will be but $25. Previously, the price of flying instruction was $50 apiece.

As before, the course will consist of four hours a week ground training, probably on Monday and Friday evenings, and flight instruction at the Main Line Field, Paoli, arranged to suit the schedule of the individual.

Yearbook Deposit

Students who wish to buy an extra copy of the Belle Air or those who will not normally receive a copy must notify the following members of the Belle Air staff and deposit with them the required amount to reserve a copy: Arthur Somers, William Way, Frank McKay or Thomas Moro.

Price for the extra copy is $5.00 until March 10. After this date, the price will be advanced to $7.50. A down-payment of at least $1.00 must be made to reserve a copy.

Book Club To Visit Bindery

Regular members of the Book Club will travel to the plant of Haddon Craftsmen, Inc., in Camden, N. J., on Wednesday afternoon, March 5, to inspect the processes involved in the manufacture of the modern book.

This corporation does work for leading publishers throughout the country and has a larger volume of edition work than any other similar concern, though it has managed to keep the "Arts Preservative." It has consistently been chosen as the printer of a number of the hundred "best-printed" books for the past several years.

At the meeting of the club last Wednesday, a discussion of the sincerity of present-day critics in their views on modern books was the chief business. The members decided that contemporary criticism is based more on the desire to promote sales of various books than on a determination of literary values.

The group is making a survey of American literature from 1900 to the present day; special attention is being given to works that still "survive" and they are being compared with the "best-selling" fiction of today.

Tomorrow at 1:30 P. M., the group will meet in Simpson hall.

From Hot Dogs To Tax Reports, They All Mix Work With Studies

By JOHN P. FULLAM

Draft boards, census-takers, marriage-license bureaus, quiz programs, and other inquisitive organizations or individuals generally classify people as students or working men, or something which is neither of these. In the case of many classroom-clutterers of this institution, however, a headache-producing problem arises: how does one classify those who are both?

—Oh, of course every true student works; but we mean who are students, and who also work and get paid for it. Of this classification there are many examples.

Columnist and Walter

Dave Reardon, the VILLANOVAN'S Walter Winchell, occupies his week-ends by providing curb service at a Philadelphia Hot Shoppe. Joseph Gambescia, sophomore scientist and musician, is a genuine, full-fledged pharmacist, and spends evenings and week-ends translating the hieroglypics of the M. D.'s into something more tangible and vendible.

Another handy man to have around is George Famiglietti, who is a garage mechanic from six to nine, Wednesday through Friday, and on alternate week-ends. Jack Enright, a sophomore in the business school, plays a title role in the Enright jewelry concern after school and on Saturdays.

William Ehmer, junior engineer, spends his week-ends working in a five-and-ten. Says he, "Put down 'floor supervisor,' not 'floor-walker'."

Residents Also Employed

Extra-curricular employment (in the serious sense of the term) is not limited to day students. George Gabuzda, junior engineer, is Simpson hall's resident janitor, and after polishing up on Calculus, Chemistry, etc., polishes up Simpson hall. Thomas McKimmey, a junior in the Education Department, is Infirmarian. As such, he provides remedies for students' minor ills, takes care of all patients and reminds people to wear their rubbers.

Bernard Crumb, junior C. & F., is the campus representative of a tailoring concern, and makes a daily, or rather nightly, visit to every resident student, for collections and delivery. Charles Callahan, sophomore C. & F., is employed as a reader-companion.

Income Tax Expert

Ward Guncheon, sophomore C. & F., spends his spare time doing accounting work for his father. At the moment, he informs us, he is deeply involved in the eternal, and infernal, problem of income tax.

All of which would be summed up in the following poem, if it were a poem:

When classes are over, and school-work is done,
To remunerative businesses swiftly they run.
—Rearon to hot-dogs, Gambescia to drugs,
Ehmer to knickknacks, Gabuzda to rugs,
Enright to his diamonds, George F. to his wrecks,
While the Rockford lad remedies pains-in-your-necks,
And when for their sons they try to play the sage,
They can well say "Why lad, when I was your age. . ."

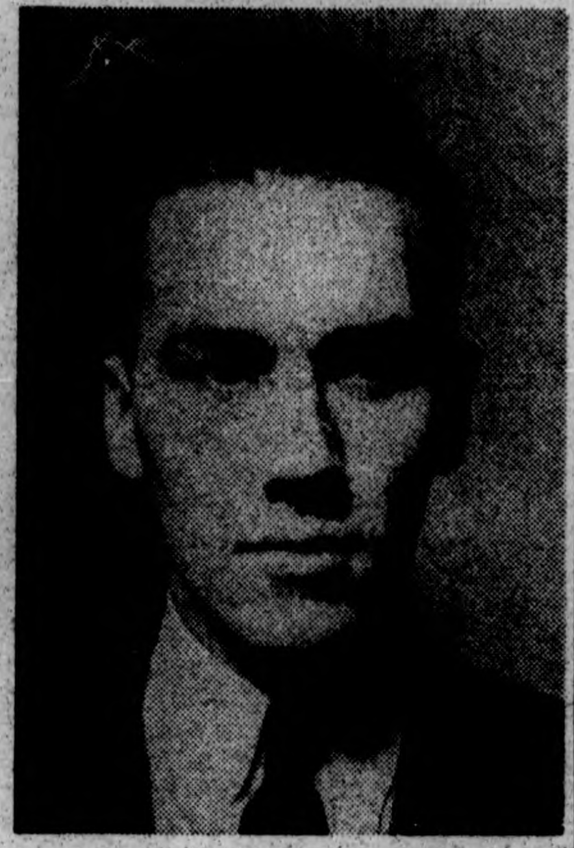
Sheehy To Direct Blazer Purchase

Junior President Names Science Man Chairman of Committee of Ten

Thomas F. Sheehy, junior science student, has been selected chairman of the Blazer Committee, it was announced today by William J. Howlett, junior class president.

Together with this appointment Howlett also named the other committee members, so that ample time may be given to the consideration of the many bids offered by clothing firms. The members of the committee are: Fred J. Clark, Theodore R. Galysh, and Bernard C. Crumb, of the business school; Nicholas C. Aceto, John C. Muench, and Bernard J. Clark, of the engineering school; Joseph C. Koch and Salvatore G. Gagliano, science students; and John P. Fullam, a student in the education department.

To Pick Blazers



THOMAS F. SHEEHY

The duties of the Blazer Committee are the procuring of bids from the various clothing houses, the selecting of the material for the blazers, and the final awarding of the contract; it also attends to distribution of the coats.

All blazers will be white and not optionally blue or white, as in many previous years. This regulation was made in order that a moderate and satisfactory contract price might be obtained. The breast-pocket will bear the class numerals and the blue insignia of the college.

Sheehy has been on the Student Council for two years and is an active member of the L. K. D. fraternity. He has served on the freshman orientation committee for the past two years.

Commenting on his appointment, Sheehy expressed his desire to inform all juniors that, contrary to the opinion of many, there have been no agreements made with any clothing concern as yet, that all bids will be welcomed, and that the firm with the best bid will be awarded the contract.

Sullivan Tops

Junior Commerce Honor Roll With Perfect Rating; Dean Lists Eight Others

Thomas A. Sullivan led the junior class in the School of Commerce and Finance with a perfect 4:00 rating in the first semester examinations, according to the roll released by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., dean of the school, yesterday.

Following Sullivan on the honor roll are: Bernard H. Swartz, 3.83; Edward R. Frank, 3.81; Ernest S. Klappenbach, 3.53; John F. Jakovic, 3.44; Theodore R. Galysh, 3.25; James F. Pike, 3.25; James P. McElligott, 3.21; and Fred J. Clark, 3.00.

The release of the third-year commerce honor roll completes the semester honor ratings for the entire college.

Jonik To Edit

"Alumnus" During Coming Year; He Produced Highest-Ranking Yearbook Edition

Edward L. Jonik, '40, a graduate of the School of Commerce and Finance, has been appointed editor-in-chief of the "Alumnus," quarterly publication of the Villanova Alumni Association. He succeeds Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar, who has served in that capacity for the past year.

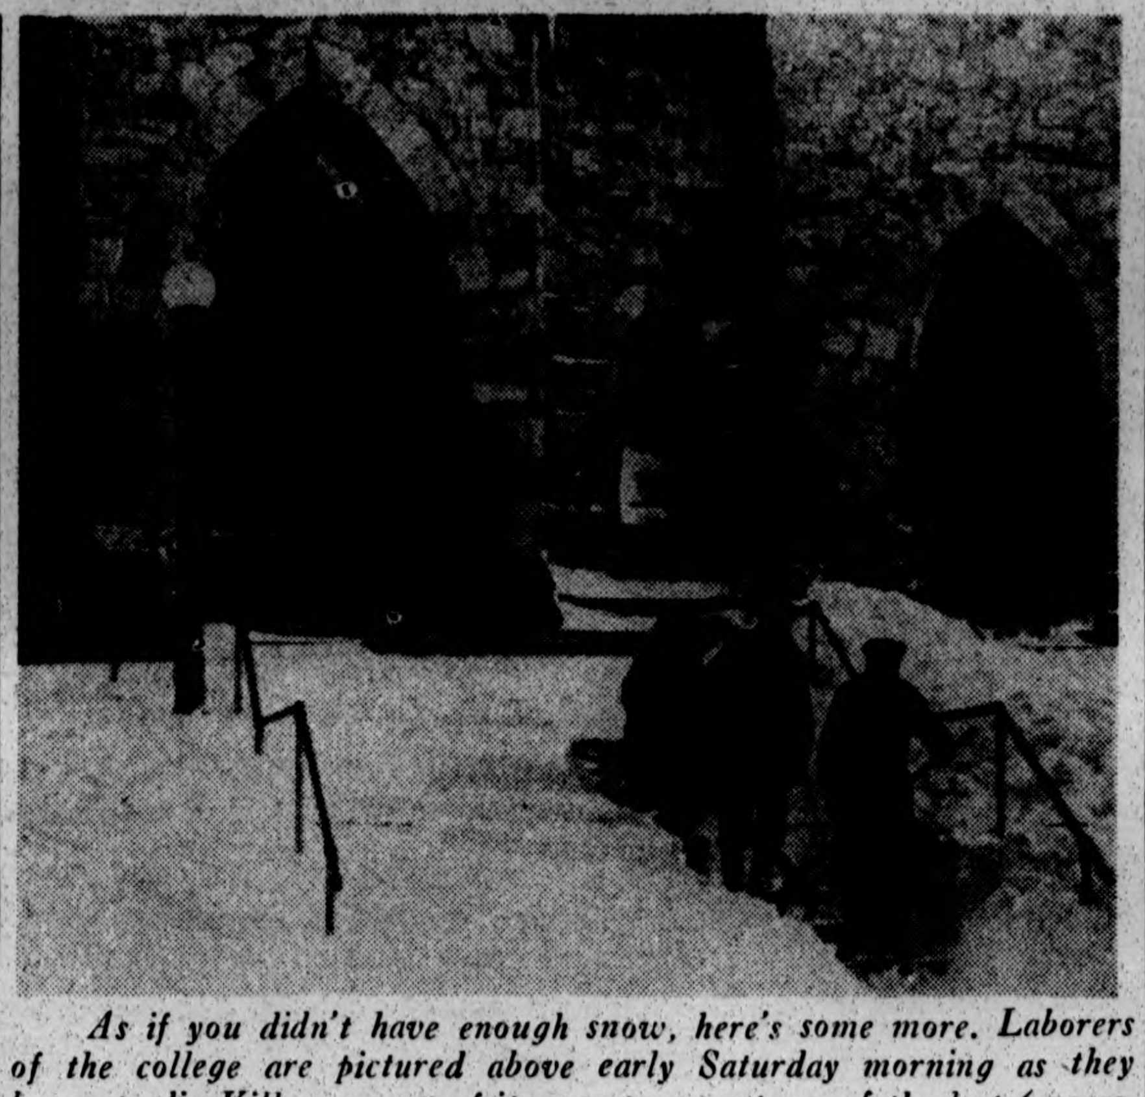
Jonik will assume his editorial duties with the May issue and will be in charge for the first three issues of next year. No other editorial choices have been made, as the editor-in-chief appoints his own staff.

The new editor entered the commerce school in 1933, but left college to work as a shipper for a Philadelphia baking concern. After three years he returned to school and, in his junior year, was made assistant editor of the Belle Air; in his senior year he was appointed editor-in-chief of that publication.

Under his leadership, the Belle Air was awarded the highest honors ever received by a Villanova year book. It received these awards from both the Associated Collegiate Press and the Catholic School Press Association.

The book was chosen as one of the nine best annuals in the entire country, and was the only yearbook on the Atlantic seaboard so honored.

Jonik has also edited the club bulletin of the Fairmount Rowing Association, where he strokes the senior eight.



As if you didn't have enough snow, here's some more. Laborers of the college are pictured above early Saturday morning as they began to dig Villanova out of its worst snow storm of the last 6 years.

Falling from 7 last Thursday morning to 9 A. M. Friday, a 26-hour fall, the flakes piled up to a 10-inch height; at least, that's what the weatherman said, although in many drifts it was over 2 feet high.

Reaction to the event on the student body: "I never saw anything more beautiful in my life"; "Yeah, spring's here all right"; and just plain, "This. . . .stuff."

Only consolation to many lovers of the sunnier climes was that it provided an opportunity to make a handy amount of pocket money by shoveling the walks of local residents.

Six Chosen For 'Margin For Error' Male Characters

Donovan, Hursh, Buckley, Eichman, McIntyre, Szucs Will Have Roles in Belle Masque's Annual Play

By ROBERT CANFIELD

Anthony J. Frayne, moderator of the Belle Masque, today announced the final casting of the six male parts of the society's coming production, "Margin for Error."

Successful candidates for the roles in the drama are James Donovan, Robert Hursh, Frank Buckley, Edward Eichman, Robert McIntyre and George Szucs.

Hursh, a junior commerce student, will enact the role of the German consul, Karl Baumer, around whose murder the play is built. In his part, a study in treachery, Hursh will portray an embezzling Nazi official living in the United States who attempts to force his secretary to commit suicide in order to cover his own guilt and to deport his wife to Germany if her lover, a newspaperman, does not publish a vindication of him in the press. Due to his many detestable actions, motives for his murder are possessed by the remaining characters of the play.

McIntyre is Fuehrer

McIntyre, also a junior in the commerce school, is cast in the role of Otto Horst, the American Fuehrer, whom the German consul is jealously plotting to kill before he himself is slain.

Edward Eichman, a senior in the commerce school, will assume the uncomfortable role of Baron Max, secretary to the domineering consul. In his part, Eichman will develop the secretary sympathetically as a duty-bound, honest character.

James Donovan, president of Belle Masque, is cast as the kindly American doctor, Dr. Jennings, who is swindled by the consul when he gives him money to release his daughter and German son-in-law from a Nazi concentration camp. Learning that his daughter is dead, her husband has gone insane and the consul has misappropriated the money, the doctor is overcome by mixed emotions of grief and revenge and finally kills the traitorous official.

Buckley Returns

Robert Buckley, who with Donovan took part in "The Tavern" last year, is to portray the part of Moe Finklestein, a witty Jewish policeman assigned by the police to guard the consul. Finklestein supplies much of the comedy relief of the play by his humorous attempts to solve the murder.

Denny, the roving reporter who falls in love with the consul's wife, will be portrayed by George Szucs, sophomore education student.

Among Rosemont students still being considered for the female parts of Frieda and Sophie are Pat Rice, Pat McDonald, Mary Ambrose and Sue Cissel.

When the set is completed the cast, now practicing in the auditorium of Mendel hall, will move their rehearsals to the stage of the Field House.

President Named To N. Y. A. Position

One of ten college presidents to receive the honor, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of Villanova, has been appointed by the United States National Youth Administration to serve on their National Committee on Conference.

Composed of leading educators of the country, the committee's purpose is to advise on relationships between the government and colleges. It will hold national conferences throughout the nation; at regional meetings, those of colleges in this area, Fr. Stanford will preside.

The nine other presidents named to the national committee are: Drs. Clyde E. Wildman, DePauw University; Robert C. Clothier, Rutgers University; Franklin B. Snyder, Northwestern University; Edmund E. Day, Cornell University; Charles E. Diehl, Southwestern University; F. L. McCleur, Westminster College; James F. Zimmerman, University of New Mexico; and Remsen D. Bird, Occidental College.

Five Colleges

Will Be Represented at Round-Table Discussion Here Tomorrow Evening

Five colleges will be represented at a round-table discussion sponsored by Beta Gamma tomorrow evening in Simpson hall. Opening the session at 8:30 P. M. will be a Philadelphia Forensic League debate between St. Joseph's College and Villanova.

Subject of the debate, to be presented before the assembled debate councils representing Catholic University, Rosemont and Immaculata, will be "the extension of unlimited credit to Great Britain during the present world crisis." St. Joseph's will support the affirmative while David N. Reardon and Robert J. McIntyre will argue the negative side for Beta Gamma.

Following the decision, the four visiting debate councils will enter into a discussion of the debate topic. Thomas J. Moore, chairman of Beta Gamma, will preside. After the discussion refreshments will be served.

Last Friday four members of the society formed a traveling contingent which met Upsala College at East Orange, N. J., and St. Peter's at Jersey City.

Meeting Upsala in the afternoon, Charles J. Callahan and Burt L. Collins proposed arguments for the negative of the Western Hemisphere alliance question. That evening, Thomas J. Moore and Edward F. Borden engaged St. Peter's on the same topic.

On the same afternoon, two members of the debate panel of Princeton University were opponents of Beta Gamma in a debate in Simpson hall. Coming from Princeton to support the affirmative of the alliance question were John Stevenson and John Furman. David N. Reardon and Robert J. McIntyre upheld the affirmative for Villanova in the non-decision debate.

The remainder of the Beta Gamma schedule includes Loyola of Baltimore on March 14 and Upsala on March 17, both at home, and Misericordiae on March 21 at Dallas, Pa. The date for an engagement with Immaculata has not yet been decided.

Represents Paper

William E. Schubert, managing editor, attended the Third Annual La Salle College Press Conference and Exhibit last Saturday, March 1, as the representative of the VILLANOVAN.

Held at La Salle, in Philadelphia, a two-day program of exhibits, symposiums, and round-table discussions in the field of the college newspaper, magazine, and yearbook was offered. Prominent collegians, religious and lay newspapermen spoke.

Fr. Mahoney Calls Late Alfonso 'Every Inch A King' In Reminiscence

By JOHN P. FULLAM

"A brave man, a true democrat, and an all-around 'good fellow' who was every inch a king." Thus Rev. Jerome A. Mahoney, O. S. A., assistant professor of modern languages at Villanova, in a personal interview characterized the late Alfonso XIII, exiled king of Spain, who died in Rome last Friday morning.

Fr. Mahoney, one of the Augustinians here who had personal contacts with Alfonso, has many an interesting story to tell of his acquaintanceship with the king during the former's days as a theological student at the Universidad Escorial from 1921 to 1924.

Met After "Rodeo"

The informality of his first meeting with the king demonstrates Alfonso's extremely democratic character. The king had been attending the Spanish equivalent of our rodeo near the University and stopped in to talk and smoke with the priests. Fr. Mahoney and a companion chanced to come out of a door which opened upon the portico where the king was walking with the Prior.

The Prior called the two American seminarians over and introduced them. It is a Spanish formality for a person meeting the king to kiss his hand; it is also the Spanish custom to kiss the hand of a priest. Fr. Mahoney and his companion tried to follow out the formality, but the king would have none of it. "Shake, Americanos!", said he, and that was that.

Not Just Souvenirs

Then it was, "Have a cigarette?" Accepting, the two Americans tried, naturally, to slip the cigarettes into their pockets for keepsakes. When Alfonso saw their intentions, he gave them the whole pack so they could smoke and save some, too.

The group then conversed in English for nearly an hour. The king displayed at all times an intense interest in things American, and proved for Fr. Mahoney an unending source of information on Spanish colonization in the New World. In his perfect English, Alfonso gave the young Americans a course in American history. And before leaving, he extended to the Americans a cordial invitation to come and visit him.

Fr. Mahoney's next meeting with the king was a very formal one, and was occasioned by a visit to Alfonso by Victor Emmanuel of Italy and some of the members of his family. Since the Escorial, located about 26 miles northeast of Madrid, is the resting place of the

Radio Group Adapts 'Vision'; Now Casting

"Vision," a Passion play written by Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., is being adapted for radio production by members of the Radio Work Group. Tryouts for parts are being held at the regular Monday meetings in Simpson hall.

Fr. Burns, Dean of the School of Arts, wrote the play several years ago and it was successfully produced by Belle Masque, college dramatic society. It is a drama of the time immediately preceding the Passion of Our Lord, dealing with the familiar story of the wandering Jew.

Members of the club who tried out for the parts were: Joseph V. McCabe, David N. Reardon, Daniel J. Haley, Charles J. Callahan, James J. Walsh, John Zerby, Eugene Smith, and Robert J. McIntyre. Other interested students are invited to the next meeting of the group, to be held on Monday, March 10, at 2:30 P. M. in Simpson.

Book Club Travels To Camden Bindery

Members of the Book Club, accompanied by Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., and Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will leave tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 on an inspection trip of the plant of Haddon Craftsmen, Inc., one of the largest book binderies in the country. The trip to Camden will take the place of the regular weekly meeting.

Haddon Craftsmen, Inc., does a great deal of edition work and is famed for the quality of its products. It completes all the processes involved in the manufacturing of a book, from the examination of the original manuscript to the final printing and binding.

At a meeting held last Wednesday in Simpson hall, the club reviewed Kenneth Roberts' currently popular work, "Oliver Wiswell," and discussed Christopher Morley's controversial "Kitty Foyle."

Arthur Somers, president of the Book Club, has issued an invitation to all interested students to join the group.

Sustained Prayer and Penance

MANKIND is today fervently striving to reconstruct the past twenty years spent in moral laxity and violation of the Christian code of life. Today he is returning to God in his effort to mend the shambles he created by desecration of every canon of Christian philosophy. And today it is the present war which is impressing this shameful truth upon the world.

True Christians have always been with God. Others had become indifferent in their obligation, and this soon bred neglect. It is this lot today who are once again turning to the church for solace and guidance. They now realize that worldly pleasures and material indulgence can not insure eternal peace. They now realize that departure from the path of Christ is the cause of the turmoil existing today, and they are eager to repent.

Unfortunately, all have not returned. Those who still reject the Savior of the World are the same ones who preached condemnation of His teachings. They are the ones who taught aetheism, and who now declaim God for not delivering the universe from this conflict.

It is a joy to know that many are returning to the way of God, but the shame comes from the condition which prompted it. The propensities of mankind are selfish and pitiful, and no stronger evidence of this could be presented than their present flight to the Creator. When all is well with man, he sometimes forgets God. When misery and trials beset man he recalls his duty and comes back to Him. It is hoped that the reviving spirit of obeisance and penance will remain with mankind in his better times and not accompany him in moments of grief and need alone.

In expressing these facts we especially commend the Evening Public Ledger for the editorial entitled "On Ash Wednesday" which appeared in their February 26 issue. In sympathy with our views, this editorial states: "As the season of Lent begins we may be sure, in these times of stress and strife, that repentance of past errors is not enough. Beyond lie duties and demands that require the full strength of manly faith, the calm determination to gain victory over weakness, falsity and sin." And again, "Self-denial and self-discipline are of no spiritual service unless they strengthen the arm and lift the heart for conflict to come."

Time Lost in Senate

MORE THAN two weeks have now passed since the lend-lease bill to aid Britain went to the Senate for consideration, and to date no debate of worth has been waged concerning the measure. It is true that much bickering and many unruly challenges have left their mark, but as yet no action of note has been taken on the bill itself.

In this period a more thorough investigation of the bill and what it implies should have been accomplished by the Senate body. Instead, we find that the time has been wasted and that nothing has been done about any section of the measure or any of the proposed amendments. It seems that the expected examination of the bill has been lost in the backwash of personal criticism which has held the floor throughout the sessions.

The lend-lease bill is not classed among the "log-rolling" types of proposals which are passed through as soon as mentioned. And rightly so. But, on the other hand, because of the immediate need of England, if the bill is to be passed at all it should be passed as soon as possible. The Senators have had time to consider it from every angle; they should act on it, debating only what is necessary and omitting the personal angles.

If the senators are eager to protect the welfare of America, we ask them to show it by considering the problem on hand, the lend-lease bill.

Daily Mass

IN CONJUNCTION with the beginning of the Lenten Season the college authorities last week extended to the day students a means of spiritual benefit, namely, the daily celebration of Mass in the college chapel at 8:35. Tomorrow commences the second week of this service, and as yet many of the commuting members of the student body have not expressed their appreciation by attending the Holy Sacrifice.

Many of the students had voiced their desire that such arrangements be made. In answer, the college granted your request. Now it is up to you to show gratitude by your presence. In this way you also express your gratitude to God by homage and devotion.

The time of the mass was especially arranged for the convenience of the students, and will involve little sacrifice on the part of most. Whatever bit it does necessitate will certainly be repaid by regular assistance at the Eucharistic Sacrifice.

You Said It

(Weekly Poll of Student Opinion)

CROSS-SECTIONAL questioning of 10% of the student-body during the past week revealed three-quarters of those interviewed think that President Roosevelt's foreign policy is leading this country into war. Of these approximately half believe he is intentionally pursuing the course toward war.

The first of this week's questions, "Do you believe President Roosevelt is leading this country into war?" produced the following totals:

24%	No

By schools the percentages ran:

	YES	NO
Arts and Education	67%	33%
Commerce and Finance	72%	28%
Engineering	77%	23%
Science	83%	17%

Of those who think we are being led into war, 49% answered YES to the second question, "Do you believe the President is doing it intentionally?" The science school was evenly divided on this question, whereas the engineering and arts schools registered affirmative votes of 65% and 75% respectively. The commerce school, however, maintained the balance by voting only 30% "Yes."

The results of the past week's questioning substantiate the findings made in a previous poll (VILlanovan, Feb, 18). At that time, 74% of the students questioned believed that the lend-lease bill is a step toward war. This is almost exactly the same percentage as that of the students (76%) who believe that the President's foreign policy is leading us toward war.

FACULTY COMMENTS

Old English and Freshman Study

By Fr. Sullivan

A SHORT time ago Sheed and Ward of New York put out a book called "Word Hoard," edited by the nun daughter of Michael Williams, a well-known Catholic editor.

It is a most interesting book and has had a very agreeable reception from literateurs who have come in contact with it. In fact, only a month or so after its publication it was adopted as a text book in a Freshman English course at the women's college of the University of Richmond — if I am not mistaken.

The book itself is thoroughly Catholic in its material and in its content. It had to be. It deals with the period in English Literature when the thought life of all Englishmen was Catholic. The misnamed Reformation had not yet occurred when the men whose writings are compiled in this book were scratching out on vellum their thoughts and imaginings. How comes it then that this Catholic book has been adopted by a branch of a secular University?

The answer on the surface is comparatively easy. It is intended for freshmen who will do four years of English Literature and is given to them as proper orientation in the whole field. After all, one makes one's best beginning at the beginning. "Word Hoard" presents the very first writings of Englishmen in England. It covers pretty well the technically called field of Old English (hitherto, strictly graduate stuff), which is a period that shortly followed the conversion of the island by the Benedictine St. Augustine and lasted practically up to Chaucer.

But that "begin at the beginning" logic through which the book was adopted may have far deeper effect than even its adopters realize. A conscientious effort to study the first English literary products will lead the teacher and student to an inevitable contact with the Catholic Church, whose philosophy is beneath the writings. Without understanding the church, the entire Old English period will be more or less a mystery. Wulfstan's Sermon, King Alfred's translations, Caedmon, Cynewulf, the Chronicles, Gildas, the letters, the laws, monastic and civil, hardly any part of what makes the body of Old English can be satisfactorily explained without recourse to the Church. Great things might be expected for the Church if such a book as "Word Hoard" were adopted widely in our secular universities. At least the serious study of Old English would cause the serious student to see the big difference between Life and Literature in those times and Life and Literature in the Modern Period.

As a matter of fact, the decision of an English Department to try to get back to the beginnings of English before coming on to the later stuff, is, in its own small way, a symptom of something that seems to be breaking in on the minds of some thinking men today, outside the Church. The suspicion that civilization and culture did not begin in 1500 or there-abouts is being aroused the more men look around at the world today. Even historians of this Protestant era up to this point haven't regarded the Middle Ages with much seriousness; and in the field of literature the attitude of scholars who talk of Chaucer as the Morning Star of the Reformation has been till now typical of the light in which they have studied all English writing.

I think it was Chesterton who said that explaining Chaucer by appealing to the Reformation is very much like explaining your personal heredity by appealing to your hypothetic grandchildren. In other words, Chaucer is the product of the ages which went before him, not those which came after. If Chaucer's writings are admirable, the age which produced him must be given some credit, and deserves to be studied more thoroughly.

Just recently Will Durant (who should have known better all the time), surprised his followers by offering an apology for lots of the things he had up till now been fond of saying. He's beginning to lose faith in his own creed of rugged individualism in the fields of thought and morals and literature. He begins to have a sneaking suspicion that it's all been pretty thin stuff. Of course, Naziism is what has frightened him into a change of heart, and all he advocates is fighting fire with fire. But it's another sign of the "let's begin at the beginning" or the "get back to fundamentals" idea.

Men are looking for something deeper in literature than mere words. Textbooks are offered to the teacher now, listed in the catalogues with such titles as "Earning Our Heritage," "The Democratic Way," which imply that by the study of literature one can best learn a way of life. The Church has always regarded literature seriously. She agrees with the "way of life" idea which the catalogues hint at. That's why we should be glad that the book "Word Hoard" with its totally Catholic background is being studied by beginners at a secular university.

Paper's Profit $376 In 1893

Last week Rev. Daniel J. Falvey, O. S. A., obtained for the Villanova Museum a so-called "balance sheet" of the "Villanova Monthly" for the year 1893. The "Villanova Monthly" was the first newspaper publication on the campus, and was in its initial year of existence at that time.

The "balance sheet," typical of the accounting of the nineteenth century, was drawn-up by Rev. J. Farrell, O. S. A., moderator of the paper at that time. It shows that the predecessor to the VILLANOVAN made a net profit of $376 from January 1 to December 31, 1893.

Lost In The Strains Of Melody

Music Has Its Charms, But So Do Immaculata Band Additions

All spruced up, and looking, acting, and sounding its best, Villanova's Symphonic Band welcomed fifteen additions to its membership last Thursday evening. Incidental —purely incidental — is the fact that they hied themselves hither from Immaculata.

Technically and prosaically speaking, the visiting musicians were four trumpeters, three clarinetists, two oboeists, three drummers, one pianist, one timpanist, and one flutist. Nominally speaking, they are: trumpeters: Marie Kuhn, Mary Dennehy, Florence Haley, and Carolyn Brancato; clarinetists: Dorothy McCandless, Jeannette Crisconi, and Catherine Seesholtz; oboeists: Molly Brown and Ann Englehardt; drummers: Frances Stein, Dolores Dollaghan, and Madelyn Brown; pianist: Helen Ellis; timpanist: Ann Boyle; and flutist: Kathleen Hasenplue.

All are members of Immaculata's orchestra, directed by Sister Immaculae, and will take part in the Symphonic Band's Spring Concert some time in Lent. Thursday's get-together was held in the C. & F. auditorium; the group will move to a new setting in the Field House in the near future.

The first co-educational rehearsal, interspersed with a few helpful (though not, of course, strictly necessary, you understand), remarks by Fr. Handran about "getting down to business" and paying less attention to "social activities," was, according to those who took part, satisfactorily serious. Which same is indeed a thing to be noted, for the band rehearsed, in the course of the evening, some rather tempting tangos.

"Blonde, brunette, or redhead?" you ask. Tsk, tsk—these college boys! Well, for the information of those who are artistically minded, all three types were well represented.

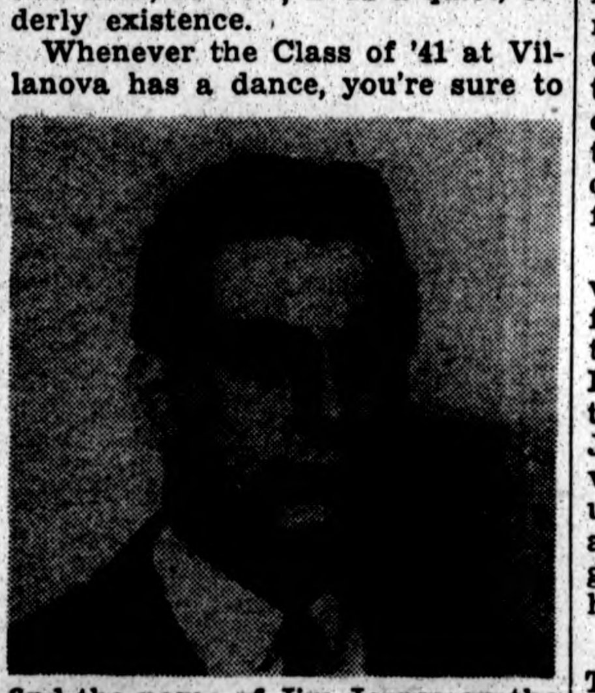
And, oh yes—the responsibility of seeing that the guests arrived back at Immaculata after the rehearsal was not (sigh) left to their hosts.

Meet The Boys: "Dapper" Jim, Whose Soft Lights Flatter; Victor J., "King Of The 'Platter'"

By FRANK MAMBRETTI

DAPPER JIM, the impeccable dresser, gentleman, and artist without an artist's temperament, settled in New Brunswick, N. J., in 1918 as the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jernee and has resided there since. Early life for Jim was mud-pies and carpet-huts, cowboys and Indians, the same as any other boy. He entered St. Benedict's Prep in '33, graduated in '37, and then, as now, lived a quiet, orderly existence.

Whenever the Class of '41 at Villanova has a dance, you're sure to find the name of Jim Jernee on the program; if it is a special dance, you're sure to note that he has been in charge of the decorations. Whether someone looked at Jim's wavy locks and stated that he looked like an artist, or whether he said he knew something about decorations we don't know, but since his sophomore year whenever the Field House was to be decorated it has always been Jim who visualized and worked hard for its being decorated.



The Grand Finale

His finale came with the beautifully-decorated Senior Prom . In this he was most lavish, even to the extent of going to the seashore for the furniture. It was only the Lancastrian Dutch stubbornness of the truck-driver that he didn't bring back a couple loads of sand and sea-shells.

Jim, besides being on the dance committees of the Sophomore Cotillion, Junior Prom, and Senior Belle Air Ball, was the co-chairman of the first Delta Pi Epsilon dance, held this year. He must have had someone whisper in his ear that his voice was lovely, for he did belong to the Glee Club for a year.

The History Seminar has claimed some of his time, also. For the past three years he has been a member of the Sanctuary Society and the Holy Name Society.

No Hiker, He

He hates walking. "Spider Feet" some call him; he picks them up and he puts them down. Has the narrowest feet in the Senior Class, AAA, at least. Maybe there's a reason he hates walking: not enough foundation to find relaxation for the rest of his body. However, his favorite walk each day the past four years has been the one to the P. O. for that letter from Jennie.

In connection with the Glee Club we might hazard a guess that his favorite songs are "Jeannie with the Light Brown Hair," and "Annie Doesn't Live Here Any More." But then we do not hear much from Jim because he goes home every week-end to study. He's not made up his mind what he is going to do after graduation, but we venture a guess that Jennie will see him with his uniform on after July 1.

The Philosophy:

"THE world is a lump of putty covered with blind insects. These creatures have woven their existence out of materialism, have refused to love God, and love their neighbor only in the selfish sense. Man has progressed and changed the world around to suit himself; but in so doing he has lost his contact with nature, his culture and his soul. He has not the intelligence of an unborn child."

The Tastes:

"Music is my consuming passion. The appeal is the fascinating thought of an individual transposing his whole self into a musical instrument. This may be found in the passionate music of the Negro and a few whites and is known only through an appreciation of the art form this group of genii has created. I am referring to the field commonly known as 'Jazz'.

"I love the classic music, and Wagner moves me deeply. Therefore, the symphony as a soulful, metaphysical retreat and Louis Armstrong as an enjoyable diversion for the appetitive faculties.

"I prefer the work of the old masters rather than that of the realistic and impressionistic schools of painting.

"I choose to read the works of the founders of literature proceeding from a conviction that the master is usually more proficient than the apprentice."

The History:

He entered Villanova's School of Art in September of 1937, at the age of 19. Previous to that he had spent a short while at La Salle Military Academy in Oakdale, L. I. But the military life did not suit him, so he enrolled at Red Bank Catholic High School in Red Bank, N. J., to complete his secondary education.

A year in the arts school was all he allowed himself. In his sophomore year he transferred to commerce and finance, from whence he will graduate in June with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Economics.

This native of Elberon, N. J., has not been overly active in extracurriculars, yet he has made his presence known. As a freshman, he high jumped with the track team; as a Junior he was a member of the Blazer Ball committee; and as a senior he is manager of the Wildcat basketball squad.

His favorite recreation is music, especially pure jazz. As a consequence to this, he has a collection of several hundred records. He is versatility personified when it comes to musical instruments. Banjo, guitar, piano, drums: any instrument he picks up succumbs to his attentions and does what he wants it to. Second only to this is his desire to draw.

The Man:

Speaking of Mulligan reminds us that the Lenten season has arrived. The pre-Lenten festivities of the New Orleans' Mardi Gras were as gay as ever. . . At least, that's what this column's "foreign correspondent" writes us!

From the Setonian we offer the following chatter in the spirit of a Lenten repentent:

A thug who had just held-up a priest suddenly discovered his victim's identity. Apologizing profusely, he handed back the loot and solemnly vowed never to steal again.

"I'm glad to hear that," said the priest. "Here, have a cigar."

"No, Father," refused the thug, "I'm off cigars for Lent."

Maybe you've heard it before, but we haven't. One of the freshman reporters on the staff, though, turned in an editorial in which a priest purportedly included it in a Sunday sermon.

Students with that indigo feeling which inevitably accompanies final examinations began to wonder at semester's end just why the necessary exam books should be blue.

A querying Daily Trojan reporter uncovered the following deathless information:

(b) They are too bright—should be dull-colored, also for obvious reasons.

(c) The book store sells 50,000 a year.

(d) They are blue because practically every college in the country uses blue books.

(e) Blue usually means "honor;" therefore, it is an appropriate color.

Modern Rule Is Group's Topic

Charles J. Callahan, sophomore Commerce student, has been selected by Dr. Harold F. Hartman, moderator of the History Seminar, to lead the members of the group in a discussion of the topic, "Democracy—Today and Tomorrow," at a meeting tomorrow at 2:15 P. M. in Simpson hall.

Purpose of the topic's choice is to determine the validity of a thesis upheld by Edward Benes, formers president of Czechoslovakia, that democracy is an ideal which, in the law of social evolution and the philosophy of history, is the logical conclusion to modern thought.

At a meeting held last Wednesday, the members discussed the effects of contemporary propaganda and especially its importance in the present conflict. The seminar concentrated on the propaganda offered by Germany, Italy, Britain, America, and the Communists in the United States.

It was held that German propaganda, usually most extensive and most powerful, has been counteracted in the United States by a favorable attitude toward Britain and by the less "bullish" English propaganda.

Dr. Hartman commented that the propaganda of this country is conducted under the auspices of the State Department and cited improved relations with South America as proof of its effectiveness. He also set forth explicit examples of political propaganda with instances taken from the last presidential campaign.

Frosh Debaters Will Engage St. Joseph's Prep Team

St. Joseph's Prep will provide opposition for the Freshman debating team in its second debate of the year this Thursday afternoon at St. Joseph's.

Carton Conway and James Garrity, both engineers, will represent Villanova, upholding the affirmative of the topic, Resolved: That the countries of the Western Hemisphere should unite in a permanent union.

Last Thursday, John McManus, engineer, and Louis DeSimone, artsman, debating St. Joseph's College Freshmen, supported the negative of the question, Resolved: That the United States government should conscript industry in the present emergency. The debate was non-decision.

Next week the Freshmen will meet these schools in return debates, the college away and the prep at Villanova.

Resident Seminar Will Study Brahms

Brahms — one of the immortal "three B's" of musical works—will hold the spotlight at the weekly meeting of the Resident Music Seminar in Simpson hall tomorrow evening at 7:30.

Arranged by Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, associate professor of Chemistry and director of the Day-Hop Music Seminar, the program will demonstrate the fact that Brahms was one of the most prolific composers of all time.

The "Third Symphony" of Brahms will be the highlight of the musical portion of the all-recorded program. Selections from his Hungarian dances, his waltzes, and his "Lieder" will musically illustrate his versatility and fertility.

Sharing the spotlight with the music will be a biographical sound film on his life. Since this type of film was first shown last year, the members of the seminar have found them extremely helpful in graphically illustrating the conditions under which the composers wrote their great music and the setbacks which they incurred.

K.G.S. Members to Elect Officers During Week

Election of new officers of the Kappa Gamma Sigma Society will take place this week on a day to be fixed at tomorrow's 3:15 P. M. meeting in Mendel hall. At the meeting tomorrow, also, the group's Board of Admissions will make final decisions on applicants to be admitted.

The board, which includes science men Joseph Gambescia, Joseph Turner, Harold Varani, John Callahan, and Francis McLaughlin, has already made a preliminary selection of new members and will merely ratify its earlier decisions tomorrow.

Sabotage?

Maybe; But the Acetylene Fire in the Machine Shop Probably Was Accidental

Suspicions of sabotage were rife last week when fire threatened the Villanova machine shop, which is not engaged in the production of goods vital to national defense.

Last Wednesday the acetylene gas tank used in the process of welding was found enveloped in flames. After the blaze had been extinguished by the speedy action of the plant fire department under the direction of Chief William M. Gorman, a number of suspects were questioned. Upon due investigation, without the aid of the Dies committee, the culprit was discovered to be James Hobbs, freshman engineer.

Hobbs blames the conflagration on an accidental spark, but little credence is given this tale by investigating authorities. It has not been determined whether or not Hobbs is in the employ of a foreign government.

Instructor Gorman, in charge of plant operations, stated that only the prompt action of alert "employees" prevented more serious damage.

Regional Members Hold First Villanova Meeting of N.F.C.C.S.

The recently-formed Organizing Committee, created for the purpose of creating a separate Philadelphia Chapter of the National Federation of Catholic College Students, held its first meeting at Villanova College last Sunday, March 2.

Thomas C. Muraski, president of Villanova's Centennial Class and chairman of the Committee, presided at the meeting held in Simpson hall.

Although the meeting was held primarily to discuss the necessity for the development of leaders in Catholic Action among the students in Catholic colleges throughout the country in preparation for the part they will play in the world as educated Catholic laymen, the representatives also discussed ways and means for making the Catholic students of this area more active in the work of the federation.

Representatives from the Catholic colleges in the Philadelphia region, including the College of Chestnut Hill, Immaculata College, St. Joseph's College, and La Salle College attended the gathering and learned how they can better prepare themselves to participate in the apostolate of the laity.

Discusses Manufacture Of Biological Products

At the weekly meeting of the Science Forum last Thursday, William Knapp of the Promotion Department of the Sharp and Dohme Laboratories in Philadelphia, delivered a lecture on the history of the manufacture of biological products.

Mr. Knapp led the members of the Forum on a verbal inspection tour through a modern biological laboratory. Included in his address was the work that Jenner and Pasteur contributed to the discovery and manufacture of different biological products.

The speaker also discussed briefly the finding of anthrax, smallpox vaccine, cowpox, and antivenum.

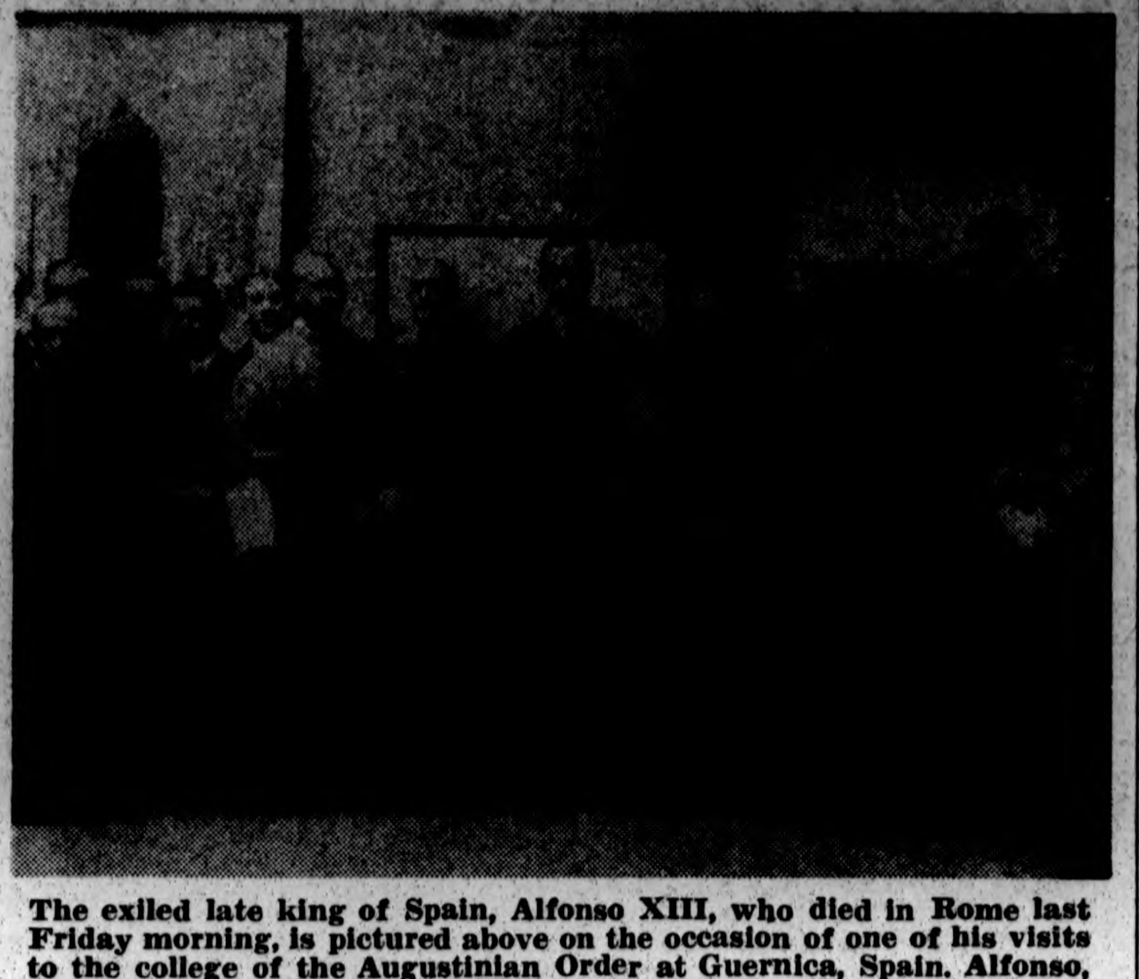
Alfonso XIII Visits Augustinians



The exiled late king of Spain, Alfonso XIII, who died in Rome last Friday morning, is pictured above on the occasion of one of his visits to the college of the Augustinian Order at Guernica, Spain. Alfonso, a promoter of Catholic art, had come to a congress of art at the famed Escorial in 1923; the photograph was taken at its close. Third from the left in the back row, beneath the black figure of the Spanish painting, is Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., now instructor in modern languages at Villanova.

Late King

Spanish kings, it was customary to conduct visiting royalty there to honor the king's ancestors.

Formal and Familiar

The Prior, wishing the two Americans to have a look at royalty, chose them to take part in the customary elaborate ceremony. Fr. Mahoney carried the Relic of the True Cross, which both monarchs kissed, while his companion carried Holy Water.

After the formal ritual was over, and all had relaxed, the king said, "Hello, Americanos! How do you like Spain by this time?—You looked homesick the last time I saw you!"

When the party was ready to descend to the tombs proper Alfonso's eldest son, the Prince of the Asturias, asked in very stately tones to be excused, as he was feeling tired. For even then, the fourteen year old Prince was suffering from the hereditary haemophilia which was to be the cause of his death in a Florida automobile accident some ten years later.

Caught In the Thought

Laughingly, the king replied, "I know you, you little brat! You want to sneak off for a cigarette, don't you?" And the youthful heir to the throne of Spain smiled sheepishly and said, "Yes, father".

From then on, Fr. Mahoney saw the king frequently — at tennis matches, race-tracks, resorts, etc. And whenever they met, it was always, "Hello, Americanos!" The king, like others of his family, had a remarkable memory for names and faces.

The last of the Bourbon kings often used to drop in at the Escorial for a smoke and a drink of wine with the priests. His usual wine was Cognac and he always smoked Spanish cigarettes. "Something" made him dislike American brands.

An Athletic Man

As far as physical appearance is concerned, he was over six feet tall, and weighed about 180 pounds. Fr. Mahoney describes him as "tall and rangy, with a typical Bourbon chin, waxed mustache, dark hair, piercing eyes and very contagious laughter."

Very much given to sports the king was interested in golf, tennis, bull-fighting, auto-racing, airplanes, and a host of other pastimes.

His courage and nerve have become almost legendary. During his reign, at least fifteen attempts were made upon his life, yet he thought nothing of driving all over Spain in his big Fiat auto, completely unguarded. At one time, Fr. Mahoney relates, as he was driving along in a carriage, a would-be assassin pointed a gun at him point-blank. The king just reared his horse and the bullet intended for him struck the horse in the chest, instead.

Wanted to Visit U. S. A.

Another time, when Alfonso was driving with his Queen, a bomb was thrown under his carriage; unfrightened, the king shielded his wife, touched his whip to the horses, and passed over the bomb and to safety.

Always, says Fr. Mahoney, the Spanish king wanted to come to America. "I'm going to America some day before I die, and I want you to be my Chaplain when I get there," he said to the seminarian any number of times.

But now, Alfonso XIII is dead. To his son, Don Juan, he leaves the title to a non-existent throne. To Spain, to the world—and to Fr. Mahoney—he leaves memories of a real king.

Belle Air Retarded By Editor's Illness

Progress on the Belle Air has been greatly retarded in the past week owing to the illness of John M. Bader, college editor, who suffered a sudden attack of appendicitis Wednesday night and was taken to St. Francis hospital, Wilmington, Del., for observation and perhaps an operation.

Bader held a key position on the Belle Air; he was in charge of assignments and assisted in the editing. A readjustment of the staff under the direction of Thomas J. Moore, editor-in-chief, will be necessary to remedy the loss. Some member of the staff will have to be advanced to fill this responsible position during Bader's absence.

Moore reports that despite this setback, the work on the book is advancing and, with the receipt of a quantity of page-proofs from the engraver, the actual task of assembling the book is well under way.

Math Club Holds Joint Meeting

Dr. C. G. Schilling, of St. Joseph's College, will speak to the members of the Villanova mathematics club, Mu Alpha Theta, this Friday evening, March 7, at 7:15 P. M. on "Pedal Curves."

The meeting, postponed from last Friday because of the severe snowstorm which made transportation exceedingly difficult, will afford the members of the club an opportunity to play host to the members of the Mathematics Club of the College of Chestnut Hill.

Dr. Schilling's talk will, to quote the program committee, deal with the explanation of the proposition that "the locus of the foot of the perpendicular from any given and fixed point 'P' to a tangent line to a curve is called the pedal of the curve with respect to that point." Dr. Schilling will also present numerous figures illustrating this idea as well as the method of derivation.

The program committee has cordially invited all who are interested in mathematics to attend this meeting and the five other lecture programs which have been arranged for the spring.

Technical Societies View Two Films

Yesterday, at a combined meeting of the Villanova chapter of the A. I. E. E. and the Chemical Society, a film in the field of each group was shown.

The first of these, "Wonder World of Chemistry," presented through the courtesy of the duPont Company, depicted the advances in original synthesis made since the World War when the organic chemical industry was practically non-existent. The war was set forth as the causal force stimulating the development of the industry.

"Modern Zeus," the second film, furnished by the General Electric Company, dealt with man's knowledge of lightning. From Franklin's experiment to those of the present day, the various developments and improvements in lightning control were described; the famous "Lightning Lab" at Pittsfield, Mass., was depicted.

Gridmen Exercise And Work Plays To Lose Poundage

Varsity Made Appearance Yesterday to Start Their Workouts; Lectures to Begin Next Week

By JACK DUDLEY

Awaiting the advent of more favorable weather, holdover football stars joined Frosh candidates for the varsity yesterday in the Field House where Clipper Smith is conducting daily workouts.

Concentrating chiefly on the task of wearing off excess poundage and loosening up tightened muscles, Coach Smith has been running his men through a few fundamental plays, avoiding any rough bodily contact.

Lectures Soon

Next Monday, Smith will begin a series of lectures to the team in which he will familiarize them with new plays suited to the brand of football he teaches. He will also outline a few plays he has developed to be run from a "T" formation.

"The Picnic Is Over"

CLIPPER SMITH

When they take to the outdoors, the different teams will be ready to run these specialized plays against organized defense.

After watching the Frosh drill for the past week, Clipper seemed quite satisfied with the showing of some of the first year men. Especially pleasing to him were performers like John Dzitko, Joe Pezelski, in the backfield; and Dick Baraldi, Bill Sullivan, and Lou DePalo on the line.

After a year of searching, Clipper thinks that in Dzitko he has finally found a quarterback that has what he wants — aggressive play, brainy signal-calling, and clever ball-handling on intricate reverses. Pezelski is a boy who knows how to move when given the ball. Baraldi, Sullivan, and DePalo are towers of strength on the defense.

Replacing Basca

Veterans from last year's squad who should show great improvement this fall are George Smith, a fine blocking back who really has his heart in the game, and Bill Prohovich, who might see action at an end position or at his old spot, fullback.

The biggest job the Clipper faces, is finding a suitable replacement for his great halfback, Nick Basca. He hopes to find a man on the squad who is adroit in all departments of the game.

The man who enjoys the daily drills as "Clipper" says and who doesn't mind the long hours he spends running through the same plays over and over again is the man who will get ahead in football much in the same manner as life itself.

Looking ahead at a major schedule, Clipper feels that with the men from last year's team added to some great newcomers, he has a team that will do credit to the Blue and White this fall.

Natators Meet Penn

Seeking their first victory of the season, the Wildcat natators will engage a strong University of Pennsylvania swim team on Wednesday afternoon at the College Pool. Having been sunk twice already, the 'Cats, led by Captain Walt Kelley, will seek to avenge the loss handed to them last year by the Red and Blue.

Jacobs Has 'Not-Too-Happy' Outlook With Concern Over Entire Staff

With the first week of baseball practice completed, baseball mentor Doc Jacobs has assumed that "not-too-happy" outlook over his diamond aspirants. As far as Doc is concerned all the publicity given to his club about their success are just statements and he is really serious in his attitude about their future welfare.

If only the infield post which Mike Lazorchak held last year is filled, and if a hitter like the departed Loyd Rice comes about, and if there is a catcher who is as consistent as George Flood was, there would be no worries for Jacobs. Those "ifs" are about the biggest worry at the moment and even then Coach Jacobs must always be confronted by injuries and weaknesses in play.

Workouts Limited

With a squad of twenty-five players reporting for daily workouts in the Field House, the team is gradually coming into physical shape, getting rid of the additional pounds put on during the winter. The team is working against a disadvantage because they must share the gym with the football squad which takes over at 4 P. M. Practices are short and limited to just throwing the ball back and forth for a few hours.

Missing from the battery formations during the latter part of the week was the veteran twirler, Connie O'Leary, who returned to his home in Massachusetts due to an illness in the family. Taking up the pitching chores were six others who might see a share in the forthcoming spring campaign.

Howlett Looks Good

Connie Nicholas, number-one southpaw on the squad looks about the strongest for the moment. His husky arms and legs will see him through for a good many ball games. Young Bill Howlett will carry his strong right arm into many a battle this spring, for this 6-foot righthander recorded a fine record in his sophomore year winning four games and losing none and chalked up a shut-out against Gettysburg.

Two Seton Hall Courtmen Make Opponent Team

Davies and Ruthenberg Picked Along With Convery of Wake Forest

At the end of each season in most every sport the boys like to get together to pick an All-Opponent team. Selections for this season's basketball team were simplified as three players were chosen unanimously and the other two collected all but one vote cast.

From these tabulations, it became evident that Seton Hall and Loyola of Chicago players were held in high regard by our Wildcats. Three men from Seton Hall and four from Loyola received nominations for local honors.

Two Setonians

Unanimous selections were given Convery of Wake Forest, who scored 18 points against the Blue, and who also gained Southern Conference honors this year; Davies of Seton Hall, who contributed 11 points to his team's totals and also played a major role in the stiff defense used over in South Orange; and Dwan from Loyola of Chicago, who paced his team in scoring during the early part of the game finally winding up with a hard-earned 11 markers.

Ruthenberg of Seton Hall and Hartman of Washington and Jefferson rounded out the first team. Ruthenberg cashed in 15 points to add to the Wildcats' woe, while Hartman dropped in 7 in a low-scoring game. These five men working as a unit would undoubtedly give the best team in the

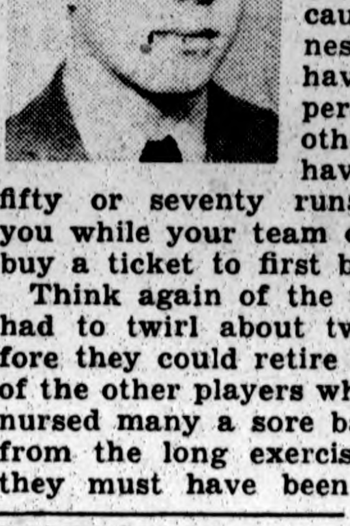
CAN you imagine a baseball team scoring 103 runs in one game? Well for a moment the figure looks astounding and untrue but the facts are authentic and are in black and white since the year 1869, when Villanova first started to play baseball.

The unbelievable score of 103 to 9 came in the year of 1870 when Villanova played the Radnor Farmers from up the line. It was the climax game of the season. The Radnor Farmers, famed far and wide for their rube hurlers played the poor college boys, but they were probably awed by their surroundings and were slightly defeated, 103 to 9.

Scoring 783 runs in one season for a big-league club, which plays the average 150 games each year is a fair percentage, but, scoring those same number of runs in 15 contests seems like a Disney "Fantasia." Yet again the facts are true, for over the period from 1869 to '73, the Villanova baseball team averaged the unbelievable total of 52 runs per game.

Analyzing the Game

Just what kind of food they ate, or what kind of water they drank, well, we'd like to know too? In fact, how did they ever manage to crowd 52 runs into nine innings and yet not have the game called because of darkness? It must have been exasperating for the other team to have forty or fifty or seventy runs scored on you while your team couldn't even buy a ticket to first base.



Think again of the pitchers who had to twirl about two hours before they could retire the side and of the other players who must have nursed many a sore back and legs from the long exercises. In size, they must have been massive or

Blue Boxers Supreme in Eighth Annual Show; Tommy Loughran, Bill Duffy and Ray Gadsby All Referee Bouts Held Before Student Body Last Night

By PAUL McCANN

All the Saturday night swing sessions had nothing on the society of leather-pushers that paraded back and forth from the ringside in Villanova's eighth annual Boxing and Wrestling show, last night, at the Field House, before a rabid student body.

Some 1000 students witnessed the finest of the annual shows and they also saw Alumni hall, the champions of three years running be dethroned by a band of Blue boxers from Austin Hall. Directing the show from within the ring were three famous characters of the boxing world. Taking turns in doing the refereeing were Tommy Loughran, former light-weight champion of the world, Ray Gadsby, former boxing coach at Villanova and at present Assistant coach at Annapolis and Bill Duffy, Villanova graduate who is making good in big-time boxing.

Alumni Only Third

The leather-throwers of Austin displayed their pugilistic talents to the tune of 15 points to edge out the surprisingly strong ringmen of Mendel Hall who garnered 12 points. The ex-champions, Alumni Hall salvaged third place in amassing 7 points. The Mendel Day Hops, C and F, and Fedigan athletes completed the scoring with 6, 3, and 1 points, respectively.

Featuring the show was the furiously-fought three round draw between the battling behemoths, Jim Magee of Alumni and Hank Christman representing Fedigan Hall. These two 200lb lads put on the real slugfest of the night and came out of it in a draw. By far this was the most thrilling with the students urging them on in frenzied fashion.

McGinley Beaten

Another highlighter was the final match of the evening which brought together two real pugilists with much talent. In this light-heavyweight tussle which brought together Con McGinley and Fred Kaczminski the match was called at the end of the second round and the verdict was given to Kaczminski on a technical knockout decision. McGinley sustained a cut over his eye and Referee Ray Gadsby,

Banagan Elected Tennis Captain

Edward Banagan, for three years a ranking member of the varsity tennis team, will captain the court squad this spring after appointment by his fellow lettermen.

Banagan will succeed Beatty Schemmerhorn who graduated last year and will be the most promising racqueteer of a well-balanced Blue and White team which makes its debut in April.

Already plans are under way for several weeks of indoor practice in preparation for the coming clay court season which Villanova will engage in nine or ten contests, only tentatively arranged now.

Hard Task

Weakened considerably by the loss of four varsity men, the Wildcat net team will face the task of building up with new material. Wallach, Schemmerhorn, Rapplyea and Dunne were the big four last year who graduated and it will be hard filling in their gaps.

This year the task of carrying the mail for the Blue and White seems to lie in the hands of Capt. Banagan and John Grey, David Daly and Jerry Belz, all juniors. On hand are George McFadden, last Fall's Intramural tennis star, Chet Pajolek, runner-up in the tournament, and Duke King, another sophomore. The strength of the squad will be more definite when the courts are fixed and the campus talent make their appearance.

Minus a tennis coach, the squad has nine games listed tentatively for the spring in which they will try their luck. A preview of the games scheduled is as follows:

24—U. of Delaware	Away
May

Fedigan Hall Retains I-M Crown

Maroon Five Triumphs Over Austin In Play-Offs Taking Last Game, 39-26

Gigoloes Repeat Championship for Another Year by Sweeping Two Out of Three; Seven Seniors Compete in Final Tilt

By SAM CANNING

Playing before the largest crowd to assemble in Alumni hall during the entire tournament Fedigan hall on Tuesday night retained the Intramural Basketball Championship for another year by winning the third game of the play-off series from the Austin Hall Firemen by a 39-26 margin.

The tourney was tied at one game all when Austin came back, after losing the first game in a thrilling battle, 40-39, and took the second by a 41-25 score. This forced a playoff game which Fedigan took in an easy stride.

First Game Best

The first game proved to be the most exciting of series. Inspired by the brilliant play of Fred Clark, who was high scorer with 13 points, Fedigan stuck point for point with the famed Austin sharp-shooters and gained a 5 point lead at half-time. Both teams came back strong—Austin with a 5 point deficit to overcome.

They didn't accomplish this feat till the last few minutes of play when Keating tied the score at 34 all on a set shot from the side line. Jim Forkin sent the Gigoloes ahead once more on a free shot from the 15 foot marker but Austin's John Quinn dropped a long one from the center and the crowd went wild as only five minutes remained and the Firemen were ahead, 36-35.

Rough Affair

Then the game lost control. Wild passes were as numerous as the number of desperation shots. The lead changed frequently and it was as difficult to keep track of the score as it was to keep from cheering hysterically. With the wildness, the contest became rough and Fedigan sank five foul shots in a row to win the game, 40 - 39, and beat Austin for the first time this year.

The second game was completely dominated by Austin who took a 15-11 lead at the end of the 20-minute period and ran it to 41-25 in the next period. Austin's leading league scorers, Keating and Martin, led the way with 11 points each as Fedigan's highest scorer was Dalina with 6 points.

The final game provided little excitement except for several spectacular shots by Fedigan's ace, Jim Forkin, who was top scorer with 12 points. The game was poorly played, partly due to the tension created by the importance of the game and the large crowd. Thirty fouls were committed; each team accounting for 15. The champs led by 10 points at half time and eased out with a 39-26 score to cop the championship.

Once again Big Dan Keating was high scorer for the tournament with 30 points for the three games. Moore was second with 22 and Daly of Fedigan third with 20. Six of the nine Fedigan players competed in their last game: Forkin, Scelba, Dalina, Skaff, Finn and Abbott. Keating was the only Austin senior.

who was doing his turn in the ring, stopped the fight.

Every year there is feud fight and this year proved no exception with Charley Lozowski and Nat DePetrillo, both of Austin Hall, providing the slugging. In this bout Lozowski hammered away at his 145 lb opponent and after the three rounds had his man tied up enough to win out. This was Lozowski's third straight year on the boxing card.

Fenton Impressive

Bill Fenton, the Brooklyn flash, and Ray Buckenmaier—fighting in the light-heavyweight division—put on a good solid battle with the decision a toss-up. Fenton probably would have taken the bout had he been on the offensive more. Most of the time he was put on his defense and hardly ever threw his right.

Bill Nocco, for three years the champion of his class, was finally beaten and this time by Paul Dowd, Freshman basketball player, who threw a wicked left roundhouse giving Noco plenty to worry about.

In the other welterweight bout Buzz Mowen, a former member of the varsity boxing team proved his worth in the ring by outboxing and outsmarting his opponent, Mike Ingenito representing the Mendel Day Hops. Mowen seemed to sense his opponent's flinging fists and with evasive shifts always kept from reach tiring his opponent considerably.

Comical Match

For comic fisticuffs, the match between Jack Faraci and Logan Phillips really set the house in laughter. Both boxers came from Austin Hall and provided some serious and comical moments during their encounter. It seemed that both took turns trading punches.

The wrestling match was put on by Jack Hobbs and Roy Cacciatore with Hobbs pinning his opponent in the second round after a body smash.

SUMMARIES

Frank Gorman of Mendel Residents, defeated Joe Matt of Mendel day Hops, in a three round decision.

the condition in which they kept themselves must have been A plus. Maybe that's the reason that they only played fifteen games in three years though.

On record the first and historical game at Villanova was against the National Bank of Philadelphia, and after the nine innings the score stood Villanova 57; National Bank 0. That time the bank boys were really blanked. After that trimming the National Bank probably stopped her credit extension to the College and stayed in her own league.

First Loss

After that wonderful feat, the Blue and White took on the Independents and lost their only game of the season, 22 to 27. There's a possibility here that someone scored a last minute touchdown to edge out the 'Cats. In another home encounter in the Spring of 1869, LaSalle visited the Main Line and was sent home on the short end of a 33 to 15 tally.

No doubt home runs, triples and doubles were the only hits gotten off the West Haverford nine for Villanova soundly whipped their opponents that year by the count of 34 to 9. Well, 34 runs wasn't too much because after all the game then was strictly the "throw it in and I'll hit it out" type. You couldn't expect the pitcher to do all the work.

The following year, in 1871, Alanta of St. Denis, fared much better with the powerful Wildcat nine and only succumbed by the score of 47 to 7, a trifling margin of 40 runs. Merion followed and was the next victim for the Blue and White, losing by the score of 42 to 10.

Game of the Year

The publicized game of that year was the one against the Philadelphia Athletics. In an unofficial game at the A's home park, the Wildcats were caught napping and were defeated, 51 to 30. Still any team that could score 30 runs on the Athletics must have been good. And besides the Athletics were really good in those days and would have pleased the heart of Connie Mack, no end.

'Cat Mermen Bow To F. and M. At Lancaster

A crack little band of swimmers from Franklin and Marshall college scored their sixth straight victory of the season last Saturday by defeating the Wildcats, 46-29, in their home pool at Lancaster.

Led by their captain, Dick Price, who won the 220 and 440 freestyle, the Diplomats took five first places to Villanova's four. However, their superior strength in the 220, backstroke, and diving events was the real cause of the Wildcats' defeat.

The first event, 300-yd. medley relay, was one of the best races of the afternoon. When Walt Kelley took over the anchor leg he was about four yards behind F. and M.'s Leon Macionis. On the third length Kelley drew even and then went ahead to win. The combination of John Maher, Frank Desmond, and Kelley covered the distance in 3.12, the fastest time ever turned in by a Wildcat trio for that event.

Kelley Outstanding

In spite of his team's defeat, Kelley was the outstanding star of the meet. Besides his efforts in the medley, he won the 50 and 100 yd. freestyles in 24.5 and 55.2 seconds. George Gager battled him in the 50 but he won handily over Macionis in the 100.

Sophomore Frank Desmond had a large share in the Wildcat scoring by landing their other first place. He fought off a last minute bid by Burger of F. and M. to win in the fast time of 2.42.4.

Last year at the Villanova pool, Franklin and Marshall defeated the Wildcats with some fancy exhibitions of swimming and diving. Saturday the Blue had a 12-11 margin after the first three events, but F. and M., with Keelan and Waring finishing one-two in the diving put their team out in the lead.

In the 400-yard freestyle relay which was in slow time the Villanova swimmers were a bit disappointing as they lost their lead to F. and M.

Summaries:

300-yard medley relay—Won by Villanova (Maher, Desmond, Kelley); second, F. and M. (Badorf, Her, Macionis). Time, 3.12.1.

220-yard free style—Won by Price, F. and M.; second, Kachel, F. and M.; third, Pholeric, Villanova. Time, 2.24.

50-yard free style—Won by Kelley, Villanova; second, Gager, F. and M.; third, Koness, Villanova. Time, 24.5.

Diving—Won by Keelan, F. and M., 92.3; second, Waring, F. and M., 89.2; third, Green, Villanova, 73.5.

100-yard free style—Won by Kelley, Villanova; second, Macionis, F. and M.; third, Pholeric, Villanova. Time, 55.2.

150-yard back stroke—Won by Badorf, F. and M.; second, Bagenstone, F. and M.; third, Maher, Villanova. Time, 1.46.2.

200-yard breast stroke—Won by Desmond, Villanova; second, Burger, F. and M.; third, Herr, F. and M. Time, 2.42.4.

40-yard free style—Won by Price, F. and M.; second, Reilley, Villanova; third, Mauch, Villanova. Time, 5.24.3.

400-yard free style relay—Won by F. and M. (Hunter, McKillip, Kachel, Gager); second, Villanova (Koness, Farnsworth, Moore, Pholeric). Time, 4.00.9.

Wildcat Golfers Face Ten Teams

Randolph to Lead Linksmen Against Fordham, St. John's, Haverford and St. Joseph's

The outlook for Villanova's golf team at the moment looks in a bright state with Captain Cliff Randolph leading five returning golfers back into form to face a ten game schedule. Randolph, a senior commerce man, will take over the captaincy this year and will probably play number one position.

Practice will start in a few weeks, soon after the current crop of snow and rain disappears and the team will start their sessions on the greens of the Pennsylvania Country Club at Frazer. Bob DePersio, Ernie Klappenbach, Dave Morse, Jim Brown and Paul Stenn, holdovers from last year, will have their clubs ready for swinging by then.

Look to Good Year

With these as the nucleus, Captain Randolph promises bigger and better things for the Wildcat linksmen. In addition he will have Jack Maher, Frank Abbott, Bill Walsh and Bob Casey to add to the roster of the team. All show much promise this year after shooting some good rounds last year in the Fall tournament.

The team this year seems to be better balanced and with experienced players listed, prospects for this the 1941 season look to be much brighter than ever before. The first of the ten-game schedule starts on April 18 at which time St. John's of Brooklyn is listed for the first week after spring vacation. This year, as in previous years, the selection of the squad will be based on 36 hole medal play.

A ten-match schedule has been arranged. The only change shows Rider college replacing Pennsylvania.

Bowling League Gains Momentum

Phi Kappa Pi Fraternity Sponsors Tournament for Second Year; 18 Teams Entered

One of the most popular extracurricular activities at Villanova is bowling. The Phi Kappa Pi, entering its second successful year in this activity, has organized an extensive program for this sport.

The league, first of its kind at Villanova, was introduced last year with the intention of promoting a greater interest in the fraternity. The number of entries received last year more than surprised the originators, and the keen interest shown throughout exhibited the value of such an activity. This year the league has been increased by eight teams. So numerous were the entries that two leagues had to be formed. At present eighteen teams and ninety students are registered in the program.

To Have Play-Offs

The league is operating smoothly under the capable direction of Robert Ayerle, Nicholas Aceto and Benjamin Clark. All three are junior chemists in the School of Engineering. They handle all scores, schedules and team standings. The chairman expects the league to continue until the end of April. At that time the first two teams will enter a play-off.

At the end of the semi-finals, the "A" and "B" teams will meet each other in the finals. The winner of this match will be crowned champion of the league. It is hoped that enough funds will be available to make possible the purchase of awards for the winners.

No Handicaps

League matches are rolled on the Ardmore Alleys every Saturday afternoon. Games start at 1 P. M. and continue until 6 P. M. Each match is composed of three games, with two points awarded to the winner of each game. The games are played on even terms, and no handicap points are given.

From the mighty seniors to the humble freshmen reigns the anticipation of the outcome. All classes are represented, and even the honorable faculty is participating. The scores range from the high hundreds of the veterans to the low sixties of the beginners. At present Herman Steiert, a senior mechanical engineer, leads the league in scoring with his high 189 score. The standing of the teams, to date, is as follows:

Baseball

along since last year are Jim Lattanza and Joe Malone. Lattanza, a former Brown Prep hurler, has a good fast ball and needs just the experience before being a starter. Malone, who pitched his way to honors in the campus baseball tournament last spring will help considerably in relief work and may be listed for a possible starter.

Two Sophomores

Fresh from his action on the court, Billy Wood, another Brown Prepper, will wear the role of pitcher in this 72nd campaign. Wood was the star of last year's Frosh nine, coached by Buzz Howlett, and is headed for a berth this season. Frank Chaplar is a newcomer from the yearling squad also and will relieve the burden of some of the starters.

Six catchers will be trying hard to gain berths of the squad and there will be a real fight in this department over the position vacated by George Flood. Ted Bicky, Al Skaff and John Murphy seem to have the inside track on the position but the three other contenders, George Fitzgerald, Jimmy Dykes and George Famigletti are still in the race and may come out on top when the first game comes about.

Weather Threatens

The infield combination of Woody Reitmeier, Joe Yednock, Tony Calandra and Jack Donoghue are working together very hard and if all holds well Jacobs can breathe much easier. The hopes of giving the team an outdoor workout grew very slim as the week-end snowstorm put an end to such hopes. Consequently, the Wildcats will spend another few weeks in the gym.

Views On Track

By BILL CAREY

With the close of the indoor track season nearing, the plans to round out a complete and satisfactory schedule are now under way by Coach Jumbo Elliott.

At a time like this with snow lying all around the countryside it may sound a little premature to talk of outdoor track, but don't forget that this is the month that the season of spring makes it annual debut.

Out here on the Main Line, Jumbo Elliott expects to have one of the fullest and strongest schedules since his own days of tape breaking for the Blue and White.

Schedule Being Fixed

At this early date nothing could be declared official, but arrangements are being made with Temple, Albright, Catholic U., Swarthmore, Rider and F. and M. Of course the Penn Relays will come in between these meets to prove one of the season's highlights.

At the close of school these men will also run in the Middle Atlantics and National A. A. U. meet. The latter meet is the biggest meet in the country, and for that matter the world, now that the Olympic games have been discontinued.

The Nationals, it has just been decided, will be run in Philadelphia this year, and this is really a boom for the Quaker City. Even though the Philly district has plenty of first class track material, it just seems to come and go unheralded because of the amazing lack of interest and backing of John Q. Public.

Penn Relays

The Penn Relays provide for Philly its only major meet, with the exception of the up and coming Penn A. C. meet that is run in Convention Hall every winter.

Getting back to the Wildcats, if these tentative meets come through it will be a great thing for the present track men. With plenty of competition provided by these mentioned teams, the track down at the stadium will undoubtedly bear some new records.

Especially in the running events is the squad strong, and if the men come up to expectations and predicitions, more than one record will go off the books.

Need Men

With a nucleus like this it should be encouraging to would-be aspirants for track and much-needed field men. Races can be won by the runners but it takes a full team to win meets.

So with a full season ahead of them on the cinder boards, the men seem to be in their best condition of the year as they prepare to travel to New York and Washington next weekend to close their season victoriously.

FROSH FIVE TO PLAY IN CONNECTICUT

Villanova's freshman basketball squad, holder of 32 undefeated games, played a post-season game with the Central Y. M. C. A. last week and emerged victorious to add another game to their winning streak.

This coming Saturday night the yearling five will journey to Stamford, Connecticut, where they will be matched against the Stamford Boys' Club, who are rated as one of the top-notch teams of their class in that section. The game has been arranged by several Villanova alumni, who hail from Stamford.

In this encounter the same combination that has worked so well all during the campaign will start the floor against the Boys' Club. The line-up will include the names of Herman Drizen, Reds Klotz, Ernie Melafchick, Joe Lord and Ted Repella.

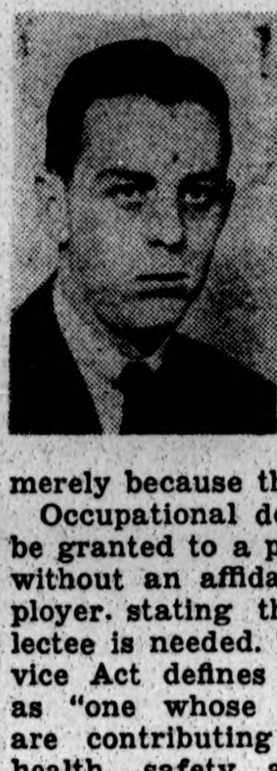
HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

Although the recently-passed military conscription bill has affected men in all walks of life, we can think of no particular group engaged in one activity which is so singularly affected as those whom we call athletes. This is due to the fact that practically all those who participate in active sports are well within the age limits of 21 to 35 years as set down in the bill.

Mr. Webster defines an athlete as "one trained to contend in feats of physical prowess." This alone makes our athletes fair pickings for the draft boards since Uncle Sam intends to teach the draftees how to be proficient in a certain type of physical prowess and it must be admitted that a boxer or a baseball player, who follows strict training rules for most of the year, will prove a more apt pupil in learning the fundamentals of modern warfare and following the strict routine of army life than the ordinary working man who thinks a training table is a table on which Lionel toy trains are run.

Athletes Are the Choice



Now, having established the fact that athletes are the ideal and logical choice for induction into our citizen army, it seems inconsistent to find certain persons advocating deferment or even exemption for athletes merely because they are athletes.

Occupational deferment may not be granted to a prospective draftee without an affidavit from the employer. stating that the draft selectee is needed. The Selective Service Act defines a necessary man as "one whose civilian activities are contributing to the national health, safety and interest and whose removal from his civilian activity would cause a national loss of effectiveness in such activity." Now the question that arises is whether or not a professional baseball player, golfer, or boxer is "a necessary man" under the provisions of the act.

No Deferments

We believe the owners of the big league baseball clubs answered this question when they emphatically and almost unanimously declared that they would not ask for deferment for any of their players.

There is also another group of athletes who are liable to call in the draft — those college athletes who have reached the age of twenty-one. However, they will be considered as students rather than athletes and so whatever provision is made concerning college underclassmen will apply to them, also. If the draft officials decide to defer their training until after graduation, then the coaches of college sports can expect to lose some of their proteges to the army.

Army Football

However, if present plans materialize, these boys will be encouraged to continue taking part in sports, for each draft camp is expected to form teams in the various sports and compete against each other and also against college teams. As a matter of fact, Rutgers University has included a game with Fort Dix on its regular football schedule for 1941. When we ponder over the fact that 30,000 draftees are expected to be residing at Fort Dix by next fall and that this number will include a good number of former college and professional football players, the thought arises that maybe Rutgers will have quite a game on their hands.

Words of Praise

A word of thanks is due to three gentlemen from Alumni Hall who all year long have refereed the Intramural basketball games. Their names, according to Fr. McKee, are Ted Janeczek, Jule Stolsitz and Tony Corrao. Without their efficient verdicts the league would have suffered a great deal and because of their time spent, we say thanks fellows!—Thanks!

"Musical Clocker" Heads Talent Entertaining At Junior Prom

By WARD GUNCHEON

Offering all the appealing features of a gala evening, this year's Junior Prom will present an original floor show during intermission. Chairman John J. Parson, Jr., has announced that top-ranking talent will be engaged in conjunction with one of the nation's popular bands.

Master of ceremonies of the entertainment will be Leroy Miller. Associated with radio station KYW of Philadelphia, Miller is a favorite of early morning listeners. His fans have conferred upon him the title of "The Nation's Number One Alarm Clock."

Acting as master of ceremonies for the "Musical Clock" program from 7:00 to 9:00 A. M., he has amazed listeners with his ability to be humorous so early in the morning. At the dance, he will give the impersonations of various radio personalities which have made him famous, both on the networks and at social gatherings, and will assist in the presentation of the sterling silver trophy to the "Queen."

For the "Queen's" court, which will number six, the dance committee has secured miniature sterling silver replicas of the trophy to be presented to the "Queen." The sterling silver trophies for the "Queen" and her court, donated by Enright Jewelers of Philadelphia, will be shown to the committee tomorrow afternoon.

Preliminary sketches of the decorations for the Field House have been completed by Ernest Klappenbach, chairman of the decorations committee. The sketches will be submitted to the entire dance committee at their next meeting in order that suggested modifications may be acted upon.

From the photographs entered in the "Queen" contest, all but ten have been eliminated by preliminary judging. From these remaining ten will be selected the "Queen" and her court. The ten photographs have been sent to Walter Thornton, president of the Thornton Model Agency of New York, for his decision. Announcement of the "Queen" and the court will be made in the VILLANOVAN following the dance committee's receipt of Thornton's decision.

Plans for the Junior Dinner Dance, which will be held on the evening following the Prom, will be formulated tomorrow afternoon at a general meeting of the dinner-dance committee in 215 Mendel hall. All members of the committee are urgently requested to be present at the meeting, which will begin at 1:00 P. M.

Club Invites Senior Engineers To Meeting Tonight

Senior engineers are invited to attend the annual "College Night" of the Engineers Club of Philadelphia, to be held tonight at 7:45 P. M.

Subject of the meeting will be "The Expanding Activities of Engineers" and will deal with the increasing penetration of engineers into business management, political, and social fields.

Students attending the affair will have the opportunity of contacting representatives of many industrial concerns. Mr. D. S. Bridgman, of the Personnel Department of the American Telegraph and Telephone Co. will be the principal speaker.

Refreshments will be served after the meeting, and during the evening two motion picture made by the Bell Telephone Company, "The Co-Axial Cable" and "Trouble in Spots" will be shown.

In addition to the Villanova group, students and faculty members from the engineering schools of Drexel Institute, Haverford College, Swarthmore College, the University of Pennsylvania, and the University of Delaware will be present.

Program for Day-Hop Music Seminar Tomorrow Includes "Pavanne," "Song of India"

Members of the Day-hop Music Seminar will have their say tomorrow afternoon in the Amphitheater from 12:40 to 1:20 when the weekly program will consist entirely of requested selections.

The program, as now drawn up from attendees' requests, will include the "Meditation from Thais"; the "Third Movement" of Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony; Ravel's famed "Pavanne," which recently was "swung" under the title, "The Lamp Is Low"; the "Song of India"; the "Pomp and Circumstance" march; Schubert's regal "Emperor Waltz", and the "Caprice Viennois."

Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, director of the seminar, has requested that if any of the students who will attend the seminar wish to hear other pieces, they would see him as soon as possible and make their wants known.

Defense Training Has Steady Growth

Enrollment of 23 more students in Engineering Defense Training at Northeast Catholic High has made necessary the addition of two instructors to the faculty of that school, J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering, and director of the project, revealed yesterday.

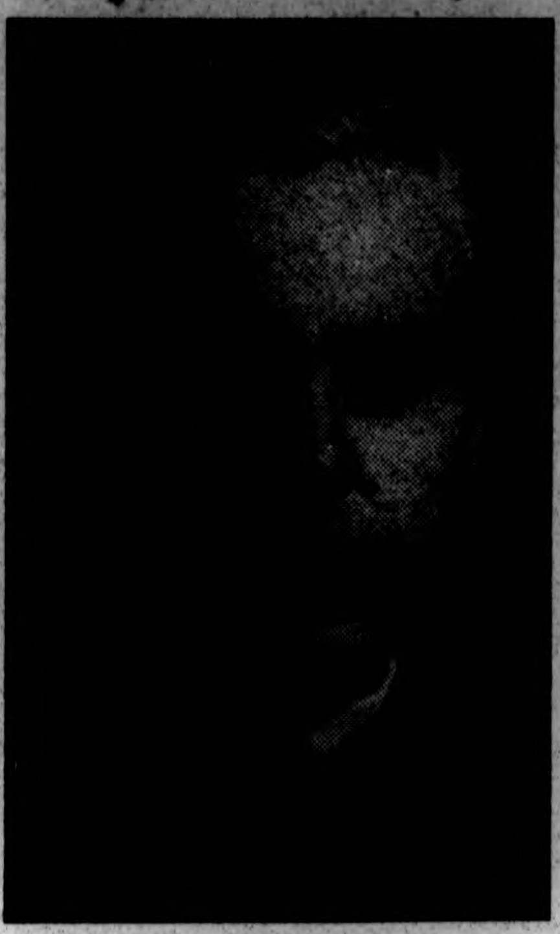
Total enrollment at the school is now 125. Addition of the new teachers brings the number of faculty members up to twelve.

Classes under the program will start at West Catholic High School, Norristown High and Villanova as soon as a minimum of twenty-five applicants has been accepted for each branch.

Courses offered are in elementary engineering subjects and are of college level. They include mathematics, physics, mechanical drawing and machine design.

High school graduates in the first two quintiles of their classes are eligible. Classes are conducted at such times that either employed or unemployed students may attend them.

Speaks Monday



REV. H. A. CAFFREY, O. S. A., Prior of the Monastery, who will deliver the second Lenten sermon next Monday night. The topic of Fr. Caffrey's talk will be "Moderation in Daily Life."

"The Black Plague"

Anthony P. DiGiovanni, sophomore science student, will address the Research Seminar this Thursday at 4:30 P. M. in Simpson hall on "The Black Plague."

At the last meeting of the group, John Bongiovanni, sophomore science student, discussed "The Theory of Evolution."

Scientists Meet Here Next Month

The Catholic Anthropological Conference, through its executive secretary, Msgr. John M. Cooper, has accepted an invitation tendered by the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., college president, to hold its annual meeting at Villanova on Easter Tuesday, April 15.

The Conference, of which the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Joseph M. Corrigan, D. D., Ll.D., Litt. D., is honorary president, was founded in 1926 at Catholic University, and has as its chief aim, "the advancement of anthropological science through the promotion of anthropological research and publication by Catholic missionaries, specialists, and other students, and through the promotion of ethnological training among candidates for mission work."

"Primitive Man," a quarterly bulletin on anthropology, is published by the Conference; it contains discussions of various phases of the field of anthropology, together with news items on the progress and problems of the Conference.

Membership in the Catholic Anthropological Conference is open to both the clergy and the laity, Catholics and non-Catholics. More than thirty religious orders and mission societies participate in its work.

Fr. Cooper, executive secretary of the Conference, holds one of Villanova's annually conferred Mendel Medals, and is the author of the series of books used in the religion courses at Villanova.

Rosemonters Cast For Annual Play

Freshmen Kay Haley and Mary Lou Smith Complete Dramatis Personae

(Illustrated on Page 8)

Kay Haley and Mary Lou Smith, both members of the freshman class at Rosemont College, have been selected by Anthony J. Frayne, director of Belle Masque, to portray the feminine roles in the society's annual production, "Margin for Error."

Miss Haley will enact the part of Sophie, unhappy wife of the German consul, Herr Baumer. Forced into a marriage with Baumer because of his control of her father, Sophie falls in love with Thomas Denny, an American journalist.

Miss Smith will portray the very difficult role of a maid in the German Cónsulate. She must be able to speak German fluently, since the character employs that tongue throughout the play.

Both girls have had previous dramatic experience. Miss Haley, a resident of Bronxville, West chester County, N. Y., directed a freshman play at Rosemont, and Miss Smith, who is a native of Pittsburgh, enacted leading roles in several high school productions. The girls are to begin rehearsals in the Field House together with the six Villanova students who have already been chosen for the male parts.

The stage crew, under the direction of Robert Dooley, has received the lumber needed for the construction of the set and expects to have it completed in the near future. The replica of the Consul's library will be carried out in detail.

Concert Date Set

Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., moderator of the college's musical organizations, has announced that the combined Immaculata-Villanova symphonic bands will present their concert at the Villanova Field House on Sunday, March 23, at 8:30 P. M.

Members of the two bands began joint practice sessions for the event during the last week in February. The program as tentatively arranged will include: a flute, oboe, and clarinet trio; a clarinet trio; an oboe solo; a novelty, the "Circus Parade" by Victor Herbert; the Merry Widow Waltz, and selections from Spanish numbers. Tickets will be placed on sale as soon as arrangements are completed.

Debaters To Meet Loyola Of Baltimore

Joseph Mahoney and George Harris will represent Beta Gamma in a debate with Loyola College of Baltimore this Friday afternoon in Simpson hall on the topic, "Resolved: That the countries of the Western Hemisphere should form a permanent union."

Next Monday afternoon, representatives from Upsala, St. Peter's, and Villanova will participate in a round-table discussion of the Western Hemisphere alliance question. Burt Collins and Charles Callahan will represent Villanova in the forum, which will be held in Simpson hall, beginning at 3:00 P. M.

At Immaculata College yesterday, John Fullam and Thomas Moore upheld the negative of a resolution "that the woman in the home contributes more to national defense than the woman in the office."

Last Wednesday evening, the localites decisively won a debate from St. Joseph's College, dropping the league leaders into a three-way tie for first place in the Philadelphia Forsenic League.

Thornton Picks Model Gloria Spatola as Most Beautiful Entrant; Court Will Consist of Ten

By WARD GUNCHEON

Gloria Spatola, of Overbrook, has been selected the first Queen of the Junior Prom by Walter Thornton, model agency president. Coronation of the Queen will occur May 9 during the formal dance which will climax Junior Week activities.

Miss Spatola, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Spatola, Jr., of Garden Rd., Overbrook, was entered in competition by Anthony Anderson, junior in the commerce school. She attended St. Leonard's Academy and later graduated from Sacred Heart Convent. Since her graduation from Sacred Heart in 1939, Gloria has been engaged in free-lance modeling and at the present time is employed as a model at Albert's Gown Shop in Philadelphia.

Actively engaged in Catholic social activities, the newly-selected Queen has been featured several times in the St. Francis' Junior Aide Show. At Sacred Heart Convent she combined with her academic course activities in the glee club and the dramatic society. Miss Spatola, who will be the first Queen to reign at any social event in the history of Villanova, will be 19 years old on March 23. A graceful five foot, seven-and-a-half inch beauty, her natural charm, enhanced by her dark brown hair and blue-gray eyes, merited the decision of the judges over all other entrants.

This will be the second "first" for the Queen; last year she was elected the first Queen of the Junior activities of the Penn Athletic Club for the ensuing year by popular vote of junior members.

Judging for the selection of the Prom Queen has been in progress since Feb. 1. Participating in the selection were several college authorities and famous personalities. Representing the college were the Rev.

"Russia Will Avoid War"

Fr. McFadden Tells University Club of Pittsburgh That Communism Loses By Conflict

By GERARD BELZ

"I do not believe that Soviet Russia will ever enter the present conflict," Rev. Charles J. McFadden, O. S. A., assistant professor of religion at Villanova, stated in a lecture delivered last night before the University Catholic Club in Pittsburgh.

"Theoretically, there is no reason for a Communist State to help any Capitalist State entrench itself in a victorious position of power," he contended. "Practically, Soviet Russia would gain nothing from either a Nazi or English victory.

"Moreover, under its present economic system, Soviet Russia is barely able to maintain its own existence. A major war makes tremendous demands on a nation, demands which, even apart from the danger of revolt on the part of the people, are far beyond the present capacity of the Soviet State."

Fr. McFadden's address was the last in a series of six lectures scheduled by the University Club, which is composed of graduates of the nation's Catholic colleges and universities residing in and near Pittsburgh.

Previous lectures were given by Dr. Mortimer Adler, of the University of Chicago; Dr. John F. Cronin; Rev. Edwin Ryan, of Catholic University; Rev. James M. Gillis, editor of the "Catholic World"; and Dr. Francis E. McMahon, of the University of Notre Dame.

In his lecture, Fr. McFadden first developed the philosophical principles of Communism which are pertinent to the Communist doctrine on war. He then applied these principles to both civil and international war, explaining what the necessary Communist attitude must be on the various types of war.

He stated that "the problem of international war has always been a most serious one for Communism. The primary objective of establishing a world-wide Communist society is never forgotten; but, in the face of an international war, the leaders of Communism have always found it difficult to know just what attitude towards the war would best serve their own ends and purposes.

"Involvement of a nation in war usually results in a temporary setback for Communism in that nation. The reason is that war creates patriotism and ennobles sacrifice. The mind of a people is taken off themselves and their suffering and is concentrated on the foreign enemy. For this reason, Communism usually has no desire for international war.

"On the other hand, when the progress of Communism in major nations reaches a point of stagnation, the Communist wonders if his purpose would not be served best by fostering an international war and thus weakening the warring nations. Communism could then capitalize on the poverty of the nations which had been engaged in the struggle."

Regarded as an authority on the field of Communism, Fr. McFadden is the author of a book entitled "The Philosophy of Communism." The work was received with enthusiastic approval by both Catholic and secular critics, and more than one prominent authority has echoed the opinion of the Rev. Fulton J. Sheen that it is "the best book on the philosophy of Communism in any language."

"Bulletin" Praises Wistar Institute

The year's second issue of the "Mendel Bulletin," science school publication, made its appearance yesterday, presenting articles of varied and unusual interest to the embryo scientist.

Featured in the "Bulletin" is an article on the Wistar Institute of Philadelphia, noted for its work in the anatomical and biological fields. A panoramic view of this noteworthy edifice is shown.

Inspired by the Science Forum visit of Miss Newlin and her "seeing-eye" dog, Blitzen, the issue contains an article concerning Benevolence, a foundation for the development of the noble animals who are trained so that the blind may "see."

An interesting account is given of bats from the naturalist's point of view, of their habits and species.

Articles of a deeper scientific nature, such as the preparation of specimens for study by the injection of latex, a discussion of epitheleal tissues, and some very good micro-photographs of mammalian hairs, are also included in the issue.

Put Soul First, Loughran Advises

"The welfare of the soul is more important than any material gains in this world," Tommy Loughran, former light-heavyweight boxing champion of the world, told students of the School of Science at a meeting of the Science Forum last Thursday in the Mendel hall Amphitheater.

One of the outstanding Catholic men in Philadelphia, Loughran is working in the city's "Cafeteria Court." In his talk the former boxer emphasized the fact that one should never sacrifice his religious viewpoint, whatever the situation might be. He stated that he has let it be known that he is a Catholic wherever he goes and advised that his listeners adopt a similar attitude even if they find that their religion might be objected to by their business associates.

Loughran gave a brief description of his career, which began in 1919 and lasted over a period of almost 18 years, during which time he met 21 different world champions in 227 bouts.

After 15 years of boxing he had his first try at the heavyweight championship in March of 1934 when he met Primo Carnera at Miami Beach, Florida. He gave a rather brief description of this bout, which marked the turning point of his career.

Tommy elaborated on some of the remarkable experiences that he had with Primo Carnera. He considers Carnera one of the best-natured fellows he has ever met.

In concluding his address, Loughran left his audience with the thought, "When you are facing problems and want consolation, go into a Catholic Church and pray, asking Almighty God to help you."

Flying Still Possible

Since the quota for the C. A. A. course has not yet been filled, students desirous of taking the course may file applications with William G. Slaughter up to March 15. After this date no more will be accepted. Three semester hours credit, retroactive, will be given for the Monday and Friday evening ground school.

K. G. S. Elects

Officers for Coming Year Tomorrow; New Members Eligible to Vote

Kappa Gamma Sigma, physics club, will elect new officers tomorrow at 1:00 P. M. in Mendel hall.

Elections were previously scheduled to be held during the past week but were postponed. The later date was set in order to give newly-accepted members of the organization, whose applications were being considered by the Board of Admissions last week, an opportunity to take part in the selection of the club's new leaders.

The Board, composed of Joseph Gambescia, Joseph Turner, Harold Varani, John Callahan, and Francis McLaughlin, has completed consideration of the applicants. A list of the candidates who have been accepted has been posted on the bulletin board of the School of Science. Those listed, as well as all former members, are eligible to vote.

Speakers To Address Class Agents' Dinner

As a part of the Alumni Centennial Fund Drive, a class agents' dinner will be held this Saturday evening, Mar. 15, in Villanova's student dining hall. It is expected that about 125 members of the alumni will attend.

This affair will mark the official beginning of the personal solicitation of the alumni by the class agents. Speakers at the dinner will include Matthew Lynch as toastmaster, the Very Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, O. S. A.; Very Rev. John T. Sheehan, O. S. A.; Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A.; John P. Keffer, president of the Alumni Association; Dr. Edward Burke, chairman of the Alumni Centennial Fund Executive Board; J. Stanley Smith, Esq.; Martin J. McLaughlin, chairman of the Alumni Committee; Judge Sylvester Sabbatino; and Francis X. Robinson.

Also invited to the dinner are the president of local Alumni clubs, members of the Board of Governors, the chairman of the present Student Council, the president of the senior class, and the editors of the VILLANOVAN and the Belle Air.

The drive is progressing with all possible speed and is being met with the whole-hearted cooperation of the alumni.

"Far East"

Problems Will Be Treated at Rosemont-Villanova Relations Meeting Monday

International Relations Clubs of Villanova and Rosemont College will meet at Rosemont next Monday, March 17, at 3:45 P. M., to conduct a symposium on the "Problems of the Far East."

Four papers will be read on the following topics "International Development of China," "Internal Development of Japan," "Foreign Relations of China to 1931," and "The Far East, 1931-1940." Each paper will be limited to fifteen minutes and will be followed by an open discussion.

Gerard Belz, junior artsman, will deliver the first paper, which will provide a general background of the people and the social and political conditions of China. The third paper will be presented by George Flannery, senior commerce student. It will give a history of the early diplomatic relations of China and and the effects of foreign intervention.

Papers dealing with the "Internal Development of Japan" and "The Far East, 1931-1940" will be read by members of the Rosemont club. The latter paper is considered most important since it will contain a resume of recent events and endeavour to offer a satisfactory solution to the problems of the Far East.

Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the discussion.

Today Deadline

Orders for extra copies of the Belle Air will be accepted today upon payment of the complete $5.00 fee or a $1.00 deposit. Today is the last opportunity to take advantage of this reduced rate. In the future the price for all extra copies ordered will be the regular $7.50.

Several students have already expressed their desire for another copy of the yearbook but have made no deposit. They must make their deposits today if they wish to obtain the books at the lower price.

Then Start Striking—

IMMEDIATE to the pressing need of armaments for America and other nonbelligerent nations is the necessity of curtailing all petty conflict existing in the labor world today. The importance of eradicating this menace to production has become so imperative that last week the President expressed intention of establishing a new board to deal solely with defense labor problems during the present emergency.

The erection of such a board will aid greatly in the investigation of labor disputes and strikes which have been constantly disrupting the progress of production movements. A similar agency should have been established long before this period and, now that tentative plans have been considered, it is encouraging that the proposed board be put in operation without further delay.

The intended board is slated to consider problems on a broad scale, and it is hoped that its long-range policies will include the investigation of jurisdictional strikes where defense labor is involved. Unfortunately, this method, instigated by the unjustified actions of rival union leaders and workers, has wrecked production in many essential defense industries. This type of strike must be eliminated, and it must be done now if the nation is to achieve the desired production peak.

Regardless of what defense enactments Congress may pass in the future, they will be all for naught if present labor disputes are permitted to lull in defense production industries.

No Kid Stuff Now

APPROVAL by the Senate last Saturday of the Administration's lend-lease aid to Britain bill is reasonable assurance that the measure will become law in the near future. With the passage of the bill by this body, practically the last barrier was removed for authorizing the President to distribute war materials to Great Britain and other nations engaged in the struggle against aggressive powers.

Passed by a vote of 60 to 31 after close to three weeks debate on the issue, the bill remained just as it had been sent from the House with the exception of a few clarifying amendments. These changes the House is expected to accept without delay, and thus permit the bill to be presented to the President.

Principal among these clarifying amendments is the retention of the Congressional control of the pursestrings which should be a source of comfort and confidence to those not previously in favor of the measure. The bill as it stands authorizes the President to extend to Britain and other nations immediate aid in the form of military supplies on hand or on order up to a value of $1,300,000,000. In the future specific authorization must be contained in the appropriation bills before the President can grant supplies of war materials to England or other nations.

Now that this important piece of legislation has been passed by both houses of Congress, and now that everything indicates that it will soon become law, it is of equal importance that the men who have been debating the issue settle all personal grievances that may have sprung from their discussion of the measure. There must exist no dissension among these government bodies on an issue that has been approved by a majority of their members. Their task has just begun, and there must be no internal discord resulting from this lend-lease bill to hamper the unity which need live throughout their future deliberations.

Likewise, it is essential that the people of the nation dispel all prejudice that may have grown from this question. A national unity must be established before we can hope to cope with the serious situations which will confront us. We can not permit the cries of "war monger" and "isolationist" to drive us apart. Now is the time for all to unite in the crisis which we all feel, for it is only in this way that we shall achieve any end.

Axis In The West

LAST WEEK the State Department announced the consummation of a United States-Mexican mutual assistance pact. In general, the pact provides for the construction of naval and air bases along the west coast of Mexico and at strategic points along the Mexican Gulf. Financed and built by America, the bases would be open for our use in the event of war. The next day, the Republic of Panama entered into a similar union. Complete details of neither plan were revealed, but the general object is readily apparent — protection of the Panama Canal and its approaches.

Alaskan fortifications are being erected; Canada and the United States long ago entered into a defense union. Thus, with the completion of the proposed southern fortifications, a ring of steel will extend around the continent — a ring of steel that could be made well-nigh impregnable.

From the viewpoint of defense these developments are all very reassuring. And from yet another viewpoint, the Mexican agreement is of particular interest. Relations with our southern neighbor have not been as friendly as they might have been. Mexico has been considered by many Americans a hotbed of Communism. Others looked askance at Mexico's welcome of German overtures in the past. But now Mexico acts with democratic America.

This pact should help quell the fears of America in respect to Mexico's stand in the present world conflict. It certainly is incompatible with any desire to help the Axis powers.

Let us hope that the agreement indicates a change of attitude on the part of Mexico—a change that will give us a valuable ally in the event of war, a friendly neighbor in a continued peace.

Public Speaking Among The Greeks

By Fr. Kiley

AMONG the Greeks the power to fight and the skill to speak were the necessary qualifications of a true hero. Homer calls Odyssey "strong in council and terrible in combat."

But this ability to speak in public became a vital necessity to the Greeks when they were compelled to participate in the councils of the city-state to which they belonged and to defend the rights of property against unlawful seizure and destruction.

The fact that the law required every man to speak in person whether he was instituting a suit for damages or defending himself against a civil action made it absolutely necessary for him to know something about the art of effective speech.

The cause of this unusual and marked development of public speaking among the Greeks may be assigned for the neglect of this very important art among us. The fact that in our form of government only a few persons are eligible to take part in legislative debate has resulted in the decline of the study of oratory in this country.

Jealous of Liberties

But the Greeks did not believe in handing over the government to a few. They had a passionate love of liberty and did not fight to safeguard their rights against the Persian invaders only to hand them over to more autocratic rulers from their own countrymen. They guarded their liberties so jealously that they never formed a central government but ever remained a country of numerous city-states, each one with its own religious ceremonies, its own market, its own defense, and its own government.

Thus every citizen was a member of his own Assembly and had an equal right to speak on any subject concerning the welfare of the city-state. If he was not able to write his own speech, the citizen went to one of the famous orators of the country—Demosthenes, Sephias or Aeschines—and engaged him to compose a speech for him.

Emotion, Not Facts

This advantage of securing the services of one of the noted orators to compose a speech for a particular individual or occasion is no place more evident than in the law courts.

As no lawyers were permitted to participate in criminal and civil suits, both the defendant and the plaintiff had to present their own case before a magistrate and a jury of two, three, or four hundred citizens.

As the decision was not rendered by the magistrate but by the jury who were more often influenced by emotion and dramatic appeals for sympathy than by mere argument and facts, it is not difficult to appreciate the necessity of securing the service of the best speech writer in the community.

Besides the ordinary civil suits for damages there were two particular cases that emphasized the necessity of public speech among the Greeks. The first was the law that compelled every officeholder to submit to a public accounting of all his official acts at the end of his term of office. This law applied not only to the high offices of the state but also to every minor official in every department of the government, civil or military.

Accuse Officials

But this was not all. It was the privilege of the humblest citizen to appear before a court and to bring forward any complaint against the retiring official. These charges were not confined to the administration of public money but might refer to any acts committed in the tenure of office.

The second case resulted from the law that required every elected official to prove his fitness before he assumed office.

If a citizen protested the officer's right to hold the position to which he had been elected, the defendant had to prove that he was an Athenian citizen, that he worshipped the gods of the city, that he took care of the family tomb, that he was dutiful to his parents, that he had performed all the required military duties, and that he had paid all his taxes. Often the investigation took a wider range and extended to the official's private life.

Personal Defense

Inasmuch as every citizen was compelled to appear in court personally and defend his own case, it became necessary that he should be able to procure the best possible instruction in the art of public speaking and in the laws of court procedure. Competent instruction in the theory and practice of oratory was available to all citizens in the many schools that were opened in Athens by the teachers of Rhetoric who came from Sicily and guaranteed to teach their pupils how to

LAST WEEK'S blanketed glaciated pluvial precipitation once more witnessed mirth and merriment predominating on the campus. Aside from the unsteady underfooting, the dodging of dangerously close ice-laden missiles, the return of the same, and the clatter of broken glass, the junior blizzard was quite enjoyable. Its quick disappearance was a disappointment to the snowman-minded frosh attired in their snow suits and booties. They put them on again Friday night; so did we!

JOTTINGS:

Jack Schreck's intentions were unquestionable when he placed a delicious shining apple on Mr. Schaefer's desk in Finance class. . . . George Szucs is encountering unwanted competition for Nancy's attentions. . . . Prof. Frayne is aging daily as the result of his worrying about the sure-to-be-successful spring dramatic production, "Margin for Error." To add to his worriment, the cast is demanding more money, but undoubtedly the curtain will come down with a roll. (A pun may be the lowest form of humor but a bun is also the lowest form of bread and the tastiest.)

John "Bull" Pholeric cruises to Rosemont in his Buick to see Mary. . . . West Chester Teachers' Betty Lou claims the afternoons and some nights of Frank Moses. . . . Bob Donovan holds that there is little or no food value in dates, but that all depends on whom they're with. . . . Dean O'Connor reportedly carries on a daily correspondence with Willie, a Michigan school marm some 1600 miles away. Rumor has it that they're engaged.

Jack McManus is following in his brother's footsteps by being a Rosa-Novan, vitally interested in Dodie.

STORY OF THE WEEK:

Dr. MacBeth's prize freshman class removed all the stationary screws from his desk the other day. When he entered the room, he placed his briefcase on the desk only to have the entire assemblage come crashing to the floor, the legs flying in every direction. However, he took the practical joke in exceptionally good spirit, questioning the mentality and sense of humor of his tricksters.

QUIBBLINGS:

While browsing through Austin hall the other day, we came upon a crepe unbecomingly draped on the doorknob of room 103. After knocking on the door, we asked Louie Petruccio, "Why the black stuff on the door? Is your roommate dead?" Said Louie, "That's no crepe, that's my roommate's towel . . . Bob Funabashi's." . . . At the History Seminar, following the delivery of a paper, Dr. Hartman remarked, "What smells so funny in here?" to which someone quipped, "It's just the dead silence."

This week-end will find two teadances being held at Immaculata: an invitation affair on Saturday P. M. and a special St. Patrick's day dance on Monday afternoon. . . . Moe Keating has been, and always will be, the glint of Carleen's eye. . . . Bernie Crumb, the conservative man-about-town, holds that old feeling for a Women's College, New Haven, Conn., co-ed who resides in Whitesboro near his home town. . . . Gordon Brosmer will attend a dance with Ann at Beaver College on the 21st, while Jim Collins, John Cerulo, and Dick Gray will also entertain dates on the occasion. . . . Bob Simpson has beaten a certain junior to the trigger by inviting Madie to the Junior Prom, which was only 72 days away at the time. . . . Don Cryor evidently has fixed things up by the looks of his tea dance date with Louise. . . . Fred Clark takes time off nearly every Saturday night to date Dottie from Rosemont. . . . Meet The Boys:

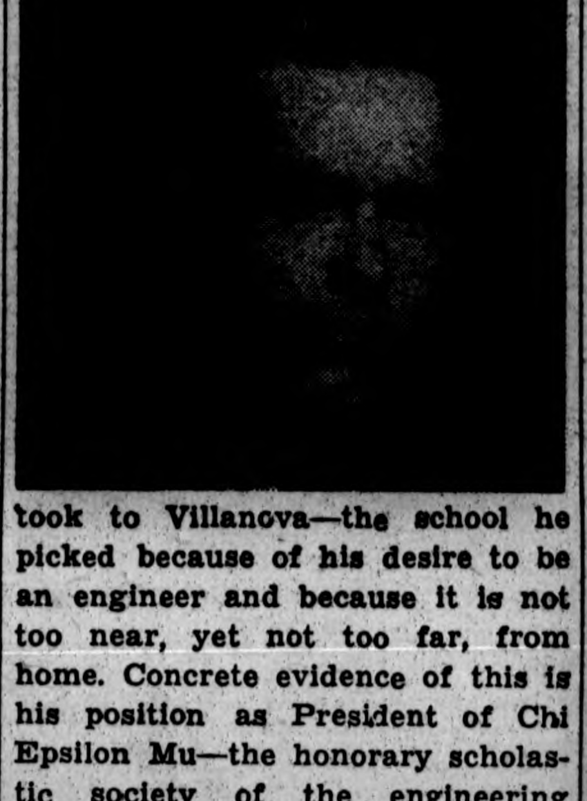
Appel Sometimes Hits High "C"; Hy Wants Just One More Degree

By TOM MURASKI

LANCASTER was honored by his birth in June, 1919.

St. Anthony's Parochial School had the honor of teaching him his ABC's. Lancaster Catholic High advanced him in his pursuit of knowledge. While at L. C. H. he also started his extra-curricular program. He was a member of the school magazine staff and in his senior year he took over its editorship.

But in September, 1937, his real career began. Villanova opened her arms and received him into her School of Engineering. And how he took to Villanova—the school he picked because of his desire to be an engineer and because it is not too near, yet not too far, from home. Concrete evidence of this is his position as President of Chi Epsilon Mu—the honorary scholastic society of the engineering school.



Villanova also had a chance to advance his extra-curricular career. He joined the Glee Club in his freshman year—and stuck to it for the entire four years. He became so good at warbling that Fr. Handran was forced to include him in the famous quartet. The members of the club liked him too, so this year they made him the first president of the Glee Club.

Singing isn't the only thing he can do. He was elected to the Student Council for his junior and senior years. And here again his engaging smile brought results, for last spring our subject was elected secretary treasurer of the Council.

Part of his duties as a member of the Student Council was to act as a member of the Orientation Committee. Consequently, the members of the classes of '43 and '44 had ample opportunity to become acquainted with him.

The social aspect of life was not to be neglected. So our hero, muttering, "What better way to get about than to be on a dance committee", proceeded to get himself appointed Chairman of the Blazer Ball and a member of the Committee for the senior Belle-Air Ball.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers also claims him as a member, as does Phi Kappa Pi.

At present he has draft jitters, but on June 7, 1941, William J. Appel—living proof that good things come in small packages—will receive his degree of Bachelor of Mechanical Engineering and step out into the world. What it holds for him no one can say, but if he has half the success then that he has had here there will be no cause for alarm.

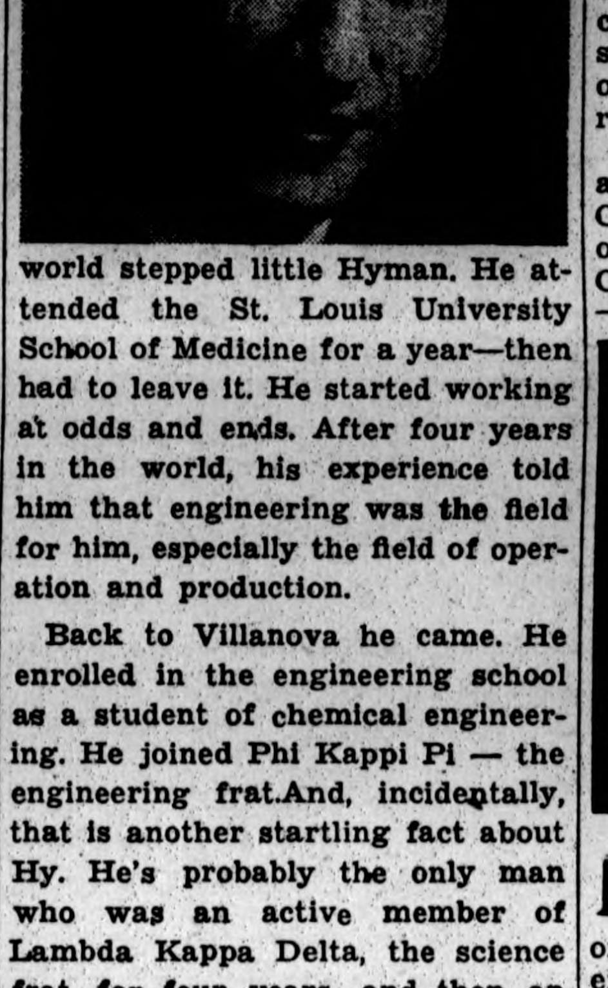
MOST BOYS are glad if they can do it once. But Hy Makin is different. He's going to graduate from the same school twice.

In June, 1931, Hy received a diploma stating that he had duly graduated from the School of Science of Villanova College with the degree of Bachelor of Science. In 1941 Hy will again receive a diploma. This one will state that he is receiving the degree of Bachelor of Chemical Engineering.

Life for Mrs. Malkin's pride and joy began in South Philly in 1910. In common with the other boys in the neighborhood, he attended Southwark Public Grammar School. For higher knowledge he attended South Philadelphia High, whence he graduated in February, 1928, after causing the opponents of South Philly's swimming and soccer squads many headaches.

Not wanting to lose time, he entered Villanova's science school immediately, and in doing so added to his laurels. By going to summer school and doubling up on his subjects while here, he managed to complete the required four years in the school in three and one-half years.

So, out into the pre-Rooseveltian world stepped little Hyman. He attended the St. Louis University School of Medicine for a year—then had to leave it. He started working at odds and ends. After four years in the world, his experience told him that engineering was the field for him, especially the field of operation and production.



Back to Villanova he came. He enrolled in the engineering school as a student of chemical engineering. He joined Phi Kappi Pi — the engineering frat.And, incidentally, that is another startling fact about Hy. He's probably the only man who was an active member of Lambda Kappa Delta, the science frat, for four years—and then an active member of P. K. P. for four years.

He was co-chairman of the recent P. K. P. initiation-banquet and also served on Phi Kap's Smoker Committee. As a chemical engineer he has been a member of the Chemical Society for four years and its vice-president for the last two. To top all that, he is chairman of the Intercollegiate Student Chemical Convention which will be held here this spring.

Quite a man is Mr. Malkin. Wonder if he'll come back to Villanova in a few years to take the C. & F. or arts courses?

Proof of Day-Hops' Trusting Nature: Locks That "Protect" Their "Stuff"

Like most fairly conservative journals, we place confidence in the solid, permanent things of life. And if you're casting about for a symbol of solidarity and permanency, what could fit your purpose better than the padlocks which day students use (tautologically), to lock their lockers?

They vary, exceedingly. In the C. & F. locker-room, 25 of the 105 lockers are secured by the combination variety, while in Mendel's twilight caverns, lab coats, coveralls, slide-rules, and Latin dictionaries are safeguarded by 65 of this kind.

Any Size At All

The degree of the student's trust in human nature can be measured by the size of the lock he uses. In Mendel hall, the smallest is a tiny ¾" by 1" one, while the largest is 7½" long, obviously a carry-over from the bicycle riding of adolescence. C. & F.'s smallest is 1" by 1½", and its largest is 1½" wide.

As a further example of a Villanova man's trust in his fellows, witness this notice, which has been displayed in several prominent locations: "If the person who took the lock from Locker No. 97 will get in touch with me, I will present him with the key to said lock. Without the lock, I have no need for the key." — What did we tell you!

Only two students have found it necessary to install double padlocks; two more utilize rather sinister-looking chains.

Decorations Beautiful

Color combinations are also varied, but all are quite tasteful. Eleven locks are of a rich red, eleven more are of a gay green, and nine are done in a beautiful blue.

Aristocracy among locks is easily perceived. For instance, two locks bear the proud legend, "Solid Bronze," and one can even boast of being "Royal Certified Brass."

So now you know what Villanova lockers are wearing this season, if you "lock" knowledge for its own sake, or if, perchance, you are planning some kind of a "job."

72% Here Woo Lady Nicotine; "Chestys" Tops Among Smokers

By EDWARD F. BORDEN

Most Villanovans are smokers. This was established during the past week through the weekly survey which prys periodically into student habits, thoughts, likes, dislikes, etc. Seventy-two per cent of students interviewed, or almost three out of every four, use tobacco, it was disclosed. Preference in tobacco forms was found to predominate among cigarettes.

Back in October 1933, the VILLANOVAN conducted a different type of student poll. One of its first questions was also, "Do you smoke?" The men attending Villanova at that time answered 73½% "yes." So in a period of over eight years, there has been a net loss in the ranks of Villanova smokers of only 1½%.

Evidently, student tobacco tastes were quite different in that period than at present, for a leading question in 1933 was "Do you chew?" Surprisingly enough, 12½% of the student body then answered "Yes," indicating their enjoyment of tobacco-mastication. Since that period, the "chaw" type of tobacco has suffered a great decline in popularity.

Figures given out by the 1933 poll were compiled from a very small sample of the students (84 in number); the VILLANOVAN at that time did not conduct a proportional cross-sectional poll by classes and schools such as the present one, but operated on a "hit or miss" basis of random selection.

Results of the October, 1933, cigarette popularity poll were: first, Camels with a student preference of 34%; next, Lucky Strike and Chesterfield cigarettes, which tied in a dead heat with 29% each; Old Golds and Fatimas brought up the rear.

The results of the survey conducted during the past week give us a changed picture, but one with practically the same cigarette brands competing.

Villanova's favorite cigarette brands now line up as follows:

First	Chesterfields	25 %
Second	Camels	23 %
Third	Philip Morris	22½%
Fourth	Lucky Strike	20 %
(All Others)		9½%

The four leading brands all command followers ranging from 20% to 25% of those interviewed with only 9½% being scattered among all other brands.

The most noticeable difference in cigarette popularity between the polls with eight years change is the disappearance of Old Golds and Fatimas as leading cigarettes, to be replaced by the comparatively unknown brand of 1933, Philip Morris.

Third point brought out by last week's interviewing is that all smokers here do not prefer cigarettes; some choose pipes and cigars instead. Villanova students' percentages on this point are as follows: first, cigarettes with a popularity of 71%; second, pipes with a popularity of 23%; and third, cigars whose popularity is 6%. No percentages were sought regarding "chewing tobacco" usage.

Wherein A Compilation Is Made Of Collegiana's Humor About The Draft

By Bruno Talvacchia

IN KEEPING with present world conditions is the trend in collegiate publications. War aims of the different nations are considered and particularly prevalent are references to the draft and its possible effects on our nation.

Such being the case, we have perused the opinions of leading collegiate typewriter-pounders and offer the following excerpts.

For Instance No. 1:

He thumbed his nose at his teachers;
At the Dean this bold lad laughed;
He cut his classes one and all,
For they'd caught him in the draft.
—St. Louis University News.

Fact versus Opinion:

At the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Student Government Association convention recently held on the Penn State College campus, Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette College and Selective Service director for the state, intimated that it is unlikely that students enrolled in colleges will be compelled to serve Uncle Sam while still in school. The reason for this,, he explained, was that the loss of learning and the intellectual blackout in time of war is much greater than any economic loss incurred.

In his address on "How the Student Will Be Affected by the Draft," Dr. Lewis suggested to the students that they do not enlist in the army until they are drafted.

—Temple University News.

We have heard this before; it was semi-official then too. Persistent rumor usually leads to the actual fact. We hope it will this time. Are you listening, Mr. President?

Emergency Graduates:

Inquiries from Washington on the advisability of rushing the junior engineering students through their remaining years by offering a ten-week summer course have been received by Villanova authorities.

This column has scanned several other student publications to get a cross-section of opinions on the subject, since the question was put to numerous technical schools throughout the country. The Daily Pennsylvanian printed an editorial on the matter which is quite significant.

Pennsylvanians are questioning the feasibility of the proposal on the ground that there is grave danger of lowering the standard of technical school graduates under such conditions.

Sounds as though the engineers of the class of '42 might be in line for a B. N. E. degree (Bachelor of National Emergency).

For Instance No. 2:

T. N. T. shot out the question
"Won't you marry me tonight?"
"No I can't," replied Miss Powder,
"But my sister Dina-mite!"

Draft Fodder's Advice:

You'll be foot-sore in the infantry,
And ear- sore in the field artill'ry;
But what is there to fear
As a dawggone engineer?

You'll be sun-blind in the air corps,
And steel-bound in the tank corps;
But it's fun to be, I hear,
With the corps of the engineer.

Now if you're destined to be a draft-ee,
Be wise; be careful, be crafty.
Science men, artsmen and financiers,
Join the ranks of the engineers!

Back To School For Them

The students at the left enrolling here are high school graduates who will take evening courses in elementary college mathematics, physics and drawing. The school is the third such to get underway under Villanova's direction in the past few weeks.

Last week classes were also started at West Philadelphia Catholic High School; courses held at North Catholic High now have an enrollment of over 170 students.

A fourth elementary school will shortly be opened in Norristown; last Friday evening an organization meeting of applicants for the course was held at the Norristown Y. M. C. A.

of the commerce school, the Rev. Richard McNally, O. S. A., the Rev. Jerome A. Mahoney, O. S. A., Robert G. Whelan, William G. Slaughter, and James F. Elliott.

Sammy Kaye, well-known orchesleader, made his selection during a recent appearance at a Philadelphia theater. Ethel Barrymore Colt, while featured at the Embassy Club in Philadelphia, reviewed the entrants' photographs. Other judges included Mort Lawrence of radio station WIP and Leroy Miller of station KYW. Miller will be master of ceremonies for the Prom floor show.

After this preliminary judging, which eliminated all but ten of the entrants, the photographs were sent to Walter Thornton. After careful consideration, he telegraphed his decision to John J. Parson, Jr., chairman of the dance committee, last Saturday.

On the evening of the dance the Queen will be presented with a thirty-six inch high sterling silver trophy. Each of her court, which will be composed of ten of the entrants, will receive miniature sterling silver trophies similar to the Queen's.

Selection of the Queen's court has been delayed because of the difficulty in narrowing down the number of entrants. The court has been enlarged from six to ten so that this problem might be somewhat alleviated. Coronation of the Queen and presentation of the trophies will be done by Walter Thornton and the orchestra leader.

Plans for signing an orchestra are rapidly proceeding. Schedules for most demands being considered by the Prom committee have been completed.

Seminar Hears Talk On Leprosy

"So great are the pains experienced by lepers that they have been described as suffering the tortures of the damned this side of the grave," Anthony Di Giovanni, freshman science student, declared at a meeting of the Research Seminar held last Thursday afternoon.

"Lepers have been from time immemorial known to mankind and it is singular to note that in spite of the long period of time in which leprosy has been known, very little advance has been made from the viewpoint of the scientist and the medical sciences."

Continuing, Di Giovanni spoke of the only method which has been utilized in attempts to limit the disease — the establishment of leper colonies to segregate the lepers as much as possible and thus prevent contagion.

One of the characteristic symptoms of the disease is impairment of the sense of touch to such a degree that many sensations, such as pain, produce no reflex. Speaking of Father Damien, the leper priest, Dr. Giovanni stated that the priest "discovered he had contracted leprosy only when a match burned his hand without his feeling it.

"One of the recent advances in the fight against leprosy has been the introduction of ethyl chaulmoograte, which has been recorded as successful in the cure of several cases." Prior to this no cases were reported cured except those found in Holy Scripture.

The next meeting will feature the presentation of a paper by Lester Mann, science freshman, who will speak on the Bubonic Plague and its social signficance.

Club Sees Complete Book Manufacture

Members of the Book Club who visited the plant of Haddon Craftsmen, Inc., at Camden last Wednesday witnessed the complete process of the manufacture of a book, from proof-reading to the finished product.

Among the many interesting features of the plant viewed were the linotype and monotype machines and the giant pneumatic presses, all indications of the use of labor-saving devices. The machinery of the plant alone is estimated at $200,000.

The regular weekly meeting of the club will be held tomorrow at 1:30 P. M. in Simpson hall.

"Circuit Breakers" Feature

Feature of a meeting of the Villanova A. I. E. E. held yesterday in Mendel hall, was a talk by Eugene Mozier, senior electrical engineer on "Oil Circuit Breakers," including a thorough explanation of the construction, types, and strength of the oil tanks in which the circuit breakers are encased.

The electrical features of the circuit breakers, including various types of bushings and methods of arc distribution, were also discussed.

AFTER a very convincing exhibition of swimming against the U. of Pennsylvania last week, and in addition for his past three years, Captain Walt Kelley of the Blue and White can undoubtedly make his claim in the books of our athletes as the best swimmer ever produced..

Churning the local pool for the three seasons, in the sport which is slowly facing ruin or what the present day interpreters call de-emphasis, Kelley has met defeat once or twice and was always the pace-maker in Wildcat victories. In this, his last year which he completed in the past week, Kelley led the field in every event he was entered. To add to the strength of the foregoing, even though the mermen lost every one of their three meets, Kelley still won his events, indicating the fact that he must be quite the "human torpedo."

May Earn a Title

Locally, Walt is in a position where he can sing out that he is about the best college natator in the Philadelphia area and just how his prominence stands nationally or within the eyes of the glorified Intercollegiate followers, will be put to test when the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Meet will be held at Annapolis this coming Saturday. Mr. Kelley because of his fine showing last year when the meet was held at Penn was invited back this time and it's possible that he may bring an Intercollegiate title back to Villanova.

By next winter he and four of his mates will be gone and swimming here at the Main Line will probably vanish into very thin air

Does Kenney Hold District Scoring?

Does Larry Kenney of St. Joseph's College really hold the new Philadelphia District scoring record? Well, according to the official records as released by the Villanova publicity department in March, 1938, Duke Duzminski, then a sophomore at Villanova, created a new scoring record when he tallied 296 points in a 30 game schedule.

According to the story as taken from the March 15, 1938 issue of the VILLANOVAN, it goes as follows: "According to the official records as released by the Villanova Publicity Office, Al Severance's high-powered basketballers amassed the record-breaking total of 1204 points for the '37-'38 season. This figure establishes a new district scoring mark."

The story goes on "Duke Duzminski, sophomore guard, accounted for 296 points as he made 120 baskets and converted 56 foul tosses."

Last Friday night after Kenney scored 16 points against Temple University, his season's total swelled to 277 points, which the Philadelphia papers acclaimed as a new record for Philadelphia, replacing the former record of Duzminski of Villanova who had held the honor previously with a total of 274 points.

Naturally the claims of one source are wrong and we of the VILLANOVAN would like to clear up the complexity. In all fairness we should like to ask the Philadelphia papers to check up on the figures and see whether or not Larry Kenney is the rightful owner to such title. Meanwhile our figures might also indicate a fallacy and we will put the check on the official count of Duzminski's scoring.

Weatherman Places Jinx On Baseball Team

Snow and Rain Keep Varsity Nine Indoors But Squad Still Shows Sign of Plenty of Hustle

By JACK COLEMAN

Doc Jacobs and the weatherman must be at odds this early spring, because at regular intervals (most every Friday) since baseball practice started he has given "The Doc" snow, rain, or other unpleasantries in the line of weather that he has accummulated in his bag of tricks.

Despite the bad conditions outside, the boys have been doing their chores down in the gym with a great deal of "honest-to-goodness" spirit, which is a good sign considering that the pre-season conditioning is usually regarded as drudgery.

With such first rate opponents as Duke, Temple, Boston College, Fordham, Vermont, and St. John's of Brooklyn, it is no wonder that the boys are working so hard to get the kinks out of their system.

Promising Sophs

Promising sophomores who are expected to fill varsity position vacated by graduation are Bill Woods, Dan Casey, Ted Bickey, LeRoy Simonsen and Tony Calandra.

"Produce or—" seems to be the pass-word this season after looking over the wealth of material that turned out. Connie O'Leary, Connie Nicholas, Bill Howlett, Bill Woods, Jim Latanza, Frank Chaplar, Alex Lukacs, Dave Daly and Joe Malone are all fighting for the five or six position alloted to pitchers.

Ted Bickey, John Murphy, Jimmie Dykes, Al Skaf, George Fitzgerald, and George Famiglietti are vying for the catching berths, while Dick Grey, Bernie McAloon, Art Spector, Joe Haggerty, Joe Elward, Jim Traitz, and Hank Thoma are attempting to beat out the remanents of last year's varsity for starting assignments.

With such strong competition going on between the players, it appears that those who are finally chosen to start will have to fight right up to June in order to hold their jobs. This state of affairs will undoubtedly have a good influence on the win-lose column.

Vermont Game Soon

Vermont University is the first scheduled game for the Wildcat nine and from advance reports they play a good deal of baseball up in that region. That game lies just a few weeks away and in that time Doc Jacobs will have his team at their full strength. With all his pitchers in good condition and none turning up with sore arms it won't be to hard to pick an opening day hurler.

Immediately after Easter, first call for freshman baseball candidates will be issued. Last spring the yearling nine did well against their opponents but so far the team which will be called out will be minus a coach for a while.

Challenge To Faculty

In view of the fact that faculty members of the Engineering School are taking an active part in the Phi Kappa Pi Bowling League, Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., has announced that a team composed of four priests will issue a challenge to one of the leading teams in the league.

Fr. Donnellen, Fr. McFadden, Fr. O'Donnell and Fr. Ludwig form the quartet that will engage the faculty team. Wishing to play sometime in the near future, they will not necessarily meet the best team in the league as the ultimate champion will not be determined until after the play-offs which occur in May.

Mile Relay Team Finishes Poorly In K. Of C. Meet

With Madison Square Garden serving as the setting for the nights action and Knights of Columbus as the sponsors, Villanova's indoor trackmen just about wound up running on the boards for this season as they finished in fourth place behind the teams of Seton Hall, Tufts and Rhode Island in the Intercollegiate Mile relay, last Saturday night.

Running for the 'Cats in the K. of C. meet were John DiCarlo, Bill Hooper, Harry Keefrider and Bill Carey. As a team they functioned well but didn't have the reserve strength to carry them on to victory. As a result they finished a poor fourth, with Seton Hall capturing the event. This meet marked the finish of the Indoor season in New York but not the end for the Blue tracksters. Last night the team traveled to Washington for the Catholic University meet where the team was entered.

Feature event of the K. of C. meet was the mile run which was taken by Walter Mehl of Wisconsin. Mehl beat out Leslie MacMitchell of New York University by four yards in a non-record breaking mile run. The tall Wisconsin lad trimmed the Violet star for the first time on Saturday night by turning in a four minute and ten second time.

John Borican, speed merchant of the Shore A. C. broke the world's record in the 600 yard run while another world's record was tied by Fred Wolcott of Rice Institute who carried on his winning ways and captured the 60 yard high hurdles.

Georgetown University's one man field team, Al Blozis, established a new mark in the shot put by throwing the ball a bit more than 55 feet to break his previous indoor mark.

One strange incident of the meet was the fact that La Salle Military Academy's mile relay team turned in a faster time for that event than the relay in which Princeton, Penn and Columbia participated.

Grid Team Threatened By Draft; All Adding To The Woes Of Coaches

Besides Losing Eight Men, Mentors Smith and McNally Must Face the Draft Ruling; Baseball Call Keeps Seven Candidates Away From Spring Practice

By PAUL McCANN

The loss of eight regulars who are to be graduated this June would normally supply ample cause for moaning on the part of Clipper Smith as he gets the spring football practice sessions under way but conflicts and the Selective Service Act rightly add to his woes.

It will be the task of drilling replacements for such stalwarts as Nick Basca, Ed Collins, Harry Dhue, Lindy Kolenda, Ben Morkun, Bill Piscione, Stan Stress, and Pete Yankauskas and an arduous one at that. Backs as talented as Basca and Yankauskas don't come around every day and neither do guard combinations like Collins and Piscione. The aggressive end play of Kolenda and Stress will be sorely missed too—as well as Morkun's quarterbacking and Dhue's performance at tackle.

This problem of filling these boys' shoes is difficult enough in itself but the call of baseball and Uncle Sam makes the estimable Clipper's replacement project, all the more troublesome.

A Shift To Baseball

The call to baseball is keep— seven of the leading gridiron candidates from attendance at the football practices. These include: Bill Howlett, a fine fullback in the fall and a fine pitcher in the spring; Joe Yednock, a fleet halfback and fast third-baseman; Roy Simonsen. hard-hitting guard and hard-hitting outfield; Mike Kupecki, hard-driving back and long-drive-hittter; Dan Casey, superb defensive back and superb guardian of the outfield; Ted Bickley, unstoppable back in the autumn and excellent back-stopper in the spring; and Frank Chaplar, who is equally capable in both baseball and football.

The call to serve Uncle Sam s threatening the immediate destiny of the Wildcats—what with the epidemic of draft questionnaires in the possession of ten of the leading aspirants for positions on the 1941 grid team.

When the Wildcats open their 1941 season with Centre College under the lights of Shibe Park, practically the entire might-have-been starting backfield will likely be entrenched in some Army cantonment. Among those scheduled to appear before their draft boards on July 1 are: Stan Eusko, promising forward-passer and likely successor to Nick Basca; Sal Rosatto, pile-driving 200-pound fullback; Jose Behot, converted halfback who performed notably at quarterback during the latter part of last season; Dan Casey, rugged utility back; and Ted Bicky, promising 190 pound half and fullback. Of this quintet all are sophomores except Behot who is a junior.

Kelley And Desmond Invited To Annapolis For Intercollegiates

Although the swimming season is over as far as dual competition is concerned, two of the outstanding stars of the Villanova team will compete in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships to be held March 15 and 16 at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

The first of these, needs no mention; Captain Walt Kelley, sprint star and holder of three college pool records. The other is sophomore Frank Desmond who has been outstanding in the breaststroke all season. Desmond was defeated for the first time last week by another sophomore star, Bob Wissoker of Penn, and he also was a member of the medley relay in every meet.

Yale Favored

Last year Kelley placed second in the final of the 50 yard dash when the meet was held at the University of Penn. The event was won by Niel Colwell of the Army in 23.6 seconds. This year Kelley will compete in the 50 and also the 100.

Leading swimmers from the Eastern colleges will make their appearance at Annapolis where the meet is being held for th first time. As usual the Yale mermen will be the leading threat to capture the collegiate crown.

Penn Tankmen Sink Varsity, 39-36, Despite Kelley's Great Showing

By JACQUES MAUCH

Captain Walter Kelley closed his collegiate swimming career last Wednesday with a brilliant finish while leading his team in a valiant but unsuccessful attempt to down the University of Pennsylvania natators. The Wildcats were nosed out by a score of 39-36.

Kelley won the 220, 100, and aided the freestyle relay in a victory, setting a new pool record of 2.22.5 seconds in the 220 yard distance. He now holds three college records. In the 100 he had a comfortable margin over Jim Fielder of Penn and coasted home in 56.5 seconds.

Koness Wins 50 Yd.

The Wildcats had five first places to four for the Red and Blue. The Penn Medley trio of Joe Tyson, Bob Wissoker, and Bob Walton won the opening event in a close decision over John Maher, Frank Desmond, and Bill Hooper in 3.15.1. Then besides Kelley's wins Bob Koness won the 50, John Green took the diving over Penn's Walt Reed and John Maher placed second to Tyson in the backstroke.

At this point the score was tied at 25-25 with three events remaining. Penn forged into the lead when Bob Wissoker of the Red and Blue beat out Frank Desmond in the 200 yard breaststroke, and his teammate Frank DeLone placed third. Desmond assumed an early lead but Wissoker outsprinted him in a thrilling finish.

Penn clinched the meet when Johnny Houck took the 440 grind with his teammate, Mike Scoppetuolo, close behind. Houck put on a terrific spurt at the end and passed Scoppetuolo who had led all the way.

Win in Good Time

The Wildcat quartet of Bill Hooper, John Pholeric, Bob Koness, and Captain Kelley won the final event the 400 yard freestyle relay in the good time of 3.51.3.

With that meet completed, so too the swimming careers for five of the Villanova mermen came to an end. Captain Kelley completed his swimming days after three years' service, along with John Pholeric, another three year man. Pholeric swam the 220 and 100 yard dash. Tom Moore and Paul Farnworth were the other two seniors who ended their swimming days while Bob Boudon, low-board diver, also finished up.

Snow Holds Back Elimination Play Of Blue Linksmen

Test Matches Will Get Underway Soon at Pennsylvania Country Club

By JIM BONNER

March arrived in a blaze of snow and ice and if the old saying, "in like a lion, out like a lamb," holds true, Blue and White golfers should be able to get in several extra weeks of invaluable practice. Last year the team started the season with only 18 holes of play behind them. Dropping close decisions, they were never able to gain their real form.

Pennsylvania Country Club, the choice for this year's home match, is put in shape much earlier than the Main Line Club course in former years and as a result of this, Villanova's golfers should be on the links within a couple of weeks.

Well-Balanced Club

This season, unlike former years, there is an unusual wealth of material. Six returning regulars led by Cliff Randolph, two part-time players from last year, and three promising freshmen form a base for a well-balanced club.

Captain Randolph reports no one can be sure of his position irregardless of his standing last year. Competition will be wide open with everyone having a chance for a berth

Professional Ball Claims Ex-'Cats; Etten To Phillies

Lun Merullo With Cubs; Bob Pash With Scranton; Art Mahan Goes to Little Rock; Bob Bond Plays With Chattanooga

Alumni of Doc Jacobs' Wildcat baseball teams are really taking their ball playing seriously these days. Famous for the baseball squads, the Jacobsmen are having their share of success on the diamond.

Bob Pash, star pitcher of last year's team is now signed up with Scranton of the Tri-State League. Pash had considerable success with the Wildcats, and because of his versatility in the field and his power at bat it wasn't around very long 'till he was grabbed by the upstaters.

Art Mahan former first baseman with the Blue and White, has been signed by Little Rock, Arkansas. Mahan was up with the Phillies last year but was just a little weak on the hitting so Doc Prothro sent him out there for brushing up on his swinging.

Plays For Phillies

The strange part of this shift is that his position at first base with the Phillies will be taken over by another ex-Villanovan, Nick Etten. Etten so far in spring practice has proven his ability and has impressed his coaches with some fancy playing.

Also big Bobby Bond is going places with Chattanooga in the Southern league. Bond has been with them since his graduation in '39.

Another big-leaguer is Lennie Merullo, who was a sensation at shortstop while performing for Doc Jacobs. Merullo is the property of the Chicago Cubs. Right now he's out at Catalina Island battling it out with Billy Meyers, former Cincinnati, star for the position at second.

Incidentally Etten previously mentioned had been with the A's and had been shipped to Baltimore to play with the Orioles and finished up in the first five leading hitters.

Rice Drafted

Lloyd Rice who did some mean slugging for the Wildcats was playing with Wilmington in the Eastern Shore League, but his' days with them have temporarily ended as Uncle Sam called him into service.

Frank Moses, present Wildcat catcher has already signed with the Trenton Senators. As soon as he gets his sheepskin he'll leave to take up his duties behind the bat for the Jersey team.

Another ex-Wildcat is Mike Lazorchak, who graduated in 1940. At the moment mike is playing ball for the farm club of the New York Yankees in Indiana. After last season Mike broke his leg but is now fully recovered, and will be at shortstop hoping to move up higher.

in the first six. The 36 hole elimination play will take place during the week preceding spring vacation. The men posting six lowest medal scores will comprise the squad.

Meet at St. John's First

The first match of 1941 will be played immediately after the return from vacation when the Wildcat linksmen meet a powerful St. John's team of Brooklyn, N. Y., on April 18. Captain Randolph, speaking for the squad, promises atonement for the defeats at the hands of St. John's, St. Joseph's, and Fordham University.

Fordham, boasting one of its most powerful teams in years, won't be met until May 16th. Long before then the linksmen should hit top form and will be able to knock them off. St. Joseph's, a bitter city rival, defeated Villanova in 1940 in a tightly contested battle. This year the team, better spirited and with some experience behind them, promises to make up for this defeat.

A Big Leaguer In The Ozarks

Art Mahan, former star first sacker of the Wildcat baseball team, has recently been signed up by Little Rock, of the Southern Association, where he is destined to take over the job at first base. While at Villanova Mahan was the sparkplug of the team and in his senior year batted .431 and fielded in perfect form.

Austin Hall On Way to Capturing Sixth Championship; Baseball Tournament Is Next On I-M Sports Card

Lead Fedigan Hall by 15 Points With Only Three Remaining Events Listed; Other Dorms Eliminated

By SAM CANNING

Austin Hall is on the way to its sixth consecutive championship of the Intra-mural League as they are now leading Fedigan by 15 points, with only three remaining events on the schedule; golf, baseball, and the softball tournaments.

Although Fedigan is the leading contender, it seems highly improbable that they will be able to overtake the Firemen because they would have to make up a 15 point deficit. To give a better view of the contenders chances we have Austin with 59 points to Fedigan's 44. Fedigan's best chance is in winning all three remaining contests while Austin is taking third in two of them and fourth in the other. This would give the Gigiloes a 74-73 victory.

However, this assumption is too long a shot. Austin is sure of at least a second in the golf tournament from the steady performance of Joe Rozum, last year's champion who turned in an 82. A big threat this year is freshman Bill Walsh of the Mendel Residents.

There isn't much chance of the other teams in the league overtaking Austin. The best team behind Fedigan is the Mendel Residents with only 32 points. They can overtake Fedigan though if they capture the golfing and rank pretty high in the softball and hardball events while Fedigan is down around fourth or fifth place. Here too the chances are slim for anything like this to happen because Father Sullivan usually turns out a good crop of ball players.

Seventy-fifth Year

The previous issues of this paper have carried stories to the effect that Villanova will be playing her 72nd season of baseball this year, but a late discovery has been found which makes it the 75th year. The publicity office has uncovered old records which tell of the first game in 1866; the general thought was that the Wildcats first started playing in 1869.

filled out their questionnaires are: fall; and such freshmen keymen as: Lou De Palo, end and halfback; Arthur Carrao, center and guard; and Joe Adams, a guard.

Varsity center Ed Koriskey, 195 pound junior who has been a standout for two seasons, has received his draft card but there is a possibility that he may get a deferrment owing to his pursuing a premedical course.

In the meantime, pending further menaces to his team-molding program the Clipper has been concentrating to date on the conditioning of the squad. This week, preparatory to commencing outdoor drills, he plans to conduct a series of lectures outlining the Spring program and also familiarizing the boys with new plays in keeping with his progressive mentoring policy. Among the new plays he has in mind are new offensive maneuvers from the ballet shift, and some radical departures in operations from the new T-formation.

Hope For The Best

Though the Spring program is being carried out in the face of the aforementioned difficulties the capable Clipper and his worthy assistant, Vince McNally, can be depended upon to mold the remaining veterans from last year's varsity, and potential greats from last seasons crack freshmen club into an another powerful Wildcat unit that will bring much satisfaction to followers of Villanova football.

Games Will Commence This Sunday if Weather Permits; Fedigan Nine Will Be Aided by Steve Aisenbrey

The next stop on the Intramural sports card is the baseball tournament which will open next week if the weather permits.

As usual the plan will be followed again this year with regards to the number of games and the time of playing. Two games will be played every Sunday, one in the morning and other in the afternoon. This tournament was restricted to the four resident halls, because it was inconvenient for the day-student to come to school on the weekends. However this year they may have a team. Representatives from the day students will talk it over with Father McKee this week.

Pitched No-Hitter

The defending champ, Austin Hall is sorely in need of a pitcher this season due to the loss of Steve Aisenbrey, who now resides in Fedigan. Aisenbrey has been undefeated in three years of play here. He won eight games last year and pitched a no-hit no-run game against Alumni.

Austin boasts the best catcher in the league in George Fitzgerald. Other players are Duke King, Bob Boudon, Ed D'Ippolito, Joe Shea and Bob Moore.

Besides Aisenbrey, Fedigan has Jim Forkin, Joe Daly, Bernie Crumb and others.

Nothing is known about the potentialities of the Freshmen halls, Mendel and Alumni. The season will have to get underway before anything definite can be seen.

Kitten Quintet Chalks Up 34th

In the final game of the season the Frosh quintet defeated the "Question Marks" of Stamford, Conn., 57-26. Saturday's victory brought down the curtain on the yearlings' schedule, to make it their second undefeated season.

Scoring honors were well-divided between Herm Drizen, "Reds" Klotz and rangy Ted Rapella. With an early lead, scoring was not the only feature of the game, but it lead to a beautiful and spectacular passing exhibition of three minutes duration in the first period and was again repeated in the final frame.

In the line-up for the opposition two former Villanovans saw a great deal of action. The "Question Marks" consisted of the outstanding players in the different sections of Connecticut, many of them being high school stars.

The starting team showed Ted Rapella, Joe Lord, "Reds" Klotz, Herm Drizen, and Ernie Melafchick; while Ted Janeczek and "Buck" Cellotto, a resident of Stamford, saw a great deal of action.

This game was made possible through the efforts of the Stamford Alumni group and who were well-pleased with such an exhibition as the Frosh produced.

As a result of this victory the Kitten quintet ran their winning-streak to 34 games, which extends over a two-year period. All told, Coach Al Severance's freshman teams have now won 116 games and lost only five over a five-year period. Losing only one game a year for a half decade is about the best record compiled by any court coach in the country.

Soph Five Trims Seniors; Get Golden Basketballs

Newly crowned champions of the Phi Kappa Pi basketball league will be presented with gold basketballs by the Engineering fraternity. The champions are the undefeated Sophomores who last week delivered an upset blow over the favored Senior team by the score of 35 to 33.

The Senior team was expected to take the championships with such able players as Dan Keating and Dan Dalina leading the way but the Sophomores had a little too much fight for their bigger brothers.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

THE INCONSISTENCY of the weather and the sudden gusts of wind which whirl around the campus these days make one realize that the month of March has once again arrived on the calendar and with it the usual effect on sports. Every year at this time, a lull in sports activities is brought about partly because of the weather and partly because March is an off-season.

Interest in the swiftly-waning basketball and hockey seasons is practically at a standstill. Except for a few post-season tournaments, most of the country's college basketball quintets have called for time out until next season, and the Stanley Cup play-off berths in the tional Professional Hockey League have already been clinched, so what is there left to hold the interest of the average sports fan?

Of course, Champion Joe Louis might be scheduled for another one-man blitzkrieg, but a boxing fan is aroused by a battle which can have only one inevitable ending — the challenger looking up at the ceiling from a prone position. We can remember when it was customary for a heavyweight bout to travel the scheduled 15 rounds, but that is one custom that the Dark Destroyer personally eradicated. Now, it is a moral victory if the challenger is still on his feet after five rounds in the ring with Champion Joe. Which reminds us that our vote for the biggest optimist of the year goes to the guy who conceived the brilliant idea to advertise Louis's next bout with Abe Simon as a 20-round affair. Simon has about as much chance of going the distance with Louis as a celluloid dog has of catching an asbestos cat in hell.

Although activity in the sporting field here on the campus is also at a low ebb at this time, there is no lack of preparations for the future. The swimming team's 36 to 39 loss to the natators of Penn last week marked the last appearance of a Villanova team until the baseball nine opens its season against the University of Vermont on April 7. However, this does not mean that the baseball, track, and spring football squads are not readying themselves for the arduous campaigns ahead. As a matter of fact, a visit to the gym on one of these wintry March afternoons will convince anyone that "Doc" Jacobs' ball hawks, "Jumbo" Elliott's runners, and "Clipper" Smith's gridders are already far advanced in their preparations for future contests.

Nets have been stretched across the sides of the gym and from 2:30 until 4 each day the baseball men limber up their arms so that all the kinks will be worked out by the time outdoor workouts are inaugurated. Then at 4:00 P. M. "Clipper" Smith's swing-cats take over the floor; already they have passed the calisthenics stage and are running through plays from the "T" formation which "Clipper" expects to use quite extensively next season.

All of which seems to leave the track men out in the cold, figuratively speaking — but "Jumbo" Elliott's men are an ingenious lot. When they couldn't find any space on the main floor of the Field House, the hurdlers set up their hurdles upstairs on the runway beneath the balcony and thus solved their problem of finding a place in the Field House where they could work out and still be safe from flying baseballs and footballs.

All that the boys ask for now is a break from the weatherman so they can move outdoors and get down to the more strenuous workouts which cannot possibly be conducted in the Field House.

A word of praise is due Walt Kelly, mainstay of the swimming team for the past three years, who closed his collegiate career in a blaze of glory last Wednesday when he won two events, the 100-yard and the 220-yard freestyles, in the dual meet against Penn. This feat was nothing new to Walt, since it was the exception and not the rule when he failed to score at least ten points in a meet.

We wish to correct an article printed in this space two weeks ago. At that time we mentioned that Seton Hall and Long Island University were to meet on the basketball court in March. Our source of information for that article seems to have been entirely incorrect, for no such meeting was regularly scheduled for this season.

—not that the student interest was lacking this year but might be, come next season. The main barrier to its continuation is that, when only two or three meets are listed in the course of the season and with the fact that athletes must absolutely train hard and long, it won't be very appetizing for them to struggle for three months and actually compete so few times.

There Are No Dividends

From their point of view — and not a selfish one either — it hardly seems worth while to put forth so much and reap such meager dividends. Even though the swimmers were delivered a knockout punch in the their three tests, close followers of the team still warrant that Villanova had a good team and should have engaged in more competitive meets. A possible explanation to the defeats is that if Coach Leahy might have had a man who could have captured the sorely-needed second place, the tune might have been more pleasing.

Next year we propound that Villanova make a bigger and better return to the sport of swimming by first of all seeking an addition of teams for the schedule. Then an abundant schedule will make conditions more favorable in the minds of the student body. To all this we see no complexities and our statements are not unfounded in the least.

Standard Basketball

Through the papers we see that a plea has been made by the court coach of Columbia University, Paul Mooney, to standardize the game of basketball. The striking reform which he urges comes in the uniformity of the rules along with the re-styling of the court and physical equipment.

In rendering his opinion, Mooney made a practical study of the game and finds it is too diversified. Thus he is taking the initiative in bringing about the same conditions of play all over the country. Mooney declares that the size of the courts and also the ball should be uniform throughout the sections of United States. With that accomplished the visiting teams would not be at such a great disadvantage.

Considering the ball, there is too much variation in the kinds used. "In the South they employ the rubber ball, in other sections they use laced balls or laceless balls. Altogether, six or seven balls are used. Let's designate one ball as the official ball."

It is also our belief that modern basketball, its players and rules, should be brought under more uniform ruling for as it stands now it is the only game that doesn't have regulations in a strict but competent order.

Visiting teams from the various sections are usually at a disadvantage when they take the floor. It may so happen that the whole make-up could be strange to them and detract from their regular playing ability. Such might be the case of a team that has never used glass backboards or the case of a team that usually plays on a large floor to be cramped in a 2x4 gymnasium.

DOWN THE • ALLEYS •

The Phi Kappa Pi Bowling League in the completion of another week shows the Pioneer five leading the parade of 18 teams with a record of three games and no losses.

Last Saturday afternoon at the Ardmore Alleys, the Pioneer bowlers completely overwhelmed the Poodlers as Jim Farley of the former team highlighted the match by piling up a 212 score for a new mark in the tournament. Farley representing the Pioneers scored his new mark in the third game.

Bowling for the Pioneers, the quintet of Dolan, Alpianalp, Cryor, Gasparovic, and Farley defeated the Poolers made up of Simpson, O'Donnell, Behnke, Nazian, Gallagher, and Moriarty. While the Pioneers have been highly successful in their matches, the Poodlers seem to have hit a turn for the worse by losing all three of their games.

Another feature match saw the Atom Smashers pitted against the S. B. Hams with the latter five grabbing off two of the three games while the Atom Smashers won only one out of the three games. In this contest, the individual high score was recorded by Jim Bonner of the S. B. Hams who bowled 160. In his three games he totaled 431 points to lead his mates and the rest of the field.

The Atom Smashers were composed of O'Brien, Haley, Bansbach, Eni and Vingroski, while the victorious S. B. Hams had Meeley, Bonner, Winiarski, Yochym and Manderfield setting up the strikes.

The tournament will continue with matches for the eighteen teams listed for this Saturday afternoon at the Ardmore Alleys. The Phi Kappi Pi, as promised beforehand, will give to the winning team an award when the league games have been completed and for the individual high score there will also be a small present.

In addition to the members of the Fraternity, the faculty of the Engineering has also established a team of their own and they are busy trying their hand at bowling.

Await Final Verdict

Two tournaments, the Writers' Invitational Tournament which is held at Madison Square Garden and the N. C. A. A. Tournament will be competing for a number of strong quintets which they will select to play in their tournaments which come about in a few weeks.

The teams of Dusquesne, Westminster, George Washington, Toledo, Ohio U., Texas Tech, Bradley Tech West Kentucky Teachers and Wyoming are all being sought by both groups and the final verdict of the selection committee will be given this week probably. The committee for the Writers' Tournament has already chosen L. I. U., Rhode Island State and Seton Hall as teams that will enter.

Views On Track

By BILL CAREY

Looking around at performances during the last eight or nine weeks of indoor activity on the boards we find that the recent campaign contributed more than its share of thrills and records to the sport's world.

Among its biggest surprises were however, the disappointing failure of both Chuck Fenske, and Manhattan's Johnny Quigley to win any major race from start to end of the season.

But on the other hand, Greg Rice luminary of Notre Dame came through with flying colors to prove himself the greatest distance runner ever developed in this country. Rice broke his own record for the two mile, and went ahead to set another for the two and a half mile run, while he was on his way to breaking the existing world record in the three mile event.

18 Wins For Rice

The astounding feature in Rice's phenomenal performances was that he has not extended himself to his capacity in any of his 18 straight victories.

Speaking of field events brings to mind the fact that Villanova has never had a top-notch field man. A lot of big boys have come and gone around here but none seem to take a liking to the weights. A few field men would certainly lift the worries off Jumbo Elliott's mind.

About Maher

Right now Johnny Maher who was floored by an illness this past fall has to be content with assisting mentor Elliott in the training room and with the Freshman runners.

Johnny, who because of strict orders from the doctors has to take a temporary lay off this season, limits his physical activity to light informal work-outs with his charges. Incidentally Maher's absence will cause a big dent in the spring line up. Therefore Elliott will have to depend on sophomore Johnny DiCarlo to bear the brunt of the dashes in addition to his quarter mile duties.

Maher has contacted several college freshman teams and high schools and is awaiting answers from them before he names his opponents for an extensive and grueling schedule.

Discuss Faults Of Democracy

History Seminar Members Debate Points Arising From Edward Benes' Book

At a meeting of the History Seminar last Wednesday, the members discussed the defects and abuses prevalent in the democratic system. Charles Callahan, sophomore commerce student, explained the theory upheld by Edward Benes, former president of Czechoslovakia, as it is stated in his book "Democracy—Today and Tomorrow."

According to Callahan, Benes believes that modern democracy is badly in need of reform, particularly in reference to the civil liberties as they are exercised today.

Factors described as being defects in our democratic form of government were abuse of the freedom of press by the spreading of subversive propaganda, and the unjust hardships incurred by a large group of our population as a result of the malfunctioning of our principle of unrestricted economic competition.

Toleration of these flagrant abuses, resulting in much of the political, social, and economic discord existing in this country, was recognized by the members as a serious threat to the future of our democratic system.

The members agreed, however, that rapid progress is being made in correcting these defects, particularly in the United States, by establishing much-needed checks on the activities of certain foreign elements in the nation's press, and by modifying our present system of free enterprise.

It was pointed out that freedom is not an absolute power to be used indiscriminately, but a relative right to be exercised with due consideration to the welfare of every individual living under our social order.

The group agreed that, in conformity with changing world conditions. the democracy of the future will be characterized by a definite modification of that ideal originally believed in by the founders of our government.

"Judicial and Administrative Problems of Anti-Trust Laws" will be discussed at tomorrow's meeting of the group at 2:15 P. M. in Simpson hall.

Seminars Feature Physics Of Music

"The Physics of Music" will be the highlighted feature of both the Day-Hop and the Resident Music Seminars tomorrow, the fourth in the current spring program of the seminars.

Edward L. Haenisch, Ph. D., associate professor of chemistry, will be the lecturer at both seminars. He will describe briefly what sound is and demonstrate the difference between musical sounds and noise.

This lecture, in bringing out the technical side of music, is intended to attract the interest of those students interested in physics, as well as the attention of those enjoying music.

For the purpose of showing what pure sound waves are, Dr. Haenisch will make use of an oscillograph. He will also use the piano to illustrate the fundamental and the various harmonics of musical notes.

The day-hop seminar will be held in the Mendel Amphitheater from 12:40 to 1:30 P. M. tomorrow afternoon. The program will not be as complete as that of the resident seminar but the main points will be covered.

The resident seminar will be held at 7:30 P. M. in Simpson hall and will include various musical selections as well as several interesting experiments on the physical basis of music.

Math Club To Hear Postponed Address

Dr. C. G. Schilling of St. Joseph's College will speak to members of the Mathematics Club on the topic "Pedal Curves" this Friday at 5:30 P. M. in room 214 Mendel hall. He will cover the topic through illustrative figures, as well as his talk.

This address was originally scheduled fc last Friday afternoon, but Dr. Schilling was unable to keep his engagement because of the snow storm.

Thomas C. Muraski, sophomore chemical engineer, delivered a lecture at the meeting on "Non-Euclidean Geometry" when Dr. Schilling failed to appear.

Muraski illustrated the differences between Euclidean and non-Euclidean geometry and then proceeded to derive some of the fundamental concepts of the non-Euclidean type.

Chemists Discuss Paint Manufacture As Trip Preview

In preparation for a visit this Thursday to the plant of the R. J. Lewis Paint Co., yesterday's meeting of the Chemical Society was devoted to an explanation of paint processes.

John F. McKimmey spoke on "Paints and their Manufacture." He described the various ingredients and discussed the manufacturing processes, such as grinding the pigment, mixing the vehicle, and filling the control tests.

"The Dutch Boy Process" of manufacturing white lead pigment was explained by John B. Metzinger. This process is an improvement over the original, but much slower, "Dutch White Lead Process."

John J. Madison concluded the meeting with the presentation of a paper on the materials and manufacture of "Varnishes." He said that most of the gums and resins are imported from Asia. The difficulty of obtaining these at the present time has increased their synthetic production at home.

Adapt For Radio

Adaptation for radio of Rev. John F. Burns' "Vision" has been made by Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., moderator of the Radio Work Group, and Thomas J. McKimmey, junior education student.

Casting for the play has been going on for several weeks and, although no definite announcement of any of the roles has been made, a number of parts have been tentatively assigned; records have been made of some scenes in order to facilitate the director's task of constructive criticism.

Frosh Again Debate St. Joe's

The freshman debating team will meet St. Joseph College's yearling debaters here this afternoon in a return match. The debate will be held in Simpson hall, beginning at 3:15 P. M.

The topic to be discussed is, Resolved: That the Countries of the Western Hemisphere should unite in a Permanent Union. William Walsh and Harvey Satenstein will argue the negative side of this question for Villanova.

Thursday, March 13, also at 3:15 P. M. in Simpson the freshman forensic group will be host to St. Joseph's Prep, in a return debate, to argue the resolution that the powers of the Federal Government should be increased. The negative side will be defended by Robert F. Young, secretary of Villanova's team, and Joseph J. Coll.

Last Thursday afternoon, the yearling debaters held a non-decision debate with St. Joseph's Prep upon the subject, Resolved: That the Federal Government should conscript Industry. James Gerrity and Carton Conway upheld the affirmative for Villanova.

Nominate Monday

Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, will nominate officers for the coming year at their meeting at 11:40 A. M. next Monday in Mendel hall. The Rev. Vincent A. MacQuade, O. S. A., will address the members at 1:00 P. M. on the same day.

Justice Roberts To Address Group Making Washington Trip April 1, 2, 3

Government Students Will Attend Foreign Affairs Committee Meeting, Hear Thurman Arnold

By W. E. SCHUBERT

Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme Court will address the members of the American Government classes who make the fourth annual trip to Washington on April 1, 2, and 3, under the direction of Harold F. Hartman, Ph. D., assistant professor of social sciences.

Inaugurated in 1937 for the sophomore, junior and senior students in the government classes, the trips to the capital have been arranged and conducted by Dr. Hartman. The main purpose of the trips is to study governmental processes as they actually function.

Members of the nation's various departments and agencies address the students to clarify the problems confronting the operation of their particular organizations.

Leave Tuesday Morning

According to this year's schedule as tentatively arranged, the trip will begin with Mass offered in the college chapel on Tuesday morning, April 1, at 5:10 A. M. Immediately following breakfast in the Dining Hall, the group will leave for Washington.

Tuesday will be particularly devoted to a study of the national government in relation to the defense program. A visit will be paid to both the House of Representatives and the Senate in order to hear debates on the contemporary issues of the defense question.

Arrangements have been made to attend a meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee; a member of the committee will address the stu-

Marine Commissions Offered To Students

As part of a nationwide campaign to fill the depleted reserve ranks of the U. S. Marine Corps, Lieut. Sutphin of the Phila. Navy Yard Marine Barracks visited Villanova Friday and yesterday to explain to students the manner of acquiring commissions as second lieutenants in the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve.

He explained that acceptable sophomores and juniors will be placed in the "platoon leader" class and will undergo training during the next two summers for a period of six weeks each summer. The training will begin on July 1, and will take place at the Phila. Navy Yard. Upon graduation, these students will receive their commissions.

Interested seniors will be assigned to the "candidates" class and will have a three-month training period at Quantico, Va., after graduation.

Lieut. Sutphin will return here on March 24 and 25 to supervise preliminary physical examinations in the college infirmary for those who desire to take the training.

Villanova Host

To 200 Student Chemists at Group's Annual Convention on April 26

Arrangements are being made to receive 200 members of the Intercollegiate Student Chemists at their annual convention, to be held at Villanova on Saturday, April 26.

Hyman Malkin, senior chemical engineer and vice-president of the Villanova Chemical Society, has charge of the meeting; he has announced that the chemistry students of all local colleges, as well as groups who are members, will be invited.

Among the colleges whose students are members are Lafayette, Drexel Institute, Gettysburg, Muhlenberg, Swarthmore, Haverford, Ursinus, University of Delaware, Franklin and Marshall, Albright, and Lebanon Valley.

Main feature of the meeting will be the presentation of a paper by a representative of each school attending. Efforts are being made to have prizes for the best of these.

Misericordiae College Friday for 21st Debate of Season; Held at Dallas, Pa.

Beta Gamma will engage in its twenty-first debate of the season next Friday afternoon when it meets Misericordiae College in Dallas, Pa.

Thomas J. Moore, chairman of the society, Thomas J. DeSipin and John P. Fullam, representing Villanova, will uphold the affirmative of "Resolved: That the United States should form an immediate union with the British Commonwealth of Nations." The subject for the debate will be new to the Beta Gamma contingent.

To close the present season, plans are being completed to make another trip. At the present time the society is scheduled to meet New Rochelle College on April 29 and Manhattan either on the night before or after that date.

Yesterday afternoon, members of the society met here with representatives of St. Peter's College and Upsala College for a round-table discussion on the formation of a Western Hemisphere Alliance.

Six Named To Promenade Court

Misses Haley, Mork, Selfridge, Mansfield, Heinel, and Kranz Will Aid Queen

Climaxing two months of judging, the Junior Prom committee has announced the names of the six girls who have been selected by Walter Thornton to comprise the court of the Prom's first queen, Gloria Spatola. The Queen and her court will preside over the prom on May 9.

Rather than unnecessarily expand the court to include ten girls, the Prom committee kept it at the figure of six set at the opening of the contest.

Rosemont College will be represented in the court by two girls: Charlene Mork of Evanston, Ill., and Kay Haley of Bronxville, N. Y. Miss Mork, an 18-year-old sophomore, was entered in the contest by Edward Bennis, sophomore commerce student. Kay Haley, the other Rosemont collegienne chosen to attend the Queen, is a member of the cast of the Belle Masque play, "Margin for Error," now in production.

Marie Selfridge, a resident of West Philadelphia, is the third member selected. Her photograph was submitted to the committee by William Friel, also a sophomore in the C. & F. school. At the present time Miss Selfridge is the record librarian at Misericordia Hospital.

Another member of the court is Marie Mansfield, of West Philadelphia, date of Loring Jones, another sophomore commerce student. Miss Mansfield, a freshman at Immaculata College, has appeared with the Queen in several of the St. Francis Junior Aide shows.

Betty Heinel of Melrose Park and Loretta Kranz of Haverford complete the court. Miss Heinel's photograph was entered by William Ehmer, junior engineer.

John J. Parson, Jr., chairman of the prom committee, has announced that no final arrangements for the orchestra have been completed as yet.

Selective Service Headquarters Reclassifies College Students

A recent communication sent out from National Headquarters to all State Directors of the Selective Service System and thence to all local boards calls attention to the reclassification of students.

The following excerpts are of particular interest to college students:

"The proper classification of students and other registrants in training or preparation constitutes one of the major problems of the Selective Service System. Marked concern has been manifested by educators and other interested persons with respect to the status of students after July 1, 1941, particularly those students enrolled in professional, scientific, technical or highly specialized fields of endeavor."

Essential Activities

"Students or other registrants undergoing instruction may be deferred in Class 2-A by the local board where the activity for which the registrant is in training or preparation is one essential to the national health, safety, or interest, and the registrant is found to be a necessary man."

"In determining whether or not a student is a necessary man within the provisions of Paragraph 351, the local board should give due consideration to such factors as the length of time which the student has been pursuing the course in question, his relative progress and standing in such course, and his relative chances for employment or placement in the activity for which he is preparing."

May Be Re-Deferred

"The period of deferment in Class 2-A may not exceed six months but such deferment may be renewed from time to time if the local board finds that such continuance is justified by the Regulations."

The faculty committee on Selective Service here will cooperate to the utmost with individual students in determining their status under Selective Service and in advising them as to the seeking of deferment in accordance with the statements quoted above.

Report to Banmiller

It is most essential that all students registered under Selective Service report immediately receipt of their questionnaires or of any other communications from their local draft boards to the secretary of the Faculty Committee, Paetrus F. Banmiller, at room 118, Mendel hall.

Pending further change in the Selective Service Act, deferment is now an individual matter in the case of each registrant. In many cases it will be the patriotic duty of students to seek such deferment in order to complete their college education, as something necessary to the national health, safety or interest.

A "Must"

Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar, has requested that all students who were required to register under the Selective Service Act report their local board numbers, classifications, etc., immediately, since local board physical examinations will be held in April to reclassify college students. Unless students are registered at the registrar's office before that time, it will be difficult for college authorities to take the proper steps with regard to deferment requests.

Combined Symphonic Band To Present Concert Sunday

Villanova, Immaculata Musicians Unite For First Joint College Program in This Area; To Start at 8:30 P. M.; Tickets at $.50

By GERARD J. BELB

The Villanova Symphonic band, augmented by fifteen musicians from Immaculata College, will present its third annual concert, under the direction of Rev. Ralph T. Handran, O. S. A., this Sunday evening, March 23, in the college Field House at 8:30 P. M., with a program of light music.

A complete innovation, the concert will mark the first attempt by colleges in the Philadelphia area to combine instrumental groups. The combined band is also significant inasmuch as it will be the largest instrumental group ever to perform at the college.

With the advent of a strong clarinet section and a motivating trumpet section, the band promises to excel all previous performances. The addition of two oboeists has also made the symphonic band more complete and has contributed greatly to its tonal qualities.

Popular Program

The program, intended to make an emotional appeal to the audience, will be composed of marches, light classics, and popular melodies. Altogether, 14 numbers will be rendered, including three novelty numbers executed by special groups.

Numbers to be played by the entire symphonic band are the marches, "Ramparts We Watch," "The Narrator," "On The Mall," and "American Patrol." Other numbers are "In a Monastery Garden;" "La Cumparsita," a tango; "Princess of India;" "The Merry Widow Waltz;" "Amapola," a modernized melody; "Circus Parade;" and the "Victor Herbert Favorites."

Novelty Numbers

As the first novelty number, a trio composed of Leonard Miceli, flutist; Ann Englehard, oboeist; and Jeanette Crisconi, clarinetist, will give an interpretation of "Scherzo." Four clarinetists and a piccolo player will supply the second novelty number with their presentation of "Whistling Joe." The clarinetists in this group will be Mark Fitzgerald, Robert Schisler, Jeanette Crisconi, and Dorothy McCandless; the piccolo player, Leonard Miceli. A saxophone trio composed of George McFadden, Ralph Nigro, and Joseph Rozum will render "Soloette" for the final novelty.

Performing from the stage of the Field House, the band will be seated on newly purchased collapsible platforms. These platforms, the latest in band equipment, will provide three different levels and thus facilitate direction.

Tickets for the concert will not be on sale before the night of the presentation but will be sold at the door. The price will be $.50 each, but Villanova students may secure a special student ticket for $.25.

Students of Immaculaaa, Rosemont, Chestnut Hill, and other local colleges have been invited to the affair. Last year several girls colleges sent busses to the concert; this year, Immaculata has already made arrangements for their busses.

JOSEPH M. GAMBESCIA

K. G. S. Again Elects Gambescia President

Joseph M. Gambescia, sophomore science man, was reelected president of the Kappa Gamma Sigma society last Wednesday afternoon. Elected with him were John J. Bongiovanni, Harold V. Varani, and George L. Weber, also sophomores, who will assume the duties of vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, respectively.

With the exception of Gambescia, who was returned to the presidency by a wide margin, the election was closely contested. The office of treasurer was not decided until the last three votes.

Gambescia, in addition to his position in the K. G. S. Society, is a staff member of the VILLANOVAN, secretary of the Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity, and a member of the Board of Editors of the "Mendel Bulletin."

Dr. Edward L. Haenisch was the featured speaker at the meeting of the K. G. S. held on Thursday. In his talk on the subject of "Physics in Music," he demonstrated, by means of an oscillograph, how sound waves vary in intensity, pitch, and quality.

"Now, The Oboes Come In Here"

Fr. Handran clears up some difficulties in phrasing for the oboe section as some other members of the combined Villanova-Immaculata symphonic band look on. At this, last Friday's rehearsal on the Field House stage, the aggregation furthered its preparation for the cert this Sunday.

Gives Third Talk

REV. J. J. ANDERSON, O. S. A., above, will deliver the third sermon in the current Lenten series next Monday evening, March 17, in the college chapel. His talk on "Our Catholic Faith" will explain the beliefs and practices we follow to attain our final salvation.

Discuss Faults Of Democracy

History Seminar Members Debate Points Arising From Edward Benes' Book

At a meeting of the History Seminar last Wednesday, the members discussed the defects and abuses prevalent in the democratic system. Charles Callahan, sophomore commerce student, explained the theory upheld by Edward Benes, former president of Czechoslovakia, as it is stated in his book "Democracy—Today and Tomorrow."

According to Callahan, Benes believes that modern democracy is badly in need of reform, particularly in reference to the civil liberties as they are exercised today.

Factors described as being defects in our democratic form of government were abuse of the freedom of press by the spreading of subversive propaganda, and the unjust hardships incurred by a large group of our population as a result of the malfunctioning of our principle of unrestricted economic competition.

Toleration of these flagrant abuses, resulting in much of the political, social, and economic discord existing in this country, was recognized by the members as a serious threat to the future of our democratic system.

The members agreed, however, that rapid progress is being made in correcting these defects, particularly in the United States, by establishing much-needed checks on the activities of certain foreign elements in the nation's press, and by modifying our present system of free enterprise.

It was pointed out that freedom is not an absolute power to be used indiscriminately, but a relative right to be exercised with due consideration to the welfare of every individual living under our social order.

The group agreed that, in conformity with changing world conditions, the democracy of the future will be characterized by a definite modification of that ideal originally believed in by the founders of our government.

"Judicial and Administrative Problems of Anti-Trust Laws" will be discussed at tomorrow's meeting of the group at 2:15 P. M. in Simpson hall.

Seminars Feature Physics Of Music

"The Physics of Music" will be the highlighted feature of both the Day-Hop and the Resident Music Seminars tomorrow, the fourth in the current spring program of the seminars.

Edward L. Haenisch, Ph. D., associate professor of chemistry, will be the lecturer at both seminars. He will describe briefly what sound is and demonstrate the difference between musical sounds and noise.

This lecture, in bringing out the technical side of music, is intended to attract the interest of those students interested in physics, as well as the attention of those enjoying music.

For the purpose of showing what pure sound waves are, Dr. Haenisch will make use of an oscillograph. He will also use the piano to illustrate the fundamental and the various harmonics of musical notes.

The day-hop seminar will be held in the Mendel Amphitheater from 12:40 to 1:30 P. M. tomorrow afternoon. The program will not be as complete as that of the resident seminar but the main points will be covered.

The resident seminar will be held at 7:30 P. M. in Simpson hall and will include various musical selections as well as several interesting experiments on the physical basis of music.

Math Club To Hear Postponed Address

Dr. C. G. Schilling of St. Joseph's College will speak to members of the Mathematics Club on the topic "Pedal Curves" this Friday at 5:30 P. M. in room 214 Mendel hall. He will cover the topic through illustrative figures, as well as his talk.

This address was originally scheduled fc last Friday afternoon, but Dr. Schilling was unable to keep his engagement because of the snow storm.

Thomas C. Muraski, sophomore chemical engineer, delivered a lecture at the meeting on "Non-Euclidean Geometry" when Dr. Schilling failed to appear.

Muraski illustrated the differences between Euclidean and non-Euclidean geometry and then proceeded to derive some of the fundamental concepts of the non-Euclidean type.

Chemists Discuss Paint Manufacture As Trip Preview

In preparation for a visit this Thursday to the plant of the R. J. Lewis Paint Co., yesterday's meeting of the Chemical Society was devoted to an explanation of paint processes.

John F. McKimmey spoke on "Paints and their Manufacture." He described the various ingredients and discussed the manufacturing processes, such as grinding the pigment, mixing the vehicle, and filling the control tests.

"The Dutch Boy Process" of manufacturing white lead pigment was explained by John B. Metzinger. This process is an improvement over the original, but much slower, "Dutch White Lead Process."

John J. Madison concluded the meeting with the presentation of a paper on the materials and manufacture of "Varnishes." He said that most of the gums and resins are imported from Asia. The difficulty of obtaining these at the present time has increased their synthetic production at home.

Adapt For Radio

Adaptation for radio of Rev. John F. Burns' "Vision" has been made by Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., moderator of the Radio Work Group, and Thomas J. McKimmey, junior education student.

Casting for the play has been going on for several weeks and, although no definite announcement of any of the roles has been made, a number of parts have been tentatively assigned; records have been made of some scenes in order to facilitate the director's task of constructive criticism.

Frosh Again Debate St. Joe's

The freshman debating team will meet St. Joseph College's yearling debaters here this afternoon in a return match. The debate will be held in Simpson hall, beginning at 3:15 P. M.

The topic to be discussed is, Resolved: That the Countries of the Western Hemisphere should unite in a Permanent Union. William Walsh and Harvey Satenstein will argue the negative side of this question for Villanova.

Thursday, March 13, also at 3:15 P. M. in Simpson the freshman forensic group will be host to St. Joseph's Prep, in a return debate, to argue the resolution that the powers of the Federal Government should be increased. The negative side will be defended by Robert F. Young, secretary of Villanova's team, and Joseph J. Coll.

Last Thursday afternoon, the yearling debaters held a non-decision debate with St. Joseph's Prep upon the subject, Resolved: That the Federal Government should conscript Industry. James Gerrity and Carton Conway upheld the affirmative for Villanova.

Nominate Monday

Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, will nominate officers for the coming year at their meeting at 11:40 A. M. next Monday in Mendel hall. The Rev. Vincent A. MacQuade, O. S. A., will address the members at 1:00 P. M. on the same day.

Justice Roberts To Address Group Making Washington Trip April 1, 2, 3

Government Students Will Attend Foreign Affairs Committee Meeting, Hear Thurman Arnold

By W. E. SCHUBERT

Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme Court will address the members of the American Government classes who make the fourth annual trip to Washington on April 1, 2, and 3, under the direction of Harold F. Hartman, Ph. D., assistant professor of social sciences.

Inaugurated in 1937 for the sophomore, junior and senior students in the government classes, the trips to the capital have been arranged and conducted by Dr. Hartman. The main purpose of the trips is to study governmental processes as they actually function.

Members of the nation's various departments and agencies address the students to clarify the problems confronting the operation of their particular organizations.

Leave Tuesday Morning

According to this year's schedule as tentatively arranged, the trip will begin with Mass offered in the college chapel on Tuesday morning, April 1, at 5:10 A. M. Immediately following breakfast in the Dining Hall, the group will leave for Washington.

Tuesday will be particularly devoted to a study of the national government in relation to the defense program. A visit will be paid to both the House of Representatives and the Senate in order to hear debates on the contemporary issues of the defense question.

Arrangements have been made to attend a meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee; a member of the committee will address the stu-

Debaters To Meet

Misericordiae College Friday for 21st Debate of Season; Held at Dallas, Pa.

Beta Gamma will engage in its twenty-first debate of the season next Friday afternoon when it meets Misericordiae College in Dallas, Pa.

Thomas J. Moore, chairman of the society, Thomas J. DeSipin and John P. Fullam, representing Villanova, will uphold the affirmative of "Resolved: That the United States should form an immediate union with the British Commonwealth of Nations." The subject for the debate will be new to the Beta Gamma contingent.

To close the present season, plans are being completed to make another trip. At the present time the society is scheduled to meet New Rochelle College on April 29 and Manhattan either on the night before or after that date.

Yesterday afternoon, members of the society met here with representatives of St. Peter's College and Upsala College for a round-table discussion on the formation of a Western Hemisphere Alliance.

Marine Commissions Offered To Students

As part of a nationwide campaign to fill the depleted reserve ranks of the U. S. Marine Corps, Lieut. Sutphin of the Phila. Navy Yard Marine Barracks visited Villanova Friday and yesterday to explain to students the manner of acquiring commissions as second lieutenants in the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve.

He explained that acceptable sophomores and juniors will be placed in the "platoon leader" class and will undergo training during the next two summers for a period of six weeks each summer. The training will begin on July 1, and will take place at the Phila. Navy Yard. Upon graduation, these students will receive their commissions.

Interested seniors will be assigned to the "candidates" class and will have a three-month training period at Quantico, Va., after graduation.

Lieut. Sutphin will return here on March 24 and 25 to supervise preliminary physical examinations in the college infirmary for those who desire to take the training.

Villanova Host

To 200 Student Chemists at Group's Annual Convention on April 26

Arrangements are being made to receive 200 members of the Intercollegiate Student Chemists at their annual convention, to be held at Villanova on Saturday, April 26.

Hyman Malkin, senior chemical engineer and vice-president of the Villanova Chemical Society, has charge of the meeting; he has announced that the chemistry students of all local colleges, as well as groups who are members, will be invited.

Among the colleges whose students are members are Lafayette, Drexel Institute, Gettysburg, Muhlenberg, Swarthmore, Haverford, Ursinus, University of Delaware, Franklin and Marshall, Albright, and Lebanon Valley.

Main feature of the meeting will be the presentation of a paper by a representative of each school attending. Efforts are being made to have prizes for the best of these.

Let It Ring On

IN last week's issue of "Collegiate Digest" there appeared a picture of a group of students at a certain southern college busily engaged in "getting acquainted." It seems that a "Get-Acquainted Week" was being held to promote a spirit of fellowship among the students. Every student wore a lapel sign bearing his name; all students greeted one another as they chanced to pass.

All of which has a familiar ring. Where, indeed, have we heard of this before? Oh, but of course, it's right here at Villanova. A case of the uncommon commonplace — what's commonplace here is quite uncommon at other colleges, "the hello habit."

The "hello habit" is a great practice, and it's a pretty swell school that holds "Get-Acquainted Week" every week of the year. It's a habit we must all continually practice if it's to live. Too often it happens that, the farther away we get from the time when we wore our "regs," the less ready are we to continue the habit we were once so eager to practice.

We do not mean to say by all this that the "hello habit" is dying out or anything of the sort. Rather we say that it must not die out. It is for us to keep it alive. Remember, all Villanovans everywhere, any time—"hello!"

Here Comes The Navy

WHEN the House last week passed the naval supply bill to carry on the two-ocean Navy program, it took the preliminary step in answering the inquiry resounding throughout the nation. In effect, the question voiced by the populace was: "We are preparing to arm Britain, but just what is the status of the defense orders for the United States?" This legislative reply, which amounts to a $3,446,585,144 appropriation, shows that America is not slighting its own defense plans.

Expressed anxiety for home preparedness was especially noticeable after the proposed $7,000,000,000 lease-lend bill appropriation was announced. With the approval of this naval supply bill by the House, and the rapid passage it is expected to meet in the Senate, there is ample reason for those who feared for our own productive welfare to be reassured. And it is well for this same lot to remember that this is only a portion of the home-[illegible] program to be undertaken.

Aid to Britain has now become law, and still defense plans for the United States have not been forsaken. And this is only as it should be. America must not shun its own protection. America must be first, and we can not permit our own defense needs to be ignored or sacrificed at any cost.

Loathsome Echoes

A MATTER which many college students are inclined to treat lightly, but which should be viewed with disgust, is plagiarism.

To some, it represents merely the easy way out of an unpleasant task; to others, it is a method of "putting something over" on someone. But in all cases, it is stealing —and not just ordinary stealing, either.

For the plagiarist appropriates the product of another's hard work — that which he was too lazy or too inefficient to do for himself. And even the common thief can find a better pretense for justification than that.

But, it is objected, after all it's only a trivial matter when one is in college. The effects aren't serious — all college work, genuine or otherwise, eventually reaches the wastebasket.

On the contrary, plagiarism can ruin lives. Remove reliability from an individual's character and not much but hollow shell remains. And what began unobtrusively enough in some little college detail soon develops into a monstrous, ungovernable tapeworm.

Hence, this reminder to our readers— to some few, a warning note; to others, reassurance.

Strikes Be Downed

UNDENIABLE testimony of the lack of national unity existing in America today was violently released last week in the report that no less than 32 strikes were interrupting production in the defense industries. Still stronger indication of the discord in labor circles is the fact that four of these strikes were called after the lend-lease bill became law, and that there is now a greater number of potential walk-outs than was evident before the legislation was passed by Congress.

Whatever the causes of these agents of labor stoppage may be, it is certain that they are not born of patriotism. They can at best be termed a direct violation of the spirit of the nation. Our country is laboring under an emergency, and it is obvious that the instigating forces behind these strikes are doing their utmost not to alleviate the burden by cooperation.

Certainly, these strikes are incompatible with the movement among most of the firms engaged in defense industries. Only recently, plans were made for the pooling of designs, patents, and copyrights on a mass scale. This plan will make possible the exchange of trade secrets in all types of mechanical instruments, and thereby permit production plants a more rapid output. Actions of this nature in a crisis make strikes appear all the more deplorable and demand that they be eliminated.

With present difficulties arising in the selection of skilled men to man machines and to manage defense orders, it is essential that all steps further handicapping labor personnel be outlawed immediately. Action is now pending on these labor disputes and strikes through the proposed mediation board, and it is urged that it begin to function before future "breaks" occur in defense industries.

Labor, capital, and the industrial plant must operate in perfect unison if we are to offset the many "natural" causes of opposition which will appear in production. They must be unified now, and they must continue to work together throughout the ensuing period of turmoil.

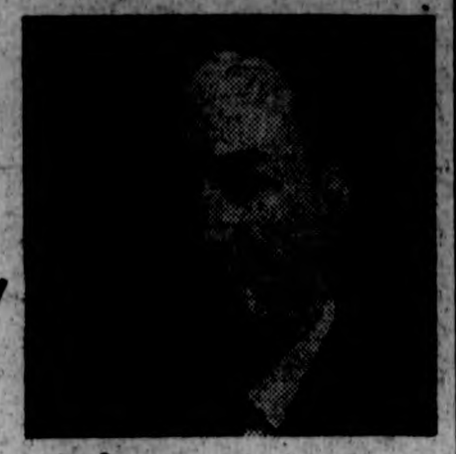
"... That He Who Runs Away ..."



By Dr. Mc Hugh

EVERYONE above the mental level of the imbecile can learn to read. But not all who do learn can read with profit. The radio, motion picture and the other accouterments of modern civilization furnish entertainment and experience with too little effort on our part. Too little effort produces fat. And a continued diet of that kind of entertainment will produce fatty degeneration of the heart, head and mind. But reading requires effort, for reading is an art in which skill, cunning, watchfulness, craftsmanship and a subtle sense of the proper way to do a thing may be learned and applied. But not until you have battered down some obstacles that stand directly in your way. Some of these obstacles are in the book, some in the author; but most of them are in you.

Difficulty is Ignorance

One of the worst is a species of ignorance which prompts you to read only the simple and elementary works of literature. This arises from the belief that ideas good for the human race must be expressed in childish terms and that anything complex must be the work of a crank, a professor or some other pervert whom it would be well to disregard. People suffering from this form of ignorance sneer at everything they do not understand. Their minds are hermetically sealed with intellectual gutta-percha and they go on in perfect contentment feeding upon literary pap that would nauseate a normal ten year old mentality. They even resent any attempt to lure them a little higher.

There is a book called "Pollyanna" which for some years has been laughed at for the wrong reason. It is used by critics as the stock example of the imbecility of the human mass; it has been jeered at as expressing a silly philosophy. But it is not a silly philosophy; almost sublime is its central theme—that the peculiar glory of man is that he has been able to keep the flag of hope flying in an almost hopeless world. The real reason for laughing at the book is, that although written in childish terms for childish minds, it is read seriously by millions of grown-ups whose minds are content to remain on this childish level.

Same Theme

Sometimes you can persuade people to climb a few steps higher to Warwick Deeping's "Kitty." Here is a book perceptibly more mature, and just as lively and amusing as "Pollyanna." It is a good adolescent statement of the same thesis—that it is possible to be optimistic and to remold the world nearer to the heart's desire. The theme played in "Pollyanna" on a penny tin whistle is here scored for a modern dance orchestra and not a bad one at that.

And now a long step up to Dickens' "Martin Chuzzlewit." Here is a novel, long and complex, full of characters, geography and happenings. And when you reach the point where, with Martin ill, alone in the American wilderness, money gone, fever and failure triumphant, Mark Tapley lifts his happy head and declares that it's some credit to a man to be jolly under these circumstances; you hear again the ancient theme blared out by the full brass band of 19th century romanticism.

Modern Version

There is perhaps one more step, to Eugene O'Neill's "Lazarus Laughed." Here is a play unlike any other ever written with masked figures, a symbolic masked chorus, half lyric and half dramatic in form. And when Lazarus, raised from the dead and in the face of pain and loss, asserts with laughter that there is no death; you know that you have heard the "Pollyanna" theme again scored this time for a full symphony orchestra in the complex and dissonant melodies of the twentieth century.

Granted that the "Pollyanna" theme is good for the soul, is it not better to hear it played by Deeping than by Mrs. Porter? Is it not better to hear it played by Dickens than by Deeping? Is it not best to hear it played by O'Neill? To be forever satisfied with the music of a tin whistle when you might be listening to the full resonant harmonies of a mighty symphony is culpable ignorance of the worst kind.

Provincialism

Provincialism is another obstacle to effective reading. The provincial cannot conceive of a life other than the one he has lived. He is filled with fears. At home he is on safe ground; abroad, he fears he will make a fool of himself. He half recognizes that it would be all right "to do as the Romans do. . . if only they wouldn't do such funny things."

Perhaps you remember how Judge Brack, with Hedda Gabler's pistol shot still ringing in his ears, screams helplessly, "People don't do such things!" Teachers of literature are forever running up against these Judge Bracks among their

GLIB GAB:

A GROUP of commerce men recently issued a formal challenge to the leaders of the engineers' bowling league for a match at 50 paces. While practicing at the same alleys, a few of the engineers were astounded at the prowess of their enemy pinmen and subsequently withdrew their acceptance. In this case, silence isn't golden, it's just plain yellow.

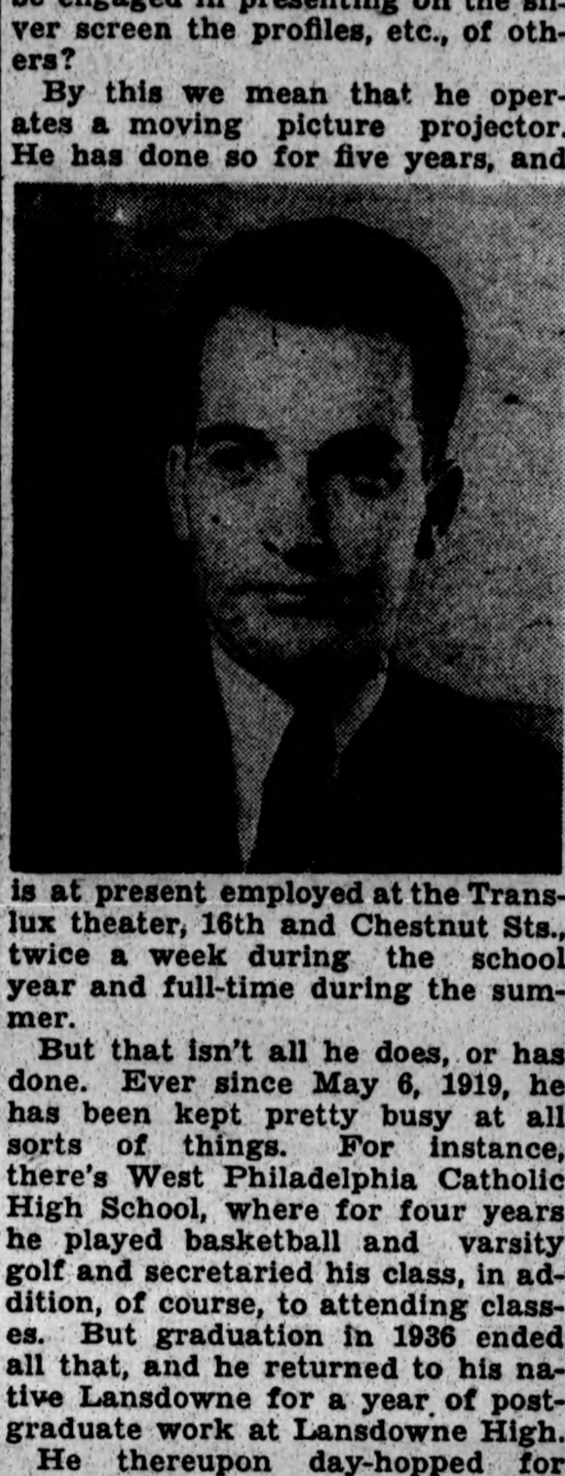
Meet The Boys:

Fedigan Stars, Current Crop, These 'Lectricians Used To "Hop"

By JOHN FULLAM

ONE of this frequently paradoxical world's most bewildering problems is Frank Abbott, Villanova sportsman and engineer. For why in the name of common sense should a profile so fit for Hollywood's purposes, a permanent wave that would keep feminine audiences permanently waving, a smile which is the epitome of all that tooth-paste ads hold dear—why, may we ask, should all these be engaged in presenting on the silver screen the profiles, etc., of others?

By this we mean that he operates a moving picture projector. He has done so for five years, and is at present employed at the Trans-lux theater, 16th and Chestnut Sts., twice a week during the school year and full-time during the summer.



But that isn't all he does, or has done. Ever since May 6, 1919, he has been kept pretty busy at all sorts of things. For instance, there's West Philadelphia Catholic High School, where for four years he played basketball and varsity golf and secretaried his class, in addition, of course, to attending classes. But graduation in 1936 ended all that, and he returned to his native Lansdowne for a year of post-graduate work at Lansdowne High.

He thereupon day-hopped for three years to the electrical engineering department of V. C. He's a Fediganite this year, and has managed to include four years of intramurals (three years with the Mendel Day-Hops, one with Fedigan's championship team), the Orientation Committee, the Sophomore Cotillion Committee, two years of Owl Hop activities (sophomore and senior), chairmanship of the Ring Committee, the treasuring of the Phi Kappa Pi, two years of varsity golf, and chairmanship of the A. I. E. E.

Each spring—perennially, really—his fancy lightly turns to Georgian Court and a little Woodbridge lass with "light brown hair." ("Subject to change without notice," says roommate Edward "Brooklyn Max" Kelly).

Surely, you ask, a man who has such intimate connections with the world of sparkling lights must have authoritative opinions on the merits of various movie stars? "Nah, they're all alike," says fair-minded Frank; but he rather favors Cary Grant.

With no immediate draft worries, Frank intends to make sound engineering his field. And in view of the above, it sounds like pretty sound judgment. For success seems to be a "Abbott" of his.

DANIEL DALINA has a plenteous supply of qualifications — even alliteration — which make his an acceptable bid for fame.

This South and West Philadelphia electrical engineer graduates in June, at the tender age of 20, after a life of highly concentrated and widely varying activities.

The extent of his intramural career alone would set him apart from the common herd; but when you add to this the fact of his curriculum—mirabile dictu, voila, auf Wiedersehen!—the man's a marvel!

The infancy of Dalina's career—and, with poetic license, of Dalina too — was spent at West Philadelphia High School. There he played three years of basketball, but had a promising track future blighted by appendicitis. Year-book and commencement work were followed by graduation in February, 1937.

And after entrance hereabouts, the following September, his course resembled very much that of his Fedigan friend and neighbor, Frank Abbott (first column to the left). He too heard "Bryn Mawr, Villanova, Bridgeport, Norristown; Bryn Mawr first stop" daily for over three years. He too played intramural basketball with the Mendel Day-Hops for three years, and then became a member of the championship Fedigan quintet — and a two-year member of the All-Star second team as well.

Phi Kappa Pi's sports chairman and sergeant-at-arms, he played basketball for his fraternity for four years and acted as non-playing captain of a bowling team. Junior and Senior Prom committees, Phi Kappa Pi's Owl Hop and Dinner Dance committees, and the A. I. E. E. have provided further outlets for his energies. And summer work as an auto pilot kept the ball rolling.

Romance? Not much material is available on this topic, except that he has one, that she lives in Philadelphia, that she's a blue-eyed brunette, and that her name is Ann. And that seems to cover the matter sufficiently, don't you think? Then too, possibly to broaden his artistic outlook, possibly to give concrete application to those rather intangible engineering what-nots, a veritable multitude of portraits grace the walls of his and roommate Boguszewski's 326 Fedigan.

After-graduation is still pretty much of a question-mark for this law-abiding draft-dodger. Except, of course, that it will be electrical engineering. But he will shock no one when he makes a big name for himself.

students. Theirs is a provincialism born of inexperience. They will not see that Clyde Griffiths and his Roberta are typical or that Lear is typical. They insist upon regarding them as horrible exceptions to their own comfortable way of living—despite the dreadful evidence to the contrary splashed across the front page of every newspaper. Having no personal contact with the thousands of violent emotions and passions of which the human mind is capable they cannot possibly imagine them. Like the compass needle to the north, they swing always to the belief that life is as it is lived on their little street and town. All else is false; the inventions of men who betray the Muse of Literature for their own profit. To them one can only recommend the example of the White Queen and her five impossible things.

Read Tolerantly

Some writers like the cool and canny Stevenson, the genteel Howells and the ingratiating Barrie are milk for the kitten. Others like the misanthropic Hardy, the morbid Dreiser, or Whitman, the violent egocentric mystic, and more recently O'Neill, Hemmingway and Steinbeck are red meat, bone and marrow for the tiger; fabulous indeed to the boy or girl who thinks Booth Tarkington and Mrs. Porter are just about all right. To change the figure, the former might be called literary calorimeters. Contact with them produces friction and friction produces heat. To the student who reads them and reacts, the little world in which he lives can never again be quite so narrow. He begins, however dimly, to realize what Hamlet meant when he said "There are more things in Heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

In reading, therefore, be tolerant; remember that every book represents an industry, a patience and a sympathy with life that you may lack. In reading, be humble; remember Mark Twain's hill-billy before whom even Shakespeare and Milton bowed down in Heaven. Whether you feel that literature, like the sun-dial, should count only the hours of sunshine or with Menken that all great literature is of its very nature tragic; remember always that no one but the Queen of Hearts, that ignorant and provincial creature, ever insisted that the proper method of procedure was, "Sentence first; verdict afterwards!"

"What did you write about?" asked her companion.

TALLY TALE:

From the South Carolina GAMECOCK comes the following tale with a special "Please Note" to Austin's John "Poliakoff" Meunch.

The other morning Matthew Poliakoff stalked into class and dropped himself into the usual three back seats—one for his head and two for his feet. The class, with Poliakoff present, began. . .

About midway in the hour the professor became irked at Matthew's apathetic disposition toward the class and directed a remark at the reclining—yea, sleeping—Poliakoff. "See here, Mr. Poliakoff, you can't sleep in my class."

Poliakoff dropped his feet to the floor, rubbed his eyes as intelligently as possible, and gave the inquiring prof his stock reply to class questions: "Unprepared, sir. Unprepared."

Still more irritated at the dozing Poliakoff, the prof retorted, "I didn't ask you a question. . .I merely informed you that you couldn't sleep in my class."

Then Poliakoff: "That's right, sir. You talk too loud."

SAD STORY:

Once there was a student who had an atrocious style of handwriting. His worst error was in making "I's" look like "e's". And it came to pass that this scholar was compelled to write his own excuse for an absence, but he was expelled when the note read:

"Please excuse my recent absence from classes. I was out with a coed."

Students Favor Yanks and Reds

WHETHER they think that Detroit's aging infield will fold completely this year or that the internal decay of the Yankees and Indians has finally been overcome, 81% of the students queried in the weekly questioning of 10% of the student body chose New York and Cleveland as their favorites in the American League pennant race.

Answers to the first question, "What team do you think will win the American League pennant this season?" produced the following results:

New York Yankees	41%
Cleveland Indians	40%
Detroit Tigers	9½%
Boston Red Sox	6%
Chicago White Sox	1%
No Opinion	2½%

Student opinion was again fairly constant when the question "What team do you think will win the National League pennant this season?" was asked. The Cincinnati Reds are favored to repeat in the senior circuit, with the colorful Brooklyn Dodgers a close second choice. Voting on this question was more evenly divided, however, even the lowly Bees receiving a first place ballot. Complete tabulation:

Cincinnati Reds	43%
Brooklyn Dodgers	41%
St. Louis Cards	5%
New York Giants	3%
Chicago Cubs	2½%
Pittsburgh Pirates	2%
Boston Bees	1%
No Opinion	2½%

Philadelphia has the rather dubious honor of being the only two-team city in the majors which failed to have either one of its clubs mentioned.

No Pocahontas, But "Johns" And "Smiths" Galore In Student Body

It may be in accordance with Parliamentary Rule to say "The aye's have it," but it isn't Villanovan. Here, the J's have it—the Johns, the Josephs, and, to a lesser degree, the Jameses.

For an arithmetical analysis of the Student Directory reveals that the most common first name borne by Villanova students is John. There are 100 of them.

Joseph comes second with 80 advocates, and William is third most popular, with 69. As your statistician (just stutter — you'll get it) was wending his industrious way from Abbott to Zola, it looked for a time as though the Josephs might take the prize; in fact, they were leading at the first post. But along about the "Mc's," the Johns came into their own, and in the "O's" clinched the matter.

Many Close Finishes

The other "J," James, finished fourth, with 56. The directory contains 42 Roberts, 38 Edwards, 34 Francises (Franks included), 33 Thomases, 25 Georges, 24 Charleses, 19 Anthonys, and 14 Richards.

The contest between the Francises and the Thomases for seventh place, like that between the Georges and the Charleses for ninth place, was decided by a single point. It was thrilling!

And eight students make Smith the commonest last name, too, thus completing the picture of averageness. However, the school is strangely lacking in Joneses, there being only three of that tribe on the campus.

Irish Entries Strong

The Emerald Isle is pretty well represented in the directory: there are 43 "Mc's" and 18 "O's", to say nothing of a few odd "Mac's."

There are six each of Donovans, Kelly and Quinns; the Boyles and the Murphys each have five; and there are four Doughertys. Twenty-odd names have three representatives on the campus, and fifty-seven have two each.

Some more miscellaneous statistics: there are eight "De's" and eight "Di's" listed in the directory. The longest name is Mastrogiovanni (Anthony R., a freshman engineer), containing fourteen letters. Schlotterback is next with twelve, while nine students have eleven letters in their last names.

The shortest are those of three letters—Bee, Hin, Toy, and others.

And after all this, don't let us hear anyone say, "What's in Name. That which we cal [illegible] by any other name. . .

To Discuss Lend-Lease Bill

History Seminar Will Consider Important Act Tomorrow Under Reardon's Direction

Members of the History Seminar will discuss "Practical Problems of the Lend-Lease Bill" under the direction of David N. Reardon, junior commerce student, at their regular weekly meeting tomorrow at 2:15 P. M. in Simpson hall.

Consideration of this topic is intended to illustrate the possible judicial and administrative problems which may arise in the operation of this piece of legislation.

At a meeting held last Wednesday the group discussed the problems involved in the administration and adjudication of the United States anti-trust laws.

The members first investigated the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce as provided in the Constitution. They then proceeded to show how, on this basis, the authority to regulate monopolistic practices was derived by Congress and the courts on the grounds that monopolies, trusts, and combinations tended toward unreasonable restraints of trade.

Anti-trust legislation now existing on the federal statute books, namely, the Sherman Act, the Clayton Act, the Robinson-Patman Act, and the Miller-Tydings Amendment was examined by the seminar in order to trace the gradual abandonment by the United States of the 19th Century theory of "laissez faire," and its replacement by the contemporary policy of a regulated economy.

The members showed strong approval of this change and pointed to the marked improvements in our economic system as proof of its efficacy. A review was made of the recent charge of "unreasonable restraint of trade" made by the government against the American Medical Association in its dispute with the Group Health Association. No decision concerning this controversial issue was reached.

Seminars Tomorrow Will Be All-Request

"Tales From the Vienna Woods" and selections from "H. M. S. Pinafore" will feature the Day-Hop Music Seminar meeting to be held tomorrow at 12:40 P. M. in the Mendel hall Amphitheater.

Increasing popularity of the seminar has led Dr. Edward L. Haenisch to conduct this second all-request program. The Strauss waltz and the Gilbert and Sullivan opera were two of the selections receiving the most requests.

Also included in the program are: "The Dance of the Hours", from Giaconda; Rossini's "Stabat Mater"; "Rites of Spring Selections"; and the "1812 Overture" of Tschaikowsky.

The Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., will present a similar request program for the resident students at 7:30 P. M. in Simpson hall.

At last week's meeting the members enjoyed an unusual presentation of the technical aspect of music and sound, with the aid of an oscillograph, a scientific instrument for the viewing of sound waves.

Delta Pi Epsilon Plans Talk By FHA

Joseph F. Costa, chairman of the speakers committee of Delta Pi Epsilon, announced at a meeting of the commerce fraternity last week that a representative of the Federal Housing Administration will give a talk to the members on Wednesday, March 26, on a topic as yet undisclosed.

On the first Tuesday in April, a representative of the sales department of the Atlantic Refining Company will give a short talk on "Opportunities in a Sales Career." Immediately afterwards, movie shorts of many of last year's outstanding football games will be shown. All students will be invited to attend.

Club Changes Meetings

Members of the Spanish Club voted at a meeting held last Wednesday to change the time of the weekly sessions from Wednesday to Friday at 1:00 P. M.

After a brief discussion of cur- topics pertaining to Spain, the ourned until this Friday.

Two Grads Finish Basic Training

Joseph B. (Ben) Maloney, Villanova class of 1937, and Joseph B. Cristoph, class of 1940, are expected to be graduated from the Air Corps Basic Flying School, Gunter Field, Montgomery, Ala., about March 20. Prior to their arrival at the school, they had been attending the Air Corps Primary Schools at Albany, Ga., and Jackson, Miss., where they obtained 60 hours in the air and made their first military solo flights.

Maloney, who graduated with a B. A. degree, was editor-in-chief of the VILLANOVAN in 1936-'37, and was also a member of the track team. Cristoph received a B. M. E. degree.

Officials of the Basic Flying School stated that the two reported there on Feb. 12, 1941, as members of the class of 41-E which will graduate to the Air Corps Advanced Flying School at Maxwell Field, Ala., about March 20 for the final stage of cadet training. Maloney has indicated his desire to be assigned to bombardment squadrons upon completion of flying cadet training while Cristoph prefers transport squadrons.

Lieut. Colonel Aubrey Hornsby, Air Corps, Commanding Officer of the Basic Flying School, also stated that in addition to the flying course, the cadets must complete courses in airplane and engine operations, radio code, radio communications, military law, military hygiene, and meteorology.

Local A. S. C. E. To Visit Water Company Today

An inspection trip of the Springfield plant of the Philadelphia Suburban Water Co. is to be made this afternoon by the local student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Mr. John A. Oakey, associate professor of engineering and moderator of the group, will accompany them on the trip, which was arranged by John J. Skelly, senior civil engineer and trip chairman of the society.

Arrangements for the trip have been carried on during the last two months, and Skelly has only now been able to schedule the trip at a time suitable to the company and at the same time on a day when the members of the society will be free to go.

AT SCIENCE FORUM

John Capinski, a student of Sacred Heart Parochial School, Norristown, presented a number of imitations to students of the science school at the weekly meeting of the Science Forum held last Thursday.

A. S. M. E. Dines

Twenty-eight Villanova students, members of the A. S. M. E., attended a dinner and technical discussion of the Philadelphia section of that society, held in conjunction with their annual Students' Night.

Mr. E. L. Hopping, chairman of the Students' Relations Committee for the Philadelphia section of the A. S. M. E., addressed the group recently at Villanova and discussed the operations of the Schuylkill plant of the Philadelphia Electric Co., where he is employed as chief mechanical engineer. Later, thirty-five students were guests of Mr. Hopping in an inspection tour of the plant.

Belle Air Editor Invites Submission Of Pictures

Thomas J. Moore, editor-in-chief of the Belle Air, has requested that all students who have taken pictures around the campus and who wish them included in the annual, bring the prints to the Belle Air office, room 15, Mendel hall, any afternoon this week.

The pictures will be examined by Moore and photography editors, William Way and Frank McKay. If selected, they will be printed in the annual.

Galley proofs for the book have been coming from the printers daily and the staff members are busy making identifications and writing captions for the photographs already selected.

"What's New"

Willard C. Brown, illuminating engineer for the General Electric Co., addressed members of the A. I. E. E. on the topic, "What's New in Lighting?" at a technical session held at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia on Monday night, March 10.

Mr. Brown discussed the latest developments in electric discharge tubes, in particular the mercury vapor and fluorescent tubes, and demonstrated the practical applications of the different colors of light obtained by the use of various fluorescent materials.

On Heaviside

Edward Manderfield, sophomore chemical engineer, will address the next meeting of the Mu Alpha Theta Society, to be held March 28, with a descriptive talk on "Heaviside's Operational Calculus." He will also include a brief review of Heaviside's life, character and achievements.

On Friday evening, March 14, Dr. C. G. Schilling of St. Joseph's College addressed a meeting of the Math Club in Mendel hall on the topic of the analytical determination of the equations of pedal curves, a branch of synthetic projective geometry. Several members of the St. Joseph's student body accompanied Dr. Schilling to the discussion, which was more fully explained by the use of illustrative figures.

Research Group To Hear "X-Ray And Biology"

Sante DeSanto, sophomore science student, will deliver a paper at the next meeting of the Research Seminar, Thursday, March 20, at 4:30 P. M. in Simpson hall, on "The X-Ray and Its Applications to the Field of Biological Science."

At a meeting of the seminar held last Thursday, Lester Mann, freshman science man, discussed the "Bubonic Plague," a disease which has baffled medical men for centuries. He cited its ability to spread in a short time as the cause of many epidemics, the best known of which was the one which occurred in London in the nineteenth century, causing the deaths of several hundred thousands.

Chemical Society Views Lead Pipe Manufacture

Thirty members of the Chemical Society, accompanied by assistant professor Francis J. Limacher and instructor James Quagliano, visited the Philadelphia plant of the J. Lewis Co., a subsidiary of the National Lead Co., last Thursday.

The students viewed the manufacture of lead pipe, tubing, solder and babbitt. They also inspected the processes involved in the manufacture of red and white lead; basic paint pigments; litharge, a paint dryer; and linseed oil, the most important paint vehicle.

This plant also produces color pastes, pigments ground in oil used in blending paints and organic and inorganic pigments such as toluidin red and chromate yellows.

ORDER E. P. T. KEYS

Senior members of the Epsilon Phi Theta may order keys this week from James Forkin and Francis Vogel, James Collins, president of the arts fraternity, announced today. Those who order keys will receive them in approximately three weeks.

Library Adds Current Works

Heller E. Rope's biography of Benedict XV, "The Pope of Peace," and Owen Francis Dudley's "Tremaynes and the Masterful Monk" headline the list of new books obtained by the Book Club and the rental collection last week. Other works of a similar nature are "The Benedictines of Caldey," by Anson, and "The Good Pagan's Failure," by Murray.

The fiction list contains a number of currently-popular books, headed by Willa Cather's "Sapphira and the Slave Girl," and Phillip Gibbs' "Sons of Others." "Sons of Others," a story of the present war, contains a masterful description of the evacuation of Dunkirk.

Jean Valtin recounts his adventures as a Communist saboteur in Germany in the current best-seller, "Out of the Night." Another autobiography, but one of a different type of adventure, is Osa Johnson's "I Married Adventure." Harry Stuhldreher presents the life of Knute Rockne in a high-ranking biography and best seller, "Knute Rockne, All-American."

Other new books now in the library are: Federova, N. — "The Family," Harpole, J.—"Behind the Surgeon's Mask," Tickell, J.—"Gentlewomen Aim to Please," Twain, M. — "Mark Twain in Eruption," Warcuse, L. — "Soldier of the Church: the Story of Ignatius Loyola," Ward, L. — "Holding up the Hills."

Werfel, F.—"Embezzled Heaven," De Chambrun, R.—"I Saw France Fall," Keys, F.—"Fielding's Folly," Roberts, K. — "Oliver Wiswell," Bowen, F. J. — "Pioneers of the Faith," Gibbon, J.—"I Gathered No Moss," Sutherland, H.—"Hebridian Journey," Bedoyere, M.—"Christian Crisis."

dents on the methods employed in the administration of defense legislation.

Evening Library Visit

In the evening, following the visit to Congress, the group will travel the Congressional Library, where a number of the documents which have a direct bearing on the subject matter being studied in class will be observed.

Study of the activities of the newly-organized Selective Service Administration is scheduled for Wednesday morning. Immediately after this, Associate Justice Roberts, third ranking member of the Court, will speak to the group. His address will deal chiefly with the work of the Court in exercising its power of judicial review, and will describe the judicial procedure operating in determining decisions.

As the conference with the justice will precede a court session, also to be attended, an opportunity will be afforded to see the practical application of the theories explained.

Arnold to Speak

Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, will discuss anti-trust legislation during the Wednesday afternoon portion of the tour. Later in the day, a meeting of the National Labor Relations Board will be attended. At this meeting, the group will hear a brief talk delivered by one of the Board members.

On Wednesday evening the students will dine with the members of the Villanova Alumni Association's Washington branch. This dinner, an annual feature of the trip, is held in one of the leading hotels of the city; a prominent figure in national politics speaks to the group attending.

Plans for the last day of the trip are not as yet complete. However, the final selection of the places to be visited will include viewings of the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Securities and Exchange Commission. At all of these, the class will either attend regular committee meetings or have a conference with one of the principal men connected with the organization.

As in the past, the group will be accompanied by Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S. A., assistant professor of social sciences.

Righting A Wrong

The $200,000 valuation of the machinery of the plant of Haddon Craftsmen, Inc., made by a student and printed in last week's issue, is incorrect. While no valuation can properly be made by a student, the worth of the plant's equipment is many times that estimate.

Clipper Impressed With Lively Spirit Of Gridiron Squad

New Rule to Aid System; Spring Meetings With Georgetown, N.Y.U., Lehigh Will Test Strength of Cats

By PAUL McCANN

"Maybe we've had a more talented squad in previous Spring football practice sessions, but we've never had a more enthusiastic array than we have this year." So saying, Clipper Smith sounded the note that sets the tempo for the daily sessions at the field house. The candidates for the 1941 varsity have plenty of spirit and to the Clipper and his able assistant, Vince McNally, that's a very good sign.

The Clipper believes that the good old "college try" overcomes any lack in ability and, judging from the satisfied look on his countenance as he surveys the cavortings of the boys at practice, he isn't so sure that the present group is lacking in talent.

Learn New Plays

Handicapped by the limitations of the gym, the squad has confined its activities for the most part to conditioning workouts and the learning of new plays. However, in the many dummy scrimmages to date, the teams have displayed a zeal in their feint tackling and blocking that leaves the coaches waiting impatiently for the ground to clear so that they can take the gridders outdoors where the boys can put their earnest intentions into practice.

According to Clipper, once the teams are able to operate outdoors the old watchword—"knock someone down!"—will again be put into play. This signifies that much stress is to be put on contact work. The Villanova mentors have no intentions that the discrepancies in the line-play of last year's outfit will be emulated this season. The squad seems to share this attitude too. The ardor that they have shown in every daily work-out indicates that they are anxious to atone for the disappointing season of last fall.

In the meantime, awaiting the advent of more favorable weather for outdoor sorties, daily lectures are being offered by Clipper and movies are being shown twice a week to supplement the running of plays at the gym. The lectures are designed to familiarize the players with very phase of the game. The movies are intended for correction of past mistakes and to acquaint the boys with all the systems of offense and defense that they will be up against.

During the course of the current sessions two preliminary examinations will be given and at the end of the Spring season a final exam will be rendered to ascertain the football I. Q. of each candidate. This is a traditional policy followed by Clipper. It was in this way that he developed many of his great quarterbacks in the past. But for this system the great signal-calling of Olivar (who performed in 1937 as one of the greatest tackles in Villanova history) might never been realized.

Movies Shown

Clipper hopes that through the medium of these lectures, movies, and scrimmages he can instill what he calls "electrical alertness" (which has sparked his greatest teams) into the present aggregation. By the electrical alertness is meant that each player as an individual and the team as a unit are on their toes all the while to capitalize on every break and to meet each emergency. This intuitiveness is best realized in Clipper's two pet plays: intercepting passes and running back of punts. Those

A Possible Entry

Hope for a dayhop entry in the Intramural Baseball League has been expressed by an interested group of Commerce and Arts men. The greatest difficulty they face is assembling enough players to form a team that will carry through the entire schedule.

If in the near future they are able to guarantee that they will have a team on the field every week-end they will, in all probability, be admitted to the league.

Any dayhops interested in playing intra-mural baseball are advised to contact Art Connor, Junior Artsman.

Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., made a statement authorizing the group to organize a baseball team.

— And Spring Is Only A Few Days Away

By the looks of things, the boys above aren't having their baseball practice in sunny Florida or in the tropics, they're just outdoors having their pictures taken on a snow-swept diamond. Fielding snowballs in place of baseballs are Tony Calandra, Woody Reitmeier, George Balmore and Bill Howlett, all likely prospects for the team.

FROM the issue last, we carry on our expose concerning "The Philadelphia Scoring" — or where and with whom does the city title belong. We, and, no doubt, you remember the stories carried by the Philadelphia papers a few weeks ago concerning the case of one Mr. Kenney, of St. Joseph's College, vs. Mr. Duzminski, of Villanova College. To clarify, lest you forget, the stories of the Philly papers bear out that Larry Kenney is the new basketball point-king in Quaker City, replacing Duzminski, who previously set the record in the 1937-38 season.

This column would like to refute such stories, not that we wouldn't like to see Larry Kenney get the crown, because in our mind he was beyond doubt the best basketball player that Philadelphia had this past year. It's just a matter of logic and we believe that we are following the right course in claiming that Duzminski did have 296 points that season, instead of the 277 accredited to him by the papers.

A Double Check

We said we would put the check on our figures and thus it was given a double check. Last week we journeyed into the "Philadelphia Inquirer" along with our former Editor Joe Barnes and scanned over the old copies of the paper. One issue, in particular, interested us very much—the issue of March 7, 1938.

The "Philadelphia Inquirer" ran the scoring records of the individual players of the city and listed Duke Duzminski with 278 points in 29 games. As it stands there, Duzminski still tops the scoring field, which is one point more than Kenney amassed this season. This was the final scoring total posted by the "Inquirer" that season but on the next day, March 8, 1938, they ran a story and box-score of Villanova's 30th game—against Albright—in which Duzminski ran a bit wild by scoring six field goals and six fouls for 18 points.

Now, all you mathematical geniuses, add 18 points to 278 points and you get the total of 296 points. Then, we ask you in all fairness, is 296 points more than 277 points? It is — well, then Villanova still holds the Philadelphia scoring record, in the person of Duke Duzminski.

Praise to Flat Feet

All around the big leagues, in Florida, in Texas and California, the "mgrs." are having their headaches, heartaches and sometimes an occasion to smile. Manager Del Baker of the Detroit Tigers must be praising "Allah" or giving thanks to Mr. "Hammering" Hank Greenberg's flat feet, which kept him from the draft. For those feet are worth exactly $50,000 to Mr. Greenberg, last year's outstanding player in the American League.

The tale of Mr. Greenberg is an occasion to smile, but the antithesis of that circulates up from the South where Mgr. Leo Durocher is having trouble again with that team which will be the other half of the "subway series"—the 5 and 10 cent games,—the Dodgers. The reason? — well, Van Lingle Mungo, who's been coming along for so many years is in trouble again. But that happens every year. Personally, we think it's a lot of publicity.

All this talk of baseball leads us down into our own training camp at the gym. At the moment, the weather doesn't promise any tanning and the countenance of Doc Jacobs is not so pleasing. So, Mr.

Baseball Team Still Weatherbound As Vermont Opening Game Nears

Pitchers Rounding Into Shape But Rest of Squad Hampered by Lack of Batting Practice; Jacobs Holds Saturday Sessions and Hopes Initial Outdoor Drill Can Be Held Soon

By JACK COLEMAN

Due to the inclement weather conditions during the past few weeks, the varsity baseball candidates have been forced to remain indoors. This inability to practice on the diamond has cut their training down to merely putting their arms, legs, and wind in shape.

Last week "Doc" Jacobs started to feel a little uneasy because he was faced with the fact that his first game, with a very tough Vermont University club, was only a little more than three weeks away. To remedy this he started to work on the keystone combination of Woody Reitmier and Tony Calandra. Every day "Doc" has had them practice their footwork and throws, which are so necessary in having a coordinating pair "down the middle".

Pitchers In Shape

The pitchers are rounding into fine shape which seems to be the only bright side of the spring campaign thus far. Connie O'Leary reported late due to a sickness in the family, but he has shown in the two weeks he has been around that he can again be counted upon to pitch as he did in his sop and junior years. Connie Nicholas has been rounding into the shape that has won for him so many ball games in the past, and Bill Howlett, the third pitcher left from last year's starting four, has been coming along just as fast as have O'Leary and Nicholas. Sophomore Billy Woods has shown an assortment of some very fast stuff and appears ready to go.

Forced to cram in as much work as possible because of the shortage of time, "Doc" inaugurated Saturday sessions last week. These will continue till a little after the start of the regular season.

As soon as the snow melts and the ground dries up a bit, Coach Jacobs will take his charges outside for their initial workout. These exercises will consist mainly of inter-squad games. Games of this type will be played every day till the season opens.

The idea of such tussles is to determine the batting ability of the men. So far every candidate is a first stringer but their bats will go a long way to insure the position for them.

Mahan Shows How

Artie Mahan, ex-Villanovan en route south to the training camp of Little Rock in the American Association, spent last week on the campus working out with the squad. The major part of his time was spent in teaching Thoma, Spector, and Johnny Donaghue some tricks of the game around first base.

This season's clash with Duke will be a battle between two teams recognized as the best in college circles. Jack Coombs, star ex-moundsman for Connie Mack's Athletics, has developed many major leaguers during his tenure as coach of the Blue Devils. Billy Werber, ex-Mackman, and now third baseman for the World Champion Cincinnati Reds, Lovell

Kelley Places 2nd In Annapolis Meet

Captain Walter Kelley wearing the Blue and White of Villanova finished second in the 50 yard freestyle for the second straight year in the Fourth Annual Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Championships held at the Naval Academy this past week-end. Kelley also placed fifth in the finals of the 100 yard freestyle.

The other Wildcat entry, breaststroker Frank Desmond, failed to qualify in his heat although he swam a good race. He went out ahead in his race and held the lead for the first hundred yards, really pouring it on. But the competition was too keen and he was forced to drop back. The final was won by the Princeton captain, Ned Parke in 2:28.8 seconds.

Completely dominating the meet were the Yale natators who won eight out of the eleven events. However, Kelley had his share of the glory. He was barely touched

Dr. Drenick Tells Of Daring Flight Across Alps; Owes Liberty To Skis

By SAM CANNING

Dr. Rudolph Drenick, was born and raised in Vienna, Austria which is surrounded by the famed Vienna Woods that lead to the equally famous Alpine mountains.

Naturally, while growing up under the watchful eye of the snow-capped Alps, skiing was bred right into his blood. In Austria when one reaches the eighth grade he is admitted into the skiing class. From the eighth grade up through high school all the students are taught to ski as an extra-curricular activity. Everyone goes out to ski, both teachers and students, and the little red school house is closed up. Rudy thus began his first lessons in skiing and became so proficient at it that after three years he was employed as a teacher.

Loved Skiing

As a boy, Rudy was always impressed with the beautiful landscape of the great white mountains. He wanted to be a part of this; to climb high and be right in the midst of the mountain, and ski to his heart's content. So he took up high mountain skiing.

Together with eight or ten of his friends he would often rent a shepherds' hut, located 7000 or 8000 feet up a mountain and live there for a week or so, doing nothing but skiing all day, exploring the vast country for miles around and drinking in the unsurpassed beauty of the landscape. But the trips h

Casper Appointed Head Grid Coach At R. C. High School In Philadelphia

Former Star of Wildcat Elevens Expects to Start Spring Practice Soon

Tom Casper, last year's Wildcat 150 pound coach, was named head football coach at Roman Catholic High School in Philadelphia, according to Father Joseph Dougherty, athletic director of the Broad and Vine Institute.

While a great boost for Casper, the appointment will be a serious blow to the Blue and White lightweights, as Casper was the first man ever to really put the 150's in the consistent win column.

Casper who graduated from Villanova in 1940, was one of Clipper Smith's mainstays at guard. Tom starred at that position for the Wildcats in his junior and senior years, but was held back at the end of his last year with a leg injury.

After graduation, Tom accepted the coaching spot in track at the Cahillite school, and just recently joined the faculty as a physical education instructor.

Built Up 150's

Comparatively new in the coaching field, Casper has made quite a name for himself at this early date. Tommy was held in high esteem by Clipper Smith and it was chiefly because of this that he was given charge of the 150 pound team last season. Up until that time the lightweights averaged about one win a season or maybe their best would be a tie. This was sort of a tough spot to try out his coaching ability, but he came through and gave the Wildcats the finest season they ever experienced since their entrance into the league.

After losing their first two games, his men, finally grasping his style, blasted their way to four consecutive victories and finished up in second place. In fact it was their win over a favored Yale team that gave Penn a tie for first with the Elis.

Casper, who will have only a few veterans from last year's squad intends to get an early start and begin spring practice in the next week or so.

familiar with Villanova football of two and more years ago will remember that when the Wildcats intercepted a pass (which was quite often) it meant curtains for the opposition.

Greater deception than ever before will be employed in the Villanova offense next season. The new rule legalizing hand-to-hand forward passing will be taken advantage of to the fullest extent. This new legislation should prove to be a great boon to the intricate reverse plays which call for exceptional ball-handling.

Some of the magic in the wizardry of the Smith system will be on exhibition in the practice games against other colleges next month. It is not yet definite but there is a possibility that Lehigh, F. and M, NYU, and Georgetown may be met in these pre-season engagements.

Cahillite Casper

The stories in the papers the other day concerning Tom Casper's appointment to Roman Catholic High as new grid mentor, came as a surprise and yet a shock to us. Our congratulations go to Tom, the man with that duo-personality on his new job, but then we begin to bemoan the fact that Villanova will be minus a coach for the 150-lb. team.

Last year Casper really put the lightweights back up the ladder, instead of the doormat with some real production. In his first year and for our first year we won four games from Cornell, Lafayette, Rutgers and Yale. The latter team was the winner of the league and their only game was lost to Villanova. Therefore, we'll be watching for Casper and his Cahillites.

Wildcat Court Aces Given Distinction By Philly Scribes

As is the usual custom at this time of the year, an All-Philadelphia basketball team has been chosen by leading Philadelphia sports writers and three members of the Villanova varsity have received recognition from the scribes for their activities on the court.

While no Wildcat player was inserted in the first team line-up, the writers did manage to find places for one Villanova star on the second team and two on the third team. Paul Nugent, diminutive co-captain of the 'Cats, received the nod for one of the forward positions on the second team, and Art Spector and Billy Woods were placed at center and forward in the third string line-up.

Nugent, who wound up his college career this year, was nosed out of a first team slot by Angelo Musi of Temple and Charlie McGlone from LaSalle.

Spector, Wildcat sophomore sensation, ran up against stiff opposition for the center berth. Larry Kenney, undoubtedly Philadelphia's outstanding player, was named center and captain of the first team, and Norm Butz, St. Joseph's ace center, was placed on the second team.

Chuck Yund, the other half of the Villanova Co-captain duet, seems to have been overlooked in the selections. Chuck played good consistent ball all season for the Cats.

The fact that Villanova did not play any games in Convention Hall undoubtedly had some influence on the choices of the scribes. By playing one or two games a week at the Hall, the Temple, LaSalle, and St. Joseph's basketeers fell under the eyes of the sports writers more often than did the Villanova players.

Baseball

"Chubby" Dean, pitcher for the Philadelphia Athletics, Wayne Ambler formerly of the A's, Eric Tipton of Toronto in the International League, and Ace Parker, who dropped baseball in favor of football, are a few of Coach Coombs' more brilliant products.

Meet Fordham

Another clash of the "little giants" will be the one between Fordham and Villanova. The Wildcats will be out to atone for the only defeat that they suffered last year. The New England trip, classified by the ballplayers as the high light of the season will be taken from May 9th to the 13th. Williams, Providence and Boston College will afford the competition as in the past.

Four New York City clubs will be met this year. Three of them, St. John's of Brooklyn, C. C. N. Y., and Fordham will be played up in Gotham town while Manhattan is scheduled for the Main Line campus. Temple, the arch rival, will be played on a home and home basis.

Tenative arrangements have been made for a freshman schedule although nothing has been definitely settled.

Runners Close Indoor Track Season With Fair Showing In Catholic U. Meet

Wildcat trackmen closed their indoor season in the Catholic University meet at Washington last Monday night. Rubbing elbows with some of the best runners in college ranks, "Jumbo" Elliot's runners showed form that promises results in the future.

Running on a brand new track in the Washington Ice Arena, the Blue and White mile quartet finished third to Maryland and Catholic University. The winning time was 3:23. This time sets a new record for the event.

Bud Jones finished second in the high jump. He cleared 6 feet, but missed out on 6' 1" which won the event.

Running on the mile quartet were the same men who ran throughout the year, but their customary order was changed. Harry Keefrider led off, with Bill Hooper and Bill Carey following and Johnny DiCarlo anchoring.

In the freshmen 1200-yard relay, the Widlcat frosh looked strong and promising in finishing second to Georgetown's undefeated yearlings. Running on the frosh relay team were George Guida, "Dixie" Dunbar, Bob O'Sullivan and Ed Manning in that order.

In the 50-yard dash and in the hurdles the Wildcats failed to place. Johnny DiCarlo, running in the Abbey invitation, looked very good in his heat, but due to his customary bad start, finished fourth in a very close finish.

One picked Garrett, one Kelley, and one Schofield of Army who placed third. Garrett received most second place choices and on this basis was made the winner. The time of the event was 23.9 seconds.

Walt won his first heat in 24.4 to qualify for the semi-finals. In his semi-final heat he was clocked in 23.9 beating out Schofield and Hank Steingass of Loyola who also qualified.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

NOW that the Boston College coaching job has been filled, maybe the rumor-mongers will allow Clipper Smith to remain on the Main Line campus in phantasy as well as in fact. Every time an important coaching job is open, the wags start mentioning Clipper for the position. It is a fine compliment to the ability of our coach but it keeps one on edge wondering if he still is our coach. Anyway we are safe now until the usual firing and hiring starts all over again at the end of next season.

Dick Gray, star of the Villanova varsity quintet, was the recipient of a handsome trophy for being voted the outstanding player in the National A. A. U. basketball tournament recently held in Trenton, N. J., Dick's home town. Playing in only one game, because his team was defeated in its first contest, Dick was chosen for the award over players who took part in three and four games, so it can readily be seen that Dick had to play an exceptionally outstanding game in order to win the trophy. Tom Harford, member of Coach Al Severance's squad, and Dan Keating, Intramural star were members of Gray's team in the tournament.

Clipper Smith has received an invitation to participate in a post-season football game next fall with the University of San Francisco. The proposed contest would be played on December 6th and would be an ideal addition to the Wildcat eight game grid schedule which calls for the last game of the year to be played on November 22nd. Officials of the California school estimate that attendance at a game between the 'Cats and the Dons would at least hit the 30,000 mark. Clipper is in favor of the contest and the players would undoubtedly welcome a jaunt to the land of sunshine and movie stars, so we can see no reason why this intersectional clash should not come about.

The intramural baseball teams of the various resident halls will sport new uniforms this year—that is to say they are new to the intramural league. The suits have been acquired from the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Eastern Shore League, and, although they have been used by the major and minor leaguers, they should prove a big improvement over the uniforms worn by the hall teams during the past few years.

Pre-season dope has Fedigan Hall marked down in the books as odds-on favorites to cop the intramural baseball crown. The Gigoloes lured Steve Aisenbrey, the leading hurler of the league last year, away from Austin Hall and this leaves Fr. McKee's team without a hurler of any note. As usual the two freshmen halls are unknown quantities and little can be learned about their chances until after they engage in their first tussle.

their hardships and exciting experiences as well as their pleasures.

One of the most difficult tasks was climbing up on skis, 7000 or 8000 feet to the hut with a heavy load on his back. At first mention, one would think it quite impossible to climb that high on skis. To most of us, being able to slide along smoothly on a pair without getting them crossed and tangled up is quite an accomplishment. To climb 8000 feet seems incredible but it is accomplished by attaching seal skin to the bottom of the skis with the fur against the snow. This affords the grip which enables you to climb. Simple, isn't it?

Testing Endurance

Another phase which proves one a man, is to endure the extreme coldness, the blizzards and the hazards of glaciers and avalanches. On different occasions Dr. Drenick has had his feet, hands, nose and ears frozen to say nothing of hitting a tree while traveling about forty miles an hour. This little incident resulted in two broken ribs and a concussion of the brain. On such an occasion a rude toboggan is made out of skis and the injured person is towed down the mountain to safety. A rope is attached to the front of the improvised carrier and one person leads the way while two others with ropes on the back of the toboggan hold it back and thus the mountain ambulance is brought down carefully and safely.

Rudy also took up downhill racing.. This is conducted in a manner different than expected. You race against time — not opponents. And the fastest time wins. One contestant is started down the treacherous trail every minute and he takes his own chances and makes his own breaks. Although "Doc" never won one of these races, he did very well and got a great deal of thrill and pleasure from skimming over the icy trail, with a crisp wind dashing his face at the speed of sixty miles an hour.

Tale of Escape

All this leads to the thrilling tale of his trip across the Austrian border into Yugoslavia. Both Rudy and his brother had American Visas which gave them permission to come to America. But due to the strained political conditions of Austria because of the outbreak of war and also of the fact that both he and his brother were both to be drafted very shortly, they knew it would be quite impossible to get out of the country. So they obtained permits to go on a skiing trip to Yugoslavia.

Still fearing the border inspectors, because it would look quite suspicious to be going on a skiing trip with passports and boat tickets to America in their possession, they decided to cross the border on skis at night. They left at seven o'clock on the night that the Germans marched into Prague. Much to their surprise they failed to encounter the expected and feared border patrol, for the patrol, like everyone else in the country, were probably glued to their radios listening to the reports of the dramatic occupation of Prague. Perhaps it had been just pure luck that they didn't encounter them. At any rate the travelers didn't stop to find out where the patrol was, they just kept on going and didn't bother looking back.

Almost Froze

The climb to the pass was about 3600 feet and was very slow due to darkness. They went through the pass and slipped into a small ravine on the other side of the mountain at three o'clock in the morning. It was decided to wait here till morning and pass the Yugoslavian customs inspectors at that time to eliminate any undue suspicion. This was one of the biggest hardships of the trip being that they had to keep moving around constantly to keep from freezing.

Finally the time was opportune and they approached the Yugoslavian customs inspectors and were admitted into the country to ski. This was rather ironic and Rudy knew it would be a long, long time before he would ski again in Austria or Yugoslavia.

Now the most difficult feature of the trip to America was over. From Yugoslavia he traveled by train through Italy, France and Switzerland. Then by boat to the U. S. and it was on April 20, 1939 at eight o'clock in the morning that he first laid eyes on the Statue of Liberty and it would be safe to say that it was all due to a pair of skis.

DOWN THE ALLEYS

Another leg of the hard fought bowling league has been completed. The results show the Pioneers and Hildez teams fighting for first place as they down top-ranking teams in League "B."

Two of Saturday's most interesting games were the Pioneer-Stars and Hildez-S. B. Hams matches. All four teams are leading League "B," which meant hard fought contests were due. The expectations were fulfilled and the Hildez and Pioneers came out on top.

The Pioneers caught the Stars napping as they bounced off with the first two games. But with grim determination the Stars fought their way back to capture the final contest. Dolan, with his 164, was high man for the Pioneers, while Donovan took the honors for the Stars with a neat 166.

Hams Handicapped

While the Stars and Pioneers were battling on the new alleys, the S. B. Hams tumbled before a fighting Hildez quintet. The S. B. Hams, handicapped by the absence of two players, put up a gallant but losing battle. The second game was so close that only eight pins separated the two final scores. However the Hildez team wasn't to be beaten and hence walked off with three more games. Melley's 146 was the Hams' best, and Roth was high toppler for Hildez with a striking 184.

The Plumbers, battling a weaker Sparks team, added three games to their win column. Although the Plumbers seemed to have the upper hand the Sparks could never be counted out. Schultes led the plumbers with a 135, while Pullen totaled a 122 high for the Sparks.

Softball League Gets Under Way

With the arrival of daylight saving time next month, the Intramural softball league will get under way. As in the past this campus sport has shown its drawing power over the other Intramural games and this year should prove no exception.

The league will be divided into two sections with a play-off between the winners of each division. With this new division many more students will be able to participate and develop a greater interest in the sport. The one league will be composed of resident students while the other will be made up of four teams from the C. & F. fraternity and the same amount from the Engineering frat. The teams from the C. & F. will represent each class while the Engineers will be represented by the chemical, electrical, civil, and mechanical sections.

Night Games

The fraternity teams will have to make up their own schedule of games most of which will probably be played in the afternoon. The resident league will play two games every night after chapel until each team has met three times.

One of the outstanding stars of last year's games was the fireball artist from Austin hall, Bob Boudon, who pitches in an industrial league during the summer. Other key men returning are "Duke" King, Dan Keating, and Ed D'Iapolito of Austin hall, and John Cerulo and "Jarrin Jim" Forkin of Fedigan.

A Sunday feature of the Intramural program will be the baseball league and the games of that league will be played in the morning and afternoon. During the next week the schedules for each league will be released.

Views On Track

By BILL CAREY

Now that the indoor season has come to a close, Jumbo Elliot has given his charges a two week vacation, and it's a well earned rest. Day after day the trackmen had to go out on that board track behind the stadium and brave the wintry blasts that would make Siberia look like Palm Beach at the height of its social season. To top that, the runners occasionally had to shovel the drifts of snow off the runway before they took their workouts.

But that is all behind the boys now, and Elliott has plans for one of the biggest spring seasons in years. Back in Jumbo's days when he was busy setting records, world's records included, the Wildcats had plenty of competition to face each spring, but for some reason or other this took very much of a fadeout.

Meet Temple

Now once again the silken clad Wildcats will bid for national recognition. With a potential schedule of at least half a dozen dual meets and three open carnivals, the men will get a chance to display their ability and make it count. One of the highlights of the season will be the meet with the Cherry and White of Temple. This meet will mark a renewal of the feud that ended in 1935. Back in '35 Temple won the meet while Jumbo Elliott and Eulace Peacock of Temple had a two man field day.

The official opening of the season has not yet been announced but it will probably start around the first of April. It will carry through the scholastic year and close up in the last week of June in the National A. A. U. meet at Philadelphia.

This A. A. U. affair will be the largest meet in the world this year and will bring teams and individuals from far and wide. The Junior Nationals will be held on the day preceding the Seniors' carnival. Maybe this will turn out to be the shot in the arm that untrack-minded Philly needs. If the people concerned put this weekend of track and field over, the Quaker City will open up and sponsor a few more big meets.

At present, mentor Elliott's big worry is the lack of candidates. The men he has are going great. He has first place winners in the running events, but no one to back them up with those second and third places that mean so much in open and dual meets. But worse than this there are practically no field men. There are two good men in the high jump and javelin throw, with Bud Jones in the former, while Pete Yankauskas takes care of the spear in top notch fashion. But where are the pole vaulters, discus men, and shot putters? Maybe the hairs in Mr. Elliott's head would decide to stay around just a little longer, if some of the Villanova Tarzans would take their exercise in the stadium during the track season.

Can't Have A Play Without A Set

In various poses of activity are these members of the stage crew engaged in constructing the set for the forthcoming Belle Masque production, "Margin for Error": stage manager Bob Dooley, l., lining up a board for future use; Logan Phillips, c., extracting nails with a mean-looking tool; and Johnny Burke, r., making sawdust.

Saws, Hammers, Lathe Help Stage Workers Whistle While They Work

By DAN HALEY, JR.

The scene is set, the musicians have tuned their instruments and now Maestro Dooley steps out from the footlights to conduct the Belle Masque sextet in a unique arrangement of "The Anvil Chorus." With the first wave of his baton, the spirited group commences with lathes buzzing, hammers banging, and brushes flying.

Such pantomime and harshness of sound requires investigation, so we clear away the stage props and the sawdust and examine these fugitives from a boiler factory. "Leopold" Dooley inaugurates his third season with the "symphony," enhancing his reputation as pantomime conductor deluxe. Farachi and Mason are responsible for the solid tone emanating from the lathe. When these boys get a certain type of lumber, things really hum.

As to the percussion section, the instruments are hammers and axes and their wielders are "Krupa" Forkin and "McKinley" McGovern. Special coloring effects are obtained by "Rembrandt" Burke and "Van Dyke" Phillips.

The object of this feverish activity is the construction of Herr Baumer's library for Belle Masque's presentation of "Margin for Error." The set will include a bust of Hitler, a divan, a few end-tables, and several bookcases. The first-named will be the result of Bob Dooley's artistic chiseling—in contradistinction to any other type of chiseling that comes to mind.

Evidently imbued with the "hurryup" ideals of defense industries, the stage crew has been diligently engaged in the faithful reproduction of the German consul's library. And come April 24, the fruits of their labor will be evident to the eye rather than to the ear.

Guild Prepares For Annual Party

Preparations for their Ninth Annual Card Party and Dance have occupied the last few meetings of the Augustinian Seminary Guild. The annual affair, given by the Augustinians of Villanova, will be held at the college Field House on Tuesday evening, April 22, when an evening of card games and dancing will take place.

Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, O. S. A., moderator of the Guild, has announced the names of the priests placed in charge of the various committees running the affair.

The ticket committee is directed by Rev. Laurence J. Conneen, O. S. A., and Rev. Thomas F. Gilligan, O. S. A., while Rev. James A. Donnellon, O. S. A., and Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., head the chance-books group.

Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A., Rev. John E. Bresnahan, O. S. A., and Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., head the committee on programs and advertising.

Publicity is directed by Rev. Edward M. Dwyer, O. S. A., Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S. A., and Rev. John J. McShea, O. S. A. In charge of patrons and patronesses are Rev. John J. Anderson, O. S .A., Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O. S. A., and Rev. Francis X. Boyle, O. S. A.

Refreshments are the charge of Rev. Robert P. Russell, O. S. A., and Rev. James S. Reilly, O. S. A. The music committee is headed by Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., while Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, O. S. A., heads the group in charge of special features.

Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., and Rev. Francis W. Ludwig, O. S. A., are in charge of the ushering group. Rev. Charles J. McFadden, O. S. A., and Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, O. S. A., are in charge of the prize committee.

Sons of Erin Rush Dame Spring As They Blossom Forth In Vernal Hues

By JOHN P. FULLAM

It's always unpleasant to disillusion people, particularly when the object of the illusion contains nothing more harmful than romanticism. However, this is an age of machines, of electricity, of progress—and of cold, hard facts.

Every patriotic son of Erin remembers "The Wearing of the Green," at least when March 17 rolls around:

Saint Patrick's Day no more
we'll keep,
His color can't be seen:
For there's a bloody law ag'in'
The wearing of the green.

But alas, thou Muse of music, prepare to meet thy doom! Reader mine, it just isn't so.

Plenty o' Proof

—An' if it's proof yuh'll be wantin', sure an' didn't the whole bloomin' place look like a transplanted cow-pasture yesterday? Didn't it look as if the Almighty's whole outdoors had up an' moved in on us? Be off with you, of course it did!

Now just for an instance. I don't know whether you noticed it or not, but I for one was particularly impressed by the fact — uh, ahem, what I mean is, it struck me in the face like the kick of a mule that the yaller shoes them science students is been wearin' was topped by as pretty an assortment of green pants, coats, ties, shirts, handkerchiefs, and decorations as you'd want to see. I was that proud of 'em, begorries, it almost made me change my name.

An' for the first time in many a long month, the slide-rules them engineer-fellers is always carryin' stickin' out of their pockets moved over and made room for handkerchiefs of that glorious color.

An' speakin' of engineers, I remember one time I said to Mike Murphy, he was a card, Mike was—I said to him, "Mike," I said—but maybe we'd best get back where we left off.

The commerce an' finance boys next. Of course, I didn't see much of 'em the short while they was here, but from what I did see, they surprised me the most—chiefly because of their hats. Those hats are long, low, flat things, with a sudden an' unexpected up-turn in the back—sort of as if they'd been sleepin' in 'em—an' green. Yes, green! Oh, some of 'em were pretty sick-lookin' shades of green, but no English propaganda can fool me—I knew they were green, and I told 'em so.

The arts students didn't go to such lengths as that, green ties bein' about their limit. I did see a few green suits an' overcoats, but I hope I'll be forgiven for saying that they had 'em long before March 17.

Even the ice cream in Louie's Pie Shoppe blossomed forth in a beautiful green. An' in the whole school, the green ribbons, the shamrocks, the ties, shirts, handkerchiefs, socks, and cummerbunds were a sight to behold. Now can you misdoubt me? I only wish the good Saint himself could have seen it.

An' for the day, the Jagodzinski's an' the Koslowski's joined the O'Leary's an' the Clancy's to celebrate the festive day in the real Gaelic spirit. Erin go bragh!

Frosh Debaters To Meet North Catholic

Villanova's freshman debating team will engage the debaters of Northeast Catholic High School this Thursday at 3:15 P. M. in a non-decision discussion of the topic, "Resolved: That the powers of the federal government should be increased."

James Connelly and John Deery, both members of the Arts school, will uphold the affirmative for Villanova.

The freshman forensic group met St. Joseph's Prep debaters in a return debate on the same question last Tuesday. Robert Young and Joseph Coll, commercemen, argued the negative, while the Prep was represented by John McKenna and John Atkinson. The debate was also a non-decision one.

Last Tuesday William Walsh and Harvey Satenstein, Villanova freshmen, journeyed to St. Joseph's College for a non-decision debate with their yearling team on the proposition, "Resolved: That the countries of the Western Hemisphere should unite in a permanent union."

McCabe Head Of Mothers Day

Koness, McKay, Hursh, Schaumann, Madison, Connor, Traitz Named to Committee

By GERARD BELZ

Joseph V. McCabe, a junior in the School of Commerce and Finance, has been selected chairman of the Mothers Day activities to be held Monday, May 5, according to an announcement made by William J. Howlett, junior class president, today.

Simultaneously with the chairmanship appointment, Howlett also named seven committeemen to aid the chairman in arranging the Mothers Day program.

The members of the committee are: Francis McKay, Robert Koness, and Robert Hursh, commerce students; Charles Schaumann and John Madison, students in the School of Engineering; and Arthur Connor and James Traitz, students of the arts and science schools respectively.

A traditional part of junior week, Mothers Day gives the students an opportunity to devote one day of their social week to the entertainment of their mothers.

The usual procedure of the day is entertainment, luncheon in the college dining hall, a tour and inspection of the school, and finally Benediction in the college Chapel. Last year's entertainment consisted of a concert given by the symphonic band and glee club, together with a comedy presented by the Spanish students of Villanova and Immaculata colleges.

The newly-appointed chairman of the Day has been an active student in extra-curricular work since his entrance as a freshman. A member of the VILLANOVAN staff, he wrote the column, "College Chatter," in his sophomore year.

As a freshman, McCabe first attracted notice when he was awarded the Murtaugh Medal in the annual oratorical contest. In his sophomore year he served on the Orientation Committee and was chairman of the Sophomore Cotillion.

McCabe is also active in the Choral Society and the Belle Masque dramatic society. As a member of the latter organization he played one of the leading roles in the play, "Room Service," given two years ago.

Frosh Forsenic Group Meets Penn, St. Thomas More, North Catholic This Week

With home-and-home debates against the University of Pennsylvania freshmen, the Villanova Freshman Debating Team will begin the busiest week of the year's schedule.

At 3:15 P. M. today in Simpson hall, Harry Binder and Wilfred Gagen will debate with the Penn representatives on the "Western Hemisphere Alliance" question. At the same time Louis DeSimone and William Walsh will travel to Penn to argue the negative of the "alliance" topic.

On Thursday St. Thomas More High School will be met in Simpson at 3:15 P. M. in a discussion of the same question. John Laffan and Joseph Carbine will take the negative viewpoint for Villanova. Friday, representatives of the freshman debaters will travel to Northeast Catholic High School for a return debate, upholding the negative of the topic, "Resolved: That the powers of the Federal government should be increased."

The freshman forensic group first met North Catholic on March 20 in Simpson hall when James Connelly and Joseph Deery upheld the affirmative of the "increased powers" topic for Villanova.

The four debates of the week will be non-decision ones, as have past freshman debates of the year. The purpose in holding the debates is not to engage in them to win or to lose, but to train freshmen in the art of logical thinking and public speaking. The team is also used as preparation for membership in Beta Bamma, varsity debating society.

Group Leaves For Washington; Will Attend Steel Strike Hearings

Thirty-five students of the American Government classes who left for Washington early this morning will sit in on a discussion of the Bethlehem Steel strike at the session of the National Labor Relations Board on Thursday afternoon.

According to a telegram received last Friday by Dr. Harold F. Hartman, director of the annual Capital trip, the N. L. R. B. meeting which the group will attend will occupy itself with investigation of and possible action on last week's bitter strike engagement in Bethlehem, Pa.

The general purpose of this year's trip, in accordance with the necessity of keeping abreast of the contemporary governmental situation, is the study of governmental processes in conjunction with the national defense program. While in past, and less turbulent, years the classes making the trip made only a general study of the different departments of the national government, this year they will concentrate as much as possible on those activities connected with the defense program.

This morning, shortly after their arrival in Washington, the group will visit the House of Representatives and the Senate. Tonight most of them will tour the Congressional Library.

Tomorrow morning, after a study of the workings of the Selective Service Act, the group will be addressed by two speakers. Justice Owen J. Roberts, third-ranking member of the Supreme Court, will discuss the procedure of the Court prior to the Villanova students' entrance into the Court.

After leaving the Court session, the group will hear Mark Graves, recognized as one of the greatest authorities on tax legislation, speak upon taxes for the present defense program. Graves is the former chairman of the New York State Tax Commission and an adviser to the President on tax legislation.

More Figures Listed

In the afternoon, Assistant Attorney-General Thurman Arnold will describe the anti-trust activities of the government. In the evening, the group will be feted at a dinner given by the Villanova Club of Washington.

Visits to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission will be paid on Thursday morning. Prior to these sessions, Joseph B. Eastman, head of the former, and Charles H. March, chairman of the latter, will speak concerning the methods of procedure of the governmental agencies. After the N. L. R. B. hearing on Thursday afternoon, the group will leave for the college, reaching it late in the evening.

Chi Epsilon Mu to Present 16 With Keys at Annual Banquet Tonight

Chi Epsilon Mu, honorary engineering fraternity, will hold its annual induction banquet at 6:30 P. M. tonight in the Whitehall Apartments and Hotel, on Lancaster Ave. in Haverford.

Several members of the engineering faculty, led by John A. Oakey, moderator of the fraternity, will be present at the dinner to witness the presentation of keys to new members. These initiates are chosen on the dual basis of consistently high scholastic rating and extra-curricular activities; they are awarded keys upon admittance.

Sixteen new members, eight seniors and eight juniors, will join president William Appel, vice-president Raymond Vener, secretary Frank Smith ,and George Haluska, who are the only undergraduate members of the society at the present time.

These students are: seniors, John VanHook, John MacNamara, C. Chester Pullen, John McKimmey, Paul Farnsworth, John Maguire, Joseph Norton and Edward J. Kelly; and juniors: John Kirchner, Nicholas Aceto, Bernard Clarke, Joseph Dorsey, Thomas DeSipin, Vincent Gordon, John Madison, and Robert Ayerle.

All of these students had high ranking on the first-half honor rolls released by the School of Engineering and all are actively engaged in extra-curricular activities.

Oratory Trials Set For April 3

Thursday's Preliminaries Will Be First Step in Competition for Murtaugh Medal

Preliminaries of the annual oratorical contest will be held this Thursday, April 3, under the supervision of Rev. Rob rt M. Sullivan, O. S. A., assistant professor of English.

Open to all students in good standing, the contest provides an opportunity to all devotees of oratory to display their abilities in open competition. The preliminary speeches will be limited to six minutes. Selection of the topic will be left totally to the discretion of the student.

Speeches in the finals will be ten minutes and again the subject will be the choice of the student. The date of the finals has not been determined, but will be sometime after Easter.

A gold medal donated by the Very Rev. Edward J. Murtaugh, O. S. A., will be awarded to the winner of the contest. Last year Joseph M. McNamara, a senior arts student, was the recipient of the medal for his speech on "The Catholic Church in American Democracy."

Presentation of the award will be made at the annual graduation exercises.

All students desirous of entering the contest are required to give their names, together with the title of their speech, to Fr. Sullivan as soon as possible.

Juniors Measured For Blazers Today

Measurements of juniors who desire to purchase Blazers will be taken today in the Mendel hall reception room. A $5.00 deposit will be required at the time of measurement; delivery of the coats is scheduled for the beginning of Junior Week.

The blazer finally chosen is a full-lined cheviot with three-button front and a plain back with a center vent. All coats, the price of which will be $14.75 each, will be white with blue insignia.

Juniors Sign Popular Band Noted For Varying Tempos

Top-Notch Group Plays Both Fast and Sweet, Featuring McKinley on Drums, Slack at Piano; Tickets on Sale This Week

By WARD GUNCHEON

It'll be popular Will Bradley and his orchestra of individual and ensemble stars playing at the Junior Prom on May 9.

Smooth notes of Bradley's trombone, the rhythmic beats of Ray McKinley's drums, vocalizing of beauteous Lynn Gardner and handsome Terry Allen, the rippling fingers of Freddie Slack, and the orchestrations of the famous Bradley "Boogie Woogie" Trio will combine in a smooth style to give a Villanova dance its most outstanding band in many years.

Signed yesterday by dance chairman John Parson after weeks of negotiations, Will Bradley will come here atop the crest of a popularity wave which has placed his band among the top ten orchestras of the country.

Favorite Of Both

A favorite of college dancers, record enthusiasts and night club patrons, he has amazed the profession with his rapid rise to the top since organizing his band shortly over a year ago. Drawing record-breaking crowds wherever he has appeared, Bradley has been able to satisfy the "hep-cat" with his "boogie woogie" orchestrations and the "dreamer' with the offerings of his gold trombone.

Bradley is credited with adapting "boogie woogie", originally created for the piano, to the entire orchestra. Testifying to his success is the nation-wide popularity of his "Beat Me Daddy". On the smooth side, his recordings of "High on a Windy Hill" and "Love of My Life" have equal appeal. Topping the Columbia records best-seller list for nine consecutive weeks, he has within a year chalked up a mark that few bands will ever approach.

Pair Featured

Featured in his fourteen-piece band are Ray McKinley and Freddie Slack. McKinley's ability on the drum has earned him the title of a "drummer's drummer"; he has been pronounced by other band leaders to be the greatest "section man" in the business. The Fort Worth Texan has been with Bradley since he organized the band and previously played with the Dorsey Brothers and on the Bing Crosby radio program.

In a recent poll run by "Down Beat" magazine, the fast-moving fingers of pianist Freddie Slack were voted the third best among dance-band pianists in the country. Best known for his famous "roll 'em" technique on "boggie woogie"

DPE Sponsors Talk, Grid Pictures Today

Under the auspices of Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce school fraternity, Mr. Lewis Stevens, a representative of the sales department of the Atlantic Refining Company, will give a short talk today at 1:00 P. M. on "Opportunities for Salesmen in the Oil Industry."

Immediately after the address, to be given in the C. & F. auditorium, movie shorts of many of last season's outstanding football games will be shown. All students are invited to attend.

George Flannery, president of the fraternity, stated at a meeting last week that the annual dinner will be held on April 23. The dinner committee has been selected and submitted for approval. An order has been placed for the twenty-five senior keys which will be presented at the dinner.

Will Discuss Primitives' Wars

"Peace and War among Primitive Peoples" will be the topic of the symposium to be conducted by the Catholic Anthropological Conference when it meets at Villanova on Easter Tuesday, April 15.

At the annual meeting of the group, whose purpose is to advance anthropological science "through the promotion of anthropological research and publication by Catholic missionaries, specialists and other students and through the promotion of ethnological training among candidates for mission work," addresses will be delivered on peace and war among ancient races dwelling in various parts of the world.

As tentatively arranged, the program of speakers includes Rev. Robert Sullivan, S. J., who will discuss "Indians of Alaska;" Dr. A. I. Hallowell, speaking on "Substitutes for War and Aggression among the Ojibwa;" Fr. Legrain, Assyriologist at the University of Pennsylvania, who will talk on "Specimens from Ur Dating Prior to 3000 B. C.", and Fr. Doherty, who has just returned from the Near East and who will speak on his archaeological finds there.

Mr. Santa Cruz, of the Catholic University of America Anthropological Department, will describe "The Guajira of Colombia, South America."

Msgr. John M. Cooper, executive secretary of the conference who accepted President Stanford's invitation to hold the meeting at Villanova, has been ailing for some time and will be unable to attend the affair.

Attendance at the meeting is expected to include a large proportion of the members now residing in the United States, both clergy and laity, Catholics and non-Catholics. Along with the symposium, problems and progress of the group will be discussed.

Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., will act as Villanova's host on the occasion.

Spring Sidelight

"SELF-LOVE is a due care for one's own happiness and well-being, which is perfectly compatible with justice, generosity, and benevolence towards others. Selfishness is an undue care for one's own comfort or pleasure, regardless of happiness, and often of the rights of others."

These two qualities are opposite in their nature and effect. Self-love is necessary to high endeavor, while selfishness is a limit or boundary to endeavor. High endeavor is the goal of any gentleman, especially a Villanova gentleman. This fact is recognized by all of us, yet in our human ways we sometimes fail to distinguish between the necessary and the undesirable qualities. This is shown by some students' actions toward the benefits offered by the school.

Each hall and the day-hop groups are issued athletic equipment. This includes footballs, basketballs, baseballs, bats—all of which are to be kept in a designated place when not in use. Everyone is eager to take these for use, but few are willing to return them to their respective places. Instead, they are stored in lockers, under beds, or in closets.

Actions like these are downright selfish.

Again, we encounter similar antics in Alumni hall. Here the destruction of equipment, namely, the breaking of nets and lights, is another indication of selfishness in that it renders the gym inadequate for use, which is disregard for others.

Spring is now here with promise of many fine days—days on which the urge to get out and run around will be strong. So let's all be regular by being unselfish, not only toward athletic equipment, but toward all things.

Square That Circle

SINCE 1924 Germany's net payment on account of reparations, according to her own figures, has amounted to $2,350,000,000. But she has borrowed from other countries $3,750,000,000. She has borrowed $1,400,000,000 more than she has paid out on account of reparations. Roughly two-thirds of this came from the United States. The remainder was re- d from Great Britain, France, Holland and other leading countries.

Simply to say that Germany borrowed with one hand and paid reparation with the other, or that for every dollar she borrowed she paid sixty-three cents in reparations and kept thirty-seven, does not tell the whole story. The money had a circular movement. It went one way in Germany, stayed there for ninety days, six months, a year or more to work, and then went out another way, like water turning a mill wheel. It is important to remember this, for it explains many of the incomprehensible events of 1940. The money did not merely come and go; it was detained and put to work.

Germany has increased her power and improved her conditions with creditor's money. She has built and now continues to possess what she built — machines, factories, power plants, bridges, laboratories; all these remain to her even though the money has passed on.

The Allies have failed to keep abreast of Germany in the race for industrial power, control of the sea, export and import trade. The Allies have failed to develop their defenses to match those of Germany, and as a result there is a war raging in Europe.

During these years the United States should have united in spirit and endeavor. It was not done then, but now it must be done. Now the wheels of our industries must do double duty, and the people of the nation must join in true cooperation.

—J. F. B.

All's Well That Ends

NOT SO many months ago we heard a prophetic challenge ring throughout the nation which left few, if any, unmoved in one way or another. This strong declaration, "We'll be in the War by April 1", has not been realized. The reference to this date, however, reminds us that it is April Fool's day, a moment in which childish pranks and silly witticisms predominate.

And yet we do not in any sense call the man who uttered this statement a fool, nor do we admit that the implication borne in these words is in the nature of child's play. Rather, frightening is the allusion to participation in war at any time, and even more terrifying does it become when expressed as the language of the hour.

The lend-lease bill to aid Britain is now law, and as such is recognized by the nation. But consideration of our entrance into the war is quite apart from this piece of legislation. The former makes stipulations for the granting of military supplies to nations fighting against aggressors. The latter would involve the shipment of our countrymen to assist in that conflict. The first is law, the second is not, and there is nothing in the lend-lease statute which would justify the inclusion of "our boys" among the war material transactions.

Nor do we wish that any cause or medium for sending the men of the United States across the seas be instigated or created. If the sympathy of our nation is inclined to rest with the non-belligerent countries, then let it be soothed with the beneficent measures taken thus far—allotments for material aid. Let not hysteria misguide us by advocating that we further augment this assistance with "human flesh and blood".

Had the above prophecy of a wise statesman become reality, the occasion would indeed be appropriate to call us fools. And what would have been true of any rash actions that led us into war by this date will be applicable to any future steps that direct transportation of our troops "over there". These procedures will be condemned as foolish, and later we ourselves shall cry out, "what fools we were."

FACULTY COMMENTS

Down With Defeatism In College Classes

By Dr. McClain

THE greatest obstacle facing a student entering college is the attitude of defeatism which is inculcated into his mind shortly after registration. Listening to the idle vaporings and sage advice of elderly upperclassmen, who have been "through the mill," expounding on the multitudinous pitfalls, devastating examinations and rigorous ordeals offered in the courses presented by Professor Zilch or Doctor Twerp, soon fills the underclassman with a veritable terror. For some inexplicable reason, these elderly exponents of wisdom delight in scaring the living daylights out of their awed and trusting youthful colleagues — and what is the result?

Usually, we find the underclassman entering the classroom or laboratory quaking at the knees and filled with a sense of impending doom. He expects to be "blitzed" at any moment and consigned to the limbo of those who "used to be with us." Either he expects to fail or to be conditioned, or he visualizes himself toiling night after night over stacks of books, striving desperately to ensnare an elusive D. As for an A or B or even a C—he might as well reach for the moon.

"What's the Use?"

He cogitates, "Maybe in some way Twerp will soften a bit, when evaluating my record, and slip me under the wire with a D. Still, those juniors and seniors tell me I'm doomed. What the devil is the use?" And so it goes.

Listen my friend — to these words. You want to become what is commonly called an educated man. Right! Well then, an educated man is a man who learns to approach a situation with an open mind and to evaluate this situation in the light of his own intelligent observation. He should not allow the idle maunderings of ancient upperclassmen to influence his opinion or judgment of any teacher.

Enter with an open, unprejudiced mind and see for yourself. Maybe Twerp is a little austere looking—it might be chronic dyspepsia. Perhaps he is a demon for punctuality—he may have "missed the bus"; or, conceivably, he may work the britches off you. So what? Perhaps Twerp is conscientious and wishes his students to master the subject he teaches. It may be important later in life. Possibly Twerp insists upon his students studying correctly. So what? That's why he is there.

Remember too, Twerp has two arms, two legs, a head, eyes, a brain, a heart (hard, of course—witness the word of your friends). In other words Twerp is human—or reasonably so. He breathes, eats, digests his food (reasonably well) and usually sleeps a little. They say that on rare occasions he may even take his hair down and have a good time. You know—the same way you do. Sometimes he laughs; he may even have a family that he loves. So what is there to be afraid of? Do you think that he wants you wearing out the seat of your pants in his classroom next year? Of course not! His crusty and "funny" jokes wouldn't go across so well with a pair of blase ears present. You might laugh too loud—or too soon. That would slay Twerp—really!

He doesn't want you around. He'll pass you gladly, if you produce—and any reasonably intelligent college student can pass if he tries and doesn't acquire a defeatist complex. Study conscientiously, mind your own business, be eager, work a little harder than necessary —overlearn as they say and it's a breeze. Twerp might even give you a C if you work very, very hard.

Learning too often is onerous and it shouldn't be that way. Learning should be pleasant, because the acquisition of new knowledge and the appreciation of the value of such knowledge can only have one outcome—a desire for more knowledge. When learning is painful and hindered by a sense of defeatism, one cannot possibly attain the success he desires.

Production Means Success

Man, the whole problem is a snap. There isn't a conscientious teacher living who really wants to flunk or condition a student. Why should he? Isn't his success as a teacher determined by what he produces? That's the way the outside world measures success—by results. There are very few teachers who aren't willing to give the breaks to students whom they know are making a sincere effort. Any man who wilfully conditions or fails a student, not measuring up to machine standards, is inflicted with either exalted egoism or mild sadism, or both.

Remember, you're one of the unfinished products on Twerp's assembly line. If he pulls you out of the line it means one of two things. You need a little touching up here and there (re-examination,

DOTS AND DASHES:

The Selective Service Act has quite a few of the collegians worried about having to don the khaki, come July. Consequently, a representative of a rival faction, the Marines, visited the campus last week and successfully induced many of the potential draftees to enlist in this branch of the service which provides a satisfactory loophole in evading the ill-wind. Bill Brown said that it took the doctor an hour to examine "McGuigan" Hursh because of his muscular circumference. . .

Bud Connely's pleasing countenance these days is the result of Margie's recent recovery from the measles, which seems to be a Main Line epidemic. . .Tom Keffer regularly attends the St. Joseph's Hospital dances with Helen, a home-town girl from McSherrytown, Pa.

Dick Gray keeps the telephone in Fedigan hall humming with his extended conversations with Dottie from Rosemont.

Val, capable athletic equipment-room custodian, is quite morose these days. Recently he received his questionnaire; and just when he was contemplating getting married and settling down.

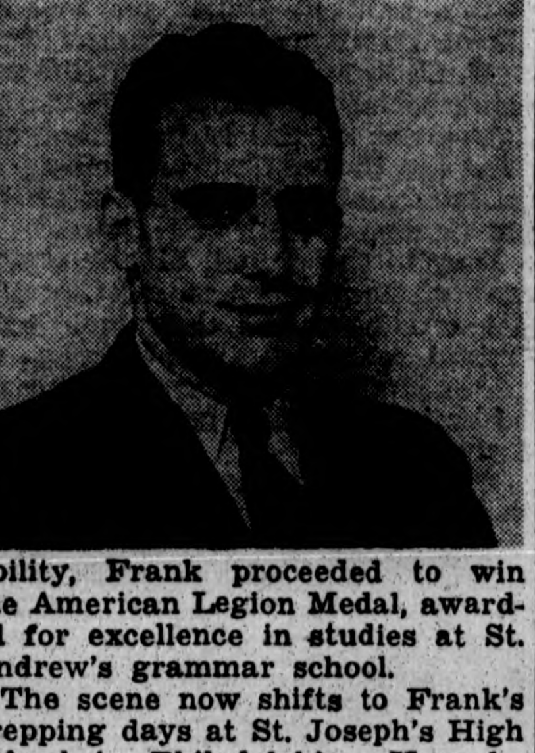
Lombardo Wins Football Praise; Eldracher Has The Drum Major "Craze"

"FRANK LOMBARDO has been awarded the Alumnus Award of a gold watch as the most valuable player on the 150-pound football squad." So runs the notice in a recent issue of the VILLANOVAN, and so runs the story for our first man of the week, a true sportsman.

Accompanied by a few proddings from the Axis Powers (Pholeric, Hooper, and Kelly), your reporter managed to elicit the following information concerning this athlete extraordinary.

Born in Philadelphia on February 20, 1918, he early evidenced a yearning for the wide open spaces and soon persuaded his family to move to that pleasant suburb of Drexel Hill.



In order that he might introduce future displays of his scholastic ability, Frank proceeded to win the American Legion Medal, awarded for excellence in studies at St. Andrew's grammar school.

The scene now shifts to Frank's prepping days at St. Joseph's High School in Philadelphia. Here he gave a real sample of what he could do.

Frank's outstanding performance on St. Joe's varsity football team and his co-captaincy in the senior year won him another distinguishing honor. As a senior, he was selected quarterback of the All-Catholic eleven in Philadelphia.

Not content with athletic achievements, he turned to politics and made an unusual record by being elected persident of his high-school class for four years.

Upon the sage advice of his many friends, Frank, for the first time, made the journey from Drexel Hill to Villanova—a journey he repeats daily as one of the commerce school's most prominent commuters.

Enrolling in the accounting course, Frank took a quick inventory of the 150-pound football squad and decided to continue the football exploits of his high-school days. The value of his three years of service to the lightweight squad was duly recognized by his receiving the previously mentioned Alumnus Award.

Besides playing football, he was a member of the intramural basketball and softball teams.

Seeking other outlets for his abundance of energies, Frank was appointed to the ring committee an helped in the success of this year's dance sponsored by Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce school fraternity.

On the question of feminine acquaintances, Frank admits that Lillian, Betty, and Ruth occupy prominent places on his social calendar.

Somers Point, N. J., finds Mrs. Lombardo's son a frequent visitor during the summer months, as does Ocean City where he has earned quite a reputation as a super-salesman in a grocery store.

This summer employment will undoubtedly smooth the road for Frank in his chosen career as a salesman.

SHOULD you hear a resounding call for "Honeybunch" outside of room 226 Fedigan hall, there is just the slightest possibility that you might recognize the voice of Wayne Hughes paging his roommate, John Gilmore Eldracher.

Substituting the less formal title, "Jack," your reporter contacted this baton-twirling celebrity and undertook the intricate task of unfolding the amazing story of the "Life and Loves of Jack Eldracher."

The town that made George Washington famous, Trenton, and October 1, 1919, are the first of Mr. Eldracher's important historical facts. Jack entered the William Cook School at the ripe old age of six years; Trenton Central was the scene of his varied high school activities.

It was at the latter institution that the Jack Eldracher as we know him began to emerge, for this was the beginning of his musical career. He was a member of his high-school band for three years; residents of Trenton will still recall those musical mysteries of saxophone origin which drifted from the Eldracher home.

Always a good businessman, Jack commercialized his musical efforts and organized an orchestra, playing at numerous dances in Trenton. The aggregation clicked and the members secured a two-months engagement at a Lake George hotel. But the guiding hand of Fate stepped in and beckoned our young man to Villanova. Enrolling in the pre-medical course, Jack made a quick diagnosis of the college band and before long was wielding the drum-major's baton.

Leader of the Villanova College band for three years—it is for this accomplishment that Jack Eldracher is justly famous. His band activities have also won him a much coveted spot as clarinetist in the college dance orchestra, the Villanovans.

Equally adept in the field of sports, Jack played on the intramural baseball and swimming teams for two years. His quest for culture is evidenced by a regular attendance at the Sociology and Music Seminars. These activities are augmented by an active membership in the Holy Name Society.

Transferring his activities from the band to the sand in one easy lesson, Jack is a mainstay of the life-guard patrol at the Sea Girt summer colony.

From what little we could learn from this secretive gentleman and his conferers, only one maiden, named Dorothy Patricia, looms high on his social horizon.

As to the future, Jack, like many other seniors, is in somewhat of a quandary. Though he has received a questionnaire from the draft board, he is optimistically planning to enter Georgetown Medical School upon graduation, hoping that Uncle Sam is wise enough to defer all embryo physicians.

In answer to our question as to the most memorable event in his life, Jack frankly admits that he'll never quite forget the day he dropped his drum-major baton 10 times at the Manhattan game in his sophomore year.

But all Villanovans are equally willing to admit that Jack Eldracher will surely be missed at future football games.

Inside On Girl Question Probed

By EDWARD F. BORDEN

WITH the advent of spring, the fancies of Villanovans, like those of all young men from time immemorial, lightly turn to thoughts of — well, not studies. Hence during the past week, while college professors were testing student academic knowledge via the quarterly exams, another type of information was being brought to light via the student survey; namely, Villanova preferences as to the girls' colleges in the immediate vicinity.

To do this we asked 10% of the students the question, "What is your favorite girls' college in the Villanova vicinity?"

Answers received were:

Immaculata	32%
Rosemont	27%
Chestnut Hill	16%
Bryn Mawr	10%
Other Colleges	3%
No favorite	12%

Immaculatans hold a not-too-substantial lead, being only 5% above their nearest competitor, Rosemont. "Rosanovan Club" members were quite prominent as they represent 27% of the Villanova student body. Chestnut Hill College received an impressive 16%, which is considerable in view of the transportation difficulties confronting prospective "Romeos." Bryn Mawr also figured largely in the poll, showing that all the girls' colleges in the vicinity have substantial followings at Villanova.

Student spending habits were sought and discovered when the question "How much do you spend on your average date?" was asked. Here answers varied from $.75 per outing, as a mean and we stress "mean" low, to $5.50 per outing as the extravagant. The overwhelming majority of Villanova's spenders, however, hover about $2.50 per date, C. & F. boys being slightly larger spenders than average students.

Finally we asked "Do you prefer college girls to non-college girls, or have you no preference?"

Answers received were:

College girls	38%
Non-college girls	39%
No preference	23%

Opinion here is clearly divided between feminine types. Resident students largely preferred the college girls, while non-resident favored the non-college type. A large percentage of students voiced no preference in the matter, indicating that feminine higher education neither attracts nor repels them.

April Fool!

By JOHN P. FULLAM

There follows the story of all that occurred
Exactly two days before April the third.
The scene is our campus; and it's all true, to the letter
(If you believe that one, I'll go you one better):

At 12:30 everyone walked down the hall,
Took one copy of the VILLANOVAN and the Collegiate Digest, and that's all.

Not a student was tardy, and all
acted alive;
And the Bookstore stayed open
'till 2:35.

Down in the Pie Shoppe, each order was filled
In less than ten minutes, and nothing was spilled.

A professor stopped a student who was walking on the lawn,
Asked him the time, and let him pass on.

Another professor stopped another student driving through the campus that day,
Told him his lights were on, turned, and walked away.

A class, whose teacher was nowhere to be seen,
Waited twenty-five minutes, then complained to the Dean.

One senior, when asked where he'd been the last class,
Said, "I just plain cut," and his prof. let it pass.

Not a complaint was audible, not even about
"No towels in the washroom," or
"Why doesn't he let us out?"

But the crowning touch came when, with uncovered head,
A stranger came up to me, bowed low, and said,

"Gosh, what swell poetry!"

Maybe It's You

You see, it MIGHT be the unfinished product and not the inspector that is at fault. Maybe you've had too many bull sessions and not enough book sessions. What you need is a session of good hard work. You know—it's the stuff that makes you sweat. It's good for you. Get a little more blood going through your head.

Do you get the point? Do a little introspection. Look into yourself and your methods. Find out if you're cooperating with Twerp—and above all enter your classes with an open mind. Abandon the defeatist complex. It's poison and you're licked before you enter the ring. You never can tell, Twerp might even pat you on the head and smile, if you work exceptionally hard and ask a semi-intelligent question. The guy might actually show signs of being downright human—even understanding. Get it? Out with defeatism! Enter with an open mind and show real interest and eagerness. You'll get by.

Just think, I am the favorite son.
Soon come exams, and marks are out;

favorites, Slack is also Will Bradley's ace arranger.

Pretty nineteen-year-old Lynn Gardner was a personal discovery of Will Bradley. She was discovered by the young maestro while singing over a small New Jersey radio station and was immediately signed to sing with the Bradley band. Although she has been singing with them for only a few short months, she has gained much praise for her vocal style and personality and has contributed much to this fast-rising band.

Two Male Vocalists

Male vocalist Terry Allen, who has been called a perfect double for movie star Wayne Morris, sang for "Red" Norvo and Larry Clinton before joining the Bradley aggregation. Drummer McKinley also joins in on the vocals and is featured in several of the band's novelty tunes.

Prior to organizing this "band of 1941", Will Bradley played the trombone for the famous jazz band, Milt Shaw's "Detroiters", where he met his featured drummer, Ray McKinley. Entering radio, he played under the baton of Andre Kostelanetz, Nat Shilkret, Raymond Paige and Freddie Rich. He was chosen by Ray Noble to play trombone in Noble's first American orchestra. While he was in Noble's band, Glenn Miller played next to him. Since forming his own band, Bradley has risen to the heights as a trombone player.

Included in the list of novelties presented by the orchestra is the Bradley Trio, composed of Ray McKinley on the drums, "Doc' Goldberg on the bass, and Freddie Slack on the piano. The trio is considered the foremeost band exponent of "boogie woogie" in the musical world.

Will Present Trophy

Bradley, together with model-agency president Walter Thornton, who was judge of the Queen contest, will crown the Prom's first Queen, Gloria Spatola, and make the presentation of the trophies to the six girls in the Queen's court.

Tomorrow evening, at 7:30 P. M., Miss Spatola will be a guest on the "For Men Only Show" of radio station WIP. Tom Rocap, master of ceremonies of the show, will interview her and hear her description of the Prom.

Tickets for the Prom, which will climax a week of junior activities, will go on sale this week at $5.00 a couple; they can be purchased from the Prom committee or from any member of the junior class.

Belle Air Head Still Desires Student Pix

Thomas J. Moore, editor-in-chief of the Belle Air, has reiterated his request that students who have taken pictures about the campus bring them to room 51, Mendel hall, for consideration by the annual's editors for possible publication in the yearbook. Photographs snapped on the engineering societies' various field trips are especially welcome.

Assembly of the book is progressing rapidly, according to Moore. Virtually all photos to be used in the annual will be submitted before the Easter holidays and proofs of the senior section, consisting of seniors' pictures and write-ups, have been received from the printers. Galley proofs for all copy submitted to date have been corrected and returned.

Confronting the editors at present is the problem of writing captions and heads for the material already compiled. The section containing the theme, dedication, and college history remains to be completed.

Combined Bands Present Concert

On Sunday, March 23, Villanova played host in the first annual Immaculata-Villanova Symphonic Concert, held in the college Field House. The performance combined stirring marches with soothing rhapsodies, coupled with a solo given by Molly Brown, a trio, and two quartets which rendered a variety of musical types.

The combined band, under the direction of Rev Ralph Handran O. S. A., gave as its opening selection, "The Ramparts We Watch" by Beecher. Following this, the selections of "The Narrator" and "In a Monastery Garden" were interpreted for the enjoyment of music-minded Immaculatans and Villanovans and a substantial number of guests. The first half of the evening performance closed with renditions of "La Cumparsita"; the ever popular Victor Herbert melodies; and the military march, "On the Mall".

After the intermission, the concert atmosphere was regained with selections from "The Merry Widow", followed by "Whistling Joe", offered by the quintet composed of Kathleen Hasenplue, flutist; Mark Fitzgerald, Robert Schlisler, Catherine Seesholtz, and Dorothy McCandless, clarinetists.

Novelty was inserted in the program via "Circus Parade" the orchestration of which suggested various components of a circus, complete with calliope and brass band.

The last group to perform was a trio composed of Jeannette Crisconi, clarinetist; Molly Brown, oboeist; and Kathleen Hasenplue, flutist; who interpreted musically the immortal "Scherzo" of Tustin.

The closing portion of the concert featured the currently popular "Amapola", which was played by the entire ensemble. Following "Amapola", the march "American Patrol" was given and the evening's performance closed with the National Anthem.

Seminar Hears Opinions

Members of the History Seminar expressed a wide variety of views as to the type and amount of aid which the United States should extend to besieged Britain under the Lend-Lease program at the last meeting of the organization.

The opinion was expressed that aid to Britain, coupled with the probable convoying by United States warships, places this country on the very brink of an open declaration of war.

Fifteen Villanova Alumni Teach In Engineering Defense Training School

By THOMAS A. SHALLOW

Under the supervision of J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the engineering school, fifteen members of the alumni, who have graduated from the college during the past twenty years, have received appointments as members of the faculty of the Engineering Defense Training School.

In addition to these recently-appointed instructors, the faculty is augmented by the regular engineering professors.

Anthony J. Cirrito, '39, who formerly served as president of Phi Kappa Pi, and Raymond E. MacGregor, '39, who was president of the A. S. M. E., are both instructors at the Villanova branch of the school.

Dr. Francis W. Panepinto, '25, who was granted one of Villanova's first degrees in chemical engineering, is teaching at both Villanova and North Catholic. Dr. Panepinto taught at Villanova from 1931 to 1936 and now teaches at Rosemont College and practices as a consulting engineer.

At North Catholic

Teaching at North Catholic are Joseph C. Greyson, '32, who was a laboratory instructor here in 1933; Clement C. Busenkill, '32; James P. McGrenra, '34; John J. Meyer, '30; and Martin W. Scanlan, '38.

John J. Gallen, ,27, who joined the regular faculty this year, is also in instructor at North Catholic, as is Victor L. Barr, '34, of the American Roller Bearing Co., who has conducted many experiments in the college's materials testing laboratory in the last few years.

At the West Catholic branch, Howard J. Avil, '29, is an instructor, as are Harry S. Bueche, '22, Emil Amelotti, and William Hagerty, of the regular faculty. Martin Redden is also an instructor there.

Faculty Teachers

Among those teaching night classes at Villanova are Paetrus F. Banmiller, college Registrar, who graduated as B. S. in E. E. in 1935. William J. Barber, Dr. Rudolf F. Drenick, and James Quagliano, of the engineering faculty, are also instructors.

John A. Oakey, associate professor of engineering, is teaching hydraulics at the Cooper Hatch High School in Camden. Charles A. Meyer, '33, and F. J. Heinze are also teaching there.

Dean Morehouse has charge of the schools run under Villanova's direction, which are sponsored by the U. S. Office of Education; besides, he supervises the courses in mechanical drawing.

Dr. Edward L. Haenisch of the chemistry department, is in charge of the courses in elementary engineering physics and mathematics.

Misericordiae Tops Beta Gamma; New York Trip Planned

Representatives of Beta Gamma lost a close decision to Misericordiae College of Dallas, Pa., in a debate held at Dallas on Friday, March 21. Thomas J. Moore, Thomas J. DeSipin, and John P. Fullam, representing Villanova, upheld the affirmative of the topic "Resolved: That the United States should form an immediate untion with the British Commonwealth of Nations."

Despite the defeat, Moore, chairman of the society, stated that the debaters have had their most successful season in years because of added student interest and increased activity on the part of the society itself.

Plans are under way for a trip to New York on April 29 to close the present season. New Rochelle College will be met on this junket and it is hoped that Mt. St. Vincent's College and Manhattan College can also be engaged.

"Work Of Curies"

At the meeting of the Kappa Gamma Sigma Society this Thursday at 12:45 P. M., a paper will be presented by Joseph M. Gambescia, president of the society, on "The Contributions of the Curies." It will include, in brief, the lives of these two outstanding scientists and their work on the radioactive elements.

By BOB FUNABASHI, Sports Editor

BELOW the Mason-Dixon line, the bruised and battered warriors who are part of the nation's pigskin parade from such colleges as North Carolina, Alabama, and Auburn have already stuffed their soiled jerseys and mudded cleats into their lockers and are about set to welcome spring in the sunny south. Such gridmen who have completed their training which started a few months ago, in fact, right after the close of the season, can now go junior promming or attend the May queen festivities, minus the tape, sore-spotted proboscises and all that comes from football. It means that Spring down south marks the end of a very trying season. We should call it Winter practice, though.

Villanova, meanwhile, has its men of the turf entrenched in a "knock someone down" process which will be continued for another several weeks. This process is a new bit of phraseology adopted or originated by Clipper Smith which bears results to no end. —And have they been knocked down! The boys are really blocking like old in their scrimmage and it's really a wonder they get up.

Applying an Adage

To Spring practice you could apply an adage that comes down from way back—"the survival of the fittest." When you have a group of sixty men battling for 11 positions it will be a tight squeeze with competition unlimited. It seems more like a battle of individuals than one solid team working together. Showmanship will be one of the keynotes of the session with the frosh battling their older mates to catch the observing eyes of Clipper and Vince. It's only natural that animosity exists between the two but by the time the finish comes about, each will have a friendlier spirit towards the other and by Fall they'll be brothers under the skin with the line of distinction blotted out.

Come next Monday afternoon and another diamond season will find its way into the Main Line, with Vermont, a team of unknown strength making their appearance again an also unknown Villanova tribe.

Strength Unknown

It's not that we don't know our own team but we can't see at the moment what the true strength of the team is. At the outset of practice everything always looks rosy for the Villanova nine and the opinion here and there is that we'll go merrily on our way to an undefeated season.

By Monday eve, it would be safe to make a prediction about how good the Wildcats are this year, and we think that Doc Jacobs feels the same way. Just how good his pitchers and batters are, will be evidenced. We might be taking the pessimistic side but somebody must be inclined to take a minority voice.

The status of Connie O'Leary remains to be seen. His arm has been ailing since the beginning of the year and it might be that success or failure could lie in his reach. The other senior twirler, Connie Nicholas, hasn't been breaking them over enough in practice like last season but still has his arm in good shape.

Bill Howlett as a sophomore last year was very effective and took a leading part in chalking up wins. He also contributed a few shutouts which should add to his favor. But that does not necessarily mean that Bill will win four games this year without losing. Injuries might come about which would completely reverse the picture.

Woods Effective

About the most effective pitcher in recent practices has been Bill Woods, a sophomore, who is being counted on by the good doctor to start. Woods has a tricky delivery, a good change of pace ball, and most important has speed. Chapler is an uncertainty on the mound and time will only tell how good he is.

Taking up the batters and fielders we find that only actual game practice will prove their worth. When the chips are down and if

Jacobsmen Face Vermont

Wildcats Open 75th Season Opposing New Englanders

Varsity Nine Set For Inaugural Next Monday; Coach Jacobs Uncertain About Starting Line-up; Pitcher O'Leary's Status Uncertain

TEAM STILL NEEDS PLENTY OF HUSTLE

The spirit of opening day will resound here at Villanova on next Monday afternoon when Doc Jacobs' varsity nine, after culminating several intensifying weeks of practice, will throw all their power against Vermont University to inaugurate the Wildcats 75th year of baseball.

In addition it will be the ninth year of coaching for mentor Jacobs and apparently will be another successful one. Leastways from the appearance of the team as a whole in the past week's practice, Villanova should do things this year on the diamond.

Vermont will come to Villanova for the first relations between the two schools and will have a good club to set up against the Jacobsmen. They will have a slight edge because of their actual game experience of a few weeks. This stop-off is the finish of a southern tour for the New Englanders and their pitchers have had enough mound duty to give them more stability.

Fielding Is Spotty

After weeks of indoor practice, Doc Jacobs was able to take his charges out on the diamond in preparation for the coming campaign. The weatherman finally sent his "sun" down Villanova way to clear up a great deal of the remaining snow and ice and to do his best to dry up the ball field.

As yet Doc is not yet satisfied with the tenative lineup that he made earlier in the year. The boys have not shown enough of the same spirit that was displayed by last year's State Champions.

Fielding on the part of some of the players has not come up to the standards that were expected of them, while their batting is better but still a little spotty. On the whole the men who are expected to fill important positions have not come up to their advance billings.

Hank Thoma, although not overlooked at the start, has come out of obscurity in surprising fashion. John Donaghue may have to be shifted back to the outfield to make room for Hank on first base. Due to his sensational work in center field and at the plate, George Balmore has just about nailed down his post for another year.

Infield Is Set

The regular infield has been functioning fairly well considering the amount of time that they have been working together. Tony Calandra has been filling Mike Lazorchak's shoes quite capably in addition to his good work with the stick. Mike Kupecki has been giving Roy Simonsen a whale of a battle in right field. Dan Casey has been a little slow in fielding but

COACH DOC JACOBS

Kolenda Gets Post At Catholic High

Following Tom Casper's appointment to head football coach at Roman Catholic High in Philadelphia, the authorities of the school last week made another football appointment to a Villanova player. Leonard Kolenda, varsity end on Clipper Smith's eleven for the past three years and a member of the class of 1941, will assume the position of assistant grid coach at Roman Catholic to work along with Casper, another Villanovan.

At present Lindy is devoting his time to practice teaching at Bridgeport High School as part of his college training and after the term expires he will begin his role of coach for the spring practice session.

Kolenda, who hails from Nanticoke, Pa., played on the varsity for three years, although he was injured in his junior year. He was known as the touchdown twin of Nick Basca and was usually on the receiving end of the touchdown passes. He will receive his diploma in June after majoring in History in the School of Education.

Scholastic Meet

Another Villanova Interscholastic Track and Field meet will be sponsored by the Athletic Department this year with some 100 teams competing for honors. The meet is usually on the second or third Saturday in May

Grid Charges Labor Hard In Workouts

Smith Keeps Team in Shape With Contact Work and Scrimmages

By PAUL McCANN

Who's tough? The energetic physical specimens working out daily down at the stadium have the answer to that. The enthusiastic chant of the gridders at the spring football practice sessions resounds as the boys respond to the respected Wildcat watchword, "Knock someone down."

Taking advantage of the added brisk weather of late, Coach Clipper Smith has been engaging his charges in plenty of contact work, including frequent scrimmages. The boys are applying themselves industriously signifying that they realize they have their work cut out for them as they look ahead to the very trying schedule of next fall.

The competition for positions is one of the most interesting angles of the daily scrimmages. The veterans will have to hustle to protect their posts from the threat of a bumper crop of freshmen prospects. Talent is well-distributed throughout the squad and that adds to the intensity of the spring baths.

Search for Weakness

Much of the attention this past week has been focused on the guards and tackles. At first glance those positions appear to be weak spots but the Clipper in his search for immovable combinations and irresistable offensive double-team blockers has some potential stalwarts vieing for the positions.

Among the tackles who are impressive in the early sorties are: Nieman, Kasky, McCarthy, Mike O'Connor, Bob O'Connor, Vogt, Kozlowski, Maginn and Harkins.

Golfers Post Low Scores Despite Soggy Course; Idle Netmen Add George Washington To Schedule

Jim Brown and Bob De Persio Shoot 83 on Wet Greens; Randolph and Walsh Follow With 84

Last week the first 18 holes of the spring tourney were run off. Leading the field with two good scores of 83 were Jimmy Brown and Bob DePersio. One stroke off the pace came Captain Cliff Randolph and Freshman Bill Walsh.

For this time of the year these scores evidence good form. At this point the fairways are still soggy and it is not possible to hit as long a ball as it will be later on when the thaw is over. At Frazer, site of this year's home matches, the greens have not as yet been rolled which makes putting nearly on impossibility. When the course is in shape these scores should drop well into the seventies.

Other scores posted last week were: Dave Morse, 86; Bob Casey and Frank Abbott evened up with 89; Ernie Klappenback 90, and Jim Henry 97. With eighteen holes behind them, the first eighteen since last fall, these men can be looked to for much better scores in the second round to be run off this week.

Uncrowned Champs

Final standings of the college teams in the Philadelphia area give Villanova's basketeers the best record of the 11 teams, with a total of 13 wins and 3 defeats. By this count Villanova is the unofficial champion of the court game in Philadelphia.

St. Joseph's had the second best record with 12 wins out of 18 games.

"Grudge" Battle

Tomorrow afternoon senior commerce student, Dangerous Don McGurk, will personally lead a hardball team against Stan Stress's Wildcats in the year's outstanding "grudge" battle. The McGurk outfit has been pointing all year long for the Stress team and the game will be a toss-up.

College authorities plan to add an extra addition of police to keep the game under control. Meanwhile "Speed-Ball" Stress, former football man is rapidly rounding into shape and probably will take over the mound duties. He has issued a notice that all who oppose him had better watch out—his specialty is the "bean ball".

Weather Still Hampers Tennis Team; Courts To Be Conditioned This Week in Preparation for Play-Offs

George Washington University, a new face to Villanova netmen, has been added to the tennis schedule which now makes a 10 game schedule for Captain Edward Banagan and his squad.

Still thwarted by the inconsistent weather which keeps them idle, the racqueteers will only have a few weeks to prepare for the opening match which pits them against Manhattan College. The New York team will come to Villanova on the 18th of April.

This week the courts will be worked on and should be in shape by the week-end. If so Banagan and his team will take to the courts for some hurried practice sessions. With six home contests slated for the 'Cats, it will prove to their advantage if they can get in the necessary play-offs which will determine what players will occupy positions.

Battle for Posts

As it looks now there are a dozen able men who will be competing for positions on the team. For the present, it is too early to estimate

Severance Attends Coaches Meeting

Villanova was represented at the recent Basketball Coaches Conference held at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York by its mentor, Al Severance. The meeting lasted for two days, coming to a close last Tuesday night.

The meeting was held with the purpose of seeing what noteworthy recommendations for changes in the rules and regulations of basketball were forthcoming from those in attendance. This convention had not the power to alter the rules, but merely to suggest approved changes to the Committee on Rules.

Discussion centered chiefly around the standardizing of courts, backboards, the ball, and equipment. It is hoped that in the not-too-distant future there will be a regulation ball and just one type of backboard. Recently there have been tried out several types of backboards with the result that some teams find themselves at a disadvantage because of an unfamiliar style on backboard. It is not improbable that a rule regulating the size of the court will be adopted but this does infer that all floors, not conforming to the required measurements, would be discarded. However, all new courts would have to be built to meet the required specifications.

Whether or not the modern game of basketball was too fast for the average player was debated by the coaches. The consensus of opinion was that with a good supply of reserves a team can play the without fear of tiring out.

Austin Hands Fedigan 4-0 Shutout In I-M League Opener; Alumni Wins

Blues' Lukacs Allows Only Six Hits, Coughlin Hits Home Run Off Aisenbrey; Mendel Defeated 14-6 in Extra-Inning Battle; Freshman Scott Wins for Greenies

The Intramural baseball league began Sunday with two exciting games; one of them being a shutout. The nine from Austin produced a surprising victory over the Gigoloes from Fedigan by a 4-0 count, while in the afternoon contest the Greenies of Alumni gained a hard-earned victory over Mendel by a score of 14-6 in an extra-inning battle.

With Alex Luckas doing a beautiful job of hurling and backed by the timely hits in the first inning of the game, the Austin aggregation turned in an easy victory.

Dave Daly, the first man up singled, to be followed by Kirk Holland who drove him in on a long double. George Fitzgerald was the next man up and he sacrificed while Hugh Matthews went to first on a single. Then to climax the first frame Joe Coughlin hit a homerun deep into center field which produced all of Austin's runs. Another Austin threat came in the last frame when Holland and Matthews both reached first base, but were left stranded.

First Double Play

Fedigans only scoring threat came in the second inning when Fred Clark singled, followed by Harry Dunkley, who also turned in a very fine exhibition behind the plate. The Fediganites were tied with their opponents as far as hits were concerned.

The Austin men set up a very unique double play which started when John Cerulo hit to Holland at third, who threw to Coughlin and relayed it to first to make the first double killing of the season.

In the afternoon contest, which proved to be a slugfest, the Mendel team went down in defeat. The game went into an extra inning when Molmar walked, stole second, and scored on Al Scott's hit. In the last frame the Greenies came back to hit the ball with the power of professionals. The pitching was done for Alumni by Bill Swan, who allowed but six hits; he was relieved by Scott, in the 5th inning, who not only pitched but also had a hand in the hitting. The pitching assignment for Mendel was handled by Red Connolly and Ken Byrne who also had a great deal on the ball.

There were more strike-outs in the afternoon game, but also a few more errors.

who is the best player and only actual scrimmage can tell. Banagan will undoubtedly play one of the singles matches as will George McFadden, last year's I-M king. There will be a battle for other positions by Art Somers, Chet Pajolek, Dave Daly, Gerry Belz, John Grey and Duke King.

The team has been weakened considerably by the graduation of several prominent players last year and the gap will be hard to bear. Also the team is minus a coach and will have to work along on experience. Perhaps it may be strengthened by some new discoveries in the next few weeks.

Three new opponents are found on the schedule this season, George Washington, Rider College and Catholic University.

his bat has a great deal of potential power.

Every day during the past few weeks the regulars have been playing the Yannigans with the results being about even due to the fact that the experienced pitchers have been working on the hill for the second team.

With the first game only a week away, Doc has been crowding practice sessions into every inch of time available, Saturdays and Sundays included. Last Sunday a practice game was played with Penn Athletic Club.

Due to the cool weather, still in evidence around these parts, the pitchers have not opened up because of the possibility of sore arms. Connie O'Leary has his old zip back but is still favoring his arm due to soreness sustained last summer. Connie Nicholas has been taking it easy while Bill Woods has also been holding back. Frank Chaplar has been working against the varsity every day, showing inexperience but good possibilities.

Cochrane while attending Villanova played varsity tackle for three years under the tutelage of former Coach Harry Struldreher and Clipper Smith and because of his outstanding play during the season of '39 was given the honor of captaincy by his mates. Bill attended Lincoln High and now returns to his Alma Mater to carry on as the new coach.

they can produce all will be well. The reserve strength is not particularly strong this season and if any mishaps occur it might be detrimental.

What Doc Jacobs has to consider as an important problem is the strength of the schedule. No doubt this crop of opponents this year is not a task to be slighted but each team is capable of defeating us. Well, we've taken the bad side, and the good side we'll leave to you to ponder over.

Penn A. C. Beaten In Practice Tilt

Pitchers Nicholas, Chaplar, and Woods go Seven Innings; Cold Cancels Second Game on Sunday

In a warm-up tilt before the season's first game with Vermont, Coach Doc Jacobs squad engaged Penn A. C. on Sunday afternoon and defeated the Philadelphians, 2-1, in a seven-inning affair. Cold weather forced the postponement of the second scheduled game with the Norristown L. A. M.

The Wildcats had three pitchers serving them up against Penn A. C. and allowed them no more than 5 hits. Connie Nicholas started for the 'Cats and pitched shut-out ball until his retirement in the third inning. His curve ball was rather effective against the clubsmen despite the cold day.

Following Nicholas, Frank Chaplar, sophomore twirler, pitched good ball but gave up the only run, that being a home run by pitcher Robertson of Penn A. C. Chaplar evidenced some speed in his delivery and displayed an assortment of everything.

The third moundsman for Villanova was Bill Woods, another sophomore who will see plenty of duty this year. Woods pitched hitless ball in his one inning and gave proof that he has a fast ball by striking out two batsmen on Penn A. C.

Villanova wasted no time in scoring and pushed over a run in the second frame. After Donoghue had gotten on by an error, Balmore drove him home with a timely single. The other score came in the fifth inning when Tony Calandra drove a home run over the left field fence.

Hard Schedule And Skeleton Team Turn Elliott Into A "Gloomy Gus"

Track Squad Has Only a Few Weeks Before Swarthmore Meet; Penn Relays Later This Month

With one of the biggest and strongest schedules in years facing the track team, mentor Jumbo Elliott has turned into a "gloomy Gus," with practically a skeleton team to work on. Thus Elliott is doing no predicting for a successful season.

All the men Jumbo has to work with will be in the running events, while the field events are practically bare with just a couple of candidates. The Wildcats have a few promising runners that will help Elliott to lose his blues but the events aren't filled deep enough. In the middle distances the Blue and White look fairly good, but the regular distance runs have no one to take charge.

Two old opponents came back in the form of Swarthmore and Temple. The Wildcats will open up in a practice meet with the Garnet on the 16th of April, while relations with the Cherry and White trackmen will be renewed up in the Owl stadium on May 14. Ben Ogden, the Owl coach, is reported to have one of the best all around squads since Eulace Peacock's time.

Two Newcomers

Newcomers on the list are Albright and Catholic U. The Lions from Reading will come down to the Blue stadium on May 3 and the Cardinals will act as host to the Wildcats in Washington April 21. The Diplomats from Franklin and Marshall will occupy the same place they held on last year's schedule when the silken clad Villanovans go up to Lancaster May 17.

In the open meets this season the trackmen will be kept busy as they will run in the traditional Penn Relays at Philadelphia, the Middle Atlantics at Allentown, and the National A. A. U. meet which this year will be run off at Penn's Franklin Field. There is a possibility that a few Villanova entries will run in the National Collegiates in California.

THE SCHEDULE

APRIL
16—Swarthmore at Swarthmore.
21—Catholic U. at Washington.
25-26—Penn Relays at Philadelphia.
MAY
3—Albright at Home.
14—Temple at Temple.
17—Franklin and Marshall at Lancaster.
30—Open.
JUNE
12—Middle A. A. U. at Allentown.
18-19—National Collegiates at California.
25-26—National A. A. U. at Philadelphia.

Dual Selection

Frank Baumholtz who was recently acclaimed as the outstanding player of the completed Writers Invitation Tournament held in Madison Square Garden also had the honor of being selected upon the all-opponent basketball team last year by the Villanova players.

Baumholtz was chosen unanimously at the end of last season because of his stellar performance against the 'Cats when he tallied 18 points. Although his team was beaten 49-44 by Villanova, he was a standout. Last year he was a Junior along with the majority of the members of the team and this season the team was invited to Madison Square Garden but were beaten in the finals by L. I. U.

Kelley Wins Place In National Swim

Gains 4th in 50-Yd. Freestyle at Michigan; Competed Against the Country's Best Mermen

The greatest swimmer ever to represent Villanova in the tiled tank, Captain Walter Kelley, closed his collegiate swimming career brilliantly last Friday and Saturday in the National Intercollegiate Swimming Championships held at East Lansing, Michigan. Wearing the Blue and White for the last time Kelley finished fourth in the finals of the 50 yard freestyle and qualified for the finals of the 100 yard freestyle.

Charlie Barker of Michigan U. won the 50 in 23 seconds flat, tying the National record for the distance. Prew of Wayne University, Lumsden of Wayne and Kelley finished in that order.

Walt blazed through the qualifying heats, posting times of 23.3 seconds in the first heat and 23.8 seconds in the semi-final race. The former is the best time he ever recorded for the event and is .7 second better than his local pool record. In this heat he fought off Gus Sharemet, Michigan ace. Sharemet made his bid early but Walt caught him in the turn and thrashed ahead.

Wins His Heat

The century sprint featured one of the fastest fields ever to compete in the meet. Walt churned through his heat in 53.1 seconds, beating Bob Schaper of Brown and Tom Sullivan of Princeton. Fitting in with his performance in the 50. This also was the best time he has done for the 100 and is a full .9 seconds better than his pool record on the Main Line.

In the final of this event Kelley swam in a field studded with such stars as Bill Prew the winner, Howie Johnson of Yale the second man, and Barker and Sharemet of Michigan. Although he put his all into his efforts he could not keep up with these speedsters.

Villanova, by having Kelley as her only representative, gave the school the distinction of having the only points amassed in the Philadelphia area.

Softball Team

The Commerce and Finance fraternity, Delta Pi Epsilon, is organizing a softball team under the direction of Don McGurk. McGurk will offer challenges to the teams of the other campus clubs and will attempt to form a league with games scheduled for the afternoon.

D. P. E. Starts Bowling

All C. & F. students are invited to sign up for competition in the newly formed Delta Pi Epsilon bowling league under the direction of Anthony Di Dio. Five men teams are now being organized and when a scheduled number of games have been played the team that has survived an elimination tournament will challenge the champs of the already operative engineers' league to decide who will wear the fraternity league crown.

Aces, T-Dynamics Battle For 'A' Title

As the home stretch looms in sight the league leaders gradually pull away from the other contestants. In league "A" we find the Aces and T-Dynamics battling for supremacy, while the high scoring Pioneers are having little trouble in league "B".

The Aces were able to remain in the race as they downed the Punchies 3 to 0. All three games were close, but the Punchies couldn't collect enough pins to chalk up a win. Bergner turned in two nice games for the Aces, and recorded a high 177, while Saner was the most consistant for the Punchies.

At the same time the T.Dynamics gave the Sparks a white washing to the tune of 3 to 0.

Gridders

Another tackle who looks good is McGee, a converted center.

The guard prospects on the whole are big, hard-charging lads. Among the contenders are Jagoe, Carrao, Hansel, Adams, Simonsen, Puglielli, Dowd, Gildea, and Casale, a converted center. They are all about on a par and it's hard to tell which two are to get the starting call.

Seldom has the center position been as strong as it shapes up at present. Holdover Ed Korisky may get the call but Sam Bray, who was out most of last season with an injury, and Dick Baraldi, who was a bulwark on defense for the freshmen, will press him plenty for the position.

Good Set of Ends

The crop of ends is a promising one. Hank Christman, Steve Pritko, Roy Erickson, Lou De Palo, and Bill Sullivan are in rare form and Bill Prohovich, erstwhile tackle, acts right at home in the end slot.

In the backfield are many candidates of proven ability and many more showing great promise. None of the positions are definite yet but some of the aspirants appear outstanding.

Ben Danik, Joe Behot, Tom Morgan, Fred Kaczinski, and Johnny Dzitko are waging a strong battle for the quarter-backing distinction.

Rosato, Grillo, and Zamlynski are a worthy trio of fullbacks. They seem to fit nicely into the Smith offensive scheme which calls for intricate ball-handling as well as line-bucking ability and they are no slouches at backing-up the line either.

The halfback contingent is strong in numbers and expectations. Eusko, Mosca, Smith, Pezelski, Postus, and Koproski are fleet and versatile. All are fancy runners and there are several capable passers in this group.

Possible Game

The big objective facing the team for the present is the coming practice game with Lehigh, tentatively scheduled for this Saturday.

In view of the fact that the material is so well-balanced, the coaching staff is considering utilizing the alternate team system which has been employed so successfully in by-gone campaigns. If the squad continues to manifest its great ambitions and if the members live up to expectations in responding to the wise tutelage of the Clipper and his worthy assistant, Vince McNally, a very sweet tune may be composed for the lyrics, Swing and Sway the Wildcat way.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

The athletic authorities of Catholic University recently announced that the Washington school had decided to deemphasize football in particular and varsity sports in general in favor of a more elaborate and extensive intramural athletic program.

This announcement was typical of its sort. Every time a college or university inaugurates a program of deemphasis in sports, it seems to have become a prerequisite of this policy to also include, more or less as as substitute, a revitalized intramural program.

If the athletic authorities here at Villanova should ever decide to remove the fangs from the Wildcats so that they can longer chaw opponents, no consolation prize will have to be offered to the students in the form of a bigger and better intramural program, for they already possess the most varied and best program of that type that this department has ever come in contact with.

The ideal athletic setup for any school should embrace both varsity and intramural programs since many students do not possess the ability or time to devote to the varsity teams and without an intramural program these students would be out in the cold as it were.

The Right Setup

Here at Villanova, the intramural sports idea has developed under the able direction and guardianship of Fr. McKee into something that all of the students take an active interest in, even if they cannot participate. The basketball, baseball, and softball leagues, plus the tennis and golf tournaments and the swimming and boxing championships afford an opportunity to every student to take part in a sport in which he excels or at least in which he takes an interest.

The intramural sports in most schools are carried on in a haphazard manner with no definite schedules and no uniforms fo the competing teams, but this is not true here on the Main Line campus. Definite schedules are released before the basketball and baseball leagues get under way and each team from the various dormitories receives uniforms which differentiates them from the other teams in the league. This lends an air of organization and unity which is so necessary for a successful program of this type.

The basketball and baseball leagues, because they extend over a longer period of time, outstrip the other intramural sports in interest and attention. During the season, many a basketball game is played in the Alumni hall gymnasium which, because of the action and spirit displayed, deserves a paying audience.

In the past the intramural sports have been a source of material for the varsity teams. Lloyd Rice, mainstay of last year's varsity basketball team, moved up to that spot from the intramural ranks. Also, Joe Malone, member of Doc Jacobs' mound staff this year, first engaged in the diamond sport on the campus as a pitcher for the Alumni Hall entry in the intramural baseball league.

Doc Jacobs' varsity nine started off the season on the right foot last Sunday when they defeated the Penn A. C. club by the count of 2 to 1. The wintry blasts proved too much for both the players and the umpires and the game was called at the end of the fifth inning. In the Pennac lineup at shortstop was Buzz Howlett, former Villanova baseball and football star. Buzz was the recipient of friendly jeers from the partisan onlookers when he allowed a ground ball to pass through his legs unmolested for a glaring error.

Tony Calandra, sophomore aspirant for the shortstop job on this year's Wildcat team, was very impressive in his debut as a varsity performer. He handled himself like a veteran afield and also hit a home-run clear over the distant left field fence.

P. K. P. Elections Due Thursday

Engineering Frat Holds Them at Early Date to Avoid Confusion

Phi Kappa Pi, Villanova engineering fraternity, will hold its annual election of officers this Thursday from 1:00 to 2:30 P. M., in room 215, Mendel hall, according to an announcement made yesterday by Raymond Vener, president of the group, at a business meeting of the fraternity.

Those who have been nominated, and approved by the proper authorities, for the office of president, are: George Gabuzda, Vincent Gordon, Thomas Hushen, and Bernard Kelly, all members of the junior class.

Herman Behnke, Denis Boyle, Malachy Boyle, James Donnelly, Thomas Muraski, Robert Simpson, and Harry Weber are nominees who have been accepted for the office of vice-president. Robert Ayerle, Joseph Dorsey, John Kirchner, Philip Malarkey, John Regan, and Bruno Talvacchia were nominated for the Student Council post.

The election on Thursday will be under the supervision of the Student Council, because of the large number of officers who are up for re-election. Elections are being held earlier this year than in the past in an attempt to avoid the confusion prevalent at the end of the term.

Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, associate professor of chemistry and chemical engineering, gave a piano recital for fraternity members yesterday during the fourth period in Simpson hall. The program consisted of requests made by the members, and was one of a series of cultural programs arranged by a special committee under the leadership of James Flood.

End Address Series

Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., vice-president of the college, will conclude a series of addresses to the student bodies of the Catholic boys' high schools in the Philadelphia area with talks at Southeast Catholic High School tomorrow and at West Catholic High School on Monday, April 7.

Fr. Albers has already spoken on the theme, "Go to a Catholic College," at St. Thomas More High School, Northeast Catholic High School and Roman Catholic High School.

Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O. S. A., has recently completed a parallel series of talks. Fr. McGuire's last address was made at Harrisburg Catholic High School on March 26. Previously he had spoken at Trenton Catholic High School and Lancaster Catholic High School.

Three Delegates

Frs. Stanford, McQuade, Dr. Hartman to Attend American Academy Convention

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., President, Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O S. A., and Dr. Harold F. Hartman will act as Villanova's delegates to the annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Sciences, which will be held at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, Philadelphia, on April 4 and 5.

Fr. Stanford will attend as the representative of the Association of American Colleges, and Fr. McQuade will represent the American Catholic Sociological Society, as well as Villanova.

This marks the 45th yearly meeting of the Academy, which was organized in 1889 to provide a national forum for the discussion of political and social questions. It does not take sides on controversial matters, but attempts to present accurate information to assist the public in forming intelligent opinions.

Fr. Stanford attended a business meeting of the National Committee of the Conference of Church-Related Colleges held at the Hotel Stevens in Chicago last Saturday.

Chief business transacted by the Committee, of which Fr. Stanford is a member, concerned preparations for the annual meeting of the Conference next January.

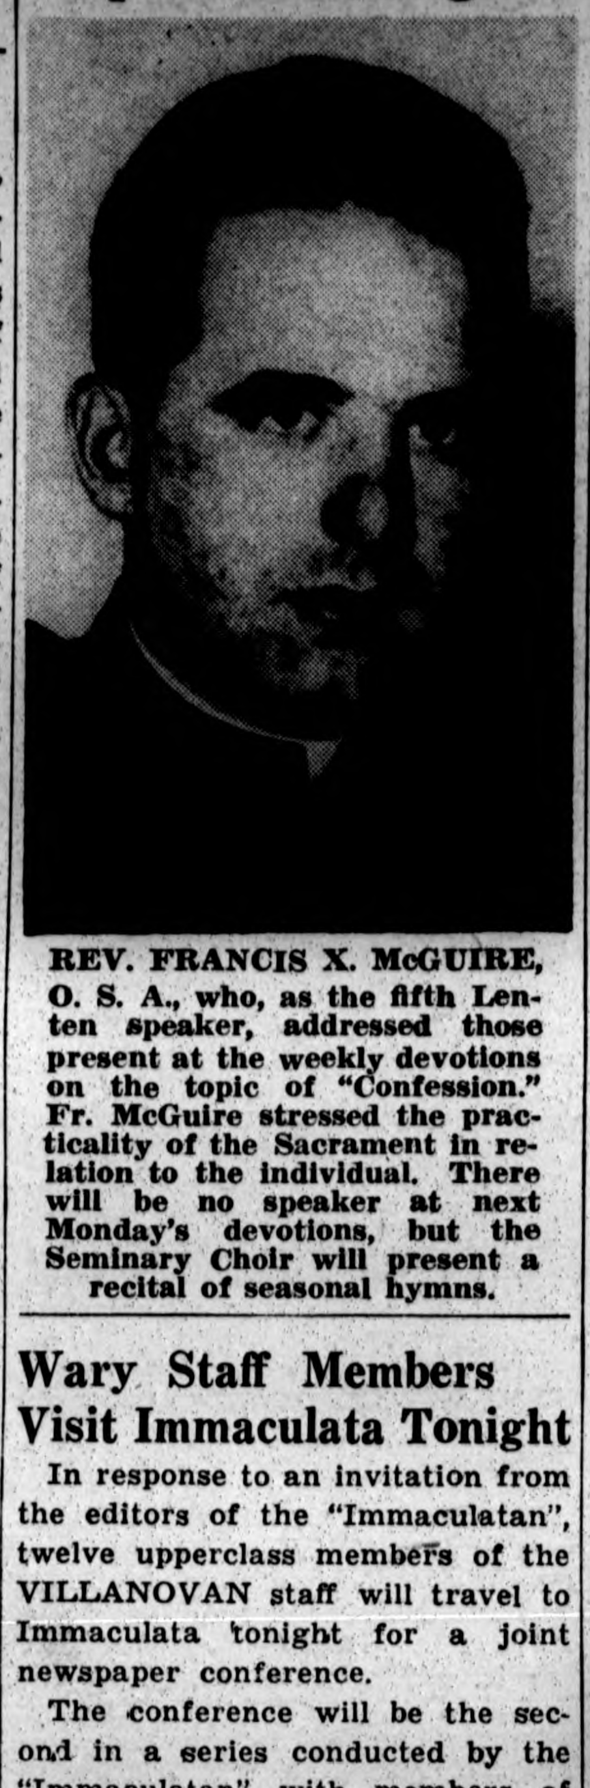
Navy Flying Pictures Will Be Shown Here

Of particular interest to students having a liking for aviation will be an illustrated lecture by Ensign E. Dean Walter, Jr., tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 P. M. in the Mendel Amphitheater.

A member of the Naval Reserve Flight Selection Board, Ensign Walter will present motion pictures and give a short talk on Naval aviation. The picture will center around the actual lives and training of the Air Corps pilots stationed at Pensacola, Florida.

The primary purpose of Walter's visit is to present various information concerning Naval aviation. He will answer any questions regarding how to join the Air Corps, what qualifications are necessary, and of what the training consists. Application blanks will also be obtainable for those contemplating applying for entry.

Spoke Last Night



REV. FRANCIS X. McGUIRE, O. S. A., who, as the fifth Lenten speaker, addressed those present at the weekly devotions on the topic of "Confession." Fr. McGuire stressed the practicality of the Sacrament in relation to the individual. There will be no speaker at next Monday's devotions, but the Seminary Choir will present a recital of seasonal hymns.

Wary Staff Members Visit Immaculata Tonight

In response to an invitation from the editors of the "Immaculatan", twelve upperclass members of the VILLANOVAN staff will travel to Immaculata tonight for a joint newspaper conference.

The conference will be the second in a series conducted by the "Immaculatan" with members of the staffs of neighboring colleges. Its purpose is to constructively criticize the girls' paper. Format, news coverage, features, editorials, columns, and sports will be discussed and improvements suggested. Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the affair.

Those making the trip are wary lest the date be changed without notice as an "April Fool's" trick and plan a fitting reprisal if such is the case.

Business Head

McCabe Will Make "Margin for Error" Subject of Promotional Campaign

Anthony J. Frayne, moderator of Belle Masque, college dramatic society, announced last week the appointment of Joseph McCabe, junior commerce student, to the chairmanship of the business staff of the forthcoming production, "Margin for Error."

Others who will serve on the committee are John Gallagher, David Reardon, James Nunemaker, and Joseph Carbine.

Upon learning of his second recent appointment, McCabe stated that the current production will be the subject of an intensive promotional campaign. He explained that only a part of the potential audience has been reached in previous years; an attempt to remedy this situation will be made by publicizing "Margin for Error" at nearby schools and in Main Line newspapers. Negotiations are also in progress to advertise the show over local radio stations.

Frats Council Topic

Murray P. Zealor, chairman of the Student Council, has called an important meeting of the Council for 1:00 P. M. this Thursday, April 3, in room 110, Mendel hall.

The group will meet to discuss plans for strengthening the various campus fraternities so that such organizations will operate effectively throughout the entire year instead of functioning mainly to prepare for dances. Preparations for the forthcoming Open House will also be up for consideration.

Second Dinner For Class Agents

In conjunction with the Alumni Centennial Drive, the second class agents' dinner will be held in the student dining hall this Saturday evening, April 5. At the meeting which will follow the dinner, agents will give their personal reports on the progress of the drive.

The list of speakers will be substantially the same as that of the first dinner, which was held in the dining hall on Saturday, March 15, with approximately 125 members of the alumni in attendance.

Matthew Lynch will act as toastmaster and will introduce the Very Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, O. S. A., Assistant General of the Augustinian Order of English Speaking Nations; Very Rev. John T. Sheehan, O. S. A., Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Villanova College; Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college;

John P. Keffer, president of the Alumni Association; Dr. Edward Burke, chairman of the Alumni Centennial Fund Executive Board; J. Stanley Smith, Esq.; Martin J. McLaughlin, chairman of the Alumni Committee; Judge Sylvester Sabbatino, and Francis X. Robinson.

Also invited to the affair are the presidents of the local Alumni clubs, members of the Board of Governors, the chairman of the Student Council, the president of the senior class and the editors of the VILLANOVAN and Belle Air.

A CAREER
in Search of Men

Statistics show a decrease among practicing dentists in recent years while the number of professional men in other fields has increased. This can largely be attributed to advanced standards in dental schools.

The Marquette University Dental School is one of the 18 dental schools of the United States whose diplomas are recognized in all of the states.

The close relationship of the Dental and Medical Schools at Marquette University is an advantage to students.

Entrance requirements: Two years in a recognized College of Liberal Arts with satisfactory credits in biology, chemistry, and physics.

For complete information concerning opportunities in dentistry, write to the Secretary, Marquette University Dental School, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Gordon Elected P. K. P. President

Engineering Frat Votes Ayerle to Student Council; Three Run-Offs Today

Vincent J. Gordon, junior engineer, was elected president of Phi Kappa Pi for the scholastic year 1941-42 in their balloting yesterday.

At the voting, a run-off from elections held last week, Robert Ayerle, also a junior engineer, was elected to fill the fraternity's post on Student Council and John Quinn, sophomore, was elected sergeant-at-arms; the other three offices being contested are still unfilled.

Decisive elections for the posts of vice president, secretary, and treasurer will be held today from 12:30 to 1:30 P. M. in room 214, Mendel hall.

Under the system of elections followed by the fraternity, a candidate must receive a majority of the votes to be elected. Consequently, several run-offs are usually necessary. In the voting last week, Gordon and George Gabuzda emerged with the highest totals, but neither had a majority; similarly, Ayerle and John Kirchner led the balloting for the Student Council post.

At the voting yesterday, run-offs were also held for the positions of vice-president, secretary, and treasurer, but again no student gained a majority. Sophomores Herman Behnke and Thomas Muraski received the most votes in the vice-presidential race; Nicholas Aceto and Edmund Hagen juniors, for secretary; and sophomores George Baird and John Sweeney for treassurer.

Since all but two candidates have been eliminated in the voting for these latter three posts, today's voting will complete the fraternity's elections for the year.

Annual To Have Special Section

When the Belle Air appears in the latter part of May, it will contain a new section devoted to approximately 30 outstanding seniors who have typified the ideal of a Villanova man.

The editors of the yearbook are working on this special section to make it an outstanding one of the book. It will present seniors selected for inclusion because of their outstanding extra-curricular and scholastic work or selected because they have put into practice the principles that make a student a desirable one to the school.

Seniors selected will be pictured in typical informal collegiate poses; the caption under the picture of each will give the reason why he was selected and explain the function he represents.

Besides this feature, the section will also include a picture and text on the President's annual dinner to student leaders, pictures of the scholastic leaders and an obituary of the late James Moran, who would have graduated with the class of '41.

The history of the senior class will be the most lavish ever to appear in the Belle Air. It will combine informal shots, reminders of the four years, with the usual class groups, officers, and accompanying text, in a space of about ten pages.

Oh, Happy Day

Dates set by the administration for the Easter vacation are as follows:

The vacation will begin for all students at 12:30 P. M. tomorrow when classes will cease. Resident students must return from the holiday by 8:30 P. M. on Wednesday, April 16; classes will resume for all on Thursday, April 17, with the first morning period scheduled.

Due to the vacation, the VILLANOVAN will not be published next Tuesday; the next issue will be that of Tuesday, April 22.

Name Winners In Oratory Trials

DeSipin, Donovan, McIntyre, McKimmey Triumph in Semi-Final Speech Tests

Thomas J. De Sipin, James F. Donovan, Robert J. McIntyre, and Thomas J. McKimmey were chosen the winners in the semi-finals of the annual oratorical contest held last Thursday in the Mendel hall Amphitheater, Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., assistant professor of English, announced today.

These students thus automatically go into the finals of the contest, which will be held shortly after the Easter vacation.

Departing from the procedure followed in most previous years, the speakers selected their own topics and spoke for six minutes Donovan and McKimmey, both artsmen, chose "The Life of Abraham Lincoln" and "The Life of William Jennings Bryan" as their respective topics.

"The Anglo-American Alliance" was the title of the speech delivered by De sipin, a junior in the engineering school, while McIntyre, a junior commerce man, spoke on "Isolation."

In addition to those already mentioned, the list of speakers included: John P. Fullam, junior education student; Thomas J. Moore, senior education student; Thomas C. Muraski, sophomore engineer, and Murray P. Zealor, a senior in the commerce school.

Rev. Henry A. Caffrey, O. S. A., and Rev. Thomas F. Gilligan, O. S. A., acted as judges in the contest.

The ultimate winner of the contest receives a gold medal presented by the Very Rev. E. J. Murtaugh, O. S. A., to the student attaining the highest degree of perfection in public speaking. This award is made in conjunction with the annual commencement exercises.

Three of the finalists, De Sipin, Donovan, and McIntyre, are active members of Beta Gamma, the senior debating society; the last two have also participated in the productions of Belle Masque, college dramatic society.

Murphy on 'Alumnus' As Associate Editor

Arthur W. Murphy, 40, has been appointed associate editor of the Villanova "Alumnus," Edward L. Jonik, '40, editor-in-chief of the publication, announced Saturday. He completes the editorial board of the alumni magazine, as Merton D. Nason, '34, was previously renamed its sports editor.

Murphy, who is now assistant personnel manager of the United Parcel Service in Philadelphia, and will soon advance as a time-study man, is one of the editors of that company's magazine, "The Big Idea." Originally a resident of Elsmere, N. Y., he is to be married on June 26 and will establish his home in Yeadon, Pa.

Barnes To Pick DPE Dinner Site

Joseph A. Barnes, a senior in the School of Commerce and Finance, has been appointed chairman of the annual Delta Pi Epsilon dinner, to be held Wednesday, April 23, according to an announcement made by George Flannery, president of the fraternity, last night.

Along with the selection of the chairman, Flannery also named 10 committeemen to assist in arranging the details of the affair.

The members of the committee are: William Epifanio, Richard Monsaert, Thomas McMahon, John Pholeric, Alexander Cannon and Vincent Pescatore, seniors; David Reardon and Robert McIntyre, juniors, and William Craven and Charles Callahan, sophomores.

Chairman Barnes is well known about the campus. He was sports editor of the VILLANOVAN during 1940, and now holds that position on the Belle Air.

Upon hearing of his appointment, Barnes stated that the site of the dinner will be selected as soon as possible. He also disclosed that a guest speaker will be obtained to address the fraternity members on that evening.

Twenty-five senior keys will be presented to retiring members of the fraternity at the dinner. All members of the organization who have paid their dues are eligible to attend.

Election Dates

For Class Posts Set by Council; Frosh to Nominate April 21

Dates for the nominations and elections of class officers for the scholastic year 1941-42 were announced today by Murray P. Zealor, chairman of the Student Council.

Freshman nominations—for officers of next fall's sophomore class—will take place on April 21, elections on April 28. Sophomore nominations are scheduled for April 24 and elections for May 1. Choices for junior class officers will be made after Junior Week, with nominations on May 14 and elections on May 19.

Zealor also issued new election regulations as formulated by the Council. This year, the voting will take place from 11:30 A. M. to 1:30 P. M. on the days appointed, in room 110 Mendel hall, instead of in the college dining hall, as in previous years. Votes will be cast on secret ballots and any ballots taken out of the polling room will be voided; no campaigning will be permitted in the vicinity of the polls.

Nominations will be made in the Mendel Amphitheater between 12:30 and 1:30 P. M. Those nominating will be requested to bear in mind that candidates must meet certain scholastic, religious and disciplinary requirements.

J. E. "ELK" MURRAY

Murray Chairman Of Blazer Ball

Nine Students Named to Committee Planning for Junior Informal Dance

J. Elliston "Elk" Murray, a student in the School of Commerce and Finance, has been appointed chairman of the Blazer Ball Committee, according to an announcement made today by William J. Howlett, president of the junior class. This selection completes the junior appointments of dance chairmen.

Those who will assist Murray in planning for the social are: Logan Phillips, John Schreck, and Thomas Greene, commercemen; Thomas DeSipin, Henry Martinez, and Bernard Kelly, engineerin students; John Nieman and Hugh Mathews, of the School of Science; and Joseph Behot, an education major.

This committee will handle all details involved in decorating the Field House for the affair, arranging the program, and the ticket sale.

Chairman Murray is resident of Austin hall and an accounting major. A graduate of North Catholic High School in Philadelphia, he has attracted much attention for his fine work at right end on the freshman and varsity football teams. He is a native of Germantown.

The Blazer Ball will be held on Wednesday night, May 7. An informal affair, it gives the juniors an opportunity to display their newly-acquired coats to the student body. Members of the senior class are guests of the juniors on this occasion, and they also ar requested to wear their blazers.

Music will be furnished by the Villanovans, the college dance orchestra. This group has won wide recognition from musical publications during the past season and has received favorable criticism for its soft swing renditions in the fulfillment of engagements at neighboring colleges.

The Blazer Ball is open to all students. Tickets will be placed on sale in the near future at $1.50.

Society To Sing At Notre Dame College

Final arrangements have been made with Notre Dame College of Staten Island, N. Y., for a concert to be given there by the Villanova Choral Society on April 25. This trip will mark the first engagement outside the state undertaken by the choral group in three years.

The program for the concert has not been definitely arranged, but will consist of light classical numbers, Negro spirituals, sea chanteys, and popular numbers. A few of the selections proposed are: "Duna," "Fight," "Stouthearted Men," "Lo! How a Rose," "Deep River," "Eight Bells," and "Rio."

Thirty-five members will make the trip and will return the same night of the concert.

Juniors Choose Garden Terrace

Popular Room of Ben Franklin Hotel Will Be Scene of Dinner-Dance

The Garden Terrace of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, 9th and Chestnut Sts., in Philadelphia, will be the site of the annual Junior Class Dinner-Dance to be held on Saturday evening, May 10. Leo Zollo and his orchestra will furnish music for the occasion.

Vincent J. Gordon, chairman of the Dinner-Dance committee, announced this selection last week after he and his committee had considered all suitable hotels and country clubs in the area.

Leo Zollo, currently featured at the Garden Terrace, is well known to Philadelphians. Two complete floor shows will be given during the course of the evening, and dancing will continue until 2:00 A. M.

One of the more beautiful spots in Philadelphia, the place selected gets its name from the fact that the dance floor is set off by terraces on both sides. Pea green and a contrasting buff comprise the color scheme, and about the dance floor are solid-colored buff columns with reflecting mirrors, illuminated by patriotic red, white and blue lights from above.

The gray bandstand is trimmed in white and has a drapery emphasized with red lights as a background. A two-toned burgundy Oriental broadloom covers the floor.

In making the announcement of the Dinner-Dance site, chairman Gordon stressed the fact that each junior must pay his class dues in order to attend this concluding event of Junior Week activities.

Gordon also stated than an important meeting of his committee will be held tomorrow at 1:00 P. M. in room 214, Mendel hall.

Fund Drive Tops Five Thousand

Over $5,000 has already been obtained by the Villanova Alumni Centennial Fund Committees, alumni president John P. Keffer revealed at a banquet for class agents last Saturday evening in the college dining hall.

In complimenting over 100 class agents who attended, as well as those not present, Keffer stressed the need of the continuance of their work. He stated that the amount already pledged to furnish the new library has exceeded expectations, since correspondence to the alumni was released only a short time ago.

At the dinner, Very Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, O. S. A., highlighted the initiative of the alumni beginning the drive, which he expects to exceed the goal of $40,000.

Other speakers at the dinner included the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A.; the Hon. Sylvester Sabbatino, Justice of the City Court of New York; Eugene Reiley, first vice-president of the Alumni Association; James Henry, head football coach at La Salle College; and Thomas Casper, head coach at Roman Catholic High School. The latter four are alumni agents of the drive.

Biologists Prepare

J. Eugene Nelson, junior science man, was appointed general supervisor of the biology department of the School of Science's participation in Open House by Rev. James A. Donnellon, O. S. A., at a meeting held last Friday.

The basis of the biology department's display in Open House, to be held at the beginning of Junior Week, will be the phyla of animals with living and dissected specimens representing each phylum. group of animals in the will be handled by two

Opportunity For Sale

DISCUSSION among members of the school fraternities about going national, either by joining a national brotherhood or by obtaining a new charter, raises the question of what benefit a fraternity would get from such a move.

The main advantage of affiliation with a national society would be the prestige that would go with it; this would be offset by heavy financial requirements as well as the fact that the better-known fraternities require that all their members have houses, the profits from which go to the parent organization.

A local fraternity would be less taxed financially and have a real opportunity for leadership if it should start a national organization of its own. There is room in practically every field for national fraternities in Catholic colleges, and whoever should start such work would be doing a real service. Without a doubt students would be glad to join a society that would give them a common bond with other students throughout the country, for the benefits of the organization would increase with its numbers.

A Comedy Of Errors

AN EDITORIAL in a recent issue of the Philadelphia "Catholic Standard and Times" sharply criticised many of our so-called "comic" strips. It pointed out that, departing from the humorous, they have become adventure tales peopled with such characters as omnipotent Orientals and omniscient philosopher-tailors.

It is rather unfortunate that the editorial appeared just when it did. Had it been written a few weeks later it would have been even more timely, for it would have had a much more striking example to point to. We say this because, a few weeks after the editorial appeared, a strip in a cartoon supplement of a certain Philadelphia Sunday newspaper depicted a scene in which, "down in the bottom-most depths of limbo", Mestopheles, "messenger of the devil", was calling Arson, Temptation, Intoxication, Murder, and Theft to a meeting. Gathered together, they plot the death of the hero of the strip, "an American endowed with supernatural powers of magic", for, as Mes- says, "Once he's out of the way sin will be able to go about unchecked!"

Imagine such un-Godly and un-Christian stuff entering thousands of homes (for it's released by a syndicate) every Sunday. And being read by children! Perhaps parents don't read these things or perhaps, reading them, they fail to realize the seriousness of their insinuations. Or again, perhaps they brush all this aside with an "Oh, it's all just amusement." But that's just what it is not. And if it were, wasn't the purgation of certain amusements — the movies — the object of a great nation-wide crusade a few years ago? And the forces that effected that "purge" can rise against these "amusements" at the proper time. And that time seems imminent.

We suggest that publishers abandon the "horror comics" We suggest in this "comedy of errors" that the publisher remove the errors from his cartoon strips and substitute comedy for them.

Religion Is Not Seasonal

SUNDAY next, the Church celebrates the most important feast of the liturgical year. On that day, the Church and mankind will loose the penetential garb which the holy season of Lent prescribed they wear. In exchange, the robe of joy will adorn their limbs in commemoration of the triumphant Resurrection of Our Lord from His tomb on Easter morning.

"He is risen": that is the glorious chant which rings throughout the universe on this morn. The true significance of these words is that Christ proved Himself to the world and confirmed His teachings. By His resurrection He made valid and authentic those lessons for living close to God, of toiling with our fellow-men in a spirit of mutual brotherhood, and of accepting sufferings and trials with willing resignation that we too may gain the kingdom of His Father.

It is only proper that we feel exalted with the truth that was established on that day — the truth that ours is the true religion. And it is equally proper and necessary that we remember on all days, especially those outside the Lenten season, what the principles of our religion decree.

You Said It

(Weekly Poll of Student Opinion)

Do you believe the U. S. Navy should convoy British ships?

This was one of the leading questions asked during last week's survey, which covered over 10% of the total student enrollment. The answer was an overwhelming "NO"! Answers received were:

5% YES
95% NO

In every school on the campus the "no convoy" feeling was almost unanimous. Percentages varied but 2% through the entire college, indicating that the United States Navy definitely should not convoy British ships.

However, on other forms of British naval aid, student opinion was not so thoroughly crystallized The trend seems to be moving toward eventual transference to Britain of ships regardless of International Law. The question itself was, "Would you approve of the transfer of ships of German-occupied countries to Britain for convoy duty."

Answers received were distributed thusly:

40% YES
55% NO
5% UNDECIDED

Percentages as given still indicate the reluctance of the average student to concede to the the "All-out Aid to Britain" program. Still, in view of the past reactions of students to similar questions, opinion seems to be slowly shifting to the "All-out Aid" program.

Opinion also was sought concerning another type of British naval aid. In view of the British naval losses and destroyer shortage, it has been suggested that the United States construct British vessels. Villanova's opinion was sought on this matter in the question, "Would you approve of the construction of British war vessels in American harbors?"

Answers received were:

42% YES
58% NO

In this "construction of warships" question, there is a slightly stronger "no" than in the "transference of ships" question.

Efficiency In U.S. Production

By Mr. Gorman

OUR social order is based on the following principles: a) private ownership of wealth; b) earning as the basic means of obtaining wealth; c) free competition among individuals in the development of business enterprise.

With the development of business corporations, these foundations of our social order have resulted in the so-called "capitalistic system" in which business units are run primarily for the advantage of those who own surplus wealth. Under this system service to the consumer and the welfare of the worker are secondary and incidental to the interests of the capitalists.

Capital and Labor

Workers are thereby forced into competition with capitalists for the protection of their interests. Competition between worker and employer has bred unforunate results for all concerned; worker, employer and consumer, but, while this is generally recognized, the transformation of this destructive competition into constructive cooperation remains largely a problem for the future.

In their competition with employers, workers generally have had public sympathy, because they were obviously at a disadvantage in the situation. While they far exceed capitalists in number they have been, in the mass, unorganized, inferior in bargaining abilities, less well-informed regarding business conditions, usually without reserve savings, and, therefore, heavily dependent upon their immediate income. As a consequence, they have received special legislative advantage; notably, they are freed from the provisions of federal anti-trust laws forbidding combinations in restraint of trade. They are thus privileged to form labor monopolies to the extent that these can be engineered by labor leaders.

Effects of Competition

Free competition among great industrial units in an industry results inevitably in heavy overdevelopment of the industry. As a consequence, prices are cut below the cost of production and intermittent stagnation occurs as the market is glutted or as competing units secure the available business. The heaviest burden resulting from this cut-throat competition falls upon them, workers have a clear realization of their misery and but a dim or mistaken understanding of the underlying causes.

As a consequence, they tend to blame their employers for their misery and have struck savagely at the fancied cause of their troubles. Employers, taken up with their own troubles in the conduct of business under heavy competition, become embittered by the added burden of strikes and violence from the workers and, frequently, by the unreasonableness of workers', demands in the light of attendant circumstances and they have sought by equally violent means to combat workers' efforts to organize.

Hostility Has Resulted

Out of this situation has developed a more or less permanent spirit of hostility between workers and employers. Each side tends to consider the other a natural enemy and has sought to weaken the power of the other by all available means. Periodic resorts to violence have at times approached local civil wars in magnitude.

This situation is particularly unfortunate because both sides are injured by the hostility, neither is particularly to blame, and neither is in a position to effect a satisfactory outcome, while the embitterment and antagnoism aroused makes still more remote any satisfactory settlement of the issue. Production can be carried on effectively only when there is cooperation between the management and the working group.

A spirit of competition and hostility introduces a corresponding degree of inefficiency. As a consequence, everyone—worker, employer, above all, the much-neglected consumer — is worse off than he otherwise might or should be. No general, adequate, permanent solution to the problem of the welfare of the worker appears to be available short of action on a nationwide scale.

C. I. O. Seeks Solution

With our ingrained preference for individual, rather than national action, this promises to be very difficult of attainment. A solution is being sought by leaders of the C. I. O. through the general organization and collective action of all workers the country over in all lines of activity. This effort faces overwhelming difficulties, and at best will probably be a matter of years of effort.

If a general unionization of workers should eventuate, the country would find itself subject to the operation of giant labor monopolies, with highly dangerous degrees of

Wildcat Whirl

By Dave Reardon

Washington, D. C.
Thursday, April 3.

Editor, VILLANOVAN,
Box 1,
Villanova, Penna.
Gentleman:

In order to view the practical functioning of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments of the government, some 35 students of Villanova College journeyed here to the nation's capital on Tuesday (as per story on page 4). The trip undoubtedly has been an educational success, and has been enjoyable as well.

While the formal exhibitions of government at work are recorded elsewhere, we are able to print a few items on government at work contained only in the minds of those making the trip.

Such an instance involved the trip's director, Dr. Hartman. At a busy intersection the able professor failed to comply with a municipal statute regarding the actions of pedestrians. Consequently the party in error was immediately reprimanded by an administrative officer acting under the authority delegated to the law-enforcement bodies.

A shrill whistle, and a command to return to the curb from which he had proceeded, caused no end of embarrassment to the defendant, but furnished one more example of government at work to the students on the corner.

Although the lads had to obey a 12:00 rule at night, they still managed to have a bit of enjoyment after dinner.

As soon as he arrived, "Meat-Head" Phillips 'phoned his Trinity College lass and followed up his call with a date which was terminated by her 11:00 rule. . . Neil O'Mahoney slipped over to Maryland U. for the evening. . .

The cinema claimed much of the lads' attention after dark. . . "Monk" Clark started a treasure-hunt, but soon terminated it when the novelty wore off. . .

Jack Jakovic, a vegetarian, required individual culinary attention. . . Bill Mowen drank coffee like water. He has, the dope, habit. . .Some of the trippers showed themselves as light eaters by breakfasting on toast and coffee, nothing more or less. . .

Ted Galysh luxuriated in strong rope-filled stogies, as did many others to show their powerful lungs. . .Tony Marano vainly requested that the bus driver drive him all the way home after the trip, stating that his life is endangered when he is compelled to walk the required distance from the street-car to his home in South Philly. Vendetta or something. . .

Bill Tobin was called "the scribe" because of his minute recording of events, even going so far as to state the length of time spent in each building, the weather, and how many eggs he had for breakfast. . .And so on into the night.

AROUND HERE:

Bob Dooley's C. I. O. stage crew threatened to stage a walkout because of existing non-union working conditions backstage, blaming the officers for inefficient management. At a mediation meeting held last week, the members of the society voted to defer the cessation of activities; they accepted a new contract. . .

Herby Woods and his popular Quaker City musicrew will supply the rhythms at Chestnut Hill's Junior Prom on May 2. . .Walt Donikowski is unmindful of the kidnapping law, since he has been dating young little girls. Jim Flood has had one and only one girl friend for the past five years. She answers to the name of Kay. . .

"Bundles for Britain" Harrison has taken upon himself the pleasure of escorting Kay (not the same one) to the Prom, after meeting her once and that in the face of rumored competition. . ."Hearts and Flowers" Reardon, freshman brother of the writer, is currently interesting himself in Rita from Immaculata. . .

Both Jim Pike and Tom Sullivan plan to bring the same beauteous blonde to the Junior Prom. They'd better decide soon, lest they both lose out.

Numbers Games Rampant Here, But Only With 'Phone Operators

By JOHN P. FULLAM

"Wunn moment plee-uz! Here's your party. Sorry, the line is busy. Tha-ank you!"

From time immemorial — well, since Don Ameche, anyway—these expressions, humming along the telephone wires of the nation, have been used so often that they now symbolize one group of people who help to keep these wires humming. To this group several Villanova students belong—and they are not blondes, they don't wear scarlet nail polish, and they don't chew their gum with gusto.

They are Charles Dolan, Murray Zealor, Andrew Melton, Francis Cahill, and Francis Mambretti. We're overlooking Mary Conway of course. During their non-classroom hours, they inhabit the little booth with the barred window and the word "Information" on its side. In other words, they work on the Mendel hall switchboard. The initiated call it P. B. X.-ing, also known to lowest-type-of-humorists as "plugging along for dear old Alma Mater," or "another branch of the Villanova extension school."

It's All Electrical

If you've ever watched one of them at work — pushing buttons, turning switches, etc.—you might suspect that it's pretty complicated. But it's all electrical, an operator'll tell you. And if you still think it's hard, he'll explain the whole thing in something less than three hours .

Of course, the actual operation is only part of the fun. You see, it's the Information Booth as well. And all through the year its occupants have to locate little Johnnie for the fond parent, locate the Business Office for bewildered freshman, and locate last evening's heart-throb for Betty Co-ed. And in addition, the Informarian (to stretch a point) takes care of lost and found articles, sends telegrams, receives holiday and birthday greetings, receives money orders — and never listens in.

Pet Peeves

Pet peeves of the group as a whole: the ignorance of the proper procedure exhibited by users of the VILLANOVAN office phone, and the frequent failure of the Monastery to respond even to the most persistent ringing.

A survey reveals that the usual methods of passing what few idle moments Messrs. Dolan, Zealor, Melton, Cahill, and Mambretti have include trying to study, typing, reading, doing crossword puzzles, and greeting and conversing with an endless stream of student acquaintances that the job, during the daytime at least, encourages.

Provides Laughs, Too

But the post provides laughs as well as headaches. For instance, Charles Dolan's sense of humor derives nourishment from the frequent confusion of the college with the Bryn Mawr Hospital, whose number is similar. Andrew Melton gets a kick out of the fact that when girls seeking some Romeo whose exact whereabouts they know not hear a man's voice, they think that a priest is on the 'phone and immediately become models of seriousness and formality.

Meet The Boys:

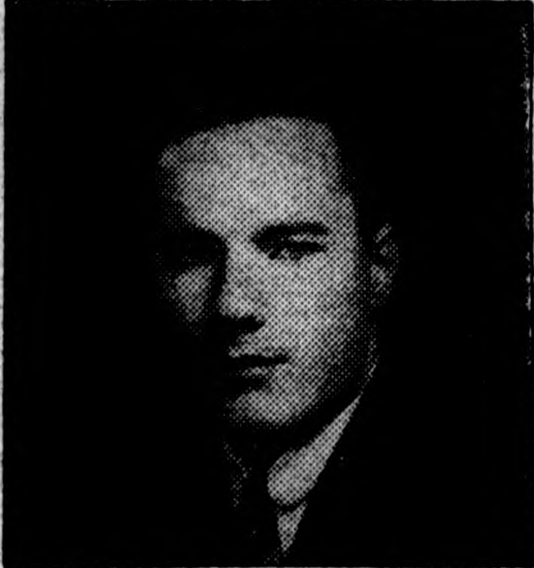
Tom Is Boss, Bill Ranks Next: Combining To Edit Both Pictures And Text

By FRANK BAGOT

WITH a "View Halloa" and a blast from his horn, Tom Moore leaves off chasing the fox and stops to chat a while with us. For Tom is a fox hunter, no less, among his other accomplishments.

Before undertaking the pursuit of this crafty beast, Tom was born in Philadelphia, graduated from St. Ambrose grammar school, and entered North Catholic High. While there, he ran the gamut of available sports, finally majoring in his two favorites—football and swimming. As a senior Tom was captain of the best swimming team in the history of the school.

Upon graduating in 1937, Tom enrolled in the Department of Education at Villanova where he consistently appeared on the honor roll for four years and never dropped below second place in his class ratings.



Edits Belle Air

Athletics quickly engaged his attention. He made the frosh swimming team and was high scorer on the night of the intramural meet. Since then he has been a regular on the varsity swimming team.

Tom joined the staffs of both the paper and the yearbook as a freshman and gained key positions on both. Last year he edited the column, "With Scouting Thomas," for the VILLANOVAN and this year is editor-in-chief of the Belle Air.

For the past two years he has played 150-lb. football but received a serious setback early last Fall when his foot was broken in a pre-season scrimmage.

Epsilon Phi Theta elected him secretary, as a junior; the Student Council and Orientation Committee also claim him as a member. In addition to arranging all debates as manager of Beta Gamma, he takes an active part in the discussions and in spare moments fulfills the duty of scribe for the Book Club.

Fishing, boating, hiking, and the horseback riding referred to more dramatically in the first paragraph, all share equal positions in his affections.

Tom has capitalized on this point and, having become an Eagle scout while only a sophomore in high school, has spent the last five summers educating the uninitiated in the ways and wiles of the life of an up-state scout camp.

Caustic Commentator

From a party of the third part it has been learned that during the past summer Tom was instrumental in saving the lives of several boys who were drowning in a storm-swollen stream near the camp. Even the vacation periods seem to keep Scout Moore busy.

Probably heading the list of his non-academic and non-athletic activities is his habit of subjecting any necessary decision on his part to the scrutiny of a methodical and philosophical analysis.

Among his subordinates on the Belle Air, the editor is known for the caustic notices which are periodically attached to the staff bulletin boards.

All in all, Tom is a very busy fellow; that folio he carries is no bluff — it's filled with plenty of work. Tom belongs to that group who get things done; when the chips are flying, both literally and figuratively speaking, it is frequently Thomas J. Moore who is swinging the ax.

ODD and varied nomenclature characterize the subject of this brief biographical sketch. His nicknames are numberless and to this vast store he adds names of British and Scotch origin of his own devising. We choose to present him under that title received as his birthright, William Nelson Way.

William hails from the western end of the local metropolis, and for three years in the role of a dashing day-hop made the journey to Drexel Hill a daily excursion.

"Seniorhood", with all its energy-draining duties, proved too much. This year the "Irish Colony" on the top floor of Fedigan was augmented by the arrival of two more members, for the new resident brought with him another ex-day-hop, his friend and classmate of three years, Jim Collins. Each now boasts a half interest in room 307.

All of this rather recent history is preceded by many events of note.

Delivers Salutatory

As a graduate of St. Andrew's grammar school, Bill turned down a scholarship to St. Joseph's Prep to enter West Catholic High. Here the dramatic society was the principal beneficiary. Experience gained in this manner equipped him to act as class salutatorian when "diploma day" finally arrived.

Villanova offered a solution to the college question and September of 1937 saw six feet, three inches of "Gentleman Bill" Way gracing the campus green.

One of his first attachments in the extra-curricular field was with the VILLANOVAN staff. Literary ambitions further led him to join the Belle Air, where three years of effort were rewarded last fall with his appointment as photography editor.

Complications in this regard — particularly the fire which occurred in Zamsky's studio—partly explain the hurried step and worried expression of the last year or so.

No Spare Time

In junior year Bill was active in the reorganization of Epsilon Phi Theata, arts fraternity, and was chosen to act as treasurer. Elections the following year resulted in his nomination to the Student Council, where he now serves as the fraternity's representative.

Belle Masque and the seminars effectively eliminate any odd moments of leisure that might remain to this man of many tasks.

Latin and Philosophy intrigue Bill in the scholastic line. It is a rare volume of Aristotle or Plato which does not boast the name of Mr. Way at least once on its call card. He has also considered the possibility of translating old, and preferably vast, Latin manuscripts as a hobby.

Both of these academic pursuits give rise to another distinction which he holds, the library fine championship. In consideration of this there is some thought of inscribing the entrance to the library with the words: "The 'Way' to Knowledge."

A summer job as "lay-out man" in his father's boiler factory is Bill's special pride. It seems that no little skill is required in the work.

Staunch defender of Frank Reagan and his Ivy League compatriots, Bill is known as a "Princetonian product of aristocratic smoothness" and will enter the halls of the Penn law school when he graduates in June.

Tally Ho!

In Which Are Dispensed Items On Vacation Cruises And California Education

By Bruno Talvacchia

THE popular saying that every dark cloud has a silver lining is exemplified currently by the anticipation of the Easter vacation after the very dark exam period just experienced. We have heard before that the feeling of anticipation is more conducive to relaxation than the actual vacation itself. That, in a sense, explains the transformation of countenances prevalent about the campus for the past few days.

Vacation time means travel time. The residents look forward to going home for a whole week — dinner with the family, a bull session with old friends and, lest we forget, several dates with the home talent. Non-residents plan a number of activities dispensed with during the homework period, or would it be more wisely phrased as merely "delayed until the holidays"? Others are preparing for short trips to distant points.

Philosophical Guide:

You won't ever get started if you wait for conditions to be just right . . .too, too true.

Students in the Cabanas:

A travel bureau at Princeton is sponsoring vacation trips to Nassau in the Bahamas, with special emphasis on a sea-air cruise that combines a two-day trip down on the famous cruise liner, Evangeline, with five to six days in Nassau for sailing, sunning, bicycling, tennis, dancing and gayety of every type imaginable.

Mail-bag Tally-wag:

A letter received from a recent graduate, Fred Rappleyea '40, who is now employed by an aviation concern in California, aroused the travel bug in us. So much so, that we have decided to spend the summer in the "land of sunshine" where the movie moguls earn an annual salary in the fifth digit—to the left of the decimal point, of course. That is, if we do not get a beckoning nod for the benefit of national defense.

This rambling manuscript most assuredly was meant to be read between the lines. Our interpretation was as follows:

Inglewood, Cal.

Dear Bruno,

It was indeed a very pleasant surprise to hear from you after such a long time. . .but, seriously, I haven't missed your hello. . .you can't blame me. . .with such pleasant surroundings. In regard to your questions. . .really, you asked quite a lot. . .I'm too busy working, and otherwise. . .mostly otherwise. At any rate, I shall endeavor to comply with your wishes.

When I mention Villanova to the average Californian: "Oh, yes, they have a good football team back there, haven't they?" You see, they still remember when Villanova came out here and swamped Loyola.

The most impressive part of typical college life out here is the palm-lined campus and the nicely-tanned, athletically-inclined co-eds. Tennis, swimming, and surf-riding are their favorite sports. I took a course in aerodynamics at U. S. C. One nice custom they have here is that of studying on the beaches. . .when are you going to take a trip out here?

The work is very interesting and involves a knowledge of aerodynamics, mechanics, structures and elasticity. . .etiquette might do some good in your spare time! (The last remark was completely ignored). . .if I were you, I'd try to get into this business. It is booming! Study all the structures and strength of materials you can get.

Well, I see it grows late and I've put in a busy day. . .five sets of tennis, and an afternoon of swimming and surf board riding. . . which plane are you going to catch?

Fred.

of power in the hands of labor leaders. Employers might effect a solution to the problem by eliminating competition through combinations of corporations if it were not for the Anti-Trust laws. In this event, however, the country would also be in the hands of giant monopolies with dangerous degrees of power in irresponsible hands.

A third possible solution lies in action by the people-at-large through the federal government. The N. R. A. codes represented a beginning in this direction, and, with all their limitations, promised, if they had been held constitutional, to develop into a reasonable satisfactory solution, for at least the large-scale industries.

They embodied protection of all three interests. Workers were guaranteed the right of joining or forming organizations according to their preference, free of outside influence, and were protected by provisions for minimum wages, maximum hours, and reasonable working conditions. Employers, in exchange for governmental regulation of their activities, were permitted price fixing and monoplistic combinations in the interest of efficiency and for the elimination of cut-throat competition. Consumers were protected from unreasonable price rises, which are the usual accompaniment of monopolistic combinations.

On the face of the evidence, it would seem that the country must adopt sooner or later something similar to the N. R. A. codes as th only generally satisfactory so to the complex problem of into satisfactory rel diverse interests i

'34 Graduate Conducts Campus Soil Tests To Decide Best Feeding Time

By THOMAS A. SHALLOW

Experimental time-rate feeding tests are being conducted on selected sections of turf on the campus by Joseph P. McKenna, class of '34, in connection with his work in the sales department of a national fertilizer company.

The purpose of the experiment is to determine the most effective time to start feeding turf, whether in the late winter, early spring, or later in the season.

Four plots of grass, each containing one hundred square feet, have been treated with a widely-used "balanced" fertilizer. Next to each of these, other sections will be treated at monthly intervals for three months. At the end of this time, examination will reveal which section benefited most and, therefore, which is the best time to start feeding.

McKenna has done extensive work in the graduate field in soil and fertilizer technology. He has studied at Fordham University, Rutgers University, and at the Penn State Extension School in West Chester.

In his present experiment he proposes to demonstrate the effectiveness of a soil food balanced with such elements as calcium, magnesium, sulphur, zinc, and boron. These and others are present in addition to the commonly-used nitrogen, potash, and phosphoric acid.

The turfs being treated are located on Mendel Field, on the slope towards the railroad, in a section next to the commerce building, in the lawn of St. Mary's hall, and in the end zone of the stadium.

At the conclusion of the tests, members of the state greenskeepers' and gardeners' associations will inspect the results.

McKenna is of the opinion that the section treated earliest when the ground was water-soaked will be the best developed, as the water can carry the dissolved minerals to the roots more effectively at that time than later, after the ground has dried.

His experiments have no connection with the replanting program being conducted around Alumni hall.

Lays World Ills To Selfishness

President Stanford Shows Need for Return to Basic Principles in Article

"The spirit of utter selfishness which has affected mankind and every unit of society" was given by the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president, in answer to the question, "What is Wrong with the World Today?"

Fr. Stanford's opinion as to the basic cause of today's chaos was written at the request of the Philadelphia "Inquirer", which is beginning a weekly forum of prominent citizens' opinions on the topic, and was printed in last Sunday's issue.

Troubles in the home; strife between labor and capital; graft, corruption, and waste in government; and blind nationalism at home and abroad are all caused fundamentally by selfishness, Fr. Stanford asserted.

"The disturbing thing is that the symptoms are themselves more alarming, more terrifying to most people than the disease which underlies them . . . selfishness," he wrote.

The president stated that modern war, with its horors and suffering, will end selfishness for a short time, but that the disease will return as soon as the war is ended.

"Selfishness is essentially a peace-time disease. War is only its temporary palliative. Its only effective antidote is religion. There must be, somehow, a mass return to the teachings of Christ. It is only when the principles of the Sermon on the Mount will have become daily practice for the majority of the citizens of the world that we can hope for a reasonable happy solution to our troubles."

Debaters Idle

Frosh Forensic Team to Meet Bridgeport on April 23; Complete Busy Week

The freshman debaters will not resume verbal activities until April 23, when they meet Bridgeport High School.

Completing a busy week for the yearling forensic group, a debate was held at North Catholic High School last Friday afternoon on the topic, "Resolved: That the powers of the Federal Government should be increased." James Bonner and Lawrence Belz argued the negative for Villanova.

Program Set

An advance program of the spring meeting of the Middle Atlantic Section of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, to be conducted at Villanova on Saturday, May 3, has been released by J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering.

Approximately 650 members of 32 educational institutions in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania are included in the Middle Atlantic division. Among local colleges which will be represented are Lehigh University, Lafayette, Gettysburg, Haverford, Franklin and Marshall, the University of Pennsylvania, Drexel Institute, and Swarthmore.

Following registration in Mendel hall, a general session will be held in the C. & F. auditorium at 11:00 A. M., featured by an address by Thorndyke Saville, Dean of the College of Engineering, New York University, on "The Effects of the Engineering Defense Training Program on Engineering Schools." Charles G. Thatcher, chairman of the Middle Atlantic Section and associate of mechanical engineering at Swarthmore, will preside.

In the afternoon, three conferences will be held in Mendel hall on the following topics: "Methods of Teaching the Basic Science Courses for Engineers," "Technique of Handling Engineering Laboratory Classes," and "What Engineering Courses Should Be Prescribed for Students Outside Their Major Field."

A special program has also been scheduled for the ladies attending, including sightseeing trips to St. David's Church, Bryn Mawr College, Valley Forge, and other places of interest.

After dinner in the Field House, all those present will witness a scientific demonstration of popular interest presented in cooperation with the Franklin Institute.

John J. Brennan, '40, Receives Commission in Army Air Corps; Stationed Near Dayton

John J. Brennan, Jr., class of '40, recently received a commission as second lieutenant in the U. S. Army Air Corps Reserve, and is one of five men assigned to the transport service, the most desirable branch of the air corps. He has been stationed at Patterson Field, near Dayton, Ohio.

Brennan attended the Christian Brothers Academy and Stanton Preparatory Academy before receiving a B. S. degree at Villanova.

A resident of Albany, he was the first cadet to enlist from that section under the recent air expansion policy of the government, and left for the Tuscaloosa Primary School on June 22, 1940, immediately following his graduation from Villanova. He received basic and advanced training at the Army Air School, Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., and obtained his commismision there.

L. K. D. Election

Date Tentatively Set for Today; 21 Members Nominated for Offices

Nominations for officers for the scholastic year 1941-42 were made at last Wednesday's meeting of the Lambda Kappa Delta, science school fraternity.

Election of the new officers will take place immediately after the nominees have received the necessary scholastic, religious, and disciplinary approbation. If possible, the voting wil be carried on today at 1:00 P. M. in room 112 Mendel hall.

Nominees are as follows: for president: juniors Robert Dugan, Joseph Koch, Thomas Sheehey, and Frank Mattei; for vice-president: sophomores Joseph Turner and George Weber; for secretary: freshmen Austin Gavin, George Salzman, Joseph Daly and Frank Fagella; for treasurer: sophomores John Bongiovanni, Jose Silva, and Sante De Santo; for Student Council representative: juniors Carmen Ciatteo, Samuel Panettei, and Joseph McCauley; for sergeant-at-arms: juniors Natalino Di Petrillo, Arthur Freed, Henry Rzonca, Eugene Nelson, and Robert Cacciatore.

The list of those members who will receive fraternity keys has been officially released by Joseph Santaniello, president of the organization. They are: Joseph Camarda, Joseph Clarken, John Eldracher, Robert Kiley, Theodore Kraus, David Morse, Joseph Santaniello, and Peter Yankauskas, seniors; John Dalton and William Levis, juniors; and Joseph Gambescia, a sophomore.

President To Speak In New Orleans, La.

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, will address the annual meeting of the National Catholic Educational Association to be held at New Orleans, La., on April 16, 17, and 18.

Fr. Stanford will speak on matters pertaining to the Association's program at the morning session on Thursday, the 17th. He is chairman of the Public Relations Committee and a member of the Executive Board of the group.

The president has also accepted a membership on the Executive Council of the Committee on Cultural Relations with Iberia-America, and will ex-officio be a part of a national panel to designate the winners of the gold medals awarded annually by "Sign" magazine to the two citizens, one from North America and one from Latin America, who have made the richest contributions to spiritual Pan-American culture.

Engineers Offered Maritime Positions

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the engineering school, has announced that positions in ship operation and design are being offered to engineering graduates by the United States Maritime Commission. Appointments will be based on the results of a national competitive examination to be held early in June for qualified men who apply to the Commission before May 10

The Maritime Commission is sponsoring a training program which will afford a limited number of recent graduates of recognized engineering schools the opportunity to receive a year's training in marine engineering or naval architecture. Canditates selected are appointed on probation as trainees at $2,000 a year.

Expansion of our merchant marine has caused the Commission to provide for training in ship operation. Appointees to this field become engineer cadets; after three months' service they may take an examination for the position of third assistant engineer and rise to the rank of Chief Engineer.

Candidates selected for cadet training are assigned to one of three schools, either at New York, New Orleans, or San Francisco. Preliminary training takes from four to eight weeks.

The path of promotion has been shortened so that the graduate may quickly rise to a well-paying position with stability of tenure assured, according to a spokesman of the Maritime Commission.

Additional information may be obtained from Dean Morehouse, or by application to the Supervision of Cadet Training.

WE have a black book like you have. And our little book discloses an assortment of names and numbers; but one of major importance is the telephone number of Walnut 0432 — the Weather Bureau. Thanks to the W. B. and all its employees we enjoyed our week-end much more for after old J. Pluvius let go of his torrent of downfall on Saturday it was a 10-1 shot that yesterday's tryst with Vermont would be washed down the drain.

However, they predicted fair skies, warmer weather and nary a cloud for our opener and so it came true. All of which reduced our blood pressure and brought our health back to normalcy. We had had our layout all set up and with the Weather Bureau's assistance some of the risk was eliminated.

Undoubtedly, this public servant is a means of saving a lot of headaches for with their timely predictions they usually can forecast the weather with true accuracy a week beforehand. For coaches, club owners, managers and directors of athletic teams it saves time, money and risk.

Elliott Finds Pole Vaulter; Does 12-Foot

Lou Carideo, New Addition to Track Team, Goes Up Easily

With two weeks training under their belts the varsity trackmen are beginning to show signs of promise. Also an up and coming freshman squad is proving a dangerous threat to the supremacy of the regulars.

The Easter holidays that start next week will find both squads taking daily workouts, and to climax this vacation-running, coach Elliott plans to hold an informal Varsity-Freshman track meet.

Gradually reaching form are Johnny Di Carlo, Harry Keefrider, and Bill Hooper. Hooper and Keefrider are expected to relieve Elliott's mind by taking care of the distances. In recent workouts, these two men have improved considerably in the longer events.

Charlie Jones is beginning to find himself in the high jump, but the timber toppers Bill Carey and Stan Nazian have failed to show anything to date. Elliott feels with the coming of warm weather the hurdlers will find it easier to loosen their limbs.

A standout on the Frosh lineup is Bob O'Sullivan who Elliott predicts will soon be doing big things. O'Sullivan in quarter- and half-mile trials has shown his heels to his teammates

Closing the gap on O'Sullivan is Dixie Dunbar, Middle A. A. U. quarter-mile champ. Dunbar seems to be just getting started, so between both these two boys the Varsity is in for plenty of trouble.

Another promising yearling is pole vaulter Lou Carideo. Quick to get in shape, Carideo shows signs of scaling 12 feet by the time his first meet rolls around.

Still trying to bolster the team with field men Elliott has found little encouragement, but is hoping to find some men before the opener again Catholic U. on the 21st of this month.

Finding a Signal-Caller Is the Biggest Job at the Moment for Coaches Smith and McNally

By PAUL McCANN

With five weeks of intensive practice passed, the swing and sway of the Corps de ballet is pleasing to the critical eye of Clipper Smith. The continued favorable weather has been used to appreciable advantage as the Wildcat gridders have rounded into shape and now are offering a criterion for estimating the Villanova football representation next fall.

The thundering herd, over fifty strong, having sufficiently perforated the turf at the stadium for the time being, are now seeking new land to conquer—or at least upon which to make some cleated impressions. As a result, the young Brobdingnagians have lately been dedicating the soil at the rear of the Field House to descration.

Mentor Smith and his able sidekick, Vince McNally, have been concentrating this past week in schooling their charges in the handy art of pass defense. Every conceivable pass play from every known pass offense has been employed so that the boys won't be idly watching opposing air circuses—come next fall. The procedure appears to be showing results.

Passing Parade

On the other hand, the local backfield performers are being grilled to promote a passing parade that will be viewed with satisfaction by Villanova adherents and with chagrin by Villanova opponents. Taking care of the passing chores are such capable tossers as: Ben Danik, Stan Eusko, Joe Behot, Al Postus and Joe Pezelski.

Danik is leading the contention for the quarterback position. Combining blocking, ball-carrying, and passing ability with the aptitude for calling the right play at the right time, he represents the Clipper's hope for a conspicuous leader to guide the field operations of the

Doc Jacobs Ace Southpaw Allows Only Three Scattered Hits in Defeating New Englanders in Opening Game

'CAT BATTERS COLLECT NINE HITS

Seeking more than the Pennsylvania State Championship which they captured last season, Villanova's varsity nine embarked upon their 75th campaign yesterday afternoon and before a good sized crowd drove the University of Vermont into retreat with an 8-2 defeat.

For Villanova in its opener it was Connie Nicholas, southpaw, who delivered the coup d'etat for his mates as he set down the New Englanders with but three scattered hits. Aided by his mates who pounded out 9 hits for a total of 2 runs, Nicholas breezed home without much trouble on his part.

Wins Opener

CONNIE NICHOLAS

Connie performed very well on the mound, using his curve to much advantage as he struck out four opposing batsmen and did not give up one base on balls. In all it was a nigh-perfect day for the big left-hander as he worked for nine innings in the opening day game. In addition Nicholas took his turn in the hitting department and collected two of the nine hits that the Wildcat batsmen made. He singled and doubled in three times at the plate.

For the Vermont Tigers, who even had an advantage because they had played a number of games before coming here, it was Shaw who trwirled the full nine frames. His main weakness was that he was not effective in the pinches, and permitted the Wildcats to get a lead which his mates could not overcome.

The 'Cats jumped off to an early lead by getting three runs off pitcher Shaw in the opening frame. Woody Reitmeier, Villanova's defensive power at second base opened the game by walking. Roy Simonsen walked two on four balls and Jack Donoghue sacrificed the

Seven Qualifiers Win Golf Berths

Varsity Positions Awarded to Randolph, Walsh, Brown, DePersio, Casey, Klappenbach and Morse

With the conclusion of the spring tournament the Blue and White links team has been named. Jimmy Brown, Cliff Randolph, Bob DePersio, Dave Morse, Bill Walsh and Bob Casey have been named to the six varsity berths with Ernie Klappenbach as substitute.

Jimmy Brown, sophomore science man, led the field with an 83-77 for a total of 160. This is his second year on the first six. Bill Walsh, a surprising freshman find, ended up only two strokes behind Brown with a 162. Great things can be looked for from Bill this year and in seasons to come.

Cliff Randolph, captain and manager of the team, posted a 166 to end up in a deadlock with Bob DePersio for third place. Cliff clipped two strokes off his first round total of 84 for his score while DePersio came up with two 83s for his 166. Following came Dave Morse with 168, Bob Casey with 174 and Ernie Klappenback with a 179.

Outlook Bright

The outlook is definitely better this year, for back with the team are four regulars from last season; Cliff Randolph with three years varsity experience behind him, Dave Morse with two, and Bob DePersio and Jimmy Brown are playing their second year with the squad. The other two spots are filled by Bill Walsh and Bob Casey who seem to have the quality to make them a valuable addition to the lineup.

The Wildcat golfers open the 1941 season with St. John's of Brooklyn on April 18, the first day following the return from vacation. They will be out to avenge a double defeat suffered at the hands of the powerful New York team. There is real spirit for this match with four men who played against this aggregation last season, back again.

Wildcat Nine Will Confront Five Clubs

Varsity to Open Holiday Tussles Against Lehigh Tomorrow Afternoon

While the student body is vacationing over the Easter holidays, Doc Jacobs and his diamond team will be busily engaged in five games, three of which will be on the road and two at home.

Within a week and a half the varsity nine will meet Lehigh University, Ursinus College, Loyola College of Baltimore, Providence College and Western Maryland. Lehigh, Ursinus and Loyola will be met at their home parks while the latter two will come to Villanova.

After yesterday's battle with Vermont the Wildcats look impressive enough to take on the Engineers and come through with a victory. Tomorrow the team will entrain for Lehigh, and if any indications can be derived from the 14-2 victory of last year, Doc Jacobs and his crew don't seem to be in for much trouble.

Saturday afternoon, April 12, will see the Blue and White team at Collegeville, opposing Ursinus for the second of the five encounters. The Bears are a regular rival to Villanova and meet every year on the diamond. Last season though, the game was cancelled because of rain.

Go to Baltimore

The final trip will be to Baltimore on the 16th where Loyola will play host to the travelling baseballers. Succumbing, 12-2, to the Jacobsmen last year the Loyola team is not too powerful a club but they will be seeking to deliver an upset blow to Villanova.

On Thursday, April 17, the Wildcats will take up their home stand for quite a while. The first contingent to meet the team will be Providence College; one of the strong nines from New England. Every year they come up with a flashy fast-stepping ball club

By THOMAS A. SHALLOW

Experimental time-rate feeding tests are being conducted on selected sections of turf on the campus by Joseph P. McKenna, class of '34, in connection with his work in the sales department of a national fertilizer company.

The purpose of the experiment is to determine the most effective time to start feeding turf, whether in the late winter, early spring, or later in the season.

Four plots of grass, each containing one hundred square feet, have been treated with a widely-used "balanced" fertilizer. Next to each of these, other sections will be treated at monthly intervals for three months. At the end of this time, examination will reveal which section benefited most and, therefore, which is the best time to start feeding.

McKenna has done extensive work in the graduate field in soil and fertilizer technology. He has studied at Fordham University, Rutgers University, and at the Penn State Extension School in West Chester.

In his present experiment he proposes to demonstrate the effectiveness of a soil food balanced with such elements as calcium, magnesium, sulphur, zinc, and boron. These and others are present in addition to the commonly-used nitrogen, potash, and phosphoric acid.

The turfs being treated are located on Mendel Field, on the slope towards the railroad, in a section next to the commerce building, in the lawn of St. Mary's hall, and in the end zone of the stadium.

At the conclusion of the tests, members of the state greenskeepers' and gardeners' associations will inspect the results.

McKenna is of the opinion that the section treated earliest when the ground was water-soaked will be the best developed, as the water can carry the dissolved minerals to the roots more effectively at that time than later, after the ground has dried.

His experiments have no connection with the replanting program being conducted around Alumni hall.

Lays World Ills To Selfishness

President Stanford Shows Need for Return to Basic Principles in Article

"The spirit of utter selfishness which has affected mankind and every unit of society" was given by the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president, in answer to the question, "What is Wrong with the World Today?"

Fr. Stanford's opinion as to the basic cause of today's chaos was written at the request of the Philadelphia "Inquirer", which is beginning a weekly forum of prominent citizens' opinions on the topic, and was printed in last Sunday's issue.

Troubles in the home; strife between labor and capital; graft, corruption, and waste in government; and blind nationalism at home and abroad are all caused fundamentally by selfishness, Fr. Stanford asserted.

"The disturbing thing is that the symptoms are themselves more alarming, more terrifying to most people than the disease which underlies them . . . selfishness," he wrote.

The president stated that modern war, with its horors and suffering, will end selfishness for a short time, but that the disease will return as soon as the war is ended.

"Selfishness is essentially a peace-time disease. War is only its temporary palliative. Its only effective antidote is religion. There must be, somehow, a mass return to the teachings of Christ. It is only when the principles of the Sermon on the Mount will have become daily practice for the majority of the citizens of the world that we can hope for a reasonable happy solution to our troubles."

Finding a Signal-Caller Is the Biggest Job at the Moment for Coaches Smith and McNally

By PAUL McCANN

With five weeks of intensive practice passed, the swing and sway of the Corps de ballet is pleasing to the critical eye of Clipper Smith. The continued favorable weather has been used to appreciable advantage as the Wildcat gridders have rounded into shape and now are offering a criterion for estimating the Villanova football representation next fall.

The thundering herd, over fifty strong, having sufficiently perforated the turf at the stadium for the time being, are now seeking new land to conquer—or at least upon which to make some cleated impressions. As a result, the young Brobdingnagians have lately been dedicating the soil at the rear of the Field House to descration.

Mentor Smith and his able sidekick, Vince McNally, have been concentrating this past week in schooling their charges in the handy art of pass defense. Every conceivable pass play from every known pass offense has been employed so that the boys won't be idly watching opposing air circuses —come next fall. The procedure appears to be showing results.

Passing Parade

On the other hand, the local backfield performers are being grilled to promote a passing parade that will be viewed with satisfaction by Villanova adherents and with chagrin by Villanova opponents. Taking care of the passing chores are such capable tossers as: Ben Danik, Stan Eusko, Joe Behot, Al Postus and Joe Pezelski.

Danik is leading the contention for the quarterback position. Combining blocking, ball-carrying, and passing ability with the aptitude for calling the right play at the right time, he represents the Clipper's hope for a conspicuous leader to guide the field operations of the

Lou Carideo, New Addition to Track Team, Goes Up Easily

With two weeks training under their belts the varsity trackmen are beginning to show signs of promise. Also an up and coming freshman squad is proving a dangerous threat to the supremacy of the regulars.

The Easter holidays that start next week will find both squads taking daily workouts, and to climax this vacation-running, coach Elliott plans to hold an informal Varsity-Freshman track meet.

Gradually reaching form are Johnny Di Carlo, Harry Keefrider, and Bill Hooper. Hooper and Keefrider are expected to relieve Elliott's mind by taking care of the distances. In recent workouts, these two men have improved considerably in the longer events.

Charlie Jones is beginning to find himself in the high jump, but the timber toppers Bill Carey and Stan Nazian have failed to show anything to date. Elliott feels with the coming of warm weather the hurdlers will find it easier to loosen their limbs.

A standout on the Frosh lineup is Bob O'Sullivan who Elliott predicts will soon be doing big things. O'Sullivan in quarter- and half-mile trials has shown his heels to his teammates

Closing the gap on O'Sullivan is Dixie Dunbar, Middle A. A. U. quarter-mile champ. Dunbar seems to be just getting started, so between both these two boys the Varsity is in for plenty of trouble.

Another promising yearling is pole vaulter Lou Carideo. Quick to get in shape, Carideo shows signs of scaling 12 feet by the time his first meet rolls around.

Still trying to bolster the team with field men Elliott has found little encouragement, but is hoping to find some men before the opener again Catholic U. on the 21st of this month.

Going Up — Up And Over

LOU CARIDEO is really a welcome sight to track coach Jim Elliott, for Lou can go up into the atmosphere with the best of them. All this adds to the strength of the track and field team, which Jumbo was dubious about.

Wildcats Win Opener, 8-2 Over Easy Vermont Nine

Doc Jacobs Ace Southpaw Allows Only Three Scattered Hits in Defeating New Englanders in Opening Game

'CAT BATTERS COLLECT NINE HITS

Seeking more than the Pennsylvania State Championship which they captured last season, Villanova's varsity nine embarked upon their 75th campaign yesterday afternoon and before a good sized crowd drove the University of Vermont into retreat with an 8-2 defeat.

For Villanova in its opener it was Connie Nicholas, southpaw, who delivered the coup d'etat for his mates as he set down the New Englanders with but three scattered hits. Aided by his mates who pounded out 9 hits for a total of 2 runs, Nicholas breezed home without much trouble on his part.

CONNIE NICHOLAS

Connie performed very well on the mound, using his curve to much advantage as he struck out four opposing batsmen and did not give up one base on balls. In all it was a nigh-perfect day for the big left-hander as he worked for nine innings in the opening day game. In addition Nicholas took his turn in the hitting department and collected two of the nine hits that the Wildcat batsmen made. He singled and doubled in three times at the plate.

For the Vermont Tigers, who even had an advantage because they had played a number of games before coming here, it was Shaw who trwirled the full nine frames. His main weakness was that he was not effective in the pinches, and permitted the Wildcats to get a lead which his mates could not overcome.

The 'Cats jumped off to an early lead by getting three runs off pitcher Shaw in the opening frame. Woody Reitmeier, Villanova's defensive power at second base opened the game by walking. Roy Simonsen walked two on four balls and Jack Donoghue sacrificed the

Varsity Positions Awarded to Randolph, Walsh, Brown, DePersio, Casey, Klappenbach and Morse

With the conclusion of the spring tournament the Blue and White links team has been named. Jimmy Brown, Cliff Randolph, Bob DePersio, Dave Morse, Bill Walsh and Bob Casey have been named to the six varsity berths with Ernie Klappenbach as substitute.

Jimmy Brown, sophomore science man, led the field with an 83-77 for a total of 160. This is his second year on the first six. Bill Walsh, a surprising freshman find, ended up only two strokes behind Brown with a 162. Great things can be looked for from Bill this year and in seasons to come.

Cliff Randolph, captain and manager of the team, posted a 166 to end up in a deadlock with Bob DePersio for third place. Cliff clipped two strokes off his first round total of 84 for his score while DePersio came up with two 83s for his 166. Following came Dave Morse with 168, Bob Casey with 174 and Ernie Klappenback with a 179.

Outlook Bright

The outlook is definitely better this year, for back with the team are four regulars from last season; Cliff Randolph with three years varsity experience behind him, Dave Morse with two, and Bob DePersio and Jimmy Brown are playing their second year with the squad. The other two spots are filled by Bill Walsh and Bob Casey who seem to have the quality to make them a valuable addition to the lineup.

The Wildcat golfers open the 1941 season with St. John's of Brooklyn on April 18, the first day following the return from vacation. They will be out to avenge a double defeat suffered at the hands of the powerful New York team. There is real spirit for this match with four men who played against this aggregation last season, back again.

Wildcat Nine Will Confront Five Clubs

Varsity to Open Holiday Tussles Against Lehigh Tomorrow Afternoon

While the student body is vacationing over the Easter holidays, Doc Jacobs and his diamond team will be busily engaged in five games, three of which will be on the road and two at home.

Within a week and a half the varsity nine will meet Lehigh University, Ursinus College, Loyola College of Baltimore, Providence College and Western Maryland. Lehigh, Ursinus and Loyola will be met at their home parks while the latter two will come to Villanova.

After yesterday's battle with Vermont the Wildcats look impressive enough to take on the Engineers and come through with a victory. Tomorrow the team will entrain for Lehigh, and if any indications can be derived from the 14-2 victory of last year, Doc Jacobs and his crew don't seem to be in for much trouble.

Saturday afternoon, April 12, will see the Blue and White team at Collegeville, opposing Ursinus for the second of the five encounters. The Bears are a regular rival to Villanova and meet every year on the diamond. Last season though, the game was cancelled because of rain.

Go to Baltimore

The final trip will be to Baltimore on the 16th where Loyola will play host to the travelling baseballers. Succumbing, 12-2, to the Jacobsmen last year the Loyola team is not too powerful a club but they will be seeking to deliver an upset blow to Villanova.

On Thursday, April 17, the Wildcats will take up their home stand for quite a while. The first contingent to meet the team will be Providence College; one of the strong nines from New England. Every year they come up with a flashy fast-stepping ball club

Donoghue Supplies Club With Laughs But Frowns On Nickname "Dugan"

Every ball club, large or small, professional or non-professional, always has imbued within its ranks, a player who furnishes the laughs and the comics to keep up the morale of the club, or lift it out of its weakened state. Here in our own camp where the first of the opponents was fairly assaulted yesterday one man on the field stood out with his devilish grin and boyish antics. If one looked carefully enough, his eyes wouldn't have roamed very far, for planted in the area of first base was the character of the column.

What's the name? Well for some years now its been Jackson Donoghue but quite recently it's been a familiar Irish name that has been branded upon him. "Dugan" they call him and although Jackson "Dugan" Donoghue in his high and almighty way has the temperament of the nicest old lady, he still runs amuck when the name "Dugan" is uttered in his presence. Just why seems to be the problem.

What Jackson wants to know is why should anyone plant a name on him which has no bearing to his character or personality. But, methinks that perhaps Joe Finn or Joe Beasly, two of his close buddies in Hotel Fedigan can relate the story.

When we approached First baseman Donoghue he was in one of his tales. A typical New England session with the speaker getting in most of the conversation. A short laugh and the broad "A's" just about set us people in Pennsylvania in a roar. But as a matter of fact its very interesting.

Jackson Donoghue was really different than our other interviewees for we put one question to him and he fired away at us. In about three short breaths, he got in some twenty years of his life, the angle on ballplaying, the story of his romances, about his different political views and his favorite cinema actors and the latest movies. We wrote so fast and with very little accuracy that if some of this material doesn't make much sense, you can blame it on the weather.

How does this man operate? Well, we delved into his life a little deeper. It seems that the "Dugan" lad comes from Somerville, Massachusetts, a friendly little town nestled in the heart of New England. Of it says Donoghue: "It's a good sized town and what if they don't have movies on Sunday!"

Then he continued about his schooling at Bridgeton Academy where he played football and baseball for three years—and to add he was All-Suburban. Ah! but those must have been the days, when our friend Jackson skirted around the ends for those long gallops into paydirt. And he also added, that when you make All-Suburban in the New England territory, it's no gift.

Giving it a good thought we thought that those days spent on the gridiron, where you had to outrace your opponent to make a score, undoubtedly was the reason for the swiftness of Donoghue around the first base corner. For the times are rather departed since the Wildcat rooters have seen such a speed merchant around. Those double plays of last year weren't luck, it's just one of the functions that Jackson handles so well in his line of business.

To most of the fellows about, one would think that Donoghue has always been batting from the left side of the plate, but back in high school he switched from batting right handed and he seems very convinced that the change was for his own good. Still in his batting he has one major weakness; he can't hit a curve ball so well. Jackson recalls many a time that he was left holding the bag but missed on that curve ball delivery.

Here at Villanova Donoghue has been on Doc Jacobs team and in Doc Jacobs' pleasing eye for the past three years. In his first year he roamed the outfield but last season when Doc needed a first baseman, he found one in the person of Donoghue.

Rain Washes Out I-M Hardball Games; Schedule Is Listed

The weatherman played a dirty trick on the I-M baseballers Sunday and sent down a shower of rain all day to cancel the two hardball games and force postponement until a later date. Undoubtedly the cancelled games will be played at a late date as part of a double-header.

The morning tilt between Austin Hall and Alumni Hall and the afternoon game between Fedigan's Gigoloes and the Mendelites were the two matches undermined by the weather. The schedule will be carried on as usual after the Easter vacation and will be in full swing.

After the previous week's battle in which both Austin and Aliumni were victorious and tied for first place this week's contests were supposed to have shown the actual strength of the leaders as the teams commenced around the circuit.

If Austin Hall wins this Hardball event the Intramural Championships will go to her for another year. The Austinites have enough points from their other victories in the I-M program to win out after this event.

getters and pencil-pushers will finally perk up and realize that spring is here at last.

—V—

All this, which is nothing more than rambling, leads us down to the cinder path where coach Jumbo Elliott, who occupies the role of a skeptic during the winter, looks forward to the first meet. Jumbo (we don't know how he got the name), comes out of his cage and it seems that spring does him very good. This year, in particular, Mr. Elliott can look forward to having a well-balanced outfit which should show justice for all his tough work during the winter. The relay teams have shown prominence during the winter competing against some of the leading clubs in the country. It's true that they didn't win any coveted championships but the experienced earned was well worth the entry.

In addition and at last it appears that Villanova might put out a field club, which has been one of the factors which weakened the club in previous years. Coach Elliott finally uncovered a pole vaulter, Carideo, by the name. And this lad can do 12 feet, which is good enough for college competition.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

ONE week from today, the sixteen big league baseball teams will start another pennant hunt and the consensus of opinion seems to be that the Cincinnati Reds in the National League and the Cleveland Indians in the American League will end up with the buntings. However, this is far from an unanimous opinion and any one of two or three clubs in either league may leave the favorites by the wayside before September rolls around.

In the senior league the Reds should be red hot because of the strength they possess in the pitching department. No other team in either league can match Bill McKechnie's "Big Three" — Walters, Derringer, and Thompson. As a unit they turned in fifty-eight victories last year and if they can approach that figure again this season the Reds should be a cinch for their third straight league championship.

The biggest threat to the pennant hopes of the Reds are the Brooklyn Dodgers. Two years ago the Dodgers finished third and last year they ended up second in the pennant push. According to arithmetical progression, "Durocher's Dandies" should move up one more slot this year and that would place them on the top of the heap—but it is not as simple as all that.

Larry MacPhail has built up the Flatbush club until they are now at least on even terms with the Reds in all positions except on the mound. The acquisition of Kirby Higbe from the Phillies may help to make up some of the twelve games which formed the difference between first and second place in the National League last year, but this will likely be offset by the fact that veteran Freddy Fitzsimmons cannot be expected to repeat his amazing performance of winning sixteen games while losing only two last season.

The man who may be able to lift the Dodgers into the coveted pennant position is Joe "Ducky-Wucky" Medwick. Medwick was quite a disappointment in his debut with the Dodgers in 1940 but that can be blamed on the fact that soon after arriving at Ebbets Field he was hit by a pitched ball and never seemed the same thereafter. It is a different story this spring, though. In the Grapefruit League thus far, Joe has been hitting with his old gusto and he, along with Camilli, Lavagetto, and Reiser, present a formidable lineup for opposing pitchers to retire.

About the only other team in the senior circuit which appears to have an outside chance of upsetting the dope is the St. Louis Cardinals. With Mize, Slaughter, and Padgett in the lineup, the Cards possess the hardest-hitting team in the league, but their pitching is weak and this is a great obstacle for any club to overcome.

The other five National League clubs don't seem to be headed anywhere in particular but the experts have been wrong before—look at what happened to the Yankees last year!

Over in the American League it looks like a three-club fight right down to the finish. The Detroit Tigers, the Cleveland Indians, and the New York Yankees are well-balanced teams and you can't get much more than even money on the chances of any one of the three copping the flag.

The Indians are comparable to the Cincinnati Reds in that they boast of three classy pitchers in Feller, Milnar, and Smith. The effectiveness of the Cleveland pitchers is greatly enhanced by the sensational fielding of Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack, the kid keystone combination of the Indians. If Manager Roger Peckinpaugh can receive the cooperation from the players that Oscar Vitt failed to receive last year, the Indians should find it fairly easy sledding.

Blue Netmen Will Face Manhattan After Holidays Minus Any Practice

Untested Squad to Combat Jaspers on April 18th in First Tilt; Courts Poor Yet

It won't be a complete surprise for Captain Ed Banagan and his tennis squad to find out that when they come back from the Easter holidays they'll have their season's first meet and without any true practice tests.

With the school courts still unsettled because of bad weather, it appears that the tennis team will entrain for their homes tomorrow without any group practice. It means that when they return next week, the team will have two days to get ready for the tilt against the invading Gothamites.

A situation like this seems rather serious for the netmen for the squad has a complete set of new talent in its midst based on hardly any experience. Five regulars have departed leaving only Captain Banagan, and Dave Daly, a junior, as leftovers from last spring. The team is minus a coach and will have to work along as best it can relying on Banagan's selections.

Team Needs Balance

A probable singles man for starting might be sophomore George McFadden, who last year captured the campus I-M title with some fancy play. McFadden, in addition, is assuming the managerial position for the team. Two other sophomores who might break into starting spots are Chet Pajolek and Duke King. Both rated high in last Fall's tournament. Chet Pajolek has an exceptionally good serve with an American twist to advantage. If he can keep up consistently he will no doubt play one of the singles matches. His volleying is very steady and in addition he has the height to play net for doubles.

Duke King has figured high in the tournament and is another who threatens to capture a post. He is good in an all-around way but has weaknesses which must be overcome.

Gerry Belz and John Grey, two netsters from last season who are in their junior year, might fit into the solution. Its possible that they can form a doubles combination, which is a weak spot in the team's make-up.

But another doubles team is needed to make up a balanced squad and it's not to be found as yet. If Captain Banagan can find such two men who can play singles and then switch later into a doubles team his worries would be much lighter.

this year is no exception. This will be undoubtedly one of the best and toughest tilts of the vacation games.

Two days later, Villanova will engage the Western Maryland aggregation which comes to the Main Line campus for another year. They were defeated last year and will be pointing for an upset over Doc Jacobs' outfit.

In these five games, Coach Jacobs will have a chance to see his pitchers in action, putting them on the hill in turns. After this set, the tough opponents come up for combat, and from April 23 and on it will be a long list of hard games for the Wildcat nine.

Wildcats next autumn. Tom Morgan, Joe Behot and Johnny Dzitko are still very much in the running for the post, however.

Sal Rosato, who distinguished himself as a battering ram last fall, is up to par in the current scrimmages. He and his competitors for the fullback slot, Tony Grillo and Zig Zamlynski, are impressive in their line smashes evolving from the new T-formation.

One of the most pleasing revelations to the coaching staff is the fine calibre of end play evidenced by the wingmen. Bill Prohovich, who was recently converted from tackle, is rendering much satisfaction in his aggressive offensive and defensive play. As Clipper says of him, "He really means business." Pritko and Christman of last year's varsity and Bontaites, Sullivan and De Palo, from the freshmen team, continue to display fine talent.

The offensive guard and tackle play is not altogether satisfying to Clipper. It will be the remedying of these shortcomings that will be the object of subsequent practice sessions Bill Piscione, one of the finest guards in recent Villanova history, is offering his valuable assistance in an effort to overcome the failings of the present crop. Heading the guard contingent in recent scrimmages have been Jagoe, Adams and Gildea. Kasky, and Neiman are standouts among the tackles to date.

The boys are bedecked in varicolored jerseys at the daily workouts to distinguish the teams in the group and they offer an attractive panorama in the scrimmages. The uniforms are no more colorful, though, than the parade of Villanova touchdowns which the Wildcat prestidigitators promise for the coming season.

Roy Simonsen roamed the outfield territory with great ease and made four putouts. Scored one of the runs and produced a lot of pep for the team.

Longest hit of the day was made by George Balmore when he connected for a double with Casey on third base. It was only short of a home run by a few feet.

Smiling Jack Donghue covered the first base line like last season and handled 12 chances with only one mishap. He collected two hits during the day's proceedings.

Villanova pulled the only double play of the game. Nicholas to Donoghue to Calandra in short and snappy order.

Woody Reitmeier played errorless ball, making four putouts and one assist. He scored one run and batted .250 for the day in making his single.

WOODY REITMEIR is without doubt one of the best infielders that have come this way in a long time. Last year as a sophomore Woody broke into the line-up and played every game. His fielding was flawless and he batted over .300, all of which helps him no end as he starts his second year at second base.

two men to second and third. Dan Casey, then singled and scored Reitmeier and Simonsen and went to third on the throw home. As George Balmore grounded out, Casey came scampering home to knock the ball out of Catcher Smith's glove and scored.

Another big inning, the fifth, proved a damaging blow to Vermont. In that frame Villanova pushed over 5 runs on but three hits to give them a substantial lead and the ball game. Jack Donoghue led off and grounded out to the pitcher. Dan Casey, sophomore fielder, doubled to right field for the first hit. A minute later he scored as George Balmore also doubled over the left fielder's head. Chief Yednock sacrificed George to third and Calandra was walked, putting men on first and third. Calendra then stole second.

Al Skaff, newcomer to Doc Jacobs nine, occupying the position of catcher then singled the two men in and the score then read 6-0. Nicholas came through with a double over the right field wall, pushing Skaff to third. Reitmeier climaxed the inning by dropping a single over short for two more runs to make the count 8-0.

In the next inning the visitors finallly broke the ice for themselves and pushed across two runs. Sysko, the Tigers center fielder, singled to right field and scored after Spasyk lifted one of Nicholas's pitches over the left field fence for a home run, the game's only round tripper. From that point on the New Englanders were shut out in hits and runs by Nicholas.

With that substantial lead Connie eased up and went the distance without even giving up a walk. For the Blue and White, Donoghue got the only hit after the fifth inning—that a double in the sixth.

Even though it was opening day for Villanova, the lads seemed as if they had been playing for quite a while, for they collected 5 two base hits out of the nine blows. At the same time the pitching job turned in by Nicholas deserves much praise. Twirling a 3 hiter for the first assignment isn't duplicated very often. Only two errors were made by the Wildcats which is fairly good percentage considering the wet grounds and that under the line of fire for the first attempt.

Students Suggest Draft Legislation, Hear Departmental Heads In Capital

By DANIEL J. HALEY

An opportunity was afforded 35 Villanova students to initiate legislation in the Selective Service Act by Brigadier General Louis B. Hershey at a conference in the Selective Service Headquarters building last Wednesday during the annual Washington trip of the American Government classes.

At the conference, Brig. Gen. Hershey invited student views and suggestions on many matters of the draft administration relating to college students. Questions were also put to him and the administration of the Act was explained.

Heads of many of the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of the national government explained the functions of their particular branches during the course of the three-day capital trip. Conducted by Dr. Harold F. Hartman, the students, accompanied also by Rev. John R. Dunne, O. S. A., spent last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday getting first-hand information on governmental activities.

Justice Roberts Explains

Explanation of the workings of the judicial branch was undertaken by Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, Assistant Attorney-General Thurman Arnold, and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Justice Roberts explained to the Villanovans the practical handling of cases submitted to and pleaded before the high court. Arnold, currently in the news because of the success of his prosecutions for violations of the anti-trust laws, concentrated in his talk on the weakness of the United States in production of magnesium and aluminum as a result of violations of these laws by trusts in cooperation with Germany. The operations of the FBI were also viewed.

The students studied the legislative branch of the government by visits to the Senate and House of Representatives and hearing talks by various members of both houses. Debates were witnessed in both houses and a meeting of the Senate Sub-Committee on Interstate Commerce was attended.

Workings of Congress

Informal talks by Senators and Representatives, arranged by Representative Somers (N. Y.), included an explanation of the practical workings of the House by Speaker of the House Rayburn (Tex.) and Democratic Majority Leader McCormick (Mass.).

Senator Wheeler (Mont.) solicited the Villanovans' opinions on the lend-lease bill and expressed his idea that college students are largely opposed to it; Senator Murdock (Utah) discussed international problems. Vice-President Wallace and Senators Maloney (Conn.), McCarran (Nev.), McNary (Ore.) and Barkley (Ky.) spoke briefly.

In point of time, the largest part of the trip consisted in study of the administrative branch of the government.

Study Administrative Branch

Features of this portion of the study, along with Brig. Gen. Hershey's discussion, were addresses by Adolph Berle, Assistant Secretary of State, and Jerome N. Frank, Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Berle explained the practical functioning of the State Department, while Frank discussed the work of the S. E. C.

Mark Graves, assistant to Secretary Morgenthau, explained the operations of the Department of the Treasury and discussed tax-collecting and a forthcoming sale of stamps as accumulators of the purchase price of "Baby" Bonds. Joseph Tone, head labor consultant of the Department of Labor, spoke at the group's banquet on Wednesday night and set forth the means the government is using to improve conditions of labor and effect a closer labor-employer relationship.

Attend Hearings

Hearings of the National Labor Relations Board, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Federal Trade Commission were attended. The N. L. R. B. meeting was occupied with a discussion of the Bethlehem Steel strike, the latter two with cases being prosecuted by the government under their separate authorities.

Joseph B. Eastman, Chairman, explained the workings of the I. C. C., and Albert Freer, one of five commissioners, the operation of the F. T. C.

The group, which had left Villanova early Tuesday morning, returned late Thursday night after visiting the National Catholic Welfare Conference and the Immaculate Conception Shrine at Catholic University.

Set Exam Dates For Scholarships

Three partial scholarships with a value of $1,000 each and applicable to the four-year college course will be awarded by Villanova to properly-qualified high school students on the basis of competitive examinations to be conducted in Mendel hall on Saturday, May 17.

Catholic young men who are high school seniors and in need of financial aid to assist them through college are eligible for the examinations. The yearly award of $250 will be credited against the annual expenses of the various major courses of study.

Scholarships will be awarded on the basis of the need for financial help and the results of comprehensive tests intended to measure the general knowledge of the student in four subjects usually required of secondary school students: English usage and literature, algebra and plane geometry, general science, and social studies.

The applicants will assemble in room 106, Mendel, at 9:30 A. M., and will be served a luncheon in the college dining hall at the conclusion of the examinations.

Application blanks may be obtained from the principals of the various Catholic schools or from the Registrar's Office, Villanova College. All entrants must be approved by the principals of their respective high schools.

Speaks To K. G. S.

Joseph M. Gambescia, sophomore science man and president of the society, spoke to the members of Kappa Gamma Sigma yesterday in Mendel hall.

In his talk, "The Contributions of the Curies to Science," he explained the work of the illustrious husband and wife in terms of the benefits it has rendered to mankind. He dwelt particularly on [illegible]eir work on the radioactive ele[illegible]s and explained the uses to [illegible] has been put in medical [illegible] science.

Anthropologists Here Next Week

Europe's machine-made war chaos provides a striking background for the symposium, "Peace and War among Primitive Peoples," to be conducted by the Catholic Anthropological Conference during its Sixteenth Annual Meeting at Villanova College next Tuesday, April 15.

The morning session of the meeting will be devoted to the reading of two papers concerning primitive tribal relations. Mr. Antonio Santa Cruz, of Catholic University, will discuss "Peace and War among the Guajira of Colombia, South America," and Dr. A. Irving Hallowell, of the University of Pennsylvania, will present "Hostile Motives and Peaceful Conduct in a Primitive Society."

Following the election of officers in the afternoon, Rev. Leon Legrain, University of Pennsylvania Assyriologist, will report on "The Sumerians of Ur of the Chaldees, before and after the Flood." Dr. Legrain has been working on specimens from Ur dating prior to 3000 B. C. The concluding discussion will be contributed by the Jesuit archaeologist, Rev. Joseph G. Doherty, of Weston College, on "Paleolithic Man in the Lebanon."

Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., is chairman of the committee on local arrangements.

Local A.S.M.E. Plans For N. Y. Convention

Approximately fifteen members of the Villanova student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers expect to attend the convention of student members of that organization to be held at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., on April 21 and 22.

Nineteen eastern colleges will send representatives to the affair, which will be the highlight of the year's activities for student groups of the A. S. M. E. One Villanova upperclassman, yet to be selected, will prepare a paper on some phase of mechanical engineering and deliver it during the course of the meeting.

Bradley Booming

Prom Orchestra Comes To Earle Friday; Has Signed M-G-M and N. B. C. Contracts

Will Bradley and his orchestra, featuring Ray McKinley at the drums and vocalists Lynn Gardner and Terry Allen will begin a week's engagement at the Earle Theater in Philadelphia this Friday. The engagement, coming during one of the busiest weeks in "show business," will provide a preview to the band's appearance here at the Junior Prom on May 9.

Testifying to the nation-wide popularity and appeal of Bradley's orchestra, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed the "band of 1941" to appear in two feature-length pictures, full casting for which will begin shortly.

The contract with M-G-M follows Bradley's appearance in the new entertainment field of "soundies." Headed by Jimmy Roosevelt, the company producing them has chosen from the "name bands" of the nation the Bradley aggregation to record and appear in the new three-minute films. Release of the Bradley "soundies" is expected to be among the earliest of the new features.

On the air lanes, Bradley and his orchestra will begin a 27-week engagement over a coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Company on April 27. The band will be the feature attraction of the "Silver Screen" program every Sunday.

Tickets for the Prom are now on sale at $5.00 per couple and can be purchased from either the Prom committee or any member of the junior class.

Presidents Hold Dinner For Beury

Last Thursday in Mendel hall, a testimonial dinner under the sponsorship of the Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., was tendered to Charles E. Beury, who will retire from the presidency of Temple University in June.

At the dinner, the following token was presented to Dr. Beury: "In virtue of the high esteem in which we hold you, President Charles E. Beury of Temple University, we the undersigned feel privileged to have had the opportunity to sit at dinner with you on this third day of April, nineteen hundred and forty-one.

"As colleagues of yours, we express sincere regret that you are about to relinquish active leadership of the university over which you have presided so ably for the past fifteen years."

The testimonial was signed by President Fred P. Corson, Dickinson College; President William Mather Lewis, Lafayette College; President Clement C. Williams, Lehigh University; the late John A. Schaeffer, president of Franklin and Marshall College; President Levering Tyson, Muhlenberg College; Executive Director Guy E. Snavely, Association of American Colleges; President N. E. McClure, Ursinus College; President Edward V. Stanford, Villanova College; and President Henry W. A. Hanson, Gettysburg College.

Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., vice-president of Villanova, was also in attendance at the dinner.

Student Chemists Hold Convention Here Saturday

Approximately 200 Expected at Annual Meeting; Villanova's Smith Will Be One of Eight in Prize Contest

Approximately 200 student chemists and teachers representing colleges in this district will come to Villanova this Saturday, April 26, to attend the annual convention of the Intercollegiate Student Chemists.

The meeting will be featured by the presentation of student research papers, a scientific motion picture, and a trip to the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia.

A one-day session, the convention will begin with registration at 9:00 A. M. Immediately following registration there will be guided tours of the engineering, chemistry and chemical engineering laboratories. Additional interest for these tours will be provided by the exhibits being set up for display during Open House.

Presentation of papers on different topics by eight student speakers will complete the morning session. The student delivering the best speech will receive a textbook of "Physical Chemistry" by Glasstone, while the runner-up will receive a set of Patterson's French-English and German-English dictionaries for chemists. Each speaker will receive a memento. All prizes are being donated by the Philadelphia Section of the American Chemical Society.

Frank W. Smith, senior chemical engineer, will represent Villanova in the competition. He will discuss the operation and use of the still which he and John McKinney, also a senior chemical engineer, are constructing in the Units Operation laboratory. The construction of the still is a project which is partial fulfillment of the work required for graduation.

After lunch in the college cafeteria, those attending the convention will view a motion picture on surface chemistry in which Dr. Irving Langmuir conducts experiments to determine the size and shape of many molecules. Dr. Langmuir is a research chemist for General Electric and a Nobel prizewinner. The picture will be shown in the Mendel hall Amphitheater, and is being sponsored by the Philadelphia Section of the A. C. S.

Following the motion picture a short business meeting will take place in order to determine the selection of the college to sponsor next year's convention and to consider requests for membership.

The convention will end with a visit to the Franklin Institute, covering both the museum and the Fels Planetarium. The museum's exhibits on artificial lighting, the

The Consul's Not Resting, He's Dead!

A preview scene taken from "Margin for Error," to be given this Friday and Sunday evenings in the Field House, shows a bit of discussion raging between police officer Moe Finklestein, played by Frank Buckley, left, and the American doctor, Jennings, enacted by James Donovan, right, in the German Consul's library. The subject of their argument is the Consul himself, who has just died while sitting in his chair, after being shot, stabbed and poisoned. The Consul, to be depicted by Walt Smith in the play, is played by James Forkin at this rehearsal.

Give Card Party Tonight In Gym

The eighth annual card party and dance, held under the auspices of the Augustinian Seminary Guild, will be held this evening in the Villanova College Field House, starting at 8:30 P. M. The affair will consists of card games from 8:30 P. M. until 10:30 P. M. and dancing which will continue from 11:00 P. M. until 1:00 A. M. Admission will be $1.00.

Two uniform prizes are offered at each table. The first prize will be a set of six silver-plated teaspoons; the second award will be a bridge set consisting of two packs of cards. At least five door prizes are offered to those attending.

Music for the dancing which will follow the games will be provided by the Villanovans, college dance orchestra.

The proceeds of the combined party and dance, made possible by the efforts of the Villanova priests and by the friends and relatives of the seminarians, will be contributed to the support of seminaries throughout the entire Augustinian order. All work contributing to the functioning of the affair was voluntary and without the aid of these workers little would have been accomplished.

Villanova College students will aid in the execution of the venture by acting as ushers and assistants and by clearing the floor for dancing after the games have been completed.

Officials of the affair expect this years' attendance to exceed last year's mark of 700.

Frosh To Vote Monday

Freshman elections, for officers of next year's sophomore class, will be held next Monday in room 110, Mendel hall, from 11:30 A. M. until 1:30 P. M., under the direction of the Student Council.

Candidates who were nominated yesterday and who have been approved by the authorities will be listed on the ballot. No freshman will be allowed to run if he was cited by the Student Council last fall for failure to observe freshman regulations.

Balloting will be secret and all votes must be cast in the polling room. No campaigning in the vicinity of the polls will be tolerated.

Sophomore nominations will be held in the Mendel Amphitheatre this Thursday from 12:30 to 1:30 P. M.

Season Ends

For Beta Gamma Next Week; Radio Debate, Two Others Left on Schedule

Beta Gamma debaters will close the most successful season in the history of the society when they meet teams of the University of Pennsylvania, New Rochelle College, and Manhattan College in the next eight days. This year's season was marked by a schedule of more than 25 debates.

Penn will be met this Saturday at 5:00 P. M.; they will be verbally fought over station WFIL by Edward Borden, sophomore artsman, and Thomas De Sipin, junior engineer. The grounds for discussion will be the proposed convoy of British ships by the U. S. Navy. This encounter will be the last of Villanova's radio debate series, Loyola, Swarthmore, and Pennsylvania have been previously encountered on the air.

The duel with New Rochelle College is to be on the issue, "Resolved: That Progressive Education is superior to Traditional Education.' Locals participating in the education question are Thomas Moore, senior education student and chairman of Beta Gamma, and George Harris, sophomore education man. The debate is to be held at New Rochelle, N. Y., on Tuesday, April 29.

The last debate of the season is to be held with Manhattan College in New York on Wednesday, April 30. The topic for discussion is "Resolved: That the United States should form a union with the British Commonwealth." Moore will also participate in this final debate, and will be aided by Joseph Mahoney, sophomore artsman.

L. K. D. Elects

Election of the officers of Lambda Kappa Delta, fraternity of the School of Science, for the coming year will be held tomorrow afternoon at 12:45 in room 210, Mendel hall. The voting was postponed from Tuesday, April 8.

All Draft Registrants Are Advised To Follow New Standard Procedure

To acquaint students registered under the Selective Service Act with the proper procedure for them to follow at the present time, the state head of selective service administration has informed all colleges of an identical procedure which should be put into effect at once.

Accordingly, authorities of Villanoval will issue the following letter today to all students registered, stressing the need for immediate action in carrying out its provisions:

To the Student:

1. Villanova College, in cooperation with other institutions throughout the nation, submits herewith pertinent information relative to the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940. With your help this will eliminate considerable confusion for those of you who are within the prescribed ages.

2. If you have already received a questionnaire and have been classified in Class 1-D, the local board must reclassify you without delay. It is, therefore, important that the local board be furnished with complete particulars about you immediately.

3. Copies of memoranda to all state directors of the Selective Service System covering the subject of students, and excerpts from the Selective Service Regulations relative to occupational deferments may be secured in the Registrar's office, 118 Mendel hall. You should read these carefully. The information will be of the greatest importance to you.

4. If you have already submitted your Selective Service questionnaire to your local board and are now classified in Class 1-D, you should immediately prepare a Statement of Information in duplicate. Mail the original to your local draft board without delay. Deliver a copy to the designated official of the college, Registrar Banmiller. From this information, your college record and other pertinent data, the college will prepare an affidavit setting forth your scholas-

'Margin For Error' To Show Friday, Sunday At 8:30 P.M.

Belle Masque's Fifth Annual Production Will Have Two-Night Stand in Field House; Tickets Sold at $.50; Two Rosemont Girls in Cast

By ROBERT J. MCINTYRE

"Margin for Error," the fifth annual production of the Belle Masque Society, will have its first presentation at 8:30 P. M. this Friday, April 25, in the Villanova College Field House. The second showing will be given at the same time Sunday, April 27. Admission to each performance will be fifty cents, with no seats reserved.

Complementing the six Villanova members of the cast are two Rosemont College freshmen, Kay Haley and Mary Lou Smith, both of whom have had previous dramatic experience. Miss Haley will portray the Consul's wife in the drama, while Miss Smith is cast as a maid in the consulate.

Six Male Roles

Villanova students who will appear in the Clare Booth Broadway success are: Walter Smith and Edward Eichman, senior commercemen, who will enact the roles of the consul and his secretary, respectively; Frank Buckley, a junior in the commerce school, who will be seen as the Jewish policeman, Moe Finklestein; George Szucs, sophomore education student, who will portray the American newspaperman in love with the wife of the consul; James F. Donovan, senior artsman and president of the Belle Masque, as the Doctor; and Robert J. McIntyre, junior commerce man, as the American Fuehrer.

The set for the play, constructed by a crew under the direction of Robert Dooley, a junior in the business school, will represent the library of a German consul in a large American city. More than 600 books have been placed on the shelves of the bookcases which line the room. Assisting Dooley were John Faraci and Logan Phillips, both third-year men in the business school; James Forkin, senior artsman, and John McGovern, a senior commerce student.

Various stage properties, such as a bust of Hitler, a Nazi flag, and other accouterments necessary for a complete set, were obtained by John Burke, junior artsman, who is company manager of the production.

Consul Murdered

The plot of "Margin for Error," written by the author of "The Women," revolves around the murder of a German consul in a large American city and around the people who have motives for such a crime. First under suspicion are the wife of the consul, forced into mariage with a man she does not love because of a threat to send her father to a concentration camp, and her lover, an American newspaperman.

Then there is the American Fuehrer, whose sudden demise has been ordered by Berlin. The un-

D. P. E. To Dine At Lew Tendler's

Members of Commerce Frat Will Hold Annual Banquet Tomorrow Night

Members of Delta Pi Epsilon, fraternity of the School of Commerce and Finance, will hold their annual dinner tomorrow evening in Tendler's Restaurant, Philadelphia, starting at 7:30 P. M.

The Dinner Committee, under the chairmanship of senior Joseph A. Barnes, has promised that a guest speaker will be obtained to address the gathering. Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the commerce school, and Patrick J. Dougherty, assistant professor of business administration and moderator of the fraternity, will also speak. John J. Parson, junior commerce man, will act as toastmaster at the banquet.

During the evening fraternity keys will be presented to the 25 senior members of D. P. E. After the dinner, those present will be entertained by musicians secured by chairman Barnes.

Presentation of the keys inaugurates a new policy under which the student's payment for the key is taken out of the dues he has paid into the treasury in proportion to the amount paid in during his membership, rather than forcing him to bear the expense of the key at the time of purchase.

According to the organization's president, George J. Flannery, all members who have paid their dues are eligible to attend the affair. At the present time, 75 members are on the list of those eligible to attend.

The site of the dinner, Tendler's Restaurant, is run by Lew Tendler, famous contender for Benny Leonard's lightweight championship of the world. It occupies approximately the same position in Philadelphia favor as that held by Jack Dempsey's restaurant in New York City.

The banquet will be the second one for the fraternity since its reorganization. Dormant since 1931, the life of the organization was revived last year when a group of commerce students, led by Flannery and Edward L. Jonik, '40, secured its constitution and gave it a new lease on life. Flannery was elected Delta Pi Epsilon's secretary for a short trial period and its president last May.

At last year's banquet, Maurice Doyle, '31, former secretary of the fraternity, spoke on its past history. Doyle aided in D. P. E.'s reorganization.

Choral Group To Sing In New York This Friday

The Choral Society will give a concert at Notre Dame College, Staten Island, N. Y., for the students and members of that school's alumnae, this Friday evening, April 25.

The concert, which will last about an hour-and-a-half, will consist of fourteen numbers rendered by the entire group and three selections by the quartet. The first half of the program consists of: "Lo! How a Rose," "Winter Song," "Duna," "Away Rio," "Eight Bells," "Passing By," "Deep River," and "Stout-hearted Men."

After intermission, the group will sing: "O Sacrum Convivium," "Regina Coeli Jubila," "Fight," "The Boatman," "Little Wheel A-Turning" and "Lullaby." Quartet selections are: "Alexander," "Song of the Jolly Roger," and "Drums."

Devine Makes 4.00 On Arts Honor Roll

Thomas F. Devine, sophomore artsman, was the only student in the School of Arts to receive a perfect 4.00 quality-point rating for the the third quarter, according to the honor roll released yesterday by Rev. John F. Burns, O. S. A., Dean of the arts school.

The honor roll lists the following artsmen with ratings of 3.00 and higher: freshmen, John M. Quinn, Joseph J. Carbine, Harry C. Kiefer, and James F. Connelly; sophomores, besides Devine, John J. Hopkins and Joseph F. Mahoney; juniors, William E. Schubert, Jr., and John P. Maher; seniors, Francis S. Vogel, James P. Donovan, and John M. Bader.

No freshmen or sophomores received sufficiently high grades to make the honor roll in the education department. The six juniors named are John P. Fullam, Arthur Connor, Arthur W. Schuyler, Thomas J. Harford, and Joseph Yednock. Thomas J. Moore was the only education senior to make the list.

Canvass For The Centennial

APPROXIMATELY five hundred visitors will be brought to the campus by the coming conventions of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education and the Intercollegiate Student Chemists. Open House and the Mendel Medal award will attract still more and give us a chance to exercise our hospitality and show our guests what we have at Villanova.

With the Centennial celebration so near at hand, it should be the policy of all campus societies with outside affiliations to endeavor to have their conventions held here. Now is the time to put in bids for the 1942 and 1943 meetings, and Villanova can offer inducements for these that few other colleges can match.

Certainly one couldn't find a more beautiful spot, especially in the Spring when most meetings are held, and to be added to this is the college's easy access by all means of transportation. Furthermore, our location is central both as regards regional colleges and relative to more local organizations.

All that is needed is iniatitive on the part of campus societies to put in bids and work for the meetings. Each one held here will enable more students to participate and will attract more attention to the college.

Cling To The Shadows

WE all recognize the fact that we have certain rights, but we are rather reluctant at times to admit the duties that go with these rights.

We all have the right to use the corridors and stairways, but we sometimes fail to fulfill the duty of keeping the corridor and stairways usable for our fellow-students.

It is rather provoking at times to come to the corner of the corridor and find barely space enough to squeeze through between the fellows at the drinking fountain and those standing around doing nothing in particular. It seems that the gossip groups gather where the congestion is the greatest, on the stairways, in the doorways, and at the corners.

A natural result of this unnatural congestion in the halls between classes is that those in a hurry to reach their next (or, and more probably, the dining forced to resort to gridiron tactics to obtain their objective. As a consequence, elbows fly and black looks and blacker thoughts follow the unfortunate who is hastening down the hall trying to recover his books as well as his composure.

The remedy for this is not a continuous rush from classroom to classroom, up, down, or around, but just a little observance and discretion on your part. If it so happens that it is necessary to converse in the corridors, the conversation can be carried on just as well, if not better, along the wall instead of across the corridors between two open doors.

Let Post Mortems Be Early

THE policy followed in a number of courses of not having re-examinations for mid-year conditions until after the Easter holidays makes preparation for these tests harder than it might be if they were held earlier, about three weeks after the first semester examinations.

It is assumed that the students will be be able to prepare over the Easter vacation, but holidays are not conducive to study, and, even if they were, the period from January until Easter gives the student time to forget much.

Moving up the re-examinations would enable those who must take them to do so while the material is still fresh in their minds and would give them a better chance of making up their deficiencies. Again, if the second tests were given to the student in the proximate future, the review would not necessitate the same strenuous "boning" that a lapse of two and one-half months involves.

Every possible aid and advantage should be extended to the worried student who is forced to take a re-examination.

Sink The Convoy

THEY are on the march!

For more than two weeks intensified maneuvers in many sectors of Europe have demonstrated just what type of conflict is being waged across the sea. With ruthless, inhuman ferocity, bombing expeditions, land fighting, and naval skirmishes have taken their toll. In comparison with this war the last world conflict assumes the semblance of a "sham battle."

Yet, in spite of all the destructive features attached to this strife, America appears to be pursuing the unattractive trail to martial entanglement.

With the advent of the Jugoslavian uprising, the activities on all fronts became more extensive and more progressive. Since that moment the supply needs of the allied countries and the inefficiency of their transportation and communication mediums have become most obvious.

It is in the realization of their wants and in our contemplated endeavors to alleviate them that America is endangered, for in essaying to attend these deficiencies of non-aggressive nations America is considering the feasibility of convoying—if such action can at all be termed feasible.

When all the reasonable possibilities which could result from such a movement are investigated, the plan is open to loud denunciation. In summarizing what the convoy idea embodies, we can best speak in the quoted words of President Roosevelt, "Convoying means shooting, and shooting means war." This one abhorrent quality about the thing should suffice to make us denounce it.

The people of our nation were in favor of aiding Britain, but the people of our nation are not in favor of entering into the war in order to fulfill the delivery of this aid. The United States still speaks through its people, and they say, "America First."

FACULTY COMMENTS

Develop A Pleasing Personality

By Mr. Bueche

YOUR stay at Villanova should result in the development of some outstanding characteristics including that type of personality which will enable you to get along with your fellow-beings. You have come to Villanova not only to be filled with information but also to be developed in honesty, forcefulness, courtesy, intelligence and industry.

If proper personality is developed, knowledge will care for itself. Success is the result of two parts personality plus one part brains. During the past depression those men who were dismissed from positions lost out, not because of inadequate preparation or lack of specific knowledge in their profession, but due to their inabilitiy to get along with their fellow-workers.

Is your personality pleasing?

1. How well do you like people?
2. How much do you enjoy talking to other people, about what interests them, rather than about what interests you?
3. How much sense of humor or fun do you have?
4. How much do you do for your friends?
5. Are you a forceful, vigorous person, or are you a dead one?

Sooner or later you will discover, if you are wise, that life is a mixture of good days and bad, victory and defeat, give and take College life will have taught you that it does not pay to be a sensitive soul; that you should let some things go over your head like water off a duck's back You should learn that to lose your temper you will lose dignity and possibly friends Life is not a bed of roses and you will have burnt toast for breakfast, the secret being to pretend to like burnt toast, at least once in while.

Take It Easy

Do not take the other fellow's grouch too seriously. If you carry a chip on your shoulder you will discover that it is an easy way to get into a fight. Carry tales and gossip about others and discover how quickly your friends leave you. You will learn that buck-passing always turns out to be a boomerang, and that it never pays.

Do not think you are indispensable to your boss, for this much is certain: there will be a time, in the future, when you will not be able to answer the call, and the business will run along perfectly without you. While one likes to receive credit where credit is due, do not feel too bad if someone else edges in for consideration, especially if the business shows a profit.

All Are Human

Learn early that even the janitor is human, and that it does little harm to smile and say, "Good morning," even if it is raining. Dr. W. R. Whitney, Head of the Research Laboratory of the General Electric Company, has painted on his office door, "Come in, Rain or Shine." With an invitation like this no young engineer need hesitate to contact the Head of the Research Laboratory with his problems.

Learn that most of the other fellows are as ambitious as you are and that they have brains that are as good or better, and that hard work and not cleverness is the secret of success. Be sympathetic with the youngsters coming into the business, for remember how bewildered you were when you first started. Do not worry too much concerning orders not obtained but continue making contacts, give your best, and luck is bound to change.

Work in the business world, like baseball in sports, involves teamwork, for very few players can move from first to home without the cooperation of their fellow-players. This same truth is evident in the commercial and business world, for only by the efforts of all concerned can better things be accomplished.

Keep in mind, bosses are not monsters, trying to get the last ounce of work out of you for the least amount of pay, but that they are usually fine men who have succeeded through hard work and who want to do the right thing.

Personality simply consists of helping to make life more pleasant for one's fellowmen. Don't do only that which is required of you—be ready to expend a little additional effort in order to lighten the burden of someone else. By doing a favor for someone today, you may win a friend who will stand by you all through life. In the business world, you will be judged not only on the calibre of your work, but also on your attitude in doing that work. If asked to work a few extra hours some evening, do it willingly, with the view that such a request may lead to an advancement in the future.

Folks are not any harder to get along with in one place than another; "getting along" depends upon the individual's developing his personality with the aim of living his life with the least amount of friction with his fellow workers and neighbors.

RETURNING to school after a busy holiday week of egg-nog parties and Easter-egg hunts, most students were struggling in the throes of that inevitable scholastic seasonal disease, "spring fever."

It is possible that some profs also contract the disease, but most of them seem to have been inoculated with a certain assignment anti-toxin. Here's hoping they give vent to their true feelings and realize the hopeless plight in which we collegians find ourselves.

Publicity for the Junior Prom is progressing at full speed. Stage, radio, and the printed page are all being effectively used to put over the biggest prom ever.

Last Thursday night found many of the boys attending a special show on the stage of the Earle theatre, devoted to advertising the dance. Will Bradley's music was enthusiastically applauded by the entire audience.

LOCAL NOTES:

Bob McIntyre, lonesome because Margie went home for the holidays, was seen "floating our dance" at St. Joe's Tommy Dorsey Prom at the Bellevue. . . Strange as it may seem, some our roving romeos are encountering trouble in contacting dates for the May dance. Has the committee arranged for a blind date bureau?

Speaking of proms, why don't the local girls' colleges get together? Inevitably they hold their dances on the same date; this spring is no exception for Immaculata and Chestnut Hill. Such competition can only result in financial losses and some disappointments. Rosemont's however, is to be on May 16.

SPROUTING LEAVES:

Lately Art Spector has been seen in town with Leona. If he doesn't watch out he'll be blackballed by Rosemont's I. D. . . Jim McElligott displayed a Bethlehem lovely at the Lehigh baseball game, as did Bill Craven at the Vermont opener.

"March of the Wildcats" was featured last Tuesday night on the "Uncle Walter's Doghouse" program by Bob Strong's orchestra. . . . "Major" McDonald recently had a quarrel with his girl friend, Mae. She was to choose either our hero or the other fellow. The "Maj" stomped out the door, class-ring and all. Guess who was picked.

New cars on the campus include Harvey Satenstein's green Dodge convertible with a green top, no less; Jack Enright's two-toned brown and yellow Pontiac Sedanet; and Bert Goldberg's corresponding gray Chevrolet.

DAFFYNITIONS:

Water: Stuff that steam was and ice will be if not already.

Foam: What's underneath? Guess? Certainly not the ocean.

Pretzel: The ultimate end of a piece of dough torn between the desire to go straight or be one of the boys.

Engineer: a person who runs a train.

Fountain Pen: All that its name implies.

HORS D'OEUVRES:

Charley Timmins, '40, is in military training at Langley Field, Virginia, with the 21st Engineers Aviation. . . Jim Cashin, erstwhile bridge shark, journeyed to Harcum with a teammate where two of the local co-eds trounced our stars in three straight.

Joe Daley spends much of his time reading the comic-strip exploits of the "Spirit." . . Joe Yednock idles away his spare time putting around a crude six-hole miniature golf course in back of Fedigan hall.

Joe Connor has been making quite a few trips to Haddonfield in the last three weeks. Could the reason be a certain young lady by the name of Dolores? We wonder if she's as nice as the song of the same name.

George Blake, Frank Fitzpatrick, and Jim Scott, all '40 grads, returned to the campus on Friday to take in the diamond encounter with the Providence Friars. . .

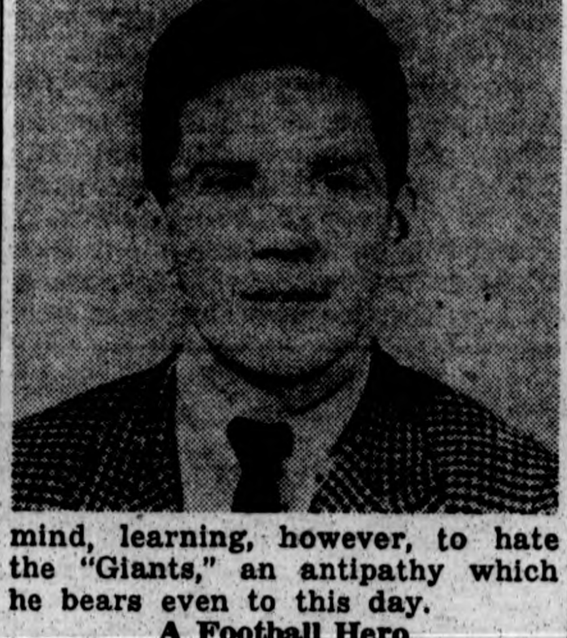
Meet The Boys: Bill Will Enter Military Life; Joseph Desires to Handle a Doctor's Knife

By LOUIS DE SIMONE

"I guess a military life is the only thing left for me. I'm not sorry, though. You can make more money that way than you will in any pesky office."

This, in short, is the outlook on life of one Bill Brown, the terror of the 150-lb. gridiron. But the statement will not appear too rash when you become better acquainted with this amiable character.

Richard W. Brown ("W" is for William, hence the name Bill), was born October 10, 1918, in the peaceful and serene city of Brooklyn. Here, amidst flying pop bottles and raucous shouts threatening the beloved "umps" with direst punishments, he waxed strong in body and mind, learning, however, to hate the "Giants," an antipathy which he bears even to this day.



A Football Hero

Holy Cross grammar school, near Bill's home, became his first educational abode. Enrolling at St. John's Prep of Brooklyn, he soon put his athletic prowess to use in varsity football competition, where he was a regular for his last two years.

Like many another good Brooklynite, our red-headed friend matriculated at Villanova in 1937, when he entered the School of Commerce and Finance.

Football again attracted his attention, but this time he directed his talents into channels more in keeping with his stature. His efficiency in 150-pound football is attested to by Frankie Lombardo's remark that "Bill was a house afire in the Princeton game." Quarterback Bill just couldn't be stopped.

In addition to his cavortings on the ribbed court and the baseball diamond in the various uniforms of the campus dormitories, Bill was one of the zanies of Fedigan hall's Amateur Night show. He numbers the Holy Name Society among his extra-curricular activities, and collects new hats as a hobby to supplement his other avocation, football—in any way, shape, or form.

An habitue of a certain Bryn Mawr "juke box" establishment, he is often seen there, puffing contentedly on his huge pipe, and usually in the company of Bob Hursh and George Balmore.

Sam Replaces Dot

Possessor of number 1020 in Uncle Sam's draft lottery and faced with the prospect of a year's military service immediately upon graduation, Bill decided that he'd like to choose his branch of service and accordingly has applied for admittance into the United States Marine Corps.

If he's accepted after a soon-to-be interview, Dot is going to feel pretty bad about the whole thing. She and Bill haven't missed a dance here since Bill's sophomore year.

THE "Paterson (N. J.) Gazette," issue of December 18, 1920, announced the birth of an eight-pound baby boy, henceforth to go through this vale of tears with the appellation of Joseph B. Clarken.

In a few years the Clarken family migrated to Ridgewood in the same state, where the future soldier spent his formative years.

Joe divided his early education between Mt. Carmel grammar school and Roosevelt Military Academy in Monsey, N. Y. His success as a tyro officer led to his prepping at La Salle Military Academy in Oaksdale, L. I.

Wins Hearst Award

Here he received the Hearst Journal-American Medal for being the second best non-commissioned officer and played on the junior varsity football team, all the while maintaining a high scholastic average.

Smitten with the high resolve of serving his fellow man and desirous of curing the world's bodily ills at least, Joe enrolled in Villanova's School of Science in 1937. Continuing his academic and athletic achievements, he garnered consistently high marks and was a member of the freshman swimming team. Natatorial pursuits still occupy much of his leisure time, and these, together with golf, form his principal sporting diversions.

Undivided Allegiance

Many and varied are his other interests. He is a member of the Sociology Seminar, the Lambda Kappa Delta fraternity, the Holy Name Society, and the Sanctuary Society. And, lest we forget, he's vice-president of the Senior Class.

When it comes to members of the fair sex, however, his interests are neither many nor varied. His undivided attention in things social is directed toward Kay, a vivacious Rosemont belle. He never tires of singing her praises (singing is, of course, used purely in a metaphorical sense), to whoever happens to be occupying room 5 in Simpson hall with him.

Seeks A-1 Rating

Obsessed with the determination of obtaining an A-1 rating, Joe is working to that end now. But please don't misunderstand. The top rating for which he is striving is in the medical profession, not in the draft board honor roll. After completing his college course, he hopes to continue his medical training in the Temple University Medical School; his specific love is the surgical field.

You may be sure that this Jerseyite will do his utmost to hit the top of his chosen profession; after all, he'll have to attain a degree of success concomitant with his shiny red convertible Oldsmobile which he received as a graduation gift. Oh, Doctor!

Survey Shows There's No Answer To: 'Are Day-Hops Or Residents Smarter?'

By EDWARD F. BORDEN

Effect of environment upon student academic standings in the School of Commerce and Finance was measured in a recently-completed survey made by George J. Flannery, president of Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity, under the direction of Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the commerce school.

Seeking an answer to the age-old debate among students as to the relative "smartness" of the day-hops and the residents, Fr. Bartley caused a study to be made of the percentage of day students and the percentage of residents in each of four groups: those on the honor roll, those with averages of 2.75 or above, those with ratings below 1.21, and those between 1.21 and 2.75.

Using the marks of the first quarter and the marks of the second quarter, practically identical results were obtained for each quarter on the subject of whether dormitory or home study is more conducive to success in studies.

And the answer?

Well. . .it's still up in the air, for the survey showed the commerce day-hops in the sophomore and junior classes to have obtained the better marks in both quarters and the resident freshmen and seniors higher grades than the day students in those classes.

Classes Broken Down

To obtain accurate percentages, the respective numbers of day and resident students in the school were taken into consideration. It was found that the commerce freshmen are 66.7% resident and 33.3% non-resident; the sophomores 62.2% resident and 37.8% non-resident; the juniors 63.8% resident and 36.2% non-resident; and that the seniors are 59.4% resident and 40.6% non-resident.

In the "above average" group, those with a 2.75 rating or better, the residents had higher ratings in the freshman and senior classes, while the non-residents led in the sophomores and junior years.

The first- and fourth-year residents also had more on the honor rolls than the day students of the corresponding classes, while there were more sophomore and junior non-residents than residents with the desirable 3.00 rating.

Two Resident Classes Higher

In the freshman class, 17.6% of the residents had averages of 2.75 or above and placed 8.6% of the class on the honor rolls; 9.1% of the freshman non-residents had 2.75 or better and 5.2% made the honor rolls.

Leading in high ratings in the senior class also, 26.1% of the fourth-year residents had 2.75 or over and 10.5% were on the honor rolls; of the day students in that class, 18.3% had at least 2.75 and 10.0% achieved the 3.00 goal.

But in the sophomore and junior classes, the non-resident group led in "high men." Of the sophomore day students, 16.5% had 2.75 or higher and 9.0% made the honor rolls; of the residents in the same class, 9.1% made at least 2.75 and 6.2% made 3.00 or over.

Trend Same Below 1.21

In the junior class, 19.2% of the day-hops had 2.75 or better and 11.5% were listed on the honor rolls; 10.8% of the residents were in the "above average" class and 10.8% also were on the honor rolls.

The "below average" class follows practically the same trend as the "above average" group, i. e., the distribution of those with ratings below 1.21 shows more resident sophomores and juniors below that mark than non-residents in the same classes and less resident seniors below 1.21 than non-resident seniors. The only variance with the "above average" trend is that there were more of the "higher" resident freshman class below 1.21 than day-hop freshmen.

Percentages listed above are those for an average of the two quarters.

Dean Bartley's conclusion drawn from the survey is that, "Will power and habits of study seem to be the determining factors. Place of residence evidently does not definitely affect the grades of the student."

And that, we think, settles that.

Friday Night's the nite;
Villanova's Gym the site,
It's the Belle Masque's intent
"Margin for Error" to present.

Friday night's not the only nite;
Sunday night, too, you'll get a sight . .
Of Rosemont's prize thespians in action.
. . .Might swell your heart's reaction!

This coming week-end brings to Vilanova one of Clare Booth's broadway successes, "Margin for Error." Most of us remember the playwright's smash hit of stage and screen, "The Women." The crisp wit that was featured in it made us take to her type of comedy like a New Dealer takes to F. D. R.

Average College Man:

A columnist for the University of Alabama's Crimson-White tells of his escapade with one of his fellow students.

"I'm no kin to the 'average man' you read so much about in the papers these days," he said, "but I wish you guys would stop throwing that 'average' stuff around."

"According to you fellows, I've got 1.4 suits, 3.6 cigarettes in my pockets, .7 rings on my hand, .2 autos, 30.6 cents in my jeans and 2.1 pairs of shoes. It's getting pretty monotonous."

"Where you going now?" I wondered as he started away.

Best Idea Yet:

The Notre Dame Scholastic brought out a noteworthy idea in one of its recent issues. In the muddle of international conflict many of us are hastily making critical statements about the cause of this entire mess. It is, therefore, pleasing to discover that some of us can see matters in a more constructive light.

A group of domestic science students at Mundelein College in Chicago, says the Scholastic, is trying to do something for the low-income worker. Rather than spending time talking about conditions over which they have no control, they are attempting to set out a program by which the man with a small income can give his family the most benefits possible.

These girls have outlined budgets for various low-income groups. Plans for low cost homes have been drawn up and the best financing schemes have been set forth. What is more, all this material is made available to the people who can use it.

Belle Air Theme To Show Working Of Basic Doctrine

In developing the theme of the forthcoming 1941 edition of the Belle Air, "The Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man," the editors of the annual will attempt to show how Villanova, as a Catholic college, follows this fundamental Christian principle in its daily functioning.

An introductory paragraph will disclose the philosophical background of the theme; this is to be followed by a discussion of the principles involved, pointing out the exemplary manner in which Christ fulfilled these principles in His descent upon earth.

The members of the senior class have been constantly reminded of this ideal ever since their registration at Villanova, and it has governed their actions as undergraduates. They are expected to carry it forth into the world as a guide and inspiration on the road to a finer life.

As an illustration of the high regard the Church holds for this theme, the efforts of one of her foremost speakers, Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen, have been devoted solely of late to talks with this idea as a nucleus.

The editors of the Belle Air intend that a better realization of the rule will be instilled in the student body through the devotion of this year's issue of the book to its explanation and fulfillment.

The pages which will carry the text have already been set up and await the completion of other sections before the book goes to press early in May.

P. K. P. Run-Offs Fill Roster Of Officers

At a run-off election held on Tuesday, April 8, Dennis Boyle was elected vice-president; John Sweeney, treasurer; and Nicholas Aceto, secretary, of Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, for the scholastic year 1941-42.

This special vote was taken when none of the candidates for these three offices received the necessary majority required for election. Other officers-to-be, as previously announced, are Vincent Gordon, president; John Quinn, sergeant-at-arms; and Robert Ayerle, Student Council representative.

Keys and pins were distributed at a regular meeting of the fraternity held during the fourth period yesterday. Raymond Vener, present president, stated that the reception of the pins was so favorable that another order will probably be placed in the near future.

S. P. E. E. Convention Plans Settled; Name Ladies' Committees

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the engineering school, has announced that preparations are virtually complete for the spring meeting of the Middle Atlantic section of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education to be held at Villanova on Saturday, May 3.

Invitations have been mailed and many acceptances have already been received. The final proof of the program, which will be announced next week, has been received from the printer and approved. Maps have been sent those who will attend, in order to aid them in reaching the campus.

Mrs. J. S. Morehouse, wife of the Dean, will serve as general chairman of a special group of ladies' committees which will arrange for special sightseeing trips and a luncheon for the women attending the meeting.

Mrs. G. Macbeth has been appointed chairman of the hospitality committee. Other members are Mrs. E. McGrath, Mrs. J. Savage, Mrs. W. Hagerty, and Mrs. L. Brown.

Mrs. Morehouse is also chairman of the luncheon committee. She will be assisted by Mrs. J. Oakey, Mrs. J. Savage, Mrs. H. Bueche, and Mrs. G. Macbeth.

Mrs. H. Bueche will be in charge of trips and transportation. Mrs. G. Macbeth, Mrs. W. Driscoll, Mrs. E. McGrath, and Mrs. W. McHugh will also serve on this committee.

Mrs. J. A. Oakey is chairman of the refreshments committee, which includes Mrs. E. McCaffery, Mrs. E. Amelotti, Mrs. L. Brown, Mrs. W. Hagerty, Mrs. G. Macbeth, Mrs. H. Bueche, and Mrs. W. Gorman.

Mrs. W. Hagerty is in charge of table decorations. Other members of this group are Mrs. W. Driscoll, Mrs. P. Banmiller, and Mrs. J. Gallen.

Anthropological Group Re-Elects President

The Rev. Francis P. LeBuffe, S. J., was re-elected President of the Catholic Anthropological Conference at the 16th annual meeting of the group, held last Tuesday at Villanova College.

Papers by Antonio Santa Cruz and Dr. A. Irving Hallowell featured the morning session of the meeting. Mr. Santa Cruz discussed "Peace and War among the Guajira of Colombia, South America," while Dr. Hallowell chose as his topic "Hostile Motives and Peaceful Conduct in a Primitive Society."

The Rev. Leon Legrain, University of Pennsylvania Assyriologist, demonstrated many slides and crude tools of primitive civilizations in conjunction with his discussion of "The Sumerians of Ur of the Chaldees, before and after the Flood." The Rev. Joseph G. Doherty, S. J., of Weston College, closed the panel with a paper on "Paleolithic Man in Lebanon."

Bradley Interview Finds Will "Sore" About That Boogie-Woogie Build-Up

"Hey, what's this I'm hearing about you fellows out at Villanova going around saying that I'll play plenty of 'boogie-woogie' and 'hot' stuff at your Junior Prom and little else?"

"Not I, Pal," we answered the indignant party who made the accusation last week backstage at the Earle Theater in Philadelphia where he and his band were playing a week's engagement, the genial young man with the gold trom- 'boogie-woogie' outfit.

Thus opened a lengthy and very entertaining interview with the young maestro—and also with the happy-go-lucky drummer man, Ray McKinley—between shows.

Before they gave out with the history of their careers, Will and Ray held forth at length on the injustice they were being done when they were accused of being a 'boogie-woogie' outfit."

"Sure," said Bradley, "we play an occasional number in the double-beat tempo and we play almost as many 'swing' numbers as the other orchestras, but it's the last thing in the world that I want to be typed as a 'boogie-woogie' outfit."

With drummer McKinley earnestly seconding him, Will explained his position on the subject. It seems that a record he made of "Beat Me Daddy, Eight to the Bar" caught on like wildfire because of its unusual solid doubling of the tempo and, says the maestro, "we naturally had to continue making records in that tempo. It's just my luck that people seem to judge us on these records alone."

"We like 'boogie-woogie' and we think it's more than just a novelty, but at the same time we don't want to be thought of as devoting most of our time to playing it. When we play a dance, we play at least twice as many slow numbers as other types, and that's what we'll do at your Junior Prom on May 9. Lord, I'd hate to go to a dance myself if I couldn't take my fair lady in my arms and dance like a sane person."

His stage offerings at the Earle bore out his words, for he played only one "boogie-woogie" and two swing numbers at each show—we mean at all the shows except that on "Villanova Night"—in that traditional mecca of top "jam sessions."

With that off his chest, the genial Bradley guy gave out with most of the facts of his life to provide a sort of background; McKinley, everybody's pal, followed suit.

"Around The Horn"

Born in Newton, N. J., 30 years ago, Will Bradley came from a musical family and learned the complexities of the trombone in record-breaking time. After a brief career in a vaudeville unit, he joined a famous jazz band known as Milt Shaw's Detroiters, where he played alongside his present featured drummer, Ray McKinley.

Bradley then went into radio with a vengeance, playing for all the bigtime shows under such famous leaders as Kostelanetz, Shilkret, Paige, and Freddie Rich. He did some recording work with Red Nichols' Five Pennies and then joined Ray Noble's first American band, playing trombone alongside Glenn Miller. He returned to C. B. S. for a while before taking out his own band.

Ranking alongside Tommy Dorsey for "sweet" and Jackson Teagarden for "hot," he has long been recognized by musicians as the best of the all-around sliphorn sliders.

McKinley Tops

Ray McKinley, a typical slow-moving Texan, complete with drawl and sure-fire humor, is from Fort Worth. He got his first break with the famous old Ben Pollack band—Glenn Miller, Benny Goodman and lots of other big names were in that orchestra—moved on to Milt Shaw's Detroiters, Red Nichols, Smith Ballew, the Dorsey Brothers' Orchestra, and Jimmy Dorsey.

Playing with Jimmy for several years, Ray first caused a sensation among swing fans on the Dorsey record of "Dusk in Upper Sandusky." At the present time his fellow musicians consider him just about "tops" in his field and the best all-around skin-beater in the business, and that includes Krupa.

Dr. Haenisch Addresses German Club Members

Dr. E. L. Haenisch, associate professor of chemistry, addressed the members of the German Club last Tuesday evening on "The Great German Composers."

In chronological order the speaker discussed Bach, Handel, Hayden, Beethoven, Brahms, Liszt, Mendelssohn, Schubert, the three Strausses, and Wagner. The lecture included a consideration of the innovations, types of music written, and a partial evaluation of the merit of each composer. Representative works of each were played in order to illustrate the lecture. By popular demand, Dr. Haenisch has promised to give a lecture on the famous Nebulan Ring operas of Wagner at a future meeting of the club.

At a meeting of the organization on Monday evening, plans for the combined meeting with the German Club of the College of Chestnut Hill on April 29 were discussed.

Death Of Former Student Recalls His Heroism In Saving Two Lives Here

From the November 27, 1928, issue of the VILLANOVAN we take the following article, deeming it worthy of attention:

"About one month ago one of our students here at the college took a walk on Sunday afternoon with the express purpose of going to Bryn Mawr. He started out to walk down the Lancaster Pike and stopped for a while at the Stadium. Here he met a few other friends and they also decided to walk into the college metropolis.

"They had progressed a little way down the Pike when they saw before them a crowd of people standing in the middle of the highway. One of the fellows stared and saw that 'there was something up.' He ran to the spot and saw a crowd of excited people about an open manhole. His accurate sense of smell told him that something was amiss from the terrible gas odor that was issuing from the vent.

"He immediately ripped off his outer garments and rushed to the center of the crowd. He found out quickly enough that there were two workmen trapped in the manhole, which was at this time filled with asphyxiating fumes. He started to go into the manhole but was held back by several bystanders. They did not want to see a young chap go down into that hole with what they thought was nary a chance of ever coming back to the surface again alive.

"He fought with them all. In fact, one of the bystanders got a good wallop on the jaw, and a resultant lump which he will never forget. It was that intrepid youth from Florida, one Edward Foy, who administered the knockout blow to the fellow who would stop him from saving his fellow man.

"Foy jumped into the manhole and dragged to the surface one of the victims. The man who was first dragged out was unconscious and was rushed to the Bryn Mawr Hospital in a commandeered car. The fellow students who were with Foy saw when he brought the man to the surface he was acting sluggishly. He had inhaled the fumes. They did not wait for any explanations, but immediately adjusted one of the ropes that were lying around, to Foy's waist.

"Courageous Eddie was lowered into the black pit once again. He groped in the darkness, as he reluctantly related later to the writer, until he felt the warm body of the other man. He entwined his arms about the man's waist and took a strong grip on him. Then everything appeared black to Eddie.

"He fell with his face forward in the pit. The sudden tug on the rope notified his fellow students that something was wrong. They called him by name just once and when he did not answer they promptly hoisted the limp forms of Eddie Foy and the workman to the highway. The whole while Eddie was unconscious, but he held his vise-like grip on the fellowman, who might have met an untimely end had it not been for the true courage and spunk of this ideal American college youth.

"They were taken to the Bryn Mawr Hospital, where with the aid of a pulmotor, both were revived. The workman returned to his family and Eddie to his daily routine of school work. Now this congenial chap returned to the school and immediately went to his room where, exhausted, he tried to study his assignments for the following day. He was too tired and fell asleep.

"Meanwhile, the other fellows, loud in their praise of Foy, had gone to his room in the dorm to congratulate him on his brave deed. He did not want to be disturbed. He did not even care for the publicity that was his for the act he had done. He said in plain, ordinary words to the writer that he believed it was his moral duty to save any person who was in danger of losing his life."

But Eddie Foy finally received recognition for his heroism — two years later, in the fall of 1930, he was awarded the famous Carnegie Medal for bravery in saving another's life.

Dr. Edward Foy, the same Eddie Foy who so generously risked his life to save another, died of a heart attack last Wednesday, April 16, in a Fort Pierce, Florida, hospital.

After leaving Villanova, Foy entered Temple University Medical School and received his degree of Doctor of Medicine. Dr. Foy, who would have been 35 years old in October, was health officer for the city of Fort Pierce, and was well known in Florida medical circles.

Funeral services were conducted in St. Augustine, Florida.

Two Attend NFCCS Bi-Annual Congress

Villanova was represented by Rev. Francis X. Maguire, O. S. A., and Thomas Muraski, sophomore engineering student, at the bi-annual national congress of the National Federation of Catholic College Students held April 14 and 15 at Georgetown University, Washington, D. C.

Approximately 100 students and faculty moderators representing 50 schools throughout the United States attended the affair, which was highlighted by the presence of the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, the Apostolic Delegate to the United States.

The theme of the Congress was "The Catholic College Student and the Two Great Encyclicals," namely "Rerum Novarum" by Pope Leo XIII and "Quadragesimo Anno" by Pope Pius XI.

Joseph Davis, of the Pittsburgh area, and Muraski, chairman of the Philadelphia region, were appointed co-chairmen of a resolutions and nominating committee by Miss Gertrude Kirk, the retiring national president. Frank Horka, of Loyola of Baltimore, was elected president for the ensuing year.

Varsity Nine Clash With Temple Tomorrow

Sportorial

By Bob Funabashi

SPEAKING metaphorically, Villanova's diamond combine is running a very smooth course for the first leg of their schedule, but not too far off, the storm clouds are gathering together which indicates a warning signal to skipper Doc Jacobs and his to-date successful crew. Along about 3 P. M. tomorrow afternoon until twilight on next Monday afternoon it will be rougher sailing for all.

The first of the demons are old playmates of Villanova. Temple, recently given unto musical rhyme by being called the "wise old owls" will journey from their Broad St. surroundings to attempt a blitz on the fifteen game winning streak that the team has compiled since last year. After the Temple game tomorrow, Villanova entrains for the Big City to meet City College and St. John's over the week-end and as far as these games come, they might only be called a "coming attraction" for the big billing on Monday afternoon.

Duke University, the haven for future Philadelphia Athletics' prize rookies, will make a stop-off at Villanova for a tea time session which means that there will be an awful battle for the sugar. From hearsay and their lively press notices, the Blue Devils have a team that can be compared to none. Each year they wind up at the top of the baseball ladder and almost half their men get signed up to play in big league ball.

It won't be a surprise for the North Carolinans to find that we have a ball team here that can cope with the best in the Intercollegiate circuit. Ability this year deserves an A plus ranking for all the players on the squad. Not for quite awhile, even considering last year's great team which won fourteen out of fifteen games has there been more abundant material—and material which is as fertile as the greenest valleys.

Lots Of Power

Considering what Villanova has done so far in this diamond anniversary year, the team shows, power, power and more power. Look over the Eastern aggregations and see if you can get a mound staff as effective and efficient as the one that lolls behind the stadium. Two seniors out of the six pitchers leaves an optimistic feeling for next season and two juniors and two sophomores can make Doc intoxicated with happiness. Connie Nicholas and Connie O'Leary both question marks in the beginning seem to have found the key that fits and both have been highly successful in their assignments.

Nicholas with his three hitter against Vermont went the full distance without tiring in the least. He has a good frame and keeps a careful check on what he throws in there. O'Leary looked like the O'Leary of last year on Friday against Providence. It appears that he has regained the speed he had

Jacobsmen Submerge 5 Opponents To Total Fifteen Consecutive Wins

The bats of the Wildcat nine boomed loud and long over the holidays, and beat such a strong tatoo that five opponents were completely submerged in a tidal wave of runs. This gives the Blue and White a clean slate so far this season, and makes 15 straight wins since their defeat by Fordham on May 4th last year.

They opened with an 8-2 victory over Lehigh. Bill Woods held the Bethlehem boys to four hits while his mates pounded out nine. Doubles by George Balmore, Dan Casey, and Joe Yednock accounted for most of the runs.

Two days later Ursinus College was routed in a seven inning affair by a score of 19-0. The Wildcats collected 13 hits off three Ursinus hurlers, McMahon, Garland, and Rorer.

Frank Chaplar, soph pitcher, gave out two hits in five innings, and Connie O'Leary blanked the Bears in the last two frames.

George Balmore with a single, double, and triple paced the winners. Joe Yednock sent three men home with a triple in the sixth.

Loyola of Baltimore was jarred 10-5 on their home grounds for the Wildcats' third triumph. Three hurlers, Connie Nicholas, Bill Woods, and Connie O'Leary divided the chores. Woods had the best record, allowing only one hit in his three frames. Nicholas and O'Leary each gave up three hits.

Reitmeier, Simonson, Yednock, and Calandra each hit safely three times to lead the attack on two Loyola pitchers. The main feature of the contest was Tony Calandra's homer in the eighth with the bases full.

Providence College was the next victim of the Villanova avalanche. The plucky New Englanders held their Wildcats to a one run lead until the seventh inning when they scored 4 runs and went on to win 9-4.

Connie O'Leary not only pitched good ball, holding Providence hitless until the fifth, but aided his own cause with three hits out of four trips to the plate.

With the weatherman supplying perfect baseball atmosphere, Villanova pounded out her 15th straight victory at the hands of the Western Maryland "Greenies", 8-3. Bill Howlett, Frank Chaplar, and Bill Woods divided the mound work. Yednock with three hits and Reitmeier with two led the Blue and White attack. Each knocked in two runs. John Thoma , taking over the first base role, and Roy Simonson, also knocked in runs.

Lodge hurled the whole game for the losers and his three hits aided their score considerably.

Blue Netsters Dealt Shutout By Manhattan

Inexperienced Team Drops Opener 9-0; Face U. of Delaware Thursday

The varsity tennis team opened its spring schedule this past Friday after three short days of practice and bowed 9-0 to a powerful Manhattan College team from New York. The Manhattan six were in their best form having just returned from a southern tour in which they beat Western Maryland 5-4, tied Washington and Lee of Virginia, 4-4, and lost to Virginia University 0-9. They had also played Stevens Institute of Hoboken, N. J., and won 5-4.

Manhattan had five varsity men from last season against two for Villanova who had four inexperienced sophomores that completed the team.

Captain Ed Banagan, playing in the number one slot, put up a brilliant stand against his opponent, Gene Reilly, but lost (6-3) (12-10). Bert Collins dropped his match (6-0) (6-0) to Matt Dolan as Dave Daly was losing his (6-1) (6-1) to Harry McGrath. George McFadden, Intramural champ, put up a stiff fight with Ken Peacock but lost out (6-4) (6-4). Taking the only game for Villanova, Chet Pajolek won the first game of his match with Don Ochs (7-5) but then fell (3-6) (0-6).

In doubles, Banagan teamed with Pajolek against Reilly and Caterson but lost (6-2) (6-3). The best match was that by Collins and McFadden against Peacock and Ochs in which the Manhattan boys really earned their (6-3) (6-3) victory. The final match made the contest a clean sweep for the New Yorkers when Dolan and McGrath dropped Daly and Szucs (6-1) (6-2).

Softball Starts Soon

Intramural softball will get underway on the 28th of this month. The four halls will compete against each other for the title which was won by Austin last year. This will be the last event on the IM program for the scholastic year. All games are twilight affairs and occur after the break of daylight saving time.

Owl Team Strong Threat; Duke And St. John's Next

Cherry and White Combine Renew Rivalry With Jacobsmen; Blue Devils, Redmen and C. C. N. Y. Oppose Wildcats This Week

ANDY TOMASIC WILL HURL FOR TEMPLE

By JACK DUDLEY

Riding the crest of a fifteen game winning streak, Villanova enters what appears to be the toughest five days of its schedule. Tomorrow the 'Cats are at home to their archrivals, the Owls of Temple U. The weekend will be spent in New York; Friday, the Blue team meets St. John's of Brooklyn, and Saturday the Manhattan excursion comes to a close when the City College of New York is taken on. Monday, the Wildcats return to their lair to play host to the Blue Devils of Duke. After two weeks of breathers against smaller clubs, Villanova will have to be in top form to protect it's victory string.

Tomorrow's game with Temple will be the first of two games to be played this year with the Owls. Displaying its best team in years, the Cherry and White constitutes a real menace to the Main Line baseball prestige. It may be that Andy Tomasic will face the 'Cats on the mound. Tomasic suffered defeat at the hands of Villanova last year, so he will be out to reverse the order of things this year. It seems that Villanova has a score to settle with Tomasic also, which makes everything point to hot doings on the ball field tomorrow.

Friday afternoon in Brooklyn will be the setting for the next game. Returning home from a successful tour of the South, St. John's will be ready to upset the 'Cats.

Crossing the bridge into Manhattan on Saturday Villanova encounters the City College of New York, enjoying a successful season thus far. In the past, C. C. N. Y. has proven an extremely tough team on their home field against the Wildcats.

Probably the most publicized college baseball team in the country is Duke. Coached by the famous Jack Coombs, it is a stamping grounds for future major leaguers. From Duke have come players like Billy Werber, Chubby Dean, Crash Davis, and Eric Tipton. Major league scouts are now gazing fondly at some of the star performers on this southern nine. It seemed only natural that in time two great teams like Villanova and Duke would be scheduled to meet. The date is Monday the 28th. Jack Coombs brings his Blue Devils north to meet Villanova, guided by its own great coach, Doc Jacobs, for a game that will go a long way in deciding the outstanding college team in the East.

Since the beginning of the season, Villanova has been improving. Every day brings a change for the better. Each game corrects a few minor flaws in the team. Now the Cats are ready to meet the best. This week will decide the fate of this year's team.

Stars, Pioneers, Aces and T-Dynamics In Bowling Playoffs

Having completed the regular schedule the league starts the semifinal playoffs. The first and second place teams of both leagues will meet to determine the finalist. Three games will be rolled by each team, and the two winners will meet the following week in the finals.

In league "A" a closely-contested battle was waged, with the Aces narrowly beating the T-Dynamics. Both teams were tied until the last week of play. The evenness of both teams insures a very interesting playoff. In league "B" the Pioneers had little trouble coming out on top. They were followed by the Stars, who rolled nice games but lack the power contained in the Pioneer squad. The Pioneers should have little trouble in downing their challengers.

Besides having examinations in class work, football men must undergo a rigid I-Q gridiron test prepared by Coach Clipper Smith. The first five men who receive the highest grades are excused from one day's practice. Here are the first five and their scores:

J. Elk Murray	89
Fred Simonsen	87
Ed Kasky	81

Sinks Hole-In-One As Linksmen Trim St. John's, 8-1

Dave Morse Sinks Ace on 13th Hole Yet Loses Only Match

The Villanova Golf Team won its opener last Friday afternoon when it defeated St. John's of Brooklyn 8-1 on the home course.

Getting revenge for two defeats at the hands of St. John's last year, the team showed excellent early season form in trouncing the touring St. John's team.

Featured by Dave Morse' hole in one on the 141 yard par three thirteenth hole and by the all around good playing of the team, the match ended in a rout.

The two newcomers to the team, Bill Walsh and Bob Casey showed their mettle in their bow into intercollegiate golf when they easily handed defeats to the no. 1 and 2 men respectively.

Jim Brown, playing at no. 3 position, won his match while Dave Morse lost the only point of the day in a close fought battle. Captain Cliff Randolph and Bob DePersio rounded out all the scoring by garnering the last three points in the 4 and 5 spots.

Tomorrow the team will play St. Joe's at the Bala Country Club, while on Friday the team returns to the home course to play a belligerent host to the Rider College team.

Trackmen Entered In Penn Relays

Villanova Entries Hold Only Slight Chance In American Championships

Coach Elliott Enters His Varsity and Yearling Mile Relay Teams in Carnival This Week-End

Penn relays, the biggest carnival of the track season in America takes place this week-end in Philadelphia. Villanova with several entries in this championship meet will be striving to hold its own against colleges from all over the country.

After their first start against Catholic University yesterday in Washington it will be the second test for Coach Jumbo Elliott's cindermen and a mighty tough assignment for the team. Elliott will enter his strong mile relay team of Johnny DiCarlo, Bill Hooper, Bill Carey and Harry Keefrider in one of the relay races. This quartet is the same one which competed during the indoor season in Philadelphia and New York. They will encounter stiff opposition as they come up against Bucknell and others.

In the Freshman mile relay championships, the Frosh team of George Guida, Dixie Dunbar, Jack McCarthy and Bob O'Sullivan will meet strong opposition against such crackerjack outfits as Seton Hall, Georgetown, Penn and N. Y. U. So far this year, the Hoya team has turned in the best performance of yearling relay teams in the East. N. Y. U. and Seton Hall are always a challenge and might come through with victory.

In the individual races, the 100-yard dash will have John DiCarlo entered in it, along with Junghans of Penn and other fast steppers. Bill Carey will be competing against the country's outstanding in the 440-yard hurdles while Bill Jones will make his entry in the high jump.

and it was certainly self-evident that he didn't spare it.

Wood Is Fast

Moving a notch lower in rankings but not ability comes the quartet of underclassmen who can help to keep that undefeated slate clean. Bill Howlett, Bill Wood, Frank Chaplar and Joe Malone can make the ball hop, curve, slow down and probably skip and jump. Of the four Bill Wood is the ball-player's player. Only a sophomore, but last year a sensation on the hill, Wood probably throws the fastest ball on the club. Howlett is more of the deliberate type of pitcher who takes time to study his batter and works on his weaknesses. To exemplify that, Bill struck out five batters in his three innings against Western Maryland all on his scientific study. Chaplar in his three innings Saturday held the opponents in check and has good control over the white pollet. Malone's case is untested as yet. Doc hasn't put him in action but it might be that Joe could take over a few relief roles.

Examining the power of the batsmen we can diagnose plenty of hard hitting from now on. With an average of over .300 for the first six games, men like Yednock, Balmore, Reitmeier, Simonsen, Calandra, and Casey will be hitting even better as the season progresses.

Casey, Yednock Lead 'Cat Batters

Soph Outfielder Hits .454 in Three Games, Yednock Boosts Average to .423

Dan Casey, hard hitting outfielder, and Joe Yednock, defense demon at third base are currently leading the batters in hitting after the first six games. Casey, who has only played in three of the six encounters, has an average of .454 while Yednock has compiled an average of .423 with his stickwork. Yednock leads the field with the number of hits ,having 11 for 26 times at bat while Woody Reitmeier who is batting a strong .357 follows with 10 bingles in 28 times up.

Third on the list of batters is George Balmore, senior fielder who has hit safely 9 times in 25 times at the plate. Balmore took a drop in the Western Maryland game when he was shutout at the plate. In the same game Yednock started his upward spurt by hitting safely 3 times out of 4 appearances. He got a single and two doubles. Below are the leading ten hitters:

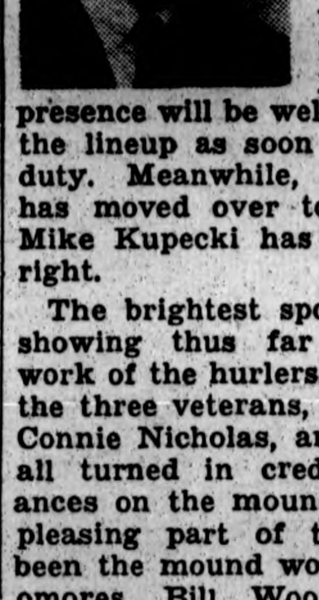
HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

NOW that Doc Jacobs' varsity baseball nine has completed approximately one-fourth of the schedule, it is apparent that Doc has moulded together a well-balanced, smooth-working outfit. In six games thus far, the Wildcats have averaged better than eleven runs per game while limiting the opponents to an average of less than three runs in each contest. That is pretty fair shooting in any league.

No glaring weakness in either the offense or defense has shown up as yet and the only bugaboo that Doc must worry about is injuries. Connie O'Leary, ace hurler, is now recovering from the effects of a sore arm, and Dan Casey, regular leftfielder, has been put on the shelf temporarily by a sprained ankle. Casey was belting the horsehide at a mean .454 clip up until the time of his injury and his presence will be welcomed back into the lineup as soon as he is fit for duty. Meanwhile, Roy Simonsen has moved over to left field and Mike Kupecki has set up shop in right.



The brightest spot in the team's showing thus far has been the work of the hurlers. Not only have the three veterans, Connie O'Leary, Connie Nicholas, and Bill Howlett, all turned in creditable performances on the mound, but the most pleasing part of the picture has been the mound work of two sophomores, Bill Woods and Frank Chaplar.

Struck Out Seven

Woods worked in three of the six games, one of which was a complete nine-inning job against Lehigh. In all of these contests Bill possessed a fast ball that was literally hopping and a curve that broke just before it reached the plate. In the Loyola game Woods struck out seven batters in his four inning stint.

Chaplar has also been very effective in his early season efforts. Only two men reached first base via the base hit method in the six innings that Frank worked against Ursinus. This pair, along with O'Leary, Nicholas, and Howlett, make most of the usual one or two man college pitching staffs look sad in comparison.

All of which may seem to indicate that the pitchers have been basking in the spotlight all by themselves, but this is not so, as witnessed by the 68 runs scored in six games. Yes, the hitters have been doing their part, also. Of the regulars who have broken into the lineup in all the contests played to date, Joe Yednock, custodian of the hot corner, sports the highest batting average and possesses the most number of base hits. Joe has eleven hits in twenty-six times at bat for a figure of .423. Close on his heels are George Balmore, Woody Reitmeier, and Tony Calandra, all of whom are well up in the select .300 class. Yednock hit the peak of batting efficiency in the Loyola fiasco when he stepped up to the plate six times and knocked out five safeties.

However, from here on in, the competition promises to be a bit tougher than that thus far encountered. Such teams as Duke, Fordham, Boston College, St. John's of Brooklyn, and Temple must be met and said teams represent the cream of the eastern college baseball crop. Tomorrow afternoon the Temple Owls and one Andy Tomasic arrive on the scene — need more be said.

Yednock, Casey, and Simonsen, who exchange their baseball spikes for football cleats each fall, well remember that afternoon last November when the same Mr. Tomasic made them feel very uncomfortable for a few hours by carrying on a one-man blitzkrieg against the Wildcats on the gridiron. Andy is the star of the Owl pitching corps and in his last start he turned in an easy victory over N. Y. U. as his mates pounded the Violet hurlers for 22 runs. Maybe Yednock, Casey, and Co. can do something about making Tomasic feel a bit uncomfortable himself tomorrow.

Of course, we are assuming that Tomasic will be in the box against the Cats and we believe that he will, since he is Temple's best bet to subdue the Wildcats, and a victory over Villanova would be doubly sweet for they are few and far between, you know.

Austin Nine Retains I-M Lead

Blue Nine Edges Out Alumni, 8 - 7, And Fedigan Trounces Mendel, 13 - 3

The Intramural baseball schedule was resumed last Sunday after a two-week lapse. The morning game was a wide open affair with Fedigan emerging the victor with a 13-3 win over the Mendel nine. In the windup of the day's games Austin won a closely contested game over an inspired Alumni team with the final count standing at 8-7.

Allowing but five hits and backed by the timely hits of his teammates, Steve Aisenbrey produced the first win for the "Gigoloes" out of two starts. In the first inning Harry Dunkley walked to be followed by John Cerulo who hit a sharp single to center, then Bud Koerner grounded out to advance the two runners and they scored on passed balls. Again in the third inning Harry Dunkley started the rally by hitting a long double into left field along with hits by Bud Koerner and Steve Aisenbrey to make the score stand at 4-0 in favor of the Fedigan nine.

The fourth frame was the only inning in which Mendel produced any runs and that was made possible by a number of errors and walks followed by a hit of the pitcher, "Sweede" Donovan. This inning showed three runs for the Mendel nine and the only ones of the game. Fedigan came back in the sixth frame to produce four runs on two hits and in the final inning two more runs to make the final count stand at 13-3.

Austin Wins Again

John Cerulo, Harry Dunkley, and Bud Koerner were the heavy hitters for the Fedigan nine. Bill Epifanio turned in a remarkable fielding performance at shortstop.

In the afternoon Austin won its second game in two starts to lead the intramural league. The game was very closely contested even to the last frame when Alumni tried desparately to bridge the gap, but their struggle was all in vain.

Again Alex Luckas went on to victory by allowing but six hits while the opposing pitchers, Al Scott and Bill Swan, allowed only one more. Errors proved to be a very important part of the afternoon contest as Alumni had only four earned runs while the eight for Austin were all earned runs.

Phil Mariani led the hitting attack for Austin with three hits out of four trips to the plate. In the fifth inning the rally was started by Kirk Holland's single, a triple by Hugh Matthews, and a single by George Fitzgerald which produced three runs. Bill Swan was removed from the game when he was hit by a line drive and Al Scott finished the game.

Freshmen Draw Pole Position

The Villanova freshman relay team which is competing in the Penn Relays this coming week-end gained the pole position in the one mile freshman college relay championship of America in the recent drawings. Next to Villanova in order are Cornell, La Salle, Seton Hall, St. Francis of Brooklyn, Fordham, Hampton, Manhattan, West Chester Teachers, Columbia, Georgetown, Brooklyn College, Lehigh, Temple and St. John's.

A cavalcade of 3,000 athletes will participate in the Relays this year.

Tentative Line-Up

Tomorrow's game against the Temple Owls will probably see Andy Tomasic shooting for his third win of the season for the Cherry and White and he will probably be opposed by Connie Nicholas for the Wildcats. Nicholas will be seeking his second win of the early campaign, having easily defeated Vermont in the opening game for his first victory. Below is the probable line-up for the two teams in their annual grudge battle:

Temple	Villanova
Musi, 2b.	Reitmeier, .b.
Fletcher, ss.	Simonsen, lf.
E. Gotwols, 3b.	Balmore, cf.
H. Gotwols, lf.	Casey, rf.
Papieves, 1b.	Yednock, 3b.
Lorenc, rf.	Donoghue, 1b.
G. Gotwols, cf.	Calandra, ss.
Valyo, c.	Skaf, c.
Tomasic, p.	Nicholas, p.

A Busy Week

It will be a busy week for Villanova athletes starting tomorrow. The varsity baseball team will be playing four games, the tennis team has one match, the golf team engages three clubs and the track team will be in Philadelphia this week-end for the Penn Relays.

A varsity baseball game against Temple tomorrow and a tennis match against St. Joseph's are the highlights to start off. Then the Tennis team plays George Washington, and the tennis and diamond team engages in more matches. Friday and Saturday will see Jumbo Elliott's runners competing in the American championships at Franklin Field.

Football Charges To Enjoy Respite After This Week

Last Week of Intensive Drills for Gridmen; Coaches Pleased at Work of Recent Scrimmages

Over the door of the equipment room at the field house last Thursday there was again suspended the large-lettered poster, "The Picnic is over." And so, the respite granted the football players over the Easter vacation was over and they are once again at the old grind.

Now that the warm weather apparently is here to stay, the practice season is soon to come to a close. This very likely will be the last week of intensive drills. After this there will be no more heavy scrimmages until the pre-season training period of next fall. The Spring sessions will probably conclude this week or next with the exercise of new plays and formations introduced this season and a review of the fundamentals of the game.

Coaches Clipper Smith and Vince McNally have been quite pleased with the performances of their charges and hopes are high for a banner campaign next autumn.

Tentative Line-Up

The squad, barring serious intervention on the part of Uncle Sam in the draft question, appears quite promising to this observer. The roster includes a number of hard-charging, rugged and aggressive line-men and a host of talented backfield cavorters.

Judging from many scrimmages witnessed, it seems that the starting line-up may include Prohovich and Pritko at the ends; Kasky and Nieman, tackles; Jagoe and Adams, guards; Koriskey at the center slot; and Danik, Behot Eusko and Rosato in the backfield. A likely alternate team might be comprised of ends: Christman and Murray; tackles: Kozlowski and Vogt; guards: Gildae and Simonsen; center, Bray or Baraldi; and the backfield: Morgan, Postus, Smith and Zamlynski.

These line-ups of course are not definite but are based only on our impressions of their display. The fugitives from the Spring practice who are currently engaged on the high-flying baseball nine may necessitate a revision of these line-ups when they return to grid togs next fall. These include: Bill Howlett, Joe Yednock, Roy Simonsen, Mike Kupecki, Dan Casey, Ted Bicky, and Frank Chaplar.

Pash And Etten

Bob Pash, former shortstop on last year's varsity baseball team is holding down the shortstop position for Scranton this season. Another ex-Villanovan, Nick Etten is batting in the clean-up spot for the Phillies. Nick in the opening game against the Boston Bees had a perfect day at bat, collecting a home run and three singles.

Balmore Once Toiled As Assistant To Mortician During Summer-Time

Whenever the ball club visits a co-educational institution, the girls are elated about a certain No. 10 who plays center field and bats in the number five slot in the line-up for the Wildcats. Who is he? What's his name? Isn't he handsome? etc. But with all the Oh's and Ah's he is still the same old guy, always faithful to Mary. For all those who are interested, his name is George Balmore, Josh for short.

George, a senior, is playing his third season in the outer-garden for Doc Jacobs' nine. Doc himself admitted that he is very thankful that Josh is back again this year.

During his earlier life, George was also outstanding in the sports world. While playing on the James Monroe High School he was invited to workout with the St. Louis Cardinals. It was here that he received his greatest thrill when he went to bat against the great Dizzy Dean. Next he attended the Peekskill Military Academy where he pounded out a .515 batting average during his last year. He was next honored by being one of the eight finalists in the New York World Telegram contest for the most valuable player in the Metropolitan area.

Summer jobs are Josh's specialty. He has done everything from working as an undertaker to playing ball. For two years, he worked as an undertaker's assistant but as you can readily see, it did not affect his humor in the least. Later, he worked as a theater usher with Connie Nicholas while playing ball for the Metro-Goldwin-Mayer team. Still on another occasion, he played for a church aggregation which had such other Villanova stalwarts as George Flood, last year's star catcher; Woodie Reitmier, a very good second sacker on the present club; Lou Wanamaker, star outfielder of a few seasons back; and Connie Nicholas, a present hurler for the Cats. Father Zeiser, who managed this team, was a great influence in Josh's choice

Like every New York City dweller (excluding Flatbush), George is an ardent Giant rooter. With this in mind, he was only too glad to play for St. Albans in the Northern League for the past two seasons, because the manager of the club was Jeff Tesreau, an old Giant star pitcher. Jeff must have liked George's play because he sent a scout down to see if he was interested in coming back this summer.

Josh in majoring in advertising during his four years here and has high hopes of an advertising career upon graduation. He would, of course, he interested in a baseball future. Several scouts from major league clubs have been around to see him and get his ideas. These ideas are all depending on the possibility that he might be called for Army service.

"Still" On View

The above "still," similar to those used by petroleum companies, was constructed by Frank Smith and John McKimmey, senior engineers, and will be exhibited at the Intercollegiate Student Chemists Convention here Saturday. The purpose of the machine is to obtain a thorough analysis of liquid by a process of fractional distillation. Smith will deliver a paper on the "still" in a contest during the convention and he and McKimmey will demonstrate its workings.

Schools certain of participating in the convention are Albright, Cedar Crest, Franklin and Marshall, Gettysburg, Haverford, Lafayette, Lebanon, Moravian, Muhlenberg, Swarthmore, and Ursinus colleges and the Drexel Institute of Technology. All the colleges and universities in the Philadelphia area have been invited to participate .

Arrangements have been made by a special committee headed by Hyman Malkin, senior chemical engineer.

At yesterday's meeting of the Villanova Chemica' Club nominations for officers for the coming year were held.

Seminars Resume

The Music Seminars will resume their weekly programs tomorrow. The day-hop seminar, under the direction of Dr. E. L. Haeisch, will feature Dvorak's New World symphony; the group will meet at 12:30 P. M. in the Mendel Amphitheatre. The resident seminar, to be held at 7:30 P. M. in Simpson hall, will feature a program of famous symphonic movements.

Two To Receive Spanish Awards

Ericson, Satenstein Win Prizes for Writings; To Be Given at Annual Dinner Thursday Night

Roy Ericson, sophomore education student, and Harvey Satenstein, commerce freshman, will be awarded prizes at the second annual Cervantes Dinner to be held by the Spanish Club this Thursday evening in St. Benedict's Hall, Philadelphia.

Ericson will receive the Columbia University Medal and Diploma for writing the best Spanish essay, by a member of the Villanova club, on the Spanish author, Cervantes. Satenstein will be awarded a leather-bound edition of "Don Quixote" for his poem in Spanish on the same topic.

After the dinner, two Spanish motion pictures will be shown by Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A. The first and most important of the films is entitled "Dos Mujeres y un Don Juan"; the second is a short film called "Spanish Interlude."

Nominations for next year's officers will be made during the evening. Joseph Scornavacchi, junior science student, is the retiring president.

Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., moderator of the Spanish club, will address the gathering. Several guests will attend, including Fr. Vrana and Rev. Restituto Suarez, O. S. A.

Approximately fifty are expected to be present at the banquet. Besides the regular members of the Spanish Club, all students of Spanish are invited to attend. Transportation will be provided by the organization. The dinner will be the last formal gathering of the group this year.

The Villanova Spanish Club has received an honorable mention from the National Affiliation of Spanish Clubs, an organization sponsored by Columbia University, following a survey of similar groups in other colleges.

Oratory Finals

Will Be Held April 30; Speeches To Be Limited to Ten Minutes Each

Finals in the annual Oratorical Contest will be held Wednesday afternoon, April 30, in the Mendel Hall Amphitheatre, Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., has announced.

Subjects of the speeches will be left entirely to the discretion of the contestants, but all speeches will be limited to ten minutes. Judges of the contest will be selected from the faculty of St. Mary's hall.

Competing in the finals will be Thomas DeSipin, junior engineer; James Donovan, senior arts student; Thomas McKimmey, junior in the education department; and Robert McIntyre, junior commerce student.

The four were victors in eliminations conducted on April 3. The winner will receive the gold Murtaugh Medal at commencement exercises.

AIEE Members To Hold Convention At U. Of P.

The Villanova chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will attend the Annual Student Convention of the Philadelphia District of the A. I. E. E., which is to be held next Monday, April 28, at the University of Pennsylvania.

A technical session is planned for the morning, to be followed by a luncheon for all members attending. Several inspection trips in and around Philadelphia will be taken in the afternoon.

A dinner meeting at the Engineers Club of Philadelphia has been tentatively scheduled. A prominent guest speaker is expected to address the assemblage.

Open House Plans Near Completion

Plans for the Sixth Open House program, to be held May 5 and 6 in Mendel hall, are rapidly nearing completion, Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar, announced today.

The exhibits will be open to the public from 2 P. M. to 5 P. M. and from 6 P. M. to 9 P. M. on each day. Special demonstrations will be held at two-hour intervals in the Mendel hall Amphitheatre.

Arranged especially for high school and preparatory school students who are planning to enter college, the program will feature exhibits and demonstrations of various aspects of science and engineering. Parents and friends of Villanova students and alumni are also welcome to attend.

Participating in this year's Open House are the departments of science, civil engineering, chemistry, electrical engineering, mechanical engineering, and physics.

Each of these departments is planning to conduct demonstrations explaining the type of work done by the students during their college courses and also the type of work which they may expect in industry.

The School of Engineering will feature the following laboratories in actual operation: air-conditioning, hydraulics, steam engine, internal-combustion engine, fuel testing, and welding.

Bee culture, fermentation, bacteriology, and physiology are but a few of the subjects included in the plans of the School of Science.

New Hall To Provide Student Facilities

The three-story building pictured above is a recently-acquired addition to Villanova's campus. As soon as necessary repairs and alterations have been completed it will be used to provide additional facilities. The new hall fronts on Lancaster Pike; it is located just west of Simpson Hall.

Smith's Paper Takes First Prize

Frank Smith, Villanova senior chemical engineer, won first prize in the presentation of research papers at a session of the Intercollegiate Student Chemists convention held here last Saturday.

His paper on the "Effect of Reflux Ratio on the Efficiency of a Packed Recrifying Column" was judged better than seven others in the competition. Harold Reichard of Lafayette College, who spoke on the "Commercial Production of Magnesium Metal," won the second prize.

The convention was attended by 250 students and faculty members of colleges in Eastern Pennsylvania and surrounding states. Arrangements for the affair were handled by Dr. Edward L. Haenisch and a student committee under the direction of senior Hyman Malkin. Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, and Paetrus F. Banmiller, registrar, attended the convention luncheon.

After viewing a scientific motion picture on "Surface Chemistry," featuring the work of the Nobel Prize winner, Dr. Irving Langmuir, the entire convention body made a trip to Franklin Institute in Philadelphia.

Latest "Engineer" Issue Appears Today

Latest issue of the "Villanova Engineer," all-pictorial magazine of the School of Engineering, will be distributed today at the publication's offices on the second floor of Mendel hall. The issue features an article on the "Methods of Refining Sugar."

The article is a resume in pictures of a trip made by the Villanova Chemical Society to the Pennsylvania Sugar Company plant. It contains a flowsheet showing the processes that the sugar undergoes from the time the raw product leaves the ship until it is packaged for shipment.

Other articles of the issue feature the Phi Kappa Pi bowling league in action coverage, and the work being done in the materials testing lab. Two poems by Joseph McNeilly, sophomore chemistry student, are printed in this issue; both deal with the lives and loves of an engineer, and are entitled "An Afternoon of a Chemist," and "Punchy Love Song."

Tomorrow, Frosh

Postponed freshman elections will be held tomorrow in room 110, Mendel hall, between 11:40 A. M. and 1:30 P. M.

Sophomores will elect their officers for next year on Thursday. The latter will also be held in room 110, Mendel, from 11:40 A. M. to 1:30 P. M.

Finals Tomorrow

In Annual Oratorical Contest; Senior, Three Juniors Will Compete for Murtaugh Medal

All students are invited to attend the finals of the annual Oratorical Contest, to be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the Mendel Amphitheatre.

Competing in the speech test will be James F. Donovan, senior artsman; Thomas J. McKimmey, education junior; Robert J. McIntyre, junior commerce man; and Thomas J. DeSipin, junior engineer. The four are the survivors of an elimination round of the contest held before Easter.

The speeches of each contestant will be limited to ten minutes in length; choice of subject matter is left to the discretion of the individual speaker. The winner of the contest will receive the Murtaugh Medal, awarded anually at commencement exercises.

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., who is in charge of the contest, has secured as judges several members of the faculty of St. Mary's hall.

For A Personal Touch

Students who wish to have their names embossed on their copies of the Belle Air, college annual, must make arrangements with Frank McKay, assistant photography editor, this week. McKay may be contacted either at the Belle Air office, room 51 Mendel hall, or at room 202 Fedigan.

Each book will be imprinted with the name of the student in silver letters for $.40. No orders will be taken after this Saturday, May 3.

Merit Awards To Be Presented Thursday In C&F

Merit Awards for students in good standing who have participated in the various extra-curricular activities during the scholastic year will be presented by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president, in the auditorium of the commerce and finance school before the assembled student body this Thursday at 11:30 A. M.

At the exercise, Fr. Stanford will deliver a message of particular importance to all students.

Conferred annually, the certificates are given to those students who have shown themselves "worthy of merit" in activities not included on the regular curricula of the various schools. Only those students are recommended by the moderators of the activities who have given meritorious service by their consistent and effective cooperation.

Lists of the students eligible under these qualifications are presented to the Deans of the various schools for their approval of the students' academic records. A similar check is made by the college Chaplain in regard to cooperation with the spiritual program. To pass on worthiness on disciplinary record, the students' names are submitted to the Board of Counsellors.

Students who pass this rigid scrutiny will be presented with a certificate at the annual meeting for each activity in which they have actively engaged. Upon each certificate awarded are affixed the signatures of the President of the college, the Dean of Men, the Chairman of Student Council, and the moderator of the particular activity represented.

There are 60 activities, under the direction of 27 faculty moderators, for which the awards will be presented.

All students must attend the presentation. The lunch hour in both the Dining Hall and the Pie Shoppe will be from 12:30 to 1:30 P. M.

Howlett Names William E. Hooper General Chairman Of Junior Week

Honor Roll

Of Commerce School Lists 48 Students With Ratings of 3.00 or Better

The third quarter honor roll of the School of Commerce and Finance was released last week by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean. With the exception of the science school, all honor rolls have been released, as the School of Engineering does not compile quarterly ratings and that for the arts school came out last week.

Loring Jones led the sophomore class with a rating of 3.44, followed by William Walpole, Harry Keefrider, Richard Anderson, Ward Guncheon, George Famiglietti, Paschal Russo and Gennaro Pinto.

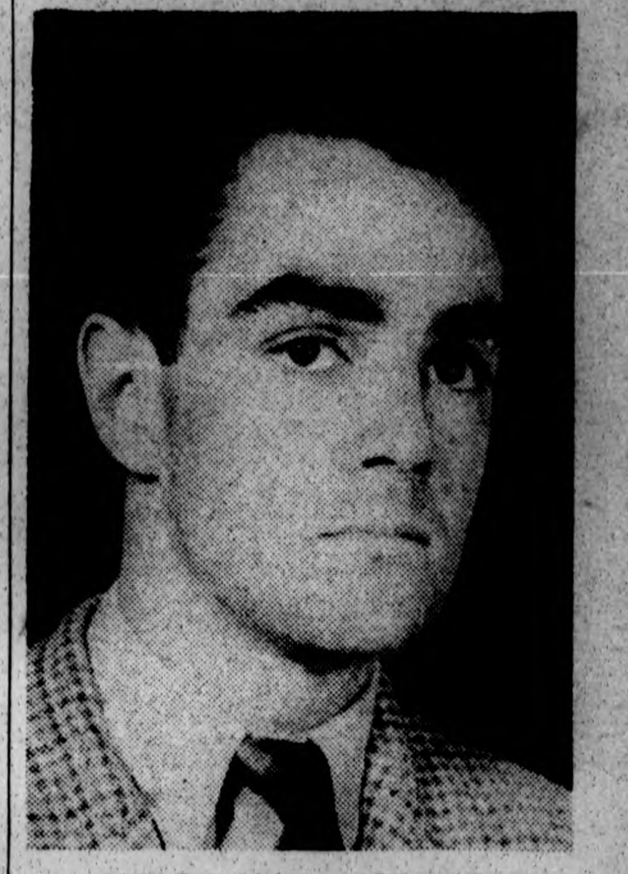
The juniors were paced by Bernard Swartz, with Edward Frank, James McElligott, Thomas Sullivan, John Jakovic, Robert Hursh, Theodore Galysh, William Hayes, James Pike, Robert Funabashi, and Robert Koness following.

Seniors worth of honor roll recognition were Raymond Valentine, Cornelius Nicholas, James McGarey, Walter Brown, Harry Hoffman, Robert Mentzinger, Alfred Skaf, and Joseph Wood.

Science Man Will Serve as Coordinating Agent of All '42's Activities

William E. Hooper, junior in the School of Science, has been appointed chairman of Junior Week, to take place from Monday to Friday of next week. With this announcement, made late last night by class president William J. Howlett, the list of '42 appointments for this year is complete.

The post of chairman of Junior Week is a general supervisory one over all the activities of the week; the chairman acts primarily as in an advisory capacity. It is his duty to see that the chairmen and committees perform their duties harmoniously so that order be preserved.



WILLIAM E. HOOPER

The newly-appointed chairman, Hooper, is a popular man of the campus; his many qualifications, in the minds of the members of the class, make his a worthy appointment.

As a sophomore and junior, he was on the Orientation Committee and has served this year also as Student Council representative of his class. He has participated prominently in intercollegiate sports as a member of the varsity swimming and track teams.

Under Hooper's supervision, the Junior Class will open its annual week of festivities with flag-raising, and tree- and ivy-planting next Monday morning. Monday, the first of two days of Open House, will also be Mothers' Day, to which the mothers of all the students of the college are invited.

After Open House concludes on Tuesday, the social events of the week will commence. The informal Blazer Ball will be held on Wednesday evening to the music of the Villanovans.

The Junior Prom, year's biggest social event, will take place Friday night with dancing to the music of Will Bradley and his orchestra. On Saturday evening, the juniors will conclude their week with a closed affair, the Dinner-Dance, at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia.

Moore To Arrange Arts Frat Dinner

Thomas J. Moore, senior education student and editor of the Belle Air, has been appointed chairman of the committee for the annual dinner of the Epsilon Phi Theta, fraternity of the School of Arts, to be held on Thursday, May 29.

Assisting Moore as members of the committee will be: senior James Forkin; juniors David Daly, Howard McCall, and John Fullam; and sophomores George Harris, Joseph Mahoney, Joseph Haggerty, Alex Lukacs, Jacques Mauch, and Thomas Devine. Although no definite commitment has been made, it is possible that the Whitehall Apartment Dining Hall, scene of last years' dinner, will again be chosen.

Tentative banquet plans call for Joseph McNamara, president of the fraternity last year, to act as toastmaster, and John C. Kelly, of New York, recipient of an honorary degree at last year's commencement and a member of the E. P. T. during his undergraduate days, to deliver the principal address. All fraternity members in good standing are eligible for the dinner.

In addition to his activities in the fraternity and on the yearbook, Moore is chairman of Beta Gamma, varsity debating society, chairman of the Book Club and a member of the varsity swimming and 150-pound football squads. He has been a consistent honor student for the past four years and is a member of the Student Council.

Nominations for next year's officers will be received at a special meeting of the fraternity tomorrow at 1:00 P. M. in room 110.

Orders for senior keys and pins have been placed with the Loren Murchison Co. and delivery is expected within two weeks.

Discussions, Tours, And Entertainment Planned For 300 Delegates To S. P. E. E. Convention Here Saturday

By THOMAS A. SHALLOW

Approximately 300 educators are expected to attend the spring meeting of the Middle Atlantic Section of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, to be held at Villanova this Saturday, May 3, according to Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, Chairman of the Registration Committee.

Delegates will include faculty members of 32 technical schools from Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania and representatives of industrial concerns interested in engineering education.

The program arranged by J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the engineering school and Chairman of the Program Committee, provides for activities from 9:30 A. M. to entertainment at 7:30 P. M.

Student-Guided Tours

Student guides will conduct the visitors through the grounds and laboratories from 9:30 A. M. until the general session begins at 11:00 A. M. These guides and other campus arrangements, such as lunch and parking, are in charge of John A. Oakey, M. S., of the civil engineering department.

Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., President of the college, will extend greetings to the delegates at the opening of the general session in the C. & F. Auditorium

"Effects of the Engineering Defense Training Program on Engineering Schools" will be the subject of the opening address, to be delivered by Thorndyke Saville, Dean of the College of Engineering, New York University .

Dean Saville will be introduced by Charles G. Thatcher, associate professor of mechanical engineering, Swarthmore College, who is chairman of the session.

Luncheon at 1:00

Luncheon is scheduled for 1:00 P. M. in the Field House. Following this, conferences starting at 2:30 P. M. will be held in Mendel hall Three different groups will meet concurrently, each discussing a different phase of engineering education.

"Methods of Teaching the Basic Science Courses for Engineers" will be the topic of the meeting presided over by Dean George F. Bateman of Cooper Union.

Specific problems met with in chemistry, physics, and mathematics will be discussed by professors Raymond E. Kirk of Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn, Robert A. Patterson, Rensselaer Institute, and Arnold Dresden of Swarthmore College, respectively.

Discuss Lab Technique

A discussion of the "Technique of Handling Engineering Laboratory Classes" will be directed by Paul B. Eaton, professor of mechanical engineering, Lafayette College.

Speakers at this meeting will be Elmer K. Timby, Princeton University, professor L. H. Pumphrey of Rutgers University, A. P. Colburn of University of Delaware and H. F. Roemmele of Cooper Union.

Fr. Bartley Praises Catholic Education

Increased curricula and personal interpretation of subject material has led to discontentment in the minds of many college students at secular institutions, Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., told 60 students at the annual Delta Pi Epsilon dinner last Wednesday evening in Philadelphia.

Catholic college students have a broad coherent outlook on life—a priceless quality in these turbulent times—developed by teachers who interpret their subject matter according to the Catholic Ideal of Life, the commerce Dean stated.

At the dinner, also, keys were awarded to 25 senior members of the fraternity, by president George J. Flannery. Patrick J. Dougherty, M. A., moderator, discussed plans for D. P. E. to affiliate with the international organization Delta Sigma Pi.

Dilemma Of The Dawn

EIGHT o'clock and all's not well! In fact, it's after eight and the distance from transportation terminals or dormitories to Mendel hall and the Commerce and Finance building remains to be traversed. That means another cut.

This is the plight in which many students on their way to eight o'clock classes find themselves. This is particularly true in the case of the day-student. He has to rise, breakfast, and travel, in most cases, a great distance. If there is the slightest disruption in his well-planned schedule, his chances of being late are good. Oftentimes, in order to arrive on time, the student is forced to make extremely inopportune transportation connections.

The resident student, too, meets with difficulty. Chief inconvenience in his time allowance is that he has approximately fifteen minutes in which to eat breakfast. Perhaps numerous other cases could be cited, but, all in all, it is a rather arduous task to attend the eight o'clock classes.

If anything could be done about this class schedule arrangement for the next term, the students would be appreciative. The great difficulty lies in the fact that those enrolled in such classes are from different schools, but with co-operation on the part of all the schools affected, it is hoped that convenient hours can be arranged.

Oh, You "Copperheads"

REACTIONARY comment on a speech made by Colonel Lindbergh during the past week has well informed the American people who do not care to become involved in the European conflict just what type of "branding" they can expect in the future. The authenticity of the condemnations to come was also established at the same moment, for the leader of our land, President Roosevelt, personally led the critical pack.

From now on, all who dare challenge the right of the United States to give physical, human aid to the "cause of democracy" will bear the ignominious title of "copperheads," a name imposed upon a certain figure during the Civil War days for making "treasonable utterances." [illegible] cognomen has been directly attached to the Colonel, but, nevertheless, it is attributed by reflection to all who share the same sentiments.

Other remarks, intermingled with sketchy historical background, had something to say about "quitters" in the Civil War era and during the Valley Forge campaign. We can suppose that this was directed at the same group who advocate that we stay close to home. It is only right that we stop at a supposition here, for we understand that this conflict is an economic war, and not one for democracy's sake.

All Can Be Proud

THE NATIONAL Federation of Catholic College Students can well be proud of its achievement since its birth in 1937. During its short span of years it has come to be recognized as the official organization of Catholic college students, sanctioned by the N. C. W. C. as a unit of the National Catholic Youth Council along with the Newman clubs which have been founded for 25 years. The Federation has spread so that it has member units all over the United States, and just recently several new regional units have been established.

Villanova, too, can be proud in that it is taking steps, through the Student Council, to become affiliated with the federation. When that comes about, we too, can share in the benefits and fellowship the N. F. C. C. S. offers.

Say It With Words

WITH A bow to Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of the Navy Knox, we are proud to present the 1941 parade of war slogans which only last Thursday set out from government headquarters at Washington on an extended tour of the country.

After such a glorious inception we feel certain that the American people are longing to review the remaining exhibits of this spectacular performance. Should their joyful anticipation be threatened by disappointment, let them look to the two members of President Roosevelt's Cabinet for a bigger and better show.

An utterance by Knox was probably the most praiseworthy of all the proclamations made. In his words, "having gone thus far, we can only go on," we find that good or ill, we must go on. The one welcome consolation he has left us is the thought that he means "we can only go on" to war.

Lest Hull be spared any of our praise, we are also happy to quote him. ". . . That such aid," meaning the supplies we send to Britain, "must reach its destination in the shortest of time and in maximum quantity. So —ways must be found to do this." Here is a simple statement, but the weight it carries in the wrong direction is quite serious.

Underlying the remarks of Mr. Hull and Mr. Knox is the appeal for convoying American ships delivering aid to Britain. Also supporting this stand and speaking in the same vein is Representative Patrick, who, in arguing that our shipments of supplies should be protected on the waters, states: "Davy Jones' Locker is no place for the sweat and blood and bone of the American people."

This sentiment of the representative is akin to the feeling which prompts us to challenge the convoy question. That "the sweat and blood and bone of the American people" must be preserved from this fate is ample reason to argue that we dare not resort to the convoy measure—for it will lead to war alone.

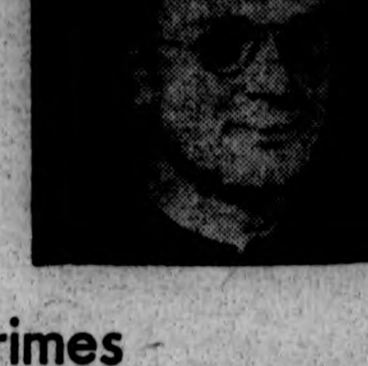
FACULTY COMMENTS

Being True To History



By Fr. Grimes

UNTIL quite recently there were few periods in Modern European Civilization so devoid of critical literature as Sixteenth Century Europe. Its history is still in the writing. Of necessity a large part of current research offers conclusions that differ profoundly from the oversimplified pictures of earlier observers.

The century, of course, is the one which saw the rise of the "Reformation." Its literature was of a most militant and aggressive sort, particularly in its denunciations of popery. The imagination of the Anglo-Saxon was capable of the most fantastic pictures when concerned with the supposed machinations of Rome and the evil designs of Spain.

The proto-type of this literature which has become traditional in Anglo-Germanic countries is the English work of John Foxe, called the Book of Martyrs (1554) and its continental sister, The Centuries of Magdeburg (1559-1574). Both these works are not only disfigured by credulity and bitter prejudice but they profoundly influenced early Protestant sentiment in the literature of northern Europe.

Trend Followed

In an effort to maintain the superiority of Plutocratic rule in England and in order to complete the secularization of the European spirit, the official Whig historians continued these chronicles of ecclesiastical scandals. Victorian historiographers carry on the trend as is evidenced in Froude's account of Tudor England's triumph over Spain and Catholicism. Trevelyan and the pseudo-historian Coulton in this present day narrate with literary charm and dogmatic certainty the inaccuracies and prejudices of their predecessors.

On continental Europe these anti-Catholic traditions were made a part of national literatures by the Gallicans in France, the Febronians in Germany, and the Josephinists in Austria.

Our own American literature, unfortunately, did not escape this uncharitable bias. Belles-lettres of the young colonies is steeped in the traditions of the Puritan. These "godly men" were just as vehement in their cries of no popery as were their confreres in England. Our first historians were formed in this mold. In Motley's Rise of the Dutch Republic (1856) one can almost feel the heat of emotion in his fiery denunciations of Catholic institutions.

Historical Falsehoods

In the latter half of the nineteenth century Henry Charles Lea, in his work on the Spanish Inquisition, firmly fixed in the minds of his fellow Protestants of America the synonymous character of Catholic institution with the cruelty and intolerance of the Spanish Inquisition. This type of American historical research inspired a flood of literature of the type of the "Awful Disclosures of Maria Monk" down to the recently published "The Convent" (1940) by Alice Simpson. The work of popularizing these historical falsehoods among the unlearned gains ground today with the efficient and modern methods of a "Judge" Rutherford and his Witnesses of Jehovah.

Since the day when Our Lord ascended into Heaven, the history of civilization has been largely identified with the history of the Church of Christ. As we have seen, the enemies of this venerable institution have tried to make history serve their hatred of it. But the Church has always had able defenders within her ranks.

Pope Opposes Error

In regard to "Reformation" history the names of Baronius, Balmes, Bossuet and Lingard stand for much. The date of the 18th of August, 1883, however, marks a milestone in Catholic historical effort. On that date, Leo XIII, himself a scholar of no mean note, addressed a letter on historical studies to the Cardinals de Lucca, Pitra, and Hergenroether.

In this papal pronouncement Leo decried the conspiracy against historical truth that was begun by the Centuriators of Magdeburg and continued down to his day. The pontiff urged that historical scholars make use of the rich treasures of the Vatican Archives in opposition to that parade of error. From the publication of the truth the Church had nothing to fear, he said. And thus, almost in our own day, Catholic historians began a renewed offensive.

Catholic ecclesiastical sources were studied and used in a new spirit. The fruit of vigorous activity is evidenced in the works of such celebrated names as Hergenroether, Denifle, Earle, Duschesne, Janssen, de Rossi, and von Pastor. The American Catholic Historical Society of Philadelphia seems also to be a product of this new vitality. A former President of Villanova College, the Reverend Thomas Cooke Middleton, O. S. A., helped found this group and became its first President in 1884.

"MARGIN FOR ERROR" was unmistakably one of Belle Masque's greatest. Compliments are in order for Mr. Anthony Frayne, director, and the cast. Bob Dooley's set was perfect. Many of the local lads, far too numerous to mention, took this opportunity to accompany their lassies to the drama. In this instance, it wasn't art for art's sake, but art for her sake.

APRIL SHOWERINGS:

John "Dugan" Donohue recently has been the recipient of Jean's enraptured attention. . .Stan O'Brien hit an 8 to 1 shot on some nag; hence the roll. . .Bob Funabashi and Buzzie were seen recently, furtrapping in Brooklyn. . .After a lapse of some time Tom Moore finds himself on the inside track with Clare. . .Harry Hoffman assures us that Marge is one of the many beauteous Drexel coeds whom he has met. . .Diminutive Steve Aisenbrey claims the "little woman" (Flossie) has been waiting three years for Junior Week. . . Lengthy assignments should be omitted during Junior Week, the time of the biggest social events of our collegiate days. . .

Harry "All American Boy" Kane glanced at an example from a quarterly exam, and then crooned to himself, "Let's Dream This One Out". . Elk Murray was masquerading as a military masculine mannequin on Chestnut St. in the company of a few gorgeous models. . .

Two proms this week should occupy much of the fellows' time. Immaculata and Chestnut Hill will play host to the boys, many of whom have had blind dates, the gamblers. . .Mendel's Joe Daly still trips up to Chestnut Hill because of a certain heart interest.

Socialist Father: Son, what makes you play truant?
Son: Class hatred.

MORE SHOWERS:

Joe Mahoney, the commuting Casanova, who sits beside one lovely from Overbrook to Ardmore and beside another from Ardmore to Villanova, was seen in the company of a third fair maid at Friday's "Margin for Error" performance. . .The beauties who were in the company of Scotty Boyle and Art Smith at the late lamented Temple game left the field in the eighth with the score tied. Some baseball fans.

Joe Haggerty doesn't make those afternoon trips to the metropolis since Willella left business school to become a working girl. . .Dick Gray and Tom Harford traversed the final 350 miles of their return trip from Skidmore College last week on the total capital of $.00 . . .Exhibiting little respect for the businessmen of the college, Philadelphia's police force presented Joe Barnes, chairman of the D. P. E. banquet, with a ticket for illegal parking — on the night of the banquet.

Lanky Bob Donovan has been making frequent trips up Lancaster Pike to see a certain blonde. Is this a practical result of the recent editors' conference, Bob?

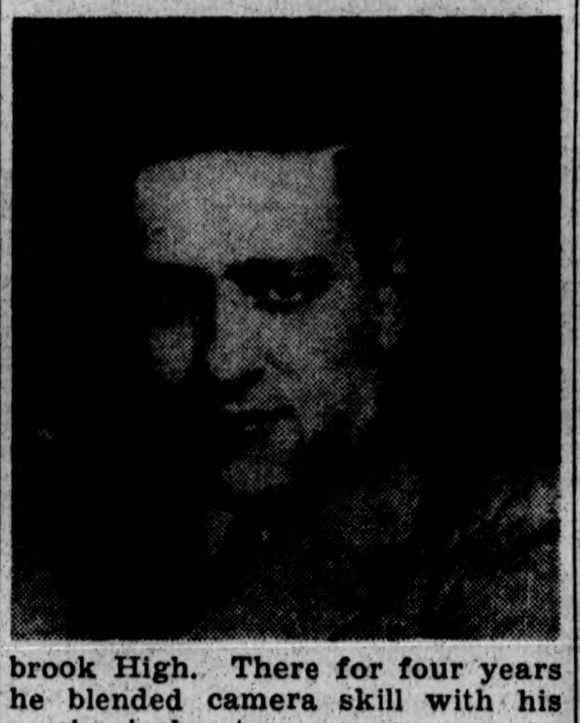
MEET THE BOYS:

To Camera Fans Gus Is "Ace"; Academically, Frank Sets Pace

By WARD GUNCHEON

"JUST a little to the right. Look this way. Smile. Hold it. Thank you very much." That's a picture of Henry L. "Gus" Mancuso, ace photographer, in action. Ever since joining the VILLANOVAN in his freshman year, he has been clicking the shutter and developing films for the paper.

Gus has been associated with developer and hypo as far back as he can remember. Even his choice of Villanova was influenced by it. Pat Guarini, the '37 photography editor, persuaded Gus to develop his mind along with films at the Main Line campus. Previous to his decision with regard to college Gus could be seen around Overbrook High. There for four years he blended camera skill with his mechanical arts course.



Army Wants Him

Twenty-six years ago, he began the road of life. Too young for the first war, Gus expects to accept a personal invitation from his local draft board to shoulder a rifle for a year beginning next June. Should he be exempted, Gus plans to invade the mechanical division of aviation. This plan originates from the ground course which he took a few years ago at the Camden Airport. In high school, too, Gus joined the aviation club.

At college mechanical engineering has occupied most of his waking hours. Still he has found time to serve on the newspaper staff for the past four years. He is also a member of the engineering fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, and of the A. S. M. E. Last winter he was prominent in the promotion of the Belle Air Ball success.

Spring and fall during his free periods, Gus puts aside the camera for the pigskin and the horsehide. In high school he handled third base and played end on several local teams.

In regard to the fair sex, Gus is non-committal. He denies that he is a confirmed bachelor but admits he's "playing the field." He won't disclose what feminine model he has in focus but he claims that even his camera sat up and took notice during his trip to Birmingham, Alabama.

The latter trip was taken with the football team and his former editor, Jim Collins, to the Wildcat game with Auburn. He brought back several pictures of the game and a few of southern belles. Strange the southern gals' pictures were blurred. Nervous Gus?

Has Poor Aim?

Whether Gus will pass the physical exam for the army is soon to be decided, but a little incident of a few years past throws some doubt on the condition of his eyes. While taking a photograph for the paper Gus carefully aimed and focused the camera on his subject two feet away and snapped the shutter. A few minutes later in the developing room Gus found on the negative an accurate picture of a blank wall. Despite his aiming, he had missed his subject, two feet away.

If Gus is drafted following graduation at least it won't be a new experience for this photographing wizard. Since the amiable countenance of Mr. Mancuso first appeared on the campus, he has probably been "drafted" for more odd jobs than any other ten men.

Talents in Demand

The inevitable questions, "Where's Gus?" is sure to precede any difficult task, from taking a picture to printing a poster.

His Monday evenings were frequently devoted to developing "scoop" pictures of basketball games, and the like, which were needed for the following day's VILLANOVAN.

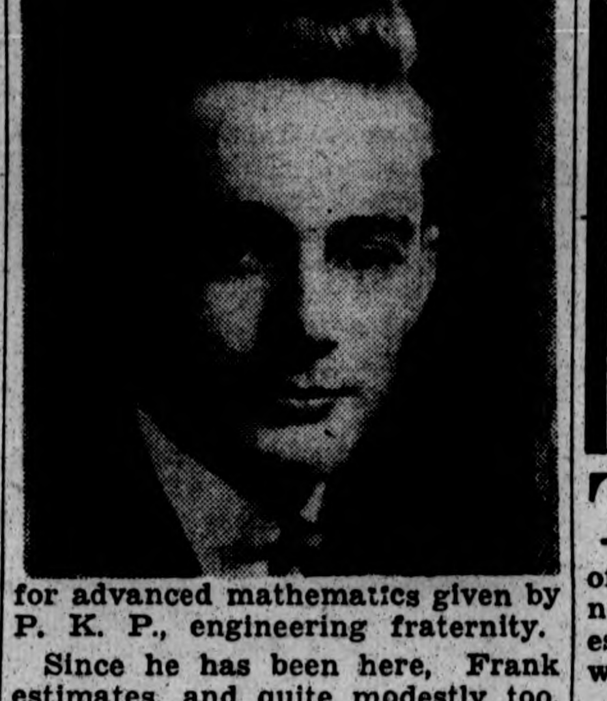
At any rate Gus will either put aside his "Speed Graphic" for a Garand rifle or a position in the aeronautical business. Whichever it may be, photography will still be his hobby.

FRANK SMITH cannot be labeled just another one of the "Smith" boys, for he is one of the outstanding men in his similarly surnamed group. In high school and college this 21-year-old lad has merited a scholarship rating which everyone dreams of and few obtain.

Frank, a Philadelphian, first set the record at West Catholic high school when in the third quarter of his senior year, he was honored with a gold medal for a perfect average of 100%. The last three years there, he maintained an average of 99%. His freshman year in high school was bad, very bad. (So he says.) He slipped to an average of 96%. Such tough luck! While getting these marks, he somehow found time for dramatics, handball, and interclass basketball. The editorial board of the year book was also benefited by his help.

Awards by the Dozen

When he graduated, his lapels were laden with three more gold medals. They were awarded for English, physics and history. The scholastic whirlwind came to Villanova on a competitive scholarship, soaring to the top over forty other applicants. His sophomore year again found his already-heavy lapel the bearer of the gold medal for advanced mathematics given by P. K. P., engineering fraternity.



Since he has been here, Frank estimates, and quite modestly too, that he has earned five 4.00 ratings, or 100%, in leading the honor roll for the past four years. Three of the perfect averages were earned during the three quarters of this, his senior year.

Favors "Phillies"

Despite his heavy schedule at the college and long hours of intensive study at his home in Prospect Park, he has found time to join the P. K. P., the Chemical Society, and to become president of the German Club and secretary-treasurer of the honor society, Chi Epsilon Mu.

Believe it or not, this engineer is a constant follower of the "Phillies" base ball nine, seeing at least one game during each of their home stands. He has wild hopes that his favorites will end higher in the standings than the Athletics, for whom he has no time.

Has a "Still"

At the present time, he and John McKinney can be seen in the chemical "still lab" busily working on the completion of their thesis, puzzling titled "The Effective Ratio on H. E. T. P. of a Packed Rectifying Column." Completing this, he will merit his Bachelor of Chemical Engineering degree.

This "still" has become a means of attaining still more honors, because Frank presented a research paper on this subject in a competition which was a part of the Student Chemists Convention here last Saturday. He won first prize, of course, and that title, which sounds like a government project, can be couched in more understandable language.

The machine itself is similar to those used by petroleum companies and its purpose is "to obtain a thorough analysis of a liquid by a process of fractional distillation."

Works as Chemist

For the past three summers, the Barrett Chemical Company has had Frank in their employ. The first two years he was a chemist and last year he was advanced to a chemical engineer. Previous to this, he was employed by the Baldwin Locomotive Co. in a different field, the accounting department.

Next year he is scheduled to become a research assistant at the Illinois Institute of Technology. In accepting this offer Frank turned down an offer from the University of Wisconsin and a graduate scholarship from Columbia. Every thing happens to Frank, but good!

Wandering Minstrels Back From N. D. With A Few Tales

By JOHN P. FULLAM

THE CHORAL SOCIETY concert at Notre Dame College Friday evening was quite an affair. A group of 30 prospective Martinellis and John Charles Thomases carried Villanova's banner far afield—if State Island can be called a field—presenting a varied program which lasted about an hour-and-a-half.

Religious numbers, sea-chanteys, fanciful love songs, Negro spirituals—all help to spice life with their variety. Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., conducted, acted as master-of-ceremonies, and did much of the worrying as well.

Headin' North

On the whole, the excursion provided a great many unforgettable events and situations for all concerned. That super-super luxury liner disguised as a bus. . .a free tour of northwest Philadelphia. . . Dick Gray sitting on the edge of his seat and practically panting as Trenton was approached. . .the sudden shifting of attention, conversation, and people at the sight of some particularly colorful bit of scenery.

Dinner at the Augustinian Preparatory Seminary ("Which way do we face?"). . .bus-driver Bill's miraculous maneuvering of his steed—he couldn't have come closer to that tree if he'd used a micrometer. . .Father Handran reminiscing about his old haunts—even the goldfish looked the same.

Worthwhile Raffle

On to Notre Dame. . .that agonizing suspense during the date raffle. . .mutual congratulations and condolences afterward. . .the concert itself . . .smoothly executed, and well-received by a distinguished-looking audience in formal dress. . .Ed Cubler's piano solo and Bill Appel's whistling went over especially well.

Then came the dance. . .the gym was decorated for the occasion (well, maybe they did do it for their Junior Prom a week or so ago) . . .Hugh Boyle seemed to enjoy himself ,both during and after the dance. . .Sam Canning is just a jitterburg at heart. . .ask Joe Rozum about the "lady in red". . . food. . .the band won't be coaxed any more.

Then, Adieu

So, after tearful and other kinds of farewells, the group utterly demolished precedent by going back to the seminary for baggage and a quick change to street clothes in the wee small hours of the morning . . .Andy Melton's sorrowful wail, "Meat-head's going home with my girl!" . . .what kind of sigh was that Ed Frank heaved? . . .slumber of sorts. . .home again. . .and so to bed.

Father Handran and secretary Jerry Belz were heartily congratulated for their handling of the Villanova end of the arrangements.

Tally Ho!

Discusses Forthcoming Prom Season Now That Spring Is With Us Again

By Bruno Talvacchia

THE spring social season "has sprung." The dancing has begun. The exchanges are full of prom dates and orchestra announcements. . .you may be interested in knowing the where's and when's.

CHESTNUT HILL—WOODS:

Oh bring me a lad from the country,
Or bring me a lad from the town,
But bring me a lad, oh bring me a lad
Now that Spring's come around.

This bit of verse was found in Chestnut Hill's Fournier News. Herby Woods has been signed by the girls to furnish the music for them on Friday night, May 2.

IMMACULATA—MESSNER:

The Immaculatan brings news of their promenade to be held on the same night, May 2, with Dick Messner as leader of the band. The conflict will, no doubt, be an awful jolt to some of our two-letter men (those that go in the mail), but they knew all the time about the futility of serving two masters.

Woman has been defined as the only sex which attaches more importance to what's on its head than to what's in it. . .just reporting what has been said. . .it wasn't told to us. . .we just heard.

ROSEMONT—BARTHA:

The Rambler of Rosemont, rambling on in very type for the last few months, reports "double or nothing". For the girls-from-across-the-tracks have selected Alex Bartha for a complete weekend. The popular Atlantic City maestro will play for their Junior Prom on May 16, and again for the Sophomore Tea Dance on the following day.

The same issue gives the results of a poll taken among the students. Princeton was named by the freshman and sophomore classes as their favorite men's college; the juniors were content with Penn; the realistic seniors nominated St. Joseph's College.

We appreciate the sincerity displayed by the seniors, and hope that the underclassmen have benefited thereby. Most of us learn over a period of time that there is nothing like being practical in everything we do.

If horses could talk, what a howl they would make about some of the things referred to as "horse sense."

NEW ROCHELLE AT HOTEL PLAZA:

The much-sought-after copies of New Rochelle's Tatler have strangely disappeared of late. It is probably due to the boys' desire to know which band has gotten the call to supply the music for the Senior Ball at Hotel Plaza on May 2.

Perhaps Margaret Spies, exchange editor of the publication, could aid us by forwarding to us the names of any Villanovans who may chance to make an appearance at the dance. Spying is not the word for it. . .let's call it "tatler-ing."

BORROWED VERSE:

Girl's faults are many Boys have only two
Everything they say and anything they do.

Irate father at 3:00 A. M.: "Young man, what do you mean by bringing my daughter in at this hour?"
College boy: "I have a class at eight!"

—Tatler.

He: "I could dance like this forever."
"She: "Oh, no, dear, you'd be bound to improve sooner or later."

SOUTHERN GENTLEMAN:

Auburn's Plainsman brings us this item on etiquette below the Mason-Dixon Line: "The age of chivalry is not yet o'er, or so it might seem if one keeps his eyes open. It is reliably reported that a party of Auburnites, driving near Lafayette, in a rather heavy rain, noticed a Negro woman chopping wood in her front yard. Her husband was politely holding an umbrella over her."

QUIZ QUALMS:

Although we don't have to worry about those pesky finals for a few weeks yet, this observation from the Ram sums up the feelings of most of us when that period of mental torture does arrive.

"The fog
Comes
On little cat feet
About the time of finals
And sits
On silent haunches
Hovering over every desk
And then moves on—
Only some times it doesn't."

We don't know if it should be mentioned or not, but there's a drink they're selling over in New York advertised as the Will Bradley Special. Unlike the famous "zombie" (only two to any customer) it's advertised as a gentle beverage—you can drink "eight [illegible] bar".

Attendees Call Play "Smash Hit"

"Margin for Error" Actors Warmly Praised; Set, Direction Receive Approbation

The final performance of Clare Boothe's smash Broadway hit, "Margin for Error," was enthusiastically received by a capacity crowd last Sunday evening in the Field House. The play had previously been given on Friday night.

Sincere and vehement applause followed each act of the satire on Nazi organization in a large American city. Five curtain calls were required to satisfy the onlookers, who gave each member of the cast a tremendous ovation.

The audience recognized in the action the superior direction of Anthony J. Frayne, M. A., which contributed largely to the play's success.

Belle Masque's fifth annual production featured Frank Buckley, whose comical Jewish dialect kept the audience in a state that bordered on hysteria. His bewildered efforts to solve the murder of a man who had been poisoned, shot, and stabbed, with a list of logical and probable assailants as long as your arm, provided a balance wheel to the cutting satire of the show.

Karl Baumer, the Nazi consul, as portrayed by Walt Smith was a convincingly despicable character who fully merited the sudden and violent death he received. Bob McIntyre, as the vociferous American Fuehrer, was exceptionally well-cast, and his stiff-armed "Heil Hitler" 's were in keeping with the tenor of the part.

Miss Kay Haley, a Rosemont freshman, cast as the consul's wife, was the recipient of many an appreciative comment as she handled her role with a deftness and assurance that belied her comparative inexperience. George Szucs, another newcomer, appeared in the very pleasant role of Miss Haley's American lover and made the most of it!

The part of Dr. Jennings, an emotional, grief-stricken physician was portrayed by veteran James Donovan, who formerly appeared in "Room Service" and "The Tavern," earlier Belle Masque productions.

Edward Eichman, as Baron Von Alvenstor, the consul's secretary, and Miss Ellen McOwen, also a Rosemont freshman, as Frieda, a maid in the consulate, contributed much to the success of the play with the capable manner in which they handled their roles.

Bit parts were realistically portrayed by Jack Gallagher, as Detective Mulrooney, and Bob Dooley, as an off-stage radio announcer.

Dooley was also manager of the stage crew which produced the lifelike library of the German consul. The set was entirely designed and constructed by members of this crew, which worked hand-in-hand with the actual members of the cast.

Gordon Wins Again: Elected ASME Head

Vincent J. Gordon, junior engineer, was elected president of the Villanova chapter of the A. S. M. E. at a meeting of the society on Monday, April 21. With Gordon, also president of the Phi Kappa Pi, fraternity of the engineering school, were chosen John Regan, junior, as vice-president, and Francis Mambretti, sophomore, as secretary-treasurer.

Fourteen members of the association attended a convention held in Brooklyn on April 21 and 22. Edward M. Kelly, senior engineer, represented Villanova in the presentation of student papers by members of the 16 eastern engineer colleges in attendance. The topic of Kelly's paper was "Circulation, a Factor in Boiler Design."

Library Gets Complete 'Writings Of Washington'

The Bicentennial Edition of the "Writings of Washington," edited by John C. Fitzpatrick, is one of three important reference works for student use added to the library collection recently. Twenty-seven volumes in length, the edition includes every available article written by the first president.

Arthur Somers, senior commerce student, has donated two volumes containing the complete papers of Robert Lansing, former Secretary of State, covering the years 1914-19. Fifteen volumes of "The Papers Relating To United States Foreign Relations," covering the years 1919 [illegible] were also obtained for stu-

Beautiful But Modest, Lynn Gardner Is A Recent Will Bradley Discovery

By JOSEPH V. McCABE

ON SEVERAL occasions in the past we've had the very pleasant task of interviewing female vocalists who have been featured with the name bands playing for Villanova proms. However, the best of all the fair lassies with whom we have talked is Miss Lynn Gardner, who gives out with the vocal "oomph" for Will Bradley's band.

LYNN GARDNER . . . quite captivating.

Picture, if you can, five feet-six inches of brunette loveliness, gowned in a gold "hour glass" dress, singing the new hit "Fresh As a Daisy." If that's not enough for the old die-hards, all they have to do is start talking with the young lady and immediately they'll be taken over by a personality which would rate "A plus" in any class. Some writers would call it vivaciousness, but no matter what words may be used it all boils down to attractiveness of the first order.

A Vocal Newcomer

Lynn is a newcomer to the vocal field—in fact it was less than a year ago that maestro Bradley "discovered" her, singing in an obscure New Jersey night club. Seeing that he had a find, Bradley signed her immediately and she's been one of the big factors in the sensational rise of the "band of '41."

In an above paragraph we mentioned the exceptional personality of our charming guest. This was much in evidence during the informal get-together which took place between performances at the Earle Theater. At that time Miss Gloria Spatola, the Queen of the Junior Prom, was introduced to Will Bradley, Ray McKinley, Terry Allen, and Lynn. Congratulating our queen on her good fortune, Lynn proceeded to take a "back seat," permitting all the attention to center upon Miss Spatola. You don't have to be blind to realize that it isn't often a pretty girl willingly steps aside in the presence of another attractive creature in order to permit her to bask in the spotlight alone.

A recipe for an intoxicating cocktail would be one-third beauty, one-third singing ability, and one-third personality mixed together. Serve abundantly and you have the necessary ingredients to secure the dreamy attention of all the gentlemen in attendance on May 9.

Up to the present we have spoken only of the feminine attraction with Will Bradley's band and thus only the distraction of interest to the boys. However, there is also featured a six-foot bit of gentleman, Terry Allen by name, who manages to elicit "oh's" and "ah's" from fluttering females with his vocal renditions.

Possessor of a striking resemblance to Wayne Morris of the movies, he has sung with the orchestras of "Red" Norvo and Larry Clinton, the old "Dipsy-Doodler." At one time he had ideas of becoming the world's best trombone player but the idea of just sitting in the band when he could make eyes at the girls by singing didn't go so well. Like Bing Crosby, who played the drums, and Barry Wood, who tooted a saxaphone, he belongs to the "Disappointed Musicians Club."

With such an array of vocal talent and physical attractiveness it's no wonder "the band for '41" is in such demand; no loyal Villanovans will miss the chance to see and be convinced.

With the cancellation of the debate against Bridgeport High School, scheduled for April 23, the freshman debating program for the current scholastic year has come to a close. The yearling squad had a total of ten non-decision encounters with colleges and high schools in the Philadelphia area.

Including in his lecture the recent contributions of Compton, Hess, and Millikan, William G. Driscoll, M. S., spoke to the members of Kappa Gamma Sigma last Thursday on the field of cosmic radiation. Dr. Rudolf F. Drenick will lecture before the society this Thursday at 12:45 P. M.

Beta Gamma will close its season with a debate today at New Rochelle College, N. Y., and one tomorrow at Manhattan College.

Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., moderator of the band and choral society, will be the commentator at the resident Music Seminar tomorrow night. Instead of being held in Simpson hall, it will be held in the organ loft of the Chapel, where Fr. Handran will give an organ recital and explain the working of the instrument. The day-hop seminar, consisting entirely of selections by popular demand, will be held as usual in the Amphitheatre tomorrow at 12:40 P. M.

Stell, '35, Dies; Was Bursar Here

John J. Stell, '35, former Bursar of the college, died in Philadelphia on Monday, April 25, of a streptococcus infection. Stell was a member of the editorial staff of the VILLANOVAN and "Belle Air" during his four years in the School of Commerce and Finance and later was active in alumni and college circles.

Upon graduation he was immediately engaged by the college and in August of 1936 was appointed Bursar of the college; he served in that capacity until September, 1938, when he withdrew to become a member of a Philadelphia accounting concern.

JOHN J. STELL

It was upon a business trip through Maryland that Stell first caught the fatal streptococcus infection. Funeral services were held Thursday morning. Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., President, Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A., and Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., were among the faculty members present.

Large numbers of the class of '35 attended the services, four of the pallbearers, including William G. Slaughter, placement director, and Paetrus Banmiller, registrar, being Villanova alumni.

Stell entered Villanova in September, 1930, and enrolled in the commerce and finance school. Throughout his college years he maintained an honor rating while participating in a number of extra-curricular activities.

In his junior year he was copy editor of the VILLANOVAN and in his senior year was promoted to the college editorship post. In his final year he also served as college editor of the "Belle Air." In 1935 he graduated with one of the highest ratings in his class, receiving his B. S. as an accounting major.

Stell, who was single, is survived by three sister, and his parents.

Faculty Comments: Being True To History

of such men as Hergenroether and von Pastor, the Sixteenth century continued to be viewed by many as an age of superstition and fanaticism. With the craze for specialization that set in during the post-war era and the consequent superabundance of monographs—the institutions and personalities of this much maligned century are gradually coming within convenient reach of the undergraduate student of history. Particularly true is this of the output of historical scholarship within the past five years.

Catholic and non-Catholic alike have entered this highly interesting field. Let us but mention a few of these works which on the basis of sound historical scholarship differ from the traditional pictures that have almost become a part of our culture and heritage.

Sources Emphasized

Foremost are the studies of the distinguished Hispanist, William Thomas Walsh. In 1937 there appeared his Philip II. Since the days of the English Pamphleteers, Philip of Spain has been a synonym for cruelty and greed. Dr. Walsh in letting the sources speak for themselves tells a different story. In reviewing the work the New York Times Book Review says in part ". . .his Philip II is so thoroughly documented that it must stand as a calm and realistic portrayal. . ."

There came from the pen of the same author in 1940 Characters of the Inquisition. This work like its predecessor is based on the sources. In the Preface we are told: "All that I have attempted here is to discuss a few of the characters through whom the Inquisition is revealed at various critical stages, and to suggest some important considerations that have been generally overlooked."

Note well the calm and clarity of the motive and compare it with the passion run riot of a Lea's Inquisition. This work does for Torquemada and many another inquisitor what Philip II does for the historical Philip.

Disregard Tradition

In 1940 also there came from a different pen the story of Philip of Spain's second wife, Mary Tudor. Protestant tradition has ever pictured this unfortunate princess, the only legitimate child of Henry VIII, as "an inhuman monster, a narrow-minded bigot, cruel and relentless, who hunted down God's elect and burned them at the stake on grounds of a difference of religion."

Once again in the interests of a sound historical scholarship the sources are allowed to speak for themselves. In the light of these sources Mary will no longer bear the epithet of "Bloody." A companion volume of the foregoing work of Miss Prescott is Elizabeth (1940) by Theodore Maynard. The same group of writers who labeled Mary Tudor bloody, dubbed Elizabeth the Virgin Queen and Good Queen Bess.

The history of the sixteenth century interpreted in the light of that era warrants neither appelation. Suffice it to say that Mr. Maynard strips the traditional Gloriana of the "tinsel, legend, myth, and falsehood" which has for too long a time obscured the real person. Finally there is the two-volume work of Georges Constant called The Reformation In England. The American Historical Review commenting on the first volume says: "This is the best book yet written on the Reformation in England under Henry VIII." His second volume carries the work down through the reign of Edward VI.

Historians Owe A Debt

One wonders how long it will be before this material is incorporated into the college and high school text books of Modern European History. In the interests of fair play and for the best interests of our country, college professors who are contemplating a text-book in the already overcrowded market on European History would do well to set aside the traditional pictures that have been exploded by a Walsh, a Prescott, a Maynard, and a Constant.

When we consider that the Honorable Alfred E. Smith lost the 1928 Presidential campaign because of his religion, it is about time our educators in history looked into the problem. Not a few citizens of the United States withheld their vote in 1928 because of a distorted philosophy based on historical caricatures of Philip II, Bloody Mary, the Inquisition etc., that they learned in their history books.

Have there been other men of the Catholic religion since 1928 who were not nominated by their respective party because of the fear of a like defeat? It is about time that the college professor "compilers" of our history text-books became conscious of their obligations to American society.

Consul Speaks On Value Of Spanish To American Students

Senor Andres Iglesias y Velayos, Spanish Consul to the United States representing the Franco regime, was the principal speaker at the annual dinner of the Villanova Spanish Club held last Thursday evening in Philadelphia.

The Consul, who has been in this country for three years and formerly represented Spain in Holland, France, and Egypt, spoke on the social and economic value of the Spanish language to American students.

Another feature of the dinner was the awarding of prizes to Roy Ericson and Harvey Satenstein, who wrote the best essay and poem, respectively, among club members, on the Spanish author, Cervantes.

Following the presentation of the awards, Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., moderator, addressed the members and guests on the style and types of literature written by Cervantes, dwelling particularly on his most famous work, "Don Quixote"

Entertainment included the showing of motion pictures by Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., and piano renditions by William Nocco.

The following is the poem on Cervantes which won the award for Satenstein:

O Cervantes! Shakespeare of Spain
My heart fills up with praise,
To make a cloud of emotions rain
In memory of chivalric days;
Days when custom reigned supreme
And fools outdid themselves in show
To have a master paint with his pen,
The story of two drugged by a dream
Who boldly fought the unseen foe,
To live, to die, and live again.

Callahan To Preside At Catholic Conference

Charles J. Callahan, sophomore commerce student, has been appointed by the Villanova International Relations Club as a delegate to the annual regional conference of the Catholic Student Peace Federation at St. Rose College, Albany, N. Y., on May 3.

"International Organization," the topic for discussion, has been subdivided into sections on the political, economic, religious, social, and cultural phases as they influence international relations. Callahan will conduct the discussion on International Economic Organization, dealing with tariffs, currency, and raw material distribution.

Representatives from 23 other colleges and universities of the Middle Atlantic states are expected to attend the conference.

Educators To Meet

Pennsylvania, will preside over the other meeting. Its topic will be "What Engineering Courses Should Be Prescribed for Students Outside Their Major Field."

Opinions on this will be offered by professors James K. Finch of Columbia University, Frank D. Carvin of Newark College of Engineering, Henry T. Ward of Drexel Institute and Irven Travis of Moore School, University of Pennsylvania.

Social Hour Planned

A social hour with light refreshments being served will start at 4:45 P. M. It is planned to hold this at Simpson hall, and, weather permitting, part of the gathering will be accommodated on the lawn.

The ladies committee under Mrs. J. S. Morehouse, General Chairman, has also arranged a program to cover the whole day. A sightseeing trip to Bryn Mawr College and other points of interest will be held in the morning, to be followed by luncheon at the Haverford Court Hotel.

Dinner and Entertainment

After luncheon the sightseeing trip will be continued to Valley Forge, and finally the ladies will return to the college in time for the social hour.

Dinner will be served in the Field House at 6:00 P. M. General arrangements for this are in charge of H. S. Bueche, M S., of the electrical engineering department.

Entertainment will be provided following the dinner. Presented through the cooperation of the Franklin Institute, it was arranged by Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar.

Wildcats Humbled By Duke For Second Loss

Sportorial
By Bob Funabashi

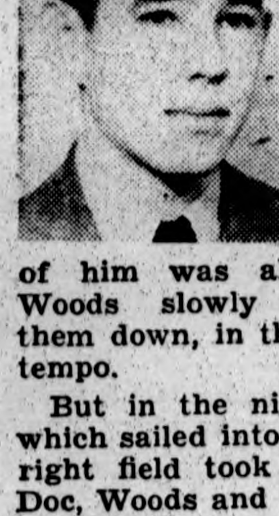
IT may be stereotyped, but Villanova lost a heartbreaker in more than one respect yesterday afternoon to the touring Blue Devils from Duke University. Not a great ball club but a good one, the southern stickmen pulled the right punches but Villanova fouled themselves right out of the game.

Coach Jack Coombs bringing his team northward for a spell, out of the heat of the south, had his team working smoothly up until the seventh frame when the Wildcat batsmen beat out their tatoo of hits. Up until then the beads of perspiration just rolled from the forehead of Doc Jacobs and then for the next inning. The picture in front of him was all quiet as Billy Woods slowly but surely set them down, in that one, two, three tempo.



But in the ninth a lazy looper which sailed into the grandstand in right field took the heart out of Doc, Woods and the other gathered witnesses. And so it was that Villanova dropped her second ball game and one might blame it on tht short field in right where just a few days before Temple's ace, Andy Tomasic, stepped on the Wildcat's tail and hit a blooper in almost the same spot which paved way for victory.

Moving the Field

By using at least five left handed batters against Villanova Coach Coombs made a very smart move. What with the right field being so short, just a lusty fly would carry over to give a ground rule double. On at least two occasions his left handers did what he had hoped they would and that meant a Duke score. Perhaps by next year it would be wise to move the diamond to another spot on the big field instead of sacrificing a few more ball games.

The three unearned runs that Duke got ruined Woods' chance for victory. After his one hitter against St. John's the other day he still

WOODS CHECKS REDMEN WITH ONE HIT

By BOB FUNABASHI, Sports Editor

Touring Duke University sounded the second bad note of the 1941 campaign for the Wildcats yesterday afternoon as they trimmed the Jacobsmen, 6-to-5 at the Villanova field.

Sporting a fancy collection of wins this year so far, the Blue Devils added another at the expense of Villanova as as they pushed across the winning run in the top half of the ninth frame while their relief pitcher Frank Seward put a check on the Villanova bats in the same inning.

For the Blue and White combine, it was their second loss in ten games and the ironic blow was that Billy Woods, who had pitched just last Friday in New York and had held St. John's to one hit, was the losing pitcher. Though Woods went through those nine innings and gave up fifteen hits to the Blue Devils, three of the runs were unearned and perhaps if not he might have come home the winning moundsman.

Villanova drew first blood in the very first inning as Woody Reitmeier walked, moved to third on a passed ball and then scored on Dan Casey's single. That hit of Casey's was one of three that the outfielder got. He tripled, singled twice and was purposely passed in the seventh.

Duke followed up and scored in their half of the second and then went to a 4-to-1 lead after the fourth frame in which four hits, and an error by Reitmeier and a passed ball by Al Skaf permitted three runs to come across. In the fifth they added another.

It was the lucky seventh for the Wildcats as they countered with four runs to knot the score at 5-5. Mike Kupecki and Jack Donoghue both batted in two runs in that frame to give the 'Cats a new lease on life. For another inning the score remained the same but in the ninth Ed Shokes of the visitors doubled into the stands, which usually would have been an easy fly out, and then scored on Tony Ruffa's single.

Villanova traveled to Brooklyn Friday defeating St. John's 7 to 1, as Bill Woods tossed a one-hitter. Saturday, in New York, the Cats won over a fighting City College team in a free-scoring game, 15 to 13.

The Temple game drew a capacity crowd to the Main Line field. It was being said that the famed Andy Tomasic might pitch for the Owls. Instead to the mound went a sophomore, George Monroe. Doc Jacobs countered by starting his veteran right hander, Connie O'Leary. A strictly home rooting section looked on with approval as the 'Cats pounded Monroe for

Pointing Their Bats Towards Rose Hill

On Saturday the diamond trail will lead to Rose Hill where Villanova encounters a strong Fordham nine in their annual tilt. Rams Entertain 'Cats at Rose Hill on Saturday With Ace Pitcher Alex Spelling Trouble

Tomorrow the Blue and White will entertain Loyola of Baltimore on their home diamond and will prime themselves for their annual encounter with their Rose Hill rivals from Fordham University on Saturday in New York.

The Wildcats have already beaten Loyola in an earlier contest in Baltimore 16-5. They had little trouble, clubbing three Greyhound hurlers for a total of seventeen hits, while the Villanovan veterans, Connie Nicholas and Connie O'Leary, and soph Bill Woods held them easily in check.

However Fordham is a horse of a different color, and last year proved to be the fly in the ointment of an undefeated season for the Wildcats. They cast the only blemish on a 17 game record when they won a close battle in the ninth 5-4, aided chiefly by the fine hurling of sophomore star Ed Alex.

Beat Cats Last Year

This year Alex is still going strong, and so is the whole Fordham team. Last year they won 13 and lost 4 and Coach Coffey and his team are trying to preserve that record.

Alex is a big right-hander, who formerly played at Seton Hall Prep. His 6 ft. 1 in., 190 pound frame gives him plenty of power. The Wildcats are looking forward to meeting him on the mound again and there is a strong possibility that he will pitch. Other possible hurlers include Joe Appuzzo, Dick Fitzgerald, Ed Leighton, and Bob Sherry. All are right-handers.

Fordham's infield is very strong, especially at third base where Coach Coffey has two standouts in Vin Cahill and Jimmy Blumen-

Varsity Netmen Seek First Win Against George Washington

The varsity tennis team was forced to postpone its match with Delaware University last Thursday due to a light rain that was enough to make the courts unplayable. Manager George McFadden is arranging the match for sometime in the early part of May.

The team has three matches this week, one today at Villanova with George Washington University, a new addition to the schedule this year, another match Thursday also at Villanova with the strong Moravian College team, and the final one of the week with Rider College to be played at Trenton, New Jersey.

According to Captain Banagan, there will be several important changes in the line-up this week. Although Ed failed to disclose what these changes would be, it appears that George McFadden, Dave Daley and Chet Pajolek will be moved up a step or so on the ladder and that a new member will be added to the team in Art Somers, who will probably play in the doubles matches

Kelley Carries On

Walt Kelley, who captained the varsity swimming team during the winter won the feature 50 yard freestyle race in the Park Central Pool in New York on Sunday night. Kelley won his trial heat in 24.5 seconds and then finished ahead of Henry Steingass to win the finals. His time in the finals was the same, 24.5.

Albright Next Foe

This Saturday at the Villanova Stadium, the Wildcat trackmen will met the Lions of Albright College. The men from Reading have one of the strongest teams in years. Johnny DiCarlo who ran a 49.6 anchor leg in the relays will compete in his four favorite events, 100, 220, 440 and the broad jump.

Wildcat Golfers Trip Rider But Lose To St. Joe's

Linksmen Best Trentonians by 6 to 3 Score; Drop First Match to Hawks

Villanova's golfers made an even split of their two matches over the past week, subduing Rider College of Trenton, 6 to 3 on Friday, and losing the day before to St. Joseph's College, 5 to 3. The latter was their first loss of the season.

Against Rider, the Wildcat linksmen captained by Cliff Randolph, bested the Trentonians on their home course at the Pennsylvania Golf Club at Frazer. Figuring in Villanova's win were Captain Randolph, Bob Casey, Jim Brown, and Bob DiPersio, all who defeated their opponents rather easily. Tie matches were made by Dave Morse and Bill Walsh. Most of the individual scores were in the low 80's.

Rider got the better of the Blue in the best ball matches, by capturing two of the three. Both their wins were won by 1 up scores while the Blue linksmen won their best ball match 4 up and 2.

Losing to the Hawksmen, the golfers suffered their season's initial loss last Thursday as they were beaten at the Bala Country Club. Poor putting was responsible for the defeat as several members dropped important matches to their opponents.

Nick Basca Accepts Pro Gridiron Offer

Nick Basca, Villanova's star football triple-threater who graduates this June, signed a one-year contract to play for the new Philadelphia professional football team last Friday.

Basca who hails from Phoenixville, Pa., was named honorary captain for the season of 1940 by his teammates after serving the club for three years. His talent which gave rise to Villanova's fame is expected to lend plenty of power to the pro club's backfield.

A sensation as a freshman, Nick attracted nation-wide attention as a sophomore with his brilliant running and passing. In his junior year he earned a high ranking in the football world and this glory was capped in his senior year when he starred in the North-South game. Observers credited him with being the outstanding player of that annual game.

Before Nick starts with the Philadelphia club he will undoubtedly play in the All-Star game against the National pro champs in the charity game in September. Besides this offer several other professional clubs were also seeking Basca's talent.

Soph Runner Excels In Penn Relays

Mile Team Wins By Forty Yards; Frosh Quartet Takes Second

By BILL CAREY

After defeating Catholic U. in a dual meet last week with an eleven man team, Jumbo Elliott's men turned in another brilliant performance at the Penn Relays last Friday and Saturday.

The lion's share of the glory goes to Sophomore Johnny Di Carlo who in his first attempt at the 400 metre hurdles was nosed out for the championship by Gil Farrow of Xavier in the last two yards.

Johnny also anchored the mile relay team which won hands down in the good time of 3:25.6. About forty yards behind the Wildcats came Bucknell in second place, closely followed by St. Francis.

On the first day of the Carnival Di Carlo breezed through his hurdle heat taking second to Farrow.

In the final he led the field throughout the entire distance up to the last obstacle, but lack of hurdling ability deprived Johnny of victory. By far the fastest man in the field, Di Carlo lost too much ground in hesitation as he scaled each hurdle.

On Saturday, in the mile relay, Harry Keefrider, first man for the Wildcats, finished with a twenty-five yard lead that gradually grew to the finish. Running second was Pete Yankauskas, making his first appearance on the cinders this year. "Yank" held the lead and handed the baton to Bill Hooper who, incidentally, failed to qualify in the 400 metre hurdles the day before. But this time Hooper showed his heels to the pack and picked up additional yardage. Finishing strong he sewed things up as Di Carlo poured it on all the way and snapped the tape for the victory.

Running almost to perfection the Blue and White freshmen finished second to the Georgetown frosh in 3:19—one of the fastest times of the two day carnival. These same men from Georgetown are the National A. A. U. indoor champions. In this race the Villanovans left teams like N. Y. U., Seton Hall, Penn, and Columbia far behind.

George Guida, "Dutch" McCarthy, Bob O'Sullivan, and Dixie Dunbar ran in that order, finishing fifteen yards behind.

Making up ground were O'Sullivan and Dunbar both. Anchorman Dunbar ran under 50 seconds as he picked up two or three yards on Lou Collado of Georgetown, former schoolboy champ from Seton Hall.

In their dual meet with Catholic U. at Washington the Wildcats won by 66-58. Having a field day, Di Carlo won the 100, 220, 440 and broad jump. Stan Nazian led teammate Bill Carey to the tape in both high and low hurdles.

Hooper ran second in the mile although he ran a 4:29, but had better luck when he won the half in 1:59.3, just missing breaking the stadium record by .2 of a second. Keefrider finished third in the mile and second in the half.

Other first place winners for the Wildcats were Jones in the high jump, Sal Rosato, who won the discus throw, and Pete Yankauskas in the javelin. Hooper finished second in his first try at the javelin toss. John Pholeric contributed points when he took third in the shot put and second in the discus.

This Saturday the trackmen will meet Albright down in the Lancaster Pike stadium.

Austin Still Unbeaten

Blue Nine Sweeps to Third Straight, Trouncing Fedigan Team, 9 to 2; Alumni Outslugs Mendel, 19 to 11

By JIM NUNEMAKER

Austin Hall's Blue nine swept to their third straight win on Sunday by sinking the Fediganites, 9-2, behind the six hit pitching of Al Lukacs. The nine inning affair marked the third consecutive triumph for the right-hander. Twirling perhaps in even better style for his mates was Steve Aisenbrey who pitched a four hitter against Austin, but yet dropped the game. Errors and his wildness at moments were responsible for Fedigan's second loss.

In the morning opener, Alumni Hall's freshman nine outslugged their Mendel rivals and bested them by a 19-to-11 score. In this slugfest only 18 hits were given up by the two pitchers yet free passes and errors played a prominent part in the outcome. Highlight of that game was the fifth inning when Alumni came from behind to put 13 runs across to sew up the encounter.

Use Two Nines

The "Greenies" from Alumni used practically two complete teams, but the Mendel nine remained the same throughout the game. "Doc" Scalzetie, Chuck Dowd, and Jim Beirn did the hurling for the "Greenies," while Bill Arnold, a southpaw, was the fireman for Mendel. Jim Cahill and Jim Hobbs both connected for home runs in the fourth frame.

The afternoon contest proved to be one of the most interesting of the season. George Fitzgerald played the whole game with a sprained ankle and connected for a double, while Phil Mariani also made a very spectacular catch in left field.

Strikes Out Eleven

The Austin rally began in the fifth inning when Jack O'Leary walked and then stole second, followed by Mariani who also walked. Al Lukacs fanned to be followed by Art Martin who grounded out. Then the inning was about over until Hugh Matthews poled a ball deep into centerfield to produce three runs. Matthews also scored on an error.

Steve Aisenbrey came through with some effective hurling by striking out eleven Austin batters while Al Lukacs fanned six. Another double-play was completed by Austin, as John Cerulo slammed a ball to the shortstop, Dave Daly, who relay it to second and then to first for the double killing.

four runs in the opening two innings while O'Leary was setting down the Owls.

To stem the rush of Villanova runners around the bases, Andy Tomasic appeared on the mound as the 'Cats came to bat in their half of the third. Displaying amazing speed and deceptive change of pace "Handy Andy" set the Wildcats down with little difficulty in that frame, and continued to do so for the remainder of the game as his mates pecked away at the courageous Connie O'Leary.

Connecting for a single and a triple during the regulation part of the game, Tomasic featured prominently in the rallies that tied the score. Stepping to the plate in the tenth, Andy dropped a double over the right field wall to drive in the winning tally from second base, thus completing an almost single-handed conquest over his bitterest rivals.

Showing their ability to come back after a defeat, the Wildcats won out over St. John's of Brooklyn, 7 to 1. Bill Woods went the distance, giving the most brilliant performance of any Wildcat hurler this year.

Showing nothing spectacular at the start, Woods was touched for a hit and a run in the first inning. Villanova went ahead in the second inning, 2 to 1, on Skaf's single and Woods' force play. From this point on Bill set the home team down with no hits or runs, and the 'Cats moved steadily ahead.

It took three pitchers to hold the City College of New York in check as Villanova defeated the Beavers, 15 to 13. The usually reliable Connie Nicholas started for the 'Cats but was replaced by Frank Chaplar during the fourth inning. Connie O'Leary appeared on the scene in the sixth and finished out the game.

Al Skaf Blends His Debating Skill With A Boardwalk-Salesman's Job

This is the story of a boy who, after plugging along for three years as batting practice and warm-up catcher, took over the backstop job in his fourth and final year on the Wildcat nine. It has been his spirit, his will to win, and his broad knowledge of the game that have been invincible aids to his achieving the goal that he started for. Some people might know him as being an honor student in the Commerce and Finance School, while others have found him to be a guy with a great sense of humor, one of the funniest men on the campus—Al Skaf.

Al, an Asbury Park boy, sometimes called "Horizontal" because he sleeps too much, transferred to Villanova from Seton Hall College at the start of his sophomore year, and has lead what he would call an uneventful college life as far as activities are concerned. He is a full fledged member of the Fedigan Hall Whist Club. (For those of you who don't know what whist is, well it's a card game.)

One of his favorite hobbies is the study of political science. He claims that this is one of the most interesting hobbies in existence—bar none! His love life here at Vilanova is practicaly negligible, except for a little lass down Bryn Mawr way. Another of his hobbies is the study of the fundamentals of the games of baseball and basketball.

Al spent his high school career at Seton Hall Prep. While at the Prep, he participated in two sports—baseball and basketball. He won a medal for his catching ability during his senior year. Al believed that sports were not the only extra-curricular activities available to a young and growing boy, so he decided to try his hand at debate. And try his hand he did, for when he was finished, our young hero was a full bodied member of the New Jersey State Championship Debating team! How's that for a change of pace ball for you?

If you were to walk along the boardwalk in Asbury Park during the summer, you would unquestionably come across Al working in his brother's silver and linen shop as a salesman. You can imagine what kind of a salesman he is. The customer would come out with everything but what he or she went in for, and that would be because poor Al just didn't have it in stock. Independent baseball has also taken some of Al's vacation time.

Dickinson or Harvard Law School is the ambition of Mr. Skaf who is now majoring in Marketing in the business school.

Al asked to pass on what he believes to be some very valuable tips to the underclassmen. He says "Appreciate Villanova to the fullest while you are here, or you will be sorry when you get out. Stop beefing about this, that, and the other thing, but take advantage of the opportunities that you are affonded and enjoy them to the fullest." Al believes that the most important things for the fellows coming up to possess are self-respect, and respect for others.

Victors Survive Closing Rally In Intra-SquadGame

Capt. Korisky's Varsity Charges Bested By Frosh

By PAUL McCANN

The intensive part of the training that the football charges of Clipper Smith have undergone during the Spring season is now passed. With a little more than eight weeks of contact work behind them, the gridsters brought their heavy practices to a climax Saturday with a "knock-'em down, drag-'em out affair"—in an intra-squad regulation game.

Following the usual custom, the Clipper has shied away from heavy scrimmages until the latter part of the conditioning period in order to keep the squad in top shape throughout the training sessions. But all the energy that the boys had accumulated in the toughening process was let loose at last week's end and the result was a highly interesting football game with few casualties. The collective performances of the players was of the calibre of two fine teams at the peak of regular season form.

The "Crimson Scourge" of Captain Sam Bray survived the late surge of the "Golden Horde" captained by Ed Koriskey to eke out a 14-13 win. The game was as evenly contested as the score indicates and at the end the honors were fairly divided.

Varsity Strikes Back

The crimson - jersied warriors struck quickly late in the first half and registered two touchdowns—one following a blocked kick. Highlighting the performance of the red-clad team was Mike O'Connor's 60-yard gallop for a touchdown after snagging a fumbled ball out of the air. Conversion of both points after touchdowns by this group, comprised almost entirely of freshmen, spelled victory.

A well-coordinated varsity group, bedecked in bright gold-colored jerseys, came thundering back in the last half and succeeded in putting two long sustained drives together for a pair of touchdowns. Both of these scoring drives were climaxed by Hank Christman's reception of forwards in the end zone.

All of the participants in the contest did themselves proud so it would be an injustice to single out any individuals for stellar play. The smile on the Clipper's face at the conclusion of the fray offered ample indication of his satisfaction in the teams' display.

Await Next Fall

The heavy armor has now been stored away until next autumn and the spring practice is to be concluded this week following a rehearsal of the fundamentals and the new plays added to the Wildcat strategy.

All thought of football will now be forgotten except the anticipation of the schedule of next fall which includes: Centre, Florida, Baylor, Arkansas, Manhattan, Duquesne, Temple, Detroit and Auburn. Negotiations for a two-year agreement with San Francisco University, a rising West Coast power, are believed to be complete. If so, the Wildcats are to be seen in action in Kezar Stadium, San Francisco, next December 6.

Seniors In The Fall

The sturdy group of giants above will make a perfect fit into Clipper Smith's grid scheme next fall when once again his charges take up the duty of upholding Villanova's prestige on the turf. At present they are juniors but will be seniors when they return after the summer. Front row shows Ed Korisky, sixty minute pivot man, John Nieman and Paul Stenn, two rugged tackles and in the rear group are Joe Behot, quarterback deluxe, Tony Anderson, stellar guard, Ed Kasky, varsity tackle of last year and Tom Morgan, another quarterback. Elk Murray, end, is missing from the picture along with Joe Yednock and Bill Howlett who are members of the varsity baseball team.

stock, ace footballer. Captain Jack Hearn holds down the short-stop spot while Manny Gomez will take care of the keystone sack. Soph Herb Ryan will probably play first.

New York Attraction

So far in their 24-game schedule, the Rams have registered wins over St. Peters, Dartmouth, Temple, Columbia, Seton Hall, L. I. U. and N. Y. U. They have dropped decisions to Princeton, and Boston College and tied Holy Cross, 4-4 in twelve innings.

Always a toss-up game and one filled with plenty of thrills the Ram-Wildcat encounter will highlight the college games next Saturday in New York. Villanova will be anxious to carry on its successful season and if they can get Ed Alex, it will be clearer sailing.

Doc Jacobs can probably count on Bill Woods to twirl for Villanova. For Woods, who pitched a one-hitter against St. John's last Friday in the 'Cats 7-1 win, will be rested up enough to go against the Gothamites.

Sportorial

looked fresh on the mound. This boy has been coming along sensationally and with the shortage of pitchers he may have to be used again on Saturday against Fordham. His curves were working very well as he toiled the nine inning stretch and his strikeouts totaled five.

After their encounter here yesterday Duke moves up into the New York neighborhood where they meet Fordham tomorrow and St. John's on Thursday. It would be well to note how well they go against these two teams, especially Fordham so that a comparison of their outcome with ours could be made. It's not likely that Fordham will start Ed Alex against the Blue Devils for he will probably be saved for the Ram-Wildcat fiasco.

Turning our theme to Saturday's battle in the Bronx, we say that our batsmen had better sharpen up their batting eyes, for even though Alex was defeated by Boston College, he only gave up five hits against New York University this past week-end. And in addition its still the same Alex that was on the hill last year who put the end to our winning streak and sent us home minus a hole in our pants.

Never Ran Before, Now Hooper Does 4:29 In Mile Run

For only four and one - half months' practice, trackster Bill Hooper is doing wonders on the track and would please about any coach. Just about a week ago this former varsity swimmer came across the finish line in the mile run at Catholic University in the time of 4:29.5 to win out, not even being pressed for second. In addition he ran a 1 minute and 59.2 half-mile that day in Washington.

During the winter months Hooper ran on the not-too-successful mile relay team and it was only this spring that Coach Jumbo Elliott decided that Bill would fill in at the mile post. This is his first year at track in either high school or college and Coach Elliott thinks that in time he may get Bill to lower his time considerably.

Hooper was a member of the varsity swimming team last year but this year turned out for track to see how he could fare. In the pool he holds several records and once captured a national championship while attending Mercersburg.

Five Ex-Gridmen Visit

Five former football stars returned over the past week-end for a visit to the campus. They were Ray Stoviak, '38, now head coach at New York Military Academy, Ronnie Tornwall, '40, Andy Stopper, '38, Johnny Mellus, '38, a member of the New York Giants professional football team, and Bill Cochrane, '39, head football coach at Lincoln High School in Jersey City.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

This essay might be entitled "The Same Old Story" because it has been told much too much before, but we believe it bears repetition just once more. A chance reading of a sports column in the La Salle "Collegian", official news organ of the near-by Philadelphia school, brought the subject once again to the foreground.

In essence, the writer of the column spoke about the athletic program prepared for the enjoyment and entertainment of La Salle students and friends during their forthcoming Junior Week. An athletic comittee handled all of the arrangements and among the events on the card for the week of weeks was a baseball game between the lay faculty and the Brothers.

Well, the junior class of Villanova College will also celebrate Junior Week here on our own campus in the near future, but a home athletic contest of any sort will be as difficult to find as the proverbial needle. As a matter of fact, the sum total of home sports events during the entire week from May 5 to May 11 is a tennis match with Seton Hall and that is on Monday. Now, the important days of the week are Friday and Saturday, on which days many of the students have friends down for the Junior Prom, but on those two days we find none of our four spring athletic teams in action on the campus.

Every Year The Same

The baseball squad will be far from the scene of social activities over the junior week-end, as they are scheduled for a nine inning duel with Williams College on Saturday afternoon. Now maybe all this is just a coincidence but it is a coincidence that happens each year. We can see no reason why an athletic program for Junior Week should not be arranged each year or why such a program would conflict with any of the athletic policies of the college.

After all, an extensive "open house" program is presented each year in order to show the friends of the students just what is being accomplished in the scholastic field of endeavor but, when it comes to athletics, no opportunity is afforded our athletes to show that they also have not been idle during the year.

Kept Under Cover

It would be a different story if Doc Jacobs' boys were below par and deserved to be kept hidden from view but that is not the case. Nor does Jumbo Elliott's track squad deserve to be kept under wraps, as shown by their victory in the one-mile relay event at the Penn Relay Carnival this past week end. Of course, it is too late to do anything about the situation this year but it is not too early to make plans for next year, when the Centennial class holds its Junior Week. Maybe 1943 will bring a change in policy with regard to this subject—We hope so.

Doc Jacobs' tossers spent quite a hectic week-end in New York. Due to the one-hit pitching of sophomore Bill Woods, the Cats chalked up an easy 7 to 1 victory over a highly rated St. John's outfit on Friday. Previously, the Brooklyn school had won eight out of nine contests—their only defeat being a close decision to the Southern powerhouse, Duke University. But on Saturday afternoon they ran up against stiffer opposition in the person of the Beavers of C. C. N. Y. The Cats bludgeoned their way to a 9-0 lead in the first three innings and it looked as though the game were going to turn into a rout, but the Beavers came back strong and fell only two runs short of pulling the contest out of the fire—Villanova winning, 15 to 13.

Dugan Elected L. K. D. President

Science Frat Chooses Turner, Daley, Silva, Nelson, Ciatteo for Other Offices

Robert R. Dugan, junior, was chosen president of Lambda Kappa Delta science school fraternity, by an overwhelming majority in the elections held last Wednesday, April 23. Dugan will direct the fraternity's activities for the scholastic year 1941-42.

Other offices were closely contested; each officer gained his position by a small margin over the defeated candidates. The remaining offices will be filled accordingly: Joseph L. Turner, '43, vice-president; Joseph Daley, '44, secretary; Jose Silva, '43, secretary; Eugene Nelson, '42, sergeant-at-arms; Carmen Ciatteo, '42, Student Council representative.

ROBERT R. DUGAN

Dugan, who served this year in the capacity of treasurer, will replace Joseph S. Santaniello as president. The latter has been a member of the fraternity since his freshman year. During his term of office he has particularly striven to make the organization as unified as possible in all its various functions.

The new president is an active participant in all the activities of the science school. His efforts contributed to the success of the biology exhibit at Open House in 1939. At present, he is working on the exhibit which will be presented by the physiology department at this year's Open House.

Included in his activities is his participation on the different committees both of the fraternity and the Spanish Club during his freshman and sophomore years.

First duty of the newly-elected officers is to set a date for the annual Fall Dance given by the fraternity. A meeting will be announced soon at which the appointment of a chairman and committee for the dance will be discussed.

Students Should Learn Draft Date

All students who are registered under the Selective Service Act should procure from their local boards a fairly accurate estimate of the date they will be called for induction, Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar, announced today.

The estimate will provide such registrants with information sufficient to enable them to decide on a future course of action in reference to college or occupation, through knowledge of the date at which they will be liable to induction.

It was also announced that a new clause has been inserted in the act authorizing the possible postponement of induction of a registrant in cases of "unusual hardship."

Unusual individual hardship has been officially interpreted as meaning the requiring, by a registrant, for additional time in which to (1) recover from an illness; (2) be available in event of illness or death of a member of the registrant's family; (3) complete a course of training or instruction; (4) take an examination after completing such a course, such as civil service examination; (5) sell, terminate, transfer, arrange for the continuance of, or make other arrangements with respect to the registrant's individual, personal, business or other activity; or (6) to perform other similar acts. ,

This amendment and its interpretation is applicable to summer students as well as to students enrolled in a regular academic year, regardless of their course or class year.

Banmiller also reiterated his request to all students who have registered for the draft to file an information blank with the college registrar's office as soon as possible, and to consult with him.

Doing Road Work

As part of the road-repair work being carried on at present, the roads in front of Austin and St. Rita's halls are being resurfaced. At the present time, no extensive program is planned, but repairs will be made to the rest of the campus roads as needed.

Engineering Dean Made Chairman of Philadelphia A. S. M. E. For Coming Year

J. Stanley Morehouse, M. E., Dean of the engineering school, was elected chairman of the Philadelphia section of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers for the coming year at it voting on April 22.

Dean Morehouse has been active in this organization for the past 23 years, having joined as a student member in 1918. He has held many offices previous to this and during the past year was vice-chairman of the Philadelphia chapter.

He was Philadelphia's delegate to the Group III regional meeting at Lehigh University last year; that meeting's attendees selected him as its secretary and also as a delegate to the national convention in New York. Only eight men from the entire country were appointed to attend the New York meeting, which considered the business and suggestions presented by the 82 sections throughout the country.

Appointment as national delegate is for two years and, having served as Chairman of the Agenda Committee this year, Mr. Morehouse will attend the next national convention in December. In addition he will be the principal speaker at the Group III meeting in Rochester next October.

Alumni Reunion Set For June 6, 7

Preparations are being made for the fifth annual alumni reunion week-end, to be held on June 6 and 7 at Villanova. William G. Slaughter, Alumni Association secretary-treasurer, stated that the largest attendance ever present is anticipated this year. All alumni have been invited to the affair.

A full program of sports and activities have been planned to make the return of the members of the alumni body a pleasant one. Swimming meets, baseball games, golf and tennis matches, banquets, and various meetings have been arranged.

Chairman for the event will be Eugene Reilly, class of 1929. Although the toastmaster for the banquet has not yet been chosen, he will be selected from the class of 1931, according to the custom of picking a member of the tenth graduating class previous to the reunion. As a member of the twenty-fifth graduating class previous to this gathering, Judge Sylvester Sabbatino, of the class of 1916, will be the principal speaker of the week-end.

Tonight At A. S. C. E.

All members of the A. S. C. E. and freshmen are invited to attend a special meeting of that organization tonight at 7:30 P. M. in Simpson hall, when John J. Sweeney, former professor of highway engineering and now assisant engineer in charge of construction at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, will speak. Mr. Sweeney is the representative of all the student chapters of the A. S. C. E. in their relations with the parent body.

Shows To Feature Open House Days

A rubber ball which breaks into little pieces when bounced on the floor, frozen flowers, and liquid mercury which can be used as a hammer are but a few of the spectacular exhibits to be demonstrated in the Liquid Air Show as part of the Open House program next Monday and Tuesday, May 5 and 6.

Another feature at Open House will be the Light Show, in which will be given unusually colorful demonstrations of ultra-violet (black) light, polarized light which reduces automobile headlight glare, fluorescence, phosphoresence, and cold light, which is similar to that emitted by the firefly.

Displays of living micro-organisms such as protozoa and coelenterates will be shown on a motion picture screen as part of the Micro-Projection Exhibit.

The Liquid Air Show and the Micro-Projection Show will both be held in the Mendel hall Amphitheatre at 4:00 P .M., 7:00 P. M., and 9:00 P. M. The Light Show is scheduled for every half hour from 3:30 P. M. to 9:30 P. M. in room 210, Mendel hall.

Besides the three feature events, other exhibits of the science and engineering schools will be open to the public from 2:00 P. M. to 5:00 P. M. and from 6:00 P. M. to 9:00 P. M. both days. Friends and parents of Villanova students and of students planning to enter college are cordially invited to attend the Open House exhibits.

Complete programs for Open House may be obtained at the college registrar's offce.

Be-Blazered Juniors Rally 'Round The Flag

After Junior Week opened with Mass at 9:00 this morning, the members of the class assembled at the flagpole despite intermittent showers for the second ceremony of the day. With many of the juniors attired in their new white blazers, Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., vice president of the college, officially raised the flag. Class president William J. Howlett, in front of flag, and Junior Week chairman William E. Hooper, to Fr. Albers' left and also holding flag, assisted in the raising of Old Glory.

Walpole, McQuade Successful In Underclass Presidential Elections

Commerce Ticket Gets Most Sophomore Votes as Frosh Engineers Capture All But One Office

William P. Walpole and Thomas D. McQuade were elected to the presidencies of next year's junior and sophomore classes, respectively, at balloting last week as the commerce school dominated the sophomore balloting and the engineering school practically swept the first-year students' votes.

Walpole, sophomore commerce student from Chicago, thus was chosen to head the Centennial Class during its most important year from a social standpoint. Under his supervision will be made all appointments of chairmen to run the many junior activities as well as direction of the class in other matters. He succeeds Thomas C. Muraski, who was elected to the Student Council, as president of the Class of '43.

McQuade, freshman engineer from Greenwich, N. Y., led the engineering ticket to an overwhelming victory. He is the first president to be elected by the Class of '44.

Other officers chosen by the Class of '43 are Richard F. Anderson, commerce student, vice-president; Ward C. Guncheon, Jr., also C. & F., secretary; Francis J. McLaughlin, science man, treasurer; and Dennis A. Boyle, engineer, Thomas C. Muraski, engineer, and Jacques E. Mauch, artsman, as the three Student Council representatives of the class.

The yearlings picked Joseph M. Daly; science man, vice-president; Francis X. Quinn, engineer, secretary; William R. Hennessey, engineer, treasurer; and James M. Bonner, engineer, as Student Council representative.

All officers elected will assume their posts next September and will act for a year.

Elections by the present junior class for their officers of the senior year will not be held until after Junior Week. Nominations will be accepted on May 14 from 12:30 to 1:30 P. M. in the Mendel Amphitheatre and ballots will be cast on May 19 in room 110 Mendel from 11:45 A. M. until 1:30 P. M.

Oratorical Final Won By McIntyre

Robert J. McIntyre, junior commerce student, was selected winner of the annual Oratorical Contest for the Murtaugh Medal held last Wednesday in the Mendel Amphitheatre.

"What Has Happened to the World?" was the topic of the winning delivery. In it, McIntyre summarized world unrest from the days of Jesus Christ, down through the Middle Ages to the present.

Giving an analysis of this continual strife, he stressed the fact that guilt for the present world war cannot be placed on one nation or another; wars are to be explained by the fact that Christian principles can be supplanted by paganism.

Defeated contestants who also delivered speeches in the final elimination were James F. Donovan, senior artsman; Thomas J. McKimmey, education junior; and Thomas J. DeSipin, junior engineer.

Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, O. S. A., Rev. James S. Reilly, O S. A., and Rev. Robert P. Russell, O. S. A., judged the competition.

New Record

Almost 500 Merit Awards Conferred This Year; Moore, Callahan Lead Recipients With Eight Each

Establishing a new record in the number of merit awards, 491 certificates were conferred upon 224 students at a general assembly held last Thursday morning in the C. & F. Auditorium.

The Merit Award is a certificate of honor given to students in good standing who have actively engaged in extra-curricular activities. This year there were 60 extra-curricular activities thus recognized, with 27 faculty members as their moderators.

Two students shared the honor of receiving the greatest number of awards. They were Thomas J. Moore, senior education student, and Charles J. Callahan, commerce sophomore, with eight awards apiece.

Closely following the pair were Bernard C. Crumb, Joseph M. Gambescia, and Thomas C. Muraski with seven awards and ten others with five each.

Presentation of awards was made by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., President of the College, in the presence of the members of the faculty.

At the conclusion of the conferral, Fr. Stanford congratulated the recipients and expressed his satisfaction with extra-curricular activities.

Open House, Mother's Day Are Prelude To Dances Later In Week

Members of the Class of '42 began an activities-packed Junior Week this morning, marking the start of a continuous round of social functions which will include Mother's Day and Open House today, the Blazer Ball on Wednesday night, climaxed by the Prom on Friday night and the Dinner-Dance at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel on Saturday night.

Bradley Plays Prom, Climax Of Socials

The much-heralded Junior Prom will take place this Friday evening, May 9, in the Field House. Featured from ten 'til two will be the music of Will Bradley's orchestra and the coronation of Villanova's first Prom Queen and her court amid the setting of a night-club "roof garden".

The Queen, Overbrook's Gloria Spatola, will be crowned by the maestro and model agency head Walter Thornton, the final judge of the contest. Miss Spatola will be given a gold trophy and to her court of six, which includes Charlene Mork and Kay Haley of Rosemont College, Marie Mansfield of Immaculata College, Marie Selfridge of West Phila., and Loretta Kranz of Haverford, will be given sterling silver trophies. The coronation of the Queen and the presentation of the trophies will take place during the 11:30-12:00 intermission.

Decorations at the dance will be unique. From the curb to the entrance of the Field House will extend a canopy. Couples entering the Field House will find it transformed into the cool, luxurious atmosphere of a "roof garden." Overhead, the ceiling drapes will be flooded with deep blue lights, while against this blue sky fluorescent stars will glitter. Around the walls will be seen the silhouetted skyline of New York. In front of this, huge Gothic columns, sprayed with vari-colored lights hidden in the base, will extend to the balcony.

The 14-piece band of Will Bradley will be spotlighted on the stage, while in the background will be seen a fluorescent backdrop depicting Radio City. Bradley's vocalists, Lynn Gardner and Terry Allen, will sing from a raised platform before the band.

Bradley will feature slow medleys at the dance, using his famous "boogie woogie" numbers as specialties. Tickets for the affair are on sale at $5.00.

Serving as the warmup for the Prom will be the informal Blazer Ball at the Field House on Wed-

The formal inauguration of Junior Week took place when the members of the junior class attended Holy Mass celebrated by Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., class moderator, at 9 A. M. in the college chapel this morning.

Immediately following the Mass, flag-raising services were held in front of Mendel hall. The flag, accepted and raised by the Vice-President of the College, Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., was presented by William J. Howlett, junior class president.

The class ivy was planted on the lawn in front of the monastery at the conclusion of the flag solemnities. George Gabuzda, secretary of the class, presented the ivy to Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, O. S. A., Dean of the science school. In addition, several speeches were delivered.

Plant Class Tree

Festivities for the morning were brought to a close with the planting of the class tree opposite St. Rita's hall at 10:15 A. M. Rev. James S. Reilly, O. S. A., Procurator, accepted the tree from William E. Hooper, general chairman of Junior Week.

Mother's Day will open at noon today with luncheon in the college dining hall, according to the program drawn up by chairman Joseph V. McCabe. Arrangements have been made for the reception of 450 mothers and their guests.

Entertainment at 2 P. M.

Exercises in the Field House will begin promptly at 2 P. M. Welcoming addresses to the mothers will be delivered by McCabe and Fr. Albers. A short concert will then be presented by the Choral Society, in addition to several instrumental solos by members of the Symphonic Band. Completing the pro-

To Our Very Best Girls

VILLANOVA is proud to receive its Mother's Day visitors this afternoon, and we are sure they will enjoy their visit as much as we will be pleased to welcome them. This week is the high point of the college year, and we couldn't find a better way to start it than by entertaining our very best girls.

Mothers, today the college belongs to you, and of all our visitors this week we are most anxious to see that you enjoy your visit. We are all at your service, so just for today forget about your "homework" and make yourselves at home at Villanova.

The Junior Class sponsoring the week's activities, the student body as a whole, and the faculty all extend greetings to our fair guests. Every day is Mother's Day, but we want to make this one something special in this regard; the mothers of Villanova are to make the college their Alma Mater today and enjoy themselves as pretty young co-eds should.

Most of you have been here before, others will be visiting us for the first time; for one and all, now is your opportunity to see the college on parade. We trust you will find the program arranged for you interesting and that you will be further entertained by the Open House activities. Our only regret is that we don't have you here with us more often, because, for its mothers, Villanova always has Open House.

Renew Prayer For Peace

MAY, WITH all the grandeur it brings us in surrounding nature, annually bears notice that spring has come. There is, however, still another element of beauty attached to the month which all Catholic people for centuries have honored. It is the month of Mary, a time set aside by the Church for devotion to the Blessed Mother. Privately and in public procession we pay homage to Our Lady at this moment.

It is she who is closest to God in His kingdom. It is she who can best intercede for us to the Heavenly Father. Especially during her month will she be most solicitous in answering our fervent appeals. Let us pray to her that the nations of the world will soon, by some means, cease warring, and that a just, Christian peace will follow.

MONDAY - - - - - - MAY 5, 1941

Let's Make Merry!

HERE IT IS! Revel in it for the short, sweet moment that it remains, and, in so doing, carry away for future recollection the pleasant memories it will leave. Speaking to the class of 1942, we thus acknowledge the long-awaited arrival of "your week," trusting that joyful anticipation will be satiated during the ensuing whirl.

Commencing today with spiritual exercises, the traditional ceremonies of flag elevation and ivy-interment, and a tributary remembrance of student mothers, your fond dreams will soon be realized in the approaching festivities of "the dance" and other social pastimes arranged for Junior Week.

Traditional though the celebration of this week may be, each class annually takes pride in the fact that it reigns when its turn is at hand. Many are the pleasures before you; make the most of them. Additional features have been provided for your Promenade, the gala occasion of the week, and the Dinner-Dance which terminates your social activities will be a glorious farewell to a cavalcade of pleasantries.

Remember only that your cooperation in all of the scheduled events is requisite for true success in these affairs. The officers, chairmen, and committees of your class undertook their duties with a desire to acquire "the best" for you. Now it is up to the members of that class to do their share. The most favorable manner in which this can be fulfilled is by active participation.

Fine preparations indicate that "your week" is now waiting for you. Let its spirit envelop you, and may all that it promises become a treasury of memories when it is long past.

Awake To The Inevitable

ONCE AGAIN the spirit of resignation in which the American people have cloaked themselves for the past decade is evident. This time it makes its appearance under conditions that leave the do-or-don't attitude of the populace open to just, indicting criticism. This nation is going to war and the voice of the masses is still mute.

The most recent expression of the "accept what comes" philosophy that has seized America appeared when the people were informed of the "patrol" system our government had adopted. Few challenges, if any, were emitted against this deceitful alias for "convoy".

Apparently, the limited rejection of the contemplated convoy measure was well served, for the term itself was at least subject to change. In its place, however, was substituted a malicious camouflage which is of equal peril by its nature as that which it replaced.

That this innovation in terms does not destroy the identity between the two is confirmed in the purpose for which the "patrol" operates. It is to act as a scout on the waters of the Western Hemisphere, which are now rather difficult to fix in any definite zone. Should any foreign, belligerent craft be sighted in these waters, destroyers are to begin firing—just for protection's sake and to clear "our boundaries" of alien vessels.

Too long has America fostered the blind sentiment that it is the object of circumstances beyond the control of the administration, or that all which has occured was inevitable. This issue in view of the already strained situation was founded in a treacherous manner. Treacherous also will be the outcome of this move.

FACULTY COMMENTS

National Defense And The College Man

By Fr. Dwyer

MANY months have passed since the first strong impulse was given to the national defense effort. Several features could now be pointed out which previously might be hoped for but scarcely assured. Of the many dangers inherent to such a sudden change of tempo in the production of more and more of everything, the disruption of social structure was clearly foreseen and means were devised to overcome such harmful and time wasting outgrowths. This unwillingness to allow chaos to displace intelligent order found its way naturally into the programs of youth training, in which college education plays such a prominent part.

Not without good reason the leaders in our national defense movement have insisted that nothing is to be gained by disrupting the college careers of young men. Ability must be given even a better chance to unfold itself for the good of the vital program, since the institutions of higher learning hold a position in national life which cannot be filled by any other agency. The college product has been and is now, more than ever, vitally necessary if the hopes of our people for the future are to be realized and if their fears are to be proven groundless.

Few sources of power are so rich in human treasure as the centers of academic training. Their contribution is so desirable that it now appears obvious that the present imperative demand for men with college education will assume still greater proportions. Especially in the last few years it has become almost an axiom that the social process cries out for an endless stream of men and women prepared and proven able in the colleges of our land. Answering the loud call of the people and their government agencies youths of college age have a patriotic duty to seek the mental and social excellence which the college can offer. It is a challenge to the youth of our generation to labor for the coordination of mind and personal powers which is to be acquired in the laboratories and lecture halls of our colleges.

Among the wide implications of our national effort is a suggestion that will weigh heavily upon the mind of the high-school graduate contemplating a college career. It is the thought of selective service in the army. To date exact authoritative information is not forthcoming to give assurance that the college career will not be interrupted. It is to be noted however, that we are and have been for some time in general assured that national defense is best served not by disrupting, but by stepping up the types of preparation which will fit youth in the best possible manner to face the contingencies of our national future.

The rich variety of training which colleges offer is so great and so highly coordinated through the experience of many years that the young man of ability who wants to serve the future of our country cannot find a better substitute for it. Familiarity and then expertness in the sciences is a primary need now voiced daily. World competition in business as well as strife has created a need for those skilled in deftness of hand and keenness of eye, but learned too in modern physical theory as applied in our machine age. There is no substitute for a deep knowledge of mechanics, electricity, construction, and chemicals to be acquired in the theory and experiment of instruction and research. It has been the bitter experience of peoples that men must design before they can produce.

It is in college too that men take the first definite steps in preparing for a medical career. So insistent has become the call for medical men that it is an open question whether or not there can be the least hope of having enough physicians for the great task that lies ahead of us. The realization of a need for greater effort in bettering the condition of national public health is assuming the proportions of a crusade.

Our national defense effort was inaugurated as a movement to preserve our peace through national strength. It is inspired by the conviction that fear of our own weakness dare not displace our confidence in the American genius to always find ways and means, even if completely new ones must be discovered. College-trained men are fitted according to this program. The economic powers latent in our society must be brought to light by men whose gaze has been sharpened by intelligent direction and methodic inquiry. Leadership in American commerce and business management has been and will continue to be fostered in our colleges. Languages, literature, the best thoughts of past and present must be taught in order to be learned by the rising generation.

Our American way of life is not a platitude to be defended in some vague way or other. It must be nurtured and then made better by the intelligently trained men of the future. This is true national defense. To gain college training is to take part in this great national movement.

AMID revelry and fanfare, the class of 1942 begins Junior Week activities today.

Open House should attract many fair visitors to the campus and, for a brief time, the L-men can find out just what kind of a place Villanova would be if it were co-ed. Personally, no thank you.

Mothers, too, will be traversing our hallowed halls, being feted and feasted. But did anyone ever hear of Dad's Day around school? The family breadwinner doesn't even get a free admission to a football game. Poor Dad, he pays and pays and pays.

FORTY-TWOings:

The Whitehall Apartments, Montgomery Inn, Haverford Court, and the Wayne Hotel appear to be the favored hostelries of visiting dates this week. . .Climaxing the week's events will be the Prom on Friday night with Will Bradley's music. Many celebrities of stage, screen and radio are expected to witness the crowning of Queen "Doie" Spatola, who'll be escorted by proud "King" Tony Anderson, varsity footballer.

Assisting the Queen in her court will be Marie Selfridge, with Bill Friel; Marie Louise Mansfield, with Loring Jones; Charlene Mork, with Ed Bennis; Loretta Kranz, with Bill Mowen; Kay Haley, with Charley Harrison; and Betty Heinel, with Bill Ehmer.

Members of the court will receive silver trophies but the gallant "court pages" will get nothing but the prestige.

The Dinner-Dance will take place the next evening, May 10, at the Ben Franklin; the Ben Franklin will be sold at auction on May 16 by order of a Philadelphia court. It would have added a bit of interest to the affair if the auction were held between courses at the meal, but chairman "Pooch" Gordon didn't hear about it in time to make arrangements.

A woman's college is making much of the fact that recently-compiled statistics show that men get mad an average of six times a week and women only three. Yes, but who makes the men mad?. . . Vince Quinn and Bill Foster were nabbed for a $13.50 fine en route to New York because they crossed the white line on a two-lane highway. . ."straight-shooters" always win—.

SHIFTING SANDS:

Will Gagen spent quite some time on the window balcony of the Commerce and Finance building the other day. Prof. Dougherty, hearing the prisoner's moans and wails, rescued him; Will returned to class weak from exposure. . .We wonder if Jack Grabosky really got his broken hand from falling off his horse.

Roger Logan and Kirk Holland were seen at Harcum's formal the other Saturday night. . Jim "Swifty" Nunemaker is having girl trouble with Judy from Centenary Junior College. . .Ed Kasky will be seen in the company of a Briarcliff woman this week. . .Dick Anderson is still undecided whether to ask a Wellesley or Smith College lass down, the smoothie.

Austin Gavin was stung by a bee on the hand last week. When infection spread, he was taken to Misericordia Hospital; he stayed there for three days. Very shortly after he dated the nurse. He must have been stung by something else.

WHIRLINGS:

At the Student Chemists' convention here, Jim Flood became interested in Alice from Beaver College as did Bob Ayerle in Blanche from the same school. . .Frank Smith showed three lovelies about the campus but couldn't decide whether they were Polish or German. . . Jack Zerby is presently a victim of the measles.

At what certain rendezvous does Joe McCabe have a charge account? His patronage must be large to merit this. . .Jim Halpin got two merit awards, but mistakenly, because one of them rightfully belonged to brother Joe, a varsity football manager. . .Tom McKimmey's girl-friend will journey all the way from Rockford, Illinois, to spend the week; some sort of a distance record for here.

Canes, Striped Blazers, Murphy's Musical Skippers Some Highspots Of 16 Activity-Filled Junior Weeks

Traditional Festivities Officially Began in the Twenties; Bachelor's Day, Dress Competition Got the Gate

By JOHN P. FULLAM

ONE of the oldest traditions on this highly-traditionalized campus is Junior Week — five days devoted to the engrossing task of celebrating soon-to-be-acquired seniorship.

Since Junior Week is a tradition, its history has been evolutionary; Topsy-like, it "jes' growed." The practice of setting aside some time each year for the activities of the junior class is almost as old as college social activities themselves. However, Junior Week, properly so-called, began to develop during the middle twenties — about 15 years ago.

Although the essential spirit of the week has remained the same throughout its history, the events and practices which go to make it up have not. Varied indeed have been the official insignia of the week.

For the Class of '27, a Villanova cap and a flashy cane were standard equipment. And in recognition of them, a dance, camouflaged under the alliterative title, "Kap and Kane Karnival," was held on the evening of the first day of the week. Although the dance was highly successful, the title was not, and the following year found the Blue Blazer Ball in its stead.

Blazers Appear

It was the Class of '28 which first used blazers as the official apparel for Junior Week — blazers which really blazed. With their brilliant, inch-wide alternating stripes, they suggest to the present-day critic the combination of a large scale minstrel show and a barber shop. But they were without doubt irresistible in that day and age, especially when supplemented by those canes!

The class of '29 chose a more subdued but quite picturesque blue blazer trimmed with white. This type was worn by succeeding classes up until last year, although the white blazer introduced in 1933 achieved a greater degree of popularity than the blue one in recent years. The once-traditional cane did not fare so well. Supposedly indicating that the bearer had reached manhood, it passed out of use as soon as manhood in general began to go cane-less.

Prom Always Highlight

The history of the program of our traditional Junior Week dances is particularly interesting. The Prom has always been the outstanding affair. It has almost always been held on Friday evening, although two classes, '38 and '39, changed the day to Wednesday and Saturday, respectively.

Juniors in 1929 danced to the strains of Murphy's Musical Skippers, whose repertoire began with "Ain't She Sweet?" through "Black Bottom," to the "Blue Danube Waltz." Phil Napoleon and the Memphis Five accompanied the glidings of the Class of '29, while Mal Hallet performed for the Class of '30. Both of the last-named dances were held at the Bellevue-Stratford.

The Class of '32 Prom was held at the Penn A. C.; favors consisting of blue-and-gold college seals were given out. Up until this time a Tea Dance ("The Dansant," if you'd rather), had also been held each year, usually in the Rosemont Gymnasium.

Dinner-Dance Introduced

The Class of '33 introduced a Farewell Dance, which was held for several years until combined by the Class of '36 with the Blazer Ball.

And in '34, the Juniors promenaded to the music of Phil Emerton and his Diamonds. Isham Jones performed for the Class for '36; this class also introduced the now annual Junior Dinner-Dance, which was held at Green Hill Farms on Tuesday evening.

Jan Garber, the Dorsey Brothers, and the late Hal Kemp headed the musical bill for the three ensuing Proms, while the Class of '41 was the first to engage two orchestras —Leighton Noble's and Van Alexander's.

The names of the various days of Junior Week and the events which mark their passing have varied throughout the years. Solemn High Mass in the College Chapel has always ushered in the week. Monday has been variously called "Campus Day" and "Class Day." The Class of '27 originated the practice of planting a class tree on the initial day of the proceedings, while the Class of '28 was the first to raise a class banner as well as the National Emblem during the flag-raising exercises.

Wildcat Wednesday

For them, Wednesday was Wildcat Day, dedicated to the athletes; Thursday was Tradition Day; and Friday was Prom Day. The following year saw Thursday called Bachelors' Day, while Saturday came to be known as Farewell Day.

A magazine covering the activities of Junior Week was first published by the Class of '28; they called it the "Junior Jubilee," a name which was changed the following year to the "Junior Courtier." Relying to a great extent upon the "Belle Air" for its material, this pictorial appeared in the middle of the festivities each year for four years.

The dads had their innings when the Class of '32 instituted "Dad's Day," featuring athletic events and a Father and Son banquet. Indicative of something is the fact that this day was replaced in 1934 by Mother's Day, which has remained in vogue ever since.

Open House Since '36

The Class of '36 introduced Open House, held in conjunction with Mother's Day on Monday. In recent years, this event has been divided into two sections, one for science and engineering and one for the liberal arts and extra-curricular activities in alternating years.

Athletic events always played an important part in Junior Weeks of the past. Baseball games, football games, golf matches, etc., successfully prevented any sort of letdown in activity. Intramural track meets were held yearly up until the early thirties; and in 1935, a junior-senior baseball game was played on Friday of the big week.

Two other activities which have passed out of existence are the Junior-Senior Smoker, usually followed by a play presented by the Dual Mask dramatic society; and the annual dress parade, in which recognition was accorded that class which was most handsomely decked-out.

And so, a glance back over Junior Weeks of the past speaks well of the chances for still better Junior Weeks in the future, not to mention that of the present.

Drink Those Malteds to Joe Barnes, Loquacious "Harp" Who Made a Great Stand 'Til His Own —30— Shut Him Up

DEAR MRS. BARNES: As a consistent reader of the VILLANOVAN, you must remember an article in the January 14 issue, addressed to "Dear Dad." That article contained the confessions and impressions of a retiring sports editor.

The story may have satisfied "Dad," but you, perchance, still hold some secret suspicions that all was not mentioned about the "extra-domestic" activities of son Joseph.

We don't intend to go all the way back to Joe's birth on August 8, 1919. Nor will we burden you with the task of recalling his "knicker" days in Germantown and later in West Oak Lane, where he got a diploma from dear old St. Athanasius grammar school.

But do you remember when Joe entered St. Joe's Prep in September of '33? On those numerous days when he didn't get home in time for dinner he may have been occupied with track, class athletics, the glee club, debating, or the senior dance committee (all mere sidelines, of course), but he was more likely banging out some copy for the school magazine, the "Chronicle," for which he acted in the capacity of sports editor.

One thing bothers us, though. The quotation chosen for the high school year book as most perfectly describing him was, "I shall not look upon his like again." Frankly, Mrs. Barnes, we think the book's editors could have written something else; some of its readers may erroneously have thought that censorship dropped a "thank God" off the end.

Now we refer to the most revolting part of your son's entire career. Madam, do you know where he spent his Saturday afternoons during the long years from early boyhood?

Just because Temple Stadium was only a mile from home he used to go there regularly and cheer enthusiastically for our arch-rivals. On the day of the first Villanova-Temple fray in that stadium, he hid under the benches for eight hours to have the privilege of adding his voice to the cheers for an "Owl" victory.

Joe was sorry, however, and in '37 received absolution from his offense when he signed a four-year contract here calling for him to major in pre-law and to graduate this June.

JOE BARNES
. . . sha'n't see his like again.

That haggard, worn-out expression which Joe has been bringing home to dinner for the last four years is due, besides studies, to the History Seminar, Delta Pi Epsilon activities, intramurals and, to a larger degree, to his editorial positions.

To sports editor Barnes, the VILLANOVAN was a seven-day-a-week job. He spent two days putting out the paper and the other five settling the disputes arising from the controversial sentiments which his "Irish impulsiveness" invariably induced him to express. From time to time, Joe did not see eye to eye with such other sports commentators as Stoney McLinn, Leo Riordan, and Red Smith — to mention just a few.

In order that you, his mother, might not hit upon the idea that he was not doing enough, he switched typewriters in January and now frames phraseology for the Belle Air as its sports head.

Joe is 21 now, Mrs Barnes. He might get difficult and, on the grounds of constitutional rights, demand certain privileges at home. You can placate him with the promise of a new car or a new tennis raquet—they're his hobbies.

When Joe begins to function as an independent economic unit in June, he hopes it will be in advertising, publicity, or sports promotion. Confidentially, Mrs. Barnes, we would advise that you start to practice saying, "I knew him when . . ."

As an Irishman and an ardent anti-British non-interventionist, he doesn't exactly plan a celebration when the local draft board beckons him to the feather beds and sumptuous platters of army life. Joe expects the call to arms next fall or winter, but top-sergeants won't put a permanent "q. t." on his fight for the underdogs, Mrs. Barnes.

Well, that's all we're going to say; it leaves plenty unsaid. Our only hope is that we've at least partially cleared up the obscurity which must have resulted from that article to "Dad." Joe was very confusing in explaining to your husband why he put —30— on yellow copy, why he liked everybody at Villanova, why everybody had reason to dislike him, and so on.

COMES another week in the prolonged hunt through exchanges from other institutions of higher learning — and comes a week in which TALLY confines himself to reprinting news, views, and bits of wit.

For the first time in a number of issues, the column is unrepresented by a poem on the local social happenings of the week. A long commemorative ode reflecting all the facets of Junior Week found the wastebasket beside an editor's desk. And just because he got sore when he read these lines from one of the verses referring to Mother's Day:

It's one day she'll be away
From cleaning and a-stewing.

We thought poetic licence allowed a slight alteration of the facts—even about the home front—to let the fourth line rhyme with the first. But, no matter, we can extend a welcome in prose and mention that we thought enough of the truly "biggest and best" Junior Week in history to pull a Longfellow. Consider it done.

Class Sojourns:

A certain Michigan State prof had always striven for realism in his classes. He got it one day in his parliamentary procedure class, and, according to students, didn't like it.

He was drilling the class on proper ways to conduct a meeting. Each student had to give a demonstration of a technique used in meetings. The class ran smoothly for a time, but, when it came one indivual's turn, he motioned for adjournment. The next student seconded the motion. Before the perplexed professor could say anything, his class had voted on it and walked out.

To Our Very Best Girls

VILLANOVA is proud to receive its Mother's Day visitors this afternoon, and we are sure they will enjoy their visit as much as we will be pleased to welcome them. This week is the high point of the college year, and we couldn't find a better way to start it than by entertaining our very best girls.

Mothers, today the college belongs to you, and of all our visitors this week we are most anxious to see that you enjoy your visit. We are all at your service, so just for today forget about your "homework" and make yourselves at home at Villanova.

The Junior Class sponsoring the week's activities, the student body as a whole, and the faculty all extend greetings to our fair guests. MAY, WITH all the grandeur it brings us in surrounding nature, annually bears notice that spring has come. There is, however, still another element of beauty attached to the month which all Catholic people for centuries have honored. It is the month of Mary, a time set aside by the Church for devotion to the Blessed Mother. Privately and in public procession we pay homage to Our Lady at this moment.

It is she who is closest to God in His kingdom. It is she who can best intercede for us to the Heavenly Father. Especially during her month will she be most solicitous in answering our fervent appeals. Let us pray to her that the nations of the world will soon, by some means, cease warring, and that a just, Christian peace will follow.

Let's Make Merry!

HERE IT IS! Revel in it for the short, sweet moment that it remains, and, in so doing, carry away for future recollection the pleasant memories it will leave. Speaking to the class of 1942, we thus acknowledge the long-awaited arrival of "your week," trusting that joyful anticipation will be satiated during the ensuing whirl.

Commencing today with spiritual exercises, the traditional ceremonies of flag elevation and ivy-interment, and a tributary remembrance of student mothers, your fond dreams will soon be realized in the approaching festivities of "the dance" and other social pastimes arranged for Junior Week.

Traditional though the celebration of this week may be, each class annually takes pride in the fact that it reigns when its turn is at hand. Many are the pleasures before you; make the most of them. Additional features have been provided for your Promenade, the gala occasion of the week, and the Dinner-Dance which terminates your social activities will be a glorious farewell to a cavalcade of pleasantries.

Remember only that your cooperation in all of the scheduled events is requisite for true success in these affairs. The officers, chairmen, and committees of your class undertook their duties with a desire to acquire "the best" for you. Now it is up to the members of that class to do their share. The most favorable manner in which this can be fulfilled is by active participation.

Fine preparations indicate that "your week" is now waiting for you. Let its spirit envelop you, and may all that it promises become a treasury of memories when it is long past.

Awake To The Inevitable

ONCE AGAIN the spirit of resignation in which the American people have cloaked themselves for the past decade is evident. This time it makes its appearance under conditions that leave the do-or-don't attitude of the populace open to just, indicting criticism. This nation is going to war and the voice of the masses is still mute.

The most recent expression of the "accept what comes" philosophy that has seized America appeared when the people were informed of the "patrol" system our government had adopted. Few challenges, if any, were emitted against this deceitful alias for "convoy".

Apparently, the limited rejection of the contemplated convoy measure was well served, for the term itself was at least subject to change. In its place, however, was substituted a malicious camouflage which is of equal peril by its nature as that which it replaced.

That this innovation in terms does not destroy the identity between the two is confirmed in the purpose for which the "patrol" operates. It is to act as a scout on the waters of the Western Hemisphere, which are now rather difficult to fix in any definite zone. Should any foreign, belligerent craft be sighted in these waters, destroyers are to begin firing—just for protection's sake and to clear "our boundaries" of alien vessels.

Too long has America fostered the blind sentiment that it is the object of circumstances beyond the control of the administration, or that all which has occured was inevitable. This issue in view of the already strained situation was founded in a treacherous manner. Treacherous also will be the outcome of this move.

FACULTY COMMENTS

National Defense And The College Man

By Fr. Dwyer

MANY months have passed since the first strong impulse was given to the national defense effort. Several features could now be pointed out which previously might be hoped for but scarcely assured. Of the many dangers inherent to such a sudden change of tempo in the production of more and more of everything, the disruption of social structure was clearly foreseen and means were devised to overcome such harmful and time wasting outgrowths. This unwillingness to allow chaos to displace intelligent order found its way naturally into the programs of youth training, in which college education plays such a prominent part.

Not without good reason the leaders in our national defense movement have insisted that nothing is to be gained by disrupting the college careers of young men. Ability must be given even a better chance to unfold itself for the good of the vital program, since the institutions of higher learning hold a position in national life which cannot be filled by any other agency. The college product has been and is now, more than ever, vitally necessary if the hopes of our people for the future are to be realized and if their fears are to be proven groundless.

Few sources of power are so rich in human treasure as the centers of academic training. Their contribution is so desirable that it now appears obvious that the present imperative demand for men with college education will assume still greater proportions. Especially in the last few years it has become almost an axiom that the social process cries out for an endless stream of men and women prepared and proven able in the colleges of our land. Answering the loud call of the people and their government agencies youths of college age have a patriotic duty to seek the mental and social excellence which the college can offer. It is a challenge to the youth of our generation to labor for the coordination of mind and personal powers which is to be acquired in the laboratories and lecture halls of our colleges.

Among the wide implications of our national effort is a suggestion that will weigh heavily upon the mind of the high-school graduate contemplating a college career. It is the thought of selective service in the army. To date exact authoritative information is not forthcoming to give assurance that the college career will not be interrupted. It is to be noted however, that we are and have been for some time in general assured that national defense is best served not by disrupting, but by stepping up the types of preparation which will fit youth in the best possible manner to face the contingencies of our national future.

The rich variety of training which colleges offer is so great and so highly coordinated through the experience of many years that the young man of ability who wants to serve the future of our country cannot find a better substitute for it. Familiarity and then expertness in the sciences is a primary need now voiced daily. World competition in business as well as strife has created a need for those skilled in deftness of hand and keenness of eye, but learned too in modern physical theory as applied in our machine age. There is no substitute for a deep knowledge of mechanics, electricity, construction, and chemicals to be acquired in the theory and experiment of instruction and research. It has been the bitter experience of peoples that men must design before they can produce.

It is in college too that men take the first definite steps in preparing for a medical career. So insistent has become the call for medical men that it is an open question whether or not there can be the least hope of having enough physicians for the great task that lies ahead of us. The realization of a need for greater effort in bettering the condition of national public health is assuming the proportions of a crusade.

Our national defense effort was inaugurated as a movement to preserve our peace through national strength. It is inspired by the conviction that fear of our own weakness dare not displace our confidence in the American genius to always find ways and means, even if completely new ones must be discovered. College-trained men are fitted according to this program. The economic powers latent in our society must be brought to light by men whose gaze has been sharpened by intelligent direction and methodic inquiry. Leadership in American commerce and business management has been and will continue to be fostered in our colleges. Languages, literature, the best thoughts of past and present must be taught in order to be learned by the rising generation.

Our American way of life is not a platitude to be defended in some vague way or other. It must be nurtured and then made better by the intelligently trained men of the future. This is true national defense. To gain college training is to take part in this great national movement.

Wildcat Whirl

AMID revelry and fanfare, the class of 1942 begins Junior Week activities today.

Open House should attract many fair visitors to the campus and, for a brief time, the L.-men can find out just what kind of a place Villanova would be if it were co-ed. Personally, no thank you.

Mothers, too, will be traversing our hallowed halls, being feted and feasted. But did anyone ever hear of Dad's Day around school? The family breadwinner doesn't even get a free admission to a football game. Poor Dad, he pays and pays and pays.

FORTY-TWOings:

The Whitehall Apartments, Montgomery Inn, Haverford Court, and the Wayne Hotel appear to be the favored hostelries of visiting dates this week. . .Climaxing the week's events will be the Prom on Friday night with Will Bradley's music. Many celebrities of stage, screen and radio are expected to witness the crowning of Queen "Doie" Spatola, who'll be escorted by proud "King" Tony Anderson, varsity footballer.

Assisting the Queen in her court will be Marie Selfridge, with Bill Friel; Marie Louise Mansfield, with Loring Jones; Charlene Mork, with Ed Bennis; Loretta Kranz, with Bill Mowen; Kay Haley, with Charley Harrison; and Betty Heinel, with Bill Ehmer.

Members of the court will receive silver trophies but the gallant "court pages" will get nothing but the prestige.

The Dinner-Dance will take place the next evening, May 10, at the Ben Franklin; the Ben Franklin will be sold at auction on May 16 by order of a Philadelphia court. It would have added a bit of interest to the affair if the auction were held between courses at the meal, but chairman "Pooch" Gordon didn't hear about it in time to make arrangements.

A woman's college is making much of the fact that recently-compiled statistics show that men get mad an average of six times a week and women only three. Yes, but who makes the men mad?. . .

Vince Quinn and Bill Foster were nabbed for a $13.50 fine en route to New York because they crossed the white line on a two-lane highway. . ."straight-shooters" always win—.

SHIFTING SANDS:

Will Gagen spent quite some time on the window balcony of the Commerce and Finance building the other day. Prof. Dougherty, hearing the prisoner's moans and wails, rescued him; Will returned to class weak from exposure. . .We wonder if Jack Grabosky really got his broken hand from falling off his horse.

Roger Logan and Kirk Holland were seen at Harcum's formal the other Saturday night. . Jim "Swifty" Nunemaker is having girl trouble with Judy from Centenary Junior College. . .Ed Kasky will be seen in the company of a Briarcliff woman this week. . .Dick Anderson is still undecided whether to ask a Wellesley or Smith College lass down, the smoothie.

Austin Gavin was stung by a bee on the hand last week. When infection spread, he was taken to Misericordia Hospital; he stayed there for three days. Very shortly after he dated the nurse. He must have been stung by something else.

WHIRLINGS:

At the Student Chemists' convention here, Jim Flood became interested in Alice from Beaver College as did Bob Ayerle in Blanche from the same school. . .Frank Smith showed three lovelies about the campus but couldn't decide whether they were Polish or German. . . Jack Zerby is presently a victim of the measles.

At what certain rendezvous does Joe McCabe have a charge account? His patronage must be large to merit this. . .Jim Halpin got two merit awards, but mistakenly, because one of them rightfully belonged to brother Joe, a varsity football manager. . .Tom McKimmey's girl-friend will journey all the way from Rockford, Illinois, to spend the week; some sort of a distance record for here.

Canes, Striped Blazers, Murphy's Musical Skippers Some Highspots Of 16 Activity-Filled Junior Weeks

Traditional Festivities Officially Began in the Twenties; Bachelor's Day, Dress Competition Got the Gate

By JOHN P. FULLAM

ONE of the oldest traditions on this highly-traditionalized campus is Junior Week — five days devoted to the engrossing task of celebrating soon-to-be-acquired seniorship.

Since Junior Week is a tradition, its history has been evolutionary; Topsy-like, it "jes' growed." The practice of setting aside some time each year for the activities of the junior class is almost as old as college social activities themselves. However, Junior Week, properly so-called, began to develop during the middle twenties — about 15 years ago.

Although the essential spirit of the week has remained the same throughout its history, the events and practices which go to make it up have not. Varied indeed have been the official insignia of the week.

For the Class of '27, a Villanova cap and a flashy cane were standard equipment. And in recognition of them, a dance, camouflaged under the alliterative title, "Kap and Kane Karnival," was held on the evening of the first day of the week. Although the dance was highly successful, the title was not, and the following year found the Blue Blazer Ball in its stead.

Blazers Appear

It was the Class of '28 which first used blazers as the official apparel for Junior Week — blazers which really blazed. With their brilliant, inch-wide alternating stripes, they suggest to the present-day critic the combination of a large scale minstrel show and a barber shop. But they were without doubt irresistible in that day and age, especially when supplemented by those canes!

The class of '29 chose a more subdued but quite picturesque blue blazer trimmed with white. This type was worn by succeeding classes up until last year, although the white blazer introduced in 1933 achieved a greater degree of popularity than the blue one in recent years. The once-traditional cane did not fare so well. Supposedly indicating that the bearer had reached manhood, it passed out of use as soon as manhood in general began to go cane-less.

Prom Always Highlight

The history of the program of our traditional Junior Week dances is particularly interesting. The Prom has always been the outstanding affair. It has almost always been held on Friday evening, although two classes, '38 and '39, changed the day to Wednesday and Saturday, respectively.

Juniors in 1929 danced to the strains of Murphy's Musical Skippers, whose repertoire began with "Ain't She Sweet?" through "Black Bottom," to the "Blue Danube Waltz." Phil Napoleon and the Memphis Five accompanied the glidings of the Class of '29, while Mal Hallet performed for the Class of '30. Both of the last-named dances were held at the Bellevue-Stratford.

The Class of '32 Prom was held at the Penn A. C.; favors consisting of blue-and-gold college seals were given out. Up until this time a Tea Dance ("The Dansant," if you'd rather), had also been held each year, usually in the Rosemont Gymnasium.

Dinner-Dance Introduced

The Class of '33 introduced a Farewell Dance, which was held for several years until combined by the Class of '36 with the Blazer Ball.

And in '34, the Juniors promenaded to the music of Phil Emerton and his Diamonds. Isham Jones performed for the Class for '36; this class also introduced the now annual Junior Dinner-Dance, which was held at Green Hill Farms on Tuesday evening.

Jan Garber, the Dorsey Brothers, and the late Hal Kemp headed the musical bill for the three ensuing Proms, while the Class of '41 was the first to engage two orchestras —Leighton Noble's and Van Alexander's.

The names of the various days of Junior Week and the events which mark their passing have varied throughout the years. Solemn High Mass in the College Chapel has always ushered in the week. Monday has been variously called "Campus Day" and "Class Day." The Class of '27 originated the practice of planting a class tree on the initial day of the proceedings, while the Class of '28 was the first to raise a class banner as well as the National Emblem during the flag-raising exercises.

Wildcat Wednesday

For them, Wednesday was Wildcat Day, dedicated to the athletes; Thursday was Tradition Day; and Friday was Prom Day. The following year saw Thursday called Bachelors' Day, while Saturday came to be known as Farewell Day.

A magazine covering the activities of Junior Week was first published by the Class of '28; they called it the "Junior Jubilee," a name which was changed the following year to the "Junior Courtier." Relying to a great extent upon the "Belle Air" for its material, this pictorial appeared in the middle of the festivities each year for four years.

The dads had their innings when the Class of '32 instituted "Dad's Day," featuring athletic events and a Father and Son banquet. Indicative of something is the fact that this day was replaced in 1934 by Mother's Day, which has remained in vogue ever since.

Open House Since '36

The Class of '36 introduced Open House, held in conjunction with Mother's Day on Monday. In recent years, this event has been divided into two sections, one for science and engineering and one for the liberal arts and extra-curricular activities in alternating years.

Athletic events always played an important part in Junior Weeks of the past. Baseball games, football games, golf matches, etc., successfully prevented any sort of letdown in activity. Intramural track meets were held yearly up until the early thirties; and in 1935, a junior-senior baseball game was played on Friday of the big week.

Two other activities which have passed out of existence are the Junior-Senior Smoker, usually followed by a play presented by the Dual Mask dramatic society; and the annual dress parade, in which recognition was accorded that class which was most handsomely decked-out.

And so, a glance back over Junior Weeks of the past speaks well of the chances for still better Junior Weeks in the future, not to mention that of the present.

Introducing:

Drink Those Malteds to Joe Barnes, Loquacious "Harp" Who Made a Great Stand 'Til His Own —30— Shut Him Up

By BILL SCHUBERT

DEAR MRS. BARNES: As a consistent reader of the VILLANOVAN, you must remember an article in the January 14 issue, addressed to "Dear Dad." That article contained the confessions and impressions of a retiring sports editor.

The story may have satisfied "Dad," but you, perchance, still hold some secret suspicions that all was not mentioned about the "extra-domestic" activities of son Joseph.

We don't intend to go all the way back to Joe's birth on August 8, 1919. Nor will we burden you with the task of recalling his "knicker" days in Germantown and later in West Oak Lane, where he got a diploma from dear old St. Athanasius grammar school.

But do you remember when Joe entered St. Joe's Prep in September of '33? On those numerous days when he didn't get home in time for dinner he may have been occupied with track, class athletics, the glee club, debating, or the senior dance committee (all mere sidelines, of course), but he was more likely banging out some copy for the school magazine, the "Chronicle," for which he acted in the capacity of sports editor.

One thing bothers us, though. The quotation chosen for the high school year book as most perfectly describing him was, "I shall not look upon his like again." Frankly, Mrs. Barnes, we think the book's editors could have written something else; some of its readers may erroneously have thought that censorship dropped a "thank God" off the end.

Now we refer to the most revolting part of your son's entire career. Madam, do you know where he spent his Saturday afternoons during the long years from early boyhood?

Just because Temple Stadium was only a mile from home he used to go there regularly and cheer enthusiastically for our arch-rivals. On the day of the first Villanova-Temple fray in that stadium, he hid under the benches for eight hours to have the privilege of adding his voice to the cheers for an "Owl" victory.

Joe was sorry, however, and in '37 received absolution from his offense when he signed a four-year contract here calling for him to major in pre-law and to graduate this June.

JOE BARNES
. . . sha'n't see his like again.

That haggard, worn-out expression which Joe has been bringing home to dinner for the last four years is due, besides studies, to the History Seminar, Delta Pi Epsilon activities, intramurals and, to a larger degree, to his editorial positions.

To sports editor Barnes, the VILLANOVAN was a seven-day-a-week job. He spent two days putting out the paper and the other five settling the disputes arising from the controversial sentiments which his "Irish impulsiveness" invariably induced him to express. From time to time, Joe did not see eye to eye with such other sports commentators as Stoney McLinn, Leo Riordan, and Red Smith — to mention just a few.

In order that you, his mother, might not hit upon the idea that he was not doing enough, he switched typewriters in January and now frames phraseology for the Belle Air as its sports head.

Joe is 21 now, Mrs Barnes. He might get difficult and, on the grounds of constitutional rights, demand certain privileges at home. You can placate him with the promise of a new car or a new tennis raquet—they're his hobbies.

When Joe begins to function as an independent economic unit in June, he hopes it will be in advertising, publicity, or sports promotion. Confidentially, Mrs. Barnes, we would advise that you start to practice saying, "I knew him when . . ."

As an Irishman and an ardent anti-British non-interventionist, he doesn't exactly plan a celebration when the local draft board beckons him to the feather beds and sumptuous platters of army life. Joe expects the call to arms next fall or winter, but top-sergeants won't put a permanent "q. t." on his fight for the underdogs, Mrs. Barnes.

Well, that's all we're going to say; it leaves plenty unsaid. Our only hope is that we've at least partially cleared up the obscurity which must have resulted from that article to "Dad." Joe was very confusing in explaining to your husband why he put —30— on yellow copy, why he liked everybody at Villanova, why everybody had reason to dislike him, and so on.

Tally Ho!

By Bruno Talvacchia

COMES another week in the prolonged hunt through exchanges from other institutions of higher learning — and comes a week in which TALLY confines himself to reprinting news, views, and bits of wit.

For the first time in a number of issues, the column is unrepresented by a poem on the local social happenings of the week. A long commemorative ode reflecting all the facets of Junior Week found the wastebasket beside an editor's desk. And just because he got sore when he read these lines from one of the verses referring to Mother's Day:

It's one day she'll be away
From cleaning and a-stewing.

We thought poetic licence allowed a slight alteration of the facts—even about the home front—to let the fourth line rhyme with the first. But, no matter, we can extend a welcome in prose and mention that we thought enough of the truly "biggest and best" Junior Week in history to pull a Longfellow. Consider it done.

Dear Flustered:

No, by all means buy a pencil-sharpener and get things down to a point. He may be in the chips; if not, he will be sooner or later and then you'll get your break.

Class Sojourns:

A certain Michigan State prof had always striven for realism in his classes. He got it one day in his parliamentary procedure class, and, according to students, didn't like it.

He was drilling the class on proper ways to conduct a meeting. Each student had to give a demonstration of a technique used in meetings. The class ran smoothly for a time, but, when it came one indivual's turn, he motioned for adjournment. The next student seconded the motion. Before the perplexed professor could say anything, his class had voted on it and walked out.

Annual Contest for Best Essay on Subject Opens; Mercier-Newman Medal Is Prize

Announcement of the opening of the annual contest for the Mercier-Newman Prize for the study of Catholic authors, granted annually at commencement exercises, was made today by Rev. John J. McShea, O. S. A., assistant professor of English.

The prize is given to the student writing the best essay on a Catholic author, American, British, or any other whose works have been translated into English. The essays will be analyzed for the study of Catholic sentiment found in such author's work.

Minimum length of the essays is to be 1000 words. All papers must be typed double-spaced and references must be clearly designated. May 25 is the final date on which essays may be submitted to Fr. McShea. All students are eligible to submit entries.

News Briefs

Junior and seniors majoring in Accounting will attend the Philadelphia Accounting Forum, to be held at Temple University tomorrow afternoon and evening under the auspices of the Philadelphia Chapter of the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Henry S. McCaffrey, C. P. A., instructor in business administration, and Leo H. Schaefer, associate professor, will also represent Villanova at the forum, the purpose of which is to bring about a closer cooperation between practitioners, students, and teachers. Mr. McCaffrey will discuss "Preparation For C. P. A. Degree" during the afternoon session.

William Slaughter, Placement Director, last week received a letter from E. Ellsworth Sutphin, III, 2nd Lieutenant, U. S. Marine Corps, concerning the progress of those Villanova students who are members of that unit.

The following students were chosen for Candidates Classes and Platoon Leaders: George W. Coupe, Jr., candidate-principal; Robert Mentzinger, candidate - alternate; Robert J. Koness, platoon leader-principal; and Andrew J. Melton, platoon leader-alternate.

Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., college Chaplain, was elected treasurer of the Catholic Educational Association of Pennsylvania at its 21st annual convention last Saturday.

Three Dances

nesday night. Dancing will continue from 9 P. M. until 1 A. M. to the music of the Villanovans, college dance orchestra.

This annual dance gives the juniors an opportunity to display their newly-acquired blazers. Members of the senior class will be guests of the junior class while tickets for others to the affair are being sold at $1.50.

The Dinner-Dance at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel on Saturday will be a fitting denoument to the week. Open only to juniors and their dates, the dinner will start at 8:30 P. M., with dancing to the music of Leo Zollo and his orchestra continuing until 12:30 A. M.

Non-resident juniors who have paid their class assessments may secure their tickets to the three dances in the reception room of Mendel hall tomorrow afternoon from 1 P. M. until 2 P. M., while residents may get theirs after tomorrow evening.

2400 WIRES—

It would take a good many rows of telephone poles to carry 2400 separate wires. But pack them all into one cable like this and one pole line can carry the load at much lower cost and with less danger of damage from storm and sleet.

Developments like this have helped enormously to keep telephone service fast and dependable and low in cost.

TWO COACHES TALK IT OVER

THERE'S the last whistle and the two professors of football knowledge slowly trudge towards the locker-room. Tall and slim, Coach Vince McNally and his side-kick, head professor, Clipper Smith wipe their heated brows and begin their chat.

Clipper: "It's a hell of a day for football Vince, we should have had the boys work out in their trunks, but now its all over for them until Fall."

Vince: "Those nine weeks really went fast but that's nothing compared to those nine fast weeks in October and November. By then we'll wish for some of that heat unless things get too hot for us."

Clipper: (again wiping his sun tanned forehead) "Was that a pun you pulled or do you really think we're up against some stiff competition?"

Vince—"Well (counting on his fingers)—Don't forget Uncle Sam is looking forward to greeting our men, and, Nick Basca can't stop Temple or Auburn anymore for us, and, we haven't got any refugee quarterbacks or fullbacks coming here, and, the old jinx injury which habitually haunts this place will always come and go."

Clipper: "Even if we don't have Nick, this kid Joe Pezelski is a jack-rabbitt and can do a lot of running. It's to bad he can't kick and pass as well as Nick, but I guess that's fate. Maybe some day we'll invent a quadruple-threat man though."

Vince: "You mean the kind that run, kick, pass and then catch their own passes?"

Clipper: "Could be, for football rules change every day, and by the way, (in a sterner voice) did you read about that proposal Yale is making, they want the game of football to be 'given back to the boys'. That means that you and I will be sitting with the knot-hole gang watching the team play instead of on the bench!"

Vince: "I can't imagine you sitting up in the stands, where would you ever get the room to roam around in?"

Clipper: (smiling) "If they do make such a change, that means I-Q tests about every day for the boys because such a change would necessitate a field general doing all the thinking by himself."

Vince: "That remains to be seen, but we won't worry too much about that yet, let's meditate on that schedule for next fall. The first night game shouldn't be too tough for us but you never can tell what those Praying Colonels might pull. That skeeter back they had two years ago had me dizzy for awhile. And don't forget that lightning blow that P. M. C. dealt last year. I guess for awhile the students though we were the Phillies playing with football uniforms on."

Clipper: "That's right, but then after that, the trip to Florida won't be any rest cure. I hope that fellow Harrison is gone and Mush Battista, too—Then too, the heat is terrible in the South—and I think we should bring our own drinking water down."

Vince: "Those trips to the south are really tough work and I'm really glad this year that Ed Korisky won't have to play that "iron-man" role like last year. We can alternate Bray and Baraldi and give Ed a little rest."

Clipper: "Yes, sixty minutes in one game is too much, I hope that our other positions won't be like that. Not unless we have a few Tommy Harmons' to keep the ball rolling."

Vince: "Well this dress-rehearsal is over now and let's hope that the boys show that much stuff in the fall. You know that slogan of yours, 'knock someone down' really was potent. I think this is one of our good years when it comes to blocking. That intra-squad game signified that learning the fundamentals constitutes a large part in determining how good a team is."

Clipper: "We've always stressed that Vince and I think that the fans are going to appreciate it this year. Good blocking makes for long runs and they"re the ones that pay off in dividends.'

Gridders, Coaches Earn Breathing Spell Until Fall As Practice Ends

Nine Weeks of Football Come to Close for Hard Working Squad; Drill Emphasized the Importance of Blocking and Tackling; 10 Men to Return in September as Seniors

By JACK DUDLEY

"Knock someone down!" has been the key word of the Villanova football team, engaged for the past two months in spring practice under the tutelage of "Clipper Smith and Vince McNally.

Emphasizing the importance of clean, hard blocking and tackling has been the task of Coach Smith. Before he injects any of the color for which his past teams have been famous, into the present team, the Clipper is making certain that his players are thoroughly trained in the basic ideas of the game. The loss of some games in the past is directly traced to the poor blocking and tackling.

Squad Game Shows Much

After the long period of training, the boys were finally able to show what they could do in the way of real competitive football. An intra-squad scrimmage was staged. Two teams led by Ed Korisky and Sam Bray respectively, battled on even terms throughout the game. The seriousness of the contest mounted to Rose Bowl proportions when Ed Kasky dropped back to attempt a field goal which would have given his side a victory. Standout performer on the field was Steve Pritko, coming back for his junior year next fall. Both Korisky and Bray led their teams in masterful fashion. Freshman stars who won words of praise were Lou DePalo and Harkins on the line, and John Dzitko in the backfield.

Officials Impressed

Field officials Dallas, Kennan, and Wilkinsen were impressed by the showing of the squad. The scrimmage was conducted under the new rules for the next season.

Another phase of the spring practice is the mental exercise demanded by Coach Smith of his players. Three rigid written exams have been given during the training period to test the thinking power of each man and to reveal the ability of each as a field general. Good marks were posted consistently by Ed Kasky, Joe Behot and Ben Danik, who, it is hoped, will turn out to be another Harry Mazzei.

Something new to wrinkle the brow of the Clipper is the question of the draft. Recently departed for service in the army is Fred Simonsen, while awaiting the call in July are Depalo, Korisky and Behot.

Returning in the fall to don their uniforms for the last time will be Tony Anderson, Ed Korisky, Elk Murray, Bill Howlett, Tom Morgan, Ed Kasky, Joe Behot, Joe Yednock, John Nieman and Paul Stenn. These ten are sure to figure in the starting line-up when the squad lines up for the opening tilt against Center College.

Lou Wannemacher Appointed As Cadet

Lou Wannemacher, class of '39 and former member of the varsity baseball team has been appointed a flying cadet in the Army Air Corps. He will leave soon for Americus, Georgia, to take up his preliminary training.

Wannemacher was one of the greatest outfielders that Coach Doc Jacobs had under his wing. He was a member of the team for three years and consistently led the batting, once batting over .400. After his graduation in 1939, he became attached to several professional baseball teams in Vermont. He played at St. Albans, Burlington and Brattleboro. This summer he was supposed to have taken over the managerial duties of the Springfield Blue Sox.

Capt. Cliff Randolph Paces Linksmen to 5-4 Victory Over Visitors; St. John's Defeated in Brooklyn

Villanova's golf team captured its third and fourth victories of the current season at the Pennsylvania Golf Club in Frazer last Tuesday afternoon and at Brooklyn when they defeated the University of Delaware in a very close match, 5-4, and St. John's on Friday.

Bill Walsh and Bob Casey, playing in the number one and two spots for the Wildcats, won both their individual matches against Delaware and also the best-ball to garner three points and set the stage for a Villanova victory. They also had the low medal scores for the day, both getting even 80's.

Jimmy Brown and Dave Morse added 1 and ½ points to the home team's total when between them they won the best ball, and Jimmy broke even in his individual match.

Captain Cliff Randolph provided the margin of victory when he also halved his individual match to make the final score 5-4.

The match that the team is looking forward to, however, is the return engagement with St. Joseph's today. The Wildcats are seeking revenge at the expense of the Hawksmen and are determined to win by as large a score as possible.

Summaries

Bill Walsh defeated Ray Burnett, 4 and 3.

Bob Casey defeated Bob Goldeg, 5 and 4.

Best Ball—Villanova, 5 and 4.

Jimmy Brown and Mel Sevid—all even.

Al Tinime defeated Dave Morse, 4 and 3.

Best Ball—Villanova, 2 and 1.

Cliff Randolph and Voynard Roe—all even.

Jim Stearns defeated Bob DePersio, 5 and 4.

Frank Desmond, Villanova's Intercollegiate Outboard Motor Boat Champion and also holder of the National Amateur Two Class High Point Scoring trophy, and the coveted Colonel Green $500 trophy for the highest number of points in all classes with or without bonuses, will race in the famous Albany to New York regatta over the treacherous 135-mile course of rough water on Saturday. Frank won this ace as a schoolboy when he was 16.

Courtsters Contest Seton Hall Today

The rejuvenated varsity tennis team, fresh from an impressive 6-3 win over Rider College of Trenton returns to its own courts this afternoon in quest of its fourth consecutive victory. The team, captained by Ed Banagan, is setting a fast pace since losing the season's opener to Manhattan College of New York and bids promise, on the basis of current form, to entertain the Mother's Day gathering by taking the netsters of Seton Hall College into camp. One week from today the Villanova racquet-wielders play host to the representatives of La Salle College of Philadelphia.

Captain Cliff Randolph and his golf cohorts face a strenuous week as they seek to prolong their winning streak. They have two objectives as they tee-off against St. Joseph's College of Philly. One is the registering of their fourth straight triumph. The other is to avenge the only set-back suffered by the Villanova golfers this season. Next Tuesday, the golf team is to engage the club swingers of Haverford College and on Wednesday they meet the formidable Delaware University array.

Coach Holds Record

Of the existing track records at Villanova, mentor of the varsity track team, Jumbo Elliott, still holds two. When Elliott was a student at school he set a record in the quarter mile and half mile run. Since that time the records still stand unbroken.

Fordham Shutout 8-0, As Blue Nine Pound Alex Easily

'Cat Hurler Superb in Setting Back Maroon Batsmen

3 REACH SECOND

Connie O'Leary came into his own Saturday and on a wind swept Rose Hill diamond, he setback a misfortunate Fordham team, 8-0, yielding only four scattered safeties throughout.

Showing his best form so far, O'Leary was the complete master of the Maroon nine for the full nine innings as he limited any chance of a Fordham field day by allowing only three men to reach second base. Just a year ago it was the same O'Leary that was the unfortunate victim of a 4-5 defeat by the Rams. But Saturday, despite the fact that fireball Ed Alex was doing mound duty, O'Leary bested his rival with the aid of his mates who pounded Alex for nine singles.

Eight Strikeouts

Fordham was the faulty team as they committed six errors afield which all led to their downfall. In addition they had eight men retired by way of the strikeout route and couldn't touch O'Leary's fast ball all day long.

The Wildcats hopped off to a 4-0 lead in the fourth inning with singles by Joe Yednock and Al Skaf, combined with three walks and three misplays. Then in the sixth, another marker was added, by two singles and a wild pitch by Alex. Again Yednock and Skaf figured in the scoring. Three safe hits in the eighth inning produced three more runs for Villanova to make it 8-0. By then the 'Cats figured they had enough and went out in the ninth.

Batting stars for the 'Cats were Yednock and Skaf who both collected three hits, also Woody Reitmeier who batted in a pair of runs. Skaf was high in that division, though, by batting in three runs.

While the Rams completed three double plays as their only good points of the afternoon, Tony Calandra stood out as the defensive gem by snaring several hard ground balls to pull O'Leary out of any danger. Despite his one error, Calandra practically retired the side in the fifth by himself as he came up with three vicious ground balls and threw the runners out.

Convincing Win

On their diamond Wednesday afternoon, the Wildcats offered a revelation of their batting power as

Di Carlo Shatters Individual Records As Albright Falls

With Johnny DiCarlo leading the way by putting a new individual scoring record into the annals of Villanova track, the varsity track team registered a 74-52 victory over Albright, Saturday, at the Main Line Stadium. In winning the 100, 220, and 440-yard dashes, and placing second in the broad jump and 160-yard low hurdles, Johnny accounted for 21 points which is one better than the previous mark held jointly by him and his coach, Jumbo Elliott.

Bucking a strong wind and running on a slow track, DiCarlo made remarkably fast time all afternoon. He had 10.1 in the 100; broke the tape at 22.7 in the 220; and covered the 440 in 50.8 seconds.

Bill Hooper, who has only been running for four months, continued to display amazing form in scoring a neat double. He won the mile in four minutes and thirty-six seconds. But that was only a warm-up. Later, running his first two-mile event in college competition, he came blazing down the stretch

Nine To Challenge Penn Wednesday; Then Go North

Blue Tossers Meet Williams and Boston College Over Week-End

Coming into the stretch drive of their present diamond campaign, the Blue baseballers will meet one of the chief stepping-stones to a successful season during the next week.

Wednesday they will engage the Red and Blue of Pennsylvania on River Field, and the following week-end they will take their annual jaunt into New England, where they will meet Williams, Providence, and Boston College on successive days; a strong medicine for any team to swallow.

The Penn team this year is rated about on a par with last year's club. So far they have won a little more than half of their contests. Coach Dr. Walter Cariss will send either Arnold Beinstein or Tony Caputo against the 'Cats. Beinstein, who also plays the outfield, has shown up well this year both on the mound and at the plate, while Caputo has been the mainstay of the pitching staff for the past two years. The backstop duties will be performed by Captain Frank Reagan, erstwhile football star. Reagan also bats in the clean-up position.

Five Year Jinx

Last year Villanova beat the Quakers for the fifth straight year by a 7-3 score.

The end of the week will find Doc Jacobs and his boys deep in the heart of baseball-conscious New England. Here they take their baseball seriously and the Wildcats will have their full in winning three contests in three days.

This strong little Williams nine is to be the first host to the Villanovans. Wildcat rooters will remember that last year they forced Connie Nicholas to go eleven innings before Mike Lazorchak's long fly drove in the winning tally.

Meet Providence Again

Providence College will be met the following day, Sunday, for the second time this season. Connie O'Leary allowed them six bingles in the first game which the Wildcats took, 9-4. Outstanding in that game were Joe Zabek, left-fielder, and the Lee brothers, Ed at second and Jack in centerfield.

The last stop is the Hub city where the powerful Boston College nine will oppose the Main Liners. Last year the Cats won 5-3 on the six hit pitching of Connie O'Leary, but this year the Beantowners are stronger than ever. They have an enviable record, which includes a win over Fordham and they are determined to protect that record against all comers. The contest on Monday should prove very interesting to both sides.

to easily defeat Vic Gigli of the visitors, in 10:26.8.

Stan Nazian again proved his hurdling ability by breaking the tape in both the 120-yard high hurdles and the 160-yard low hurdles. He cleared the high obstacles in 16.2 and the low ones in 18.4.

A new stadium record was contributed by Pete Yankauskas when he heaved the javelin 193 feet and 10 inches. This betters the previous mark which he set a year ago by 4 and 5/6 feet.

Villanova placed first and second in the discus throw. Sal Rosato won the event with a throw of 131 feet 1 inch. His football teammate, Ed Kasky was second.

Jumbo Elliott's protoges all but monopolized the first places by winning 11 of the 14 events. Albright gained most of its tallies by copping second and third positions. Other first place winners besides those already mentioned for the Wildcats were Harry Keefrider, who scored in the half-mile run, and John Parson, who cleared the bar at 5 feet 8 and ¾ inches to beat the other high-jumpers.

Fedigan Triumphs Three Times In Softball Circuit

With the arrival of daylight saving time, the intramural softball league got under way with eight games being played last week. In Monday's contests Austin's veteran, Bob Boudon, suffered his first defeat of the year at the hands of a powerful Fedigan team by a score of 6-2; while Mendel won a 11-10 slugfest over the Alumni team.

Both the upper-class halls came through to victory on Tuesday night as Fedigan made it their second win of the season by defeating the Greenies of Alumni by a score of 14-12. In the second contest of the day Bob Boudon came back in top form to defeat the Mendel residents in a very close game with the final score standing at 10-9.

Meet Defeat

Wednesday's games saw Fedigan suffer their first defeat at the hands of Mendel by a wide-margined score of 10-3. In this game John Cerulo had a perfect day at bat, collecting four hits in four trips to the plate; he also fielded perfectly. Austin again won a game over Alumni with Alex Lukacs doing the hurling and producing an 8-4 victory over the Greenies.

To wind-up the week's games on Thursday evening Fedigan won a wide open game over Austin Hall with Joe Daly doing the hurling for the "Gigoloes" and the last frame showed the winned by a 13-4 count. In this game Boudon suffered his second defeat of the year against one win.

This year has produced some very good pitching from the freshman ranks. One of the most outstanding is Frank Barry from Mendel who has won two of their games thus far and Ken Byrne who has also been very effective for the "penthouse gang."

Netmen Defeat Moravian, Rider, G. Washington

Racquetmen Take Third Straight Victory in Past Week; Capt. Banagan, Pajolek, Daly, McFadden Star

By SAM CANNING

Bouncing back in the real Villanova style, after losing the first match of the season, the varsity tennis team in winning their three matches this past week proved that all the pre-season forecasts of being one of the best teams in several years, were beyond a doubt, true predicitions.

Coming from behind in their matches the Wildcats turned back the George Washington University team in a thrilling contest 5-4, Moravian College six in an equally exciting match 6-3, and Rider College, 6-3.

Gruelling Battles

The G. Washington battle was featured by the gruelling struggle between Villanova's Bert Collins and Washington's Seymour Litschultz in which Bert won the first set (6-2), dropped the second in a very hard-fought set (5-7) and came back strongly to down his opponent (6-4) to give Villanova an even split in the singles after Captain Banagan had won his match (6-1), (6-1) from John Newlin and Dave Daley had beaten his man, Courtland Davis, (6-0), (6-1).

Washington picked up three points in the singles when George McFadden lost to Ed Gee (6-2), (6-3), Chet Pajolek bowed (6-2), (6-0) to Frank Mann and Art Somers fell before Dave Johnson (6-0), (6-0). Johnson was without a doubt in superb form and is the best player Villanova has seen in a good many years.

Doubles Decide

With a tie in the singles the outcome of the match hinged on the three doubles games. It was here the squad gave everything they had and everything they were predicted to have when they took two of the three doubles to win their first match of the year. Things looked bad for a while when Somers and Collins were quickly beaten by Johnson and Mann (6-0), (6-3). But Banagan and Daly playing in their best form drove Gee and Litschultz down to defeat (6-3), (6-3) as McFadden and Pajolek had little trouble beating Davis and Newlin (6-0), (6-1) to give Villanova a 5-4 victory.

Filled with new confidence the team engaged Moravian College on Thursday in the hardest fought match of the season. Four of the six singles matches went to three sets with Villanova losing three of these four as Art Somers playing number one man lost a hard-fought match to Frank Donchez (6-2), (5-7), (8-6), Chet Pajolek followed in the second slot losing (6-3), (4-6), (6-3) to Bill Cann and Bert Collins also going the distance

An Apt Scholar, Pitcher Nicholas Ranks High In Senior Class Rating

Four years ago, there entered Villanova a freshman from the Bronx who was destined to be one of the Wildcats' mainstays on the pitching mound. His name, for all those who have not been around here long enough to know, is Connie Nicholas.

Connie's career has been almost a parallel to that of George Balmore. They went to high school together at James Monroe, played ball on the same teams during the summer, and worked together.

Connie is the direct opposite to most ball players, for he is the very quiet serious type although always ready with a big smile. He goes about his work in the classroom and on the field in a very serious manner which accounts for his high ranking when it comes to "hitting the books." Incidentally, Connie is majoring in accounting, and ranks number two in the senior class ratings.

A Confession

When Nick is in the company of the opposite sex, it will be with a blonde. "I prefer a blonde to a brunette any time," he flatly stated the other night.

Connie spent his last year of high school at Malvern Prep. It was at this time that he won a medal in the Penn Relays by "simply keeping ahead of the next guy as best I could." He must have been quite a boy at the Prep because, on top of winning a medal, he cut the grass, did a bit of painting, played football and baseball, etc., etc. In other words, our Connie was a "Jack-of-all-trades."

Summer jobs are Connie's specialty. He has ushered in one of the large theaters in New York, served out time with Horn and Hardart, worked for the National Broadcasting Company as a floor manager, and still had time to play a great deal of baseball. He pitched for a team down in Harrisonburg, Virginia, and also threw them in for Littleton, up New Hampshire way. Nick also played for the same church team that had on its roster George Balmore, Woodie Reitmier, Lou Wannemacher, and George Flood.

Just Plain Spectators

Yale University suggests a revolutionary change in college football whereby the coaches should abolish their duties on the day of the game and sit in the stands as just a spectator. This they believe would give the players more of a chance to do their own thinking instead of the coaches.

This fall the Bulldogs will experiment with the proposal in at least one of their games and perhaps their opponents might follow suit and have their coaches do likewise. If the plan does materialize then the complete charge of duties will fall on the shoulders of the team captain.

Fourteenth Annual Schoolboy Track Meet Gets Under Way On Saturday

Villanova Sponsors Affair Sanctioned by P. I. A. A.; 500 Contestants From 40 Schools Entered

Villanova College will sponsor its Fourteenth Annual Interscholastic Track and Field Meet this coming Saturday afternoon with over 500 entries already submitted. Meet Director Coach Jumbo Elliott has announced that fourteen events will be featured at this annual meet which starts at 1:00 P. M. and will last until late in the afternoon.

Over 40 high schools and prep schools from five states have already entered their members who will be vying for track records and also attempting to uncrown Ridley Park, West Catholic and Seton Hall, the winners of last year.

Meet is Sanctioned

This meet which is sanctioned by the P. I. A. A. will undoubtedly be the best in years, with a perfect track to run on and accurate officials to take charge. The contestants will be divided into three main classes according to the scheme set down by the P. I. A. A. officials. Class A will be open only to P. I. A. A. Member Schools, while Class B will be open to all other High Schools. Class C will be open to all Preparatory Schools.

The afternoon's events will include the 100 yard dash, 880 yard run, 120 yard high hurdles, running high jump, javelin throw, 220 yard dash, mile run, 12 lb. shot put, pole vault, 160 yard low hurdles, 440 yard low hurdles, 440 yard dash, running broad jump, discus throw, 1 mile relay—Class A, 1 mile relay—Class B, and the 1 mile relay—Class C.

Silver Cups Awarded

Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded in all events, including relays and a silver cup will be presented to the winning schools in Classes A, B, and C.

Last year seven meet records were broken by the schoolboy contestants and two others equalled. Ridley Park High School finished on top finishing one point ahead of Norristown with 46 points. In the Class B championships, West Catholic of Philadelphia shunted Overbrook High into the background for the first time in three years. Class C saw strong Seton Hall emerge victorious over Valley Forge Military Academy.

Predicts Great Year

In Friday's edition of the Philadelphia Ledger, Tommy Lovett, famous sports writer, predicted a banner year for Villanova's crack track team in 1942. Lovett praised Jumbo Elliott for the fine showing of his team thus far this season especially in the Penn Relays and also praised the flashy sophomore stars, John Di Carlo and Harry Keefrider, along with John Maher who has never been beaten in a college dual meet.

Winning Quintet

WHO RAN THEIR WIN STREAK TO THREE

they pounded out a convincing 16-4 victory over the Greyhounds of Loyola College of Baltimore.

The offerings of two Loyola pitchers were solved to the tune of eleven hits. The blows, hard and frequent, were well capitalized. Featuring the attack were Mike Kupecki, sophomore right fielder, and George Balmore, senior patrolman of the outer center garden — each with three hits. Kupecki hit, in sequence, a single, a double and a triple. Balmore planted one over the left-center field fence for a home run and added a triple and a single. All told, the Wildcat sluggers hit for a total of twenty-four extra bases including a round-tripper off the bat of Woody Reitmeier.

Frank Chaplar, selected by Doc Jacobs for the hurling assignment, got off to a shaky start when he was touched for three runs in the opening frame. He settled down after that and finished the seven inning set-to by yielding only seven hits to the visitors.

Villanova, in its half of the first inning, wasted no time in overcoming the three run deficit. Reitmeier led off by poling a hard smash over the left field fence.

(4-6), (6-2), (9-7) to bow before Bill Plasco.

This put the Wildcats down three again but once more they came out of it as Banagan easily beat Kilpatrick (6-1), (6-3) and Daley just as easily defeated Goldenberg (6-2), (6-0). This made the score 3-2 in favor of Moravian but McFadden provided the tieing point when he brilliantly battled Shea to win (4-6), (6-4), (7-5).

Once again on even terms the Wildcats crack doubles combinations made a clean sweep of the three matches to down Moravian (6-3). Although very tired from their previous three sets in which they were beaten, Somers and Collins once more were forced to three sets in the number one doubles match again Donchez and Cann. The Villanova netsters lost the first set (4-6) but staged a brilliant fight to win the second set (6-2) and although tired and worn they rallied to win the final (9-7).

The Wildcat netsters made it three in a row when they trounced Rider College, on Friday, 6-3. Figuring prominently in the win were Capt. Banagan, Chet Pajolek, Dave Daly and George McFadden.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

AFTER three years of barren hopes and plentiful defeats, the Villanova golf and tennis teams seem to have discovered the correct formula for turning in victories instead of defeats. Each year rosy predictions were heard on all sides concerning the prospects of these two teams for the approaching seasons but each year these predictions failed to materialize and the cry was "wait till next year."

Last year, for example, the combined efforts of the linksmen and netmen resulted in the not-too-healthy record of one victory as against fourteen defeats. The lone win was turned in by the tennis team while the golfers hit a new low in bowing to eight consecutive opponents.

A Real Comeback

But those days are gone forever, or at least they seem to have taken a temporary leave of absence for the duration of the current campaigns. Instead, we find the two squads emerging on the long end of the score regularly under the able direction of Cliff Randolph, captain of the golf team, and Ed Banagan, who leads the tennis men, so that it would not surprise this department if their records should compare favorably with that of the baseball team, come this June. And that is saying plenty, since it has practically become a custom for Doc Jacobs' nines to drop very few diamond decisions each spring.

Thus far, the linksmen have won their matches against St. John's University of Brooklyn, Rider College, and the University of Delaware, while their lone defeat was suffered at the hands of St. Joseph's by the narrow margin of 5 to 4. St. Joe's will be met in a return engagement this afternoon and Captain Randolph promises that sweet revenge will be ours.

George Washington University and Moravian College have already fallen before the attack of Captain Banagan's racqueteers and they will likely be joined by others as the season progresses.

Around the Diamond

Diamond Data: Woody Reitmeier and George Balmore really massaged that horsehide when they each knocked out first inning round-trippers against Loyola last Wednesday. . . Both shots cleared the distant left-field wall by a goodly margin, although Balmore's blow was more toward center and, hence, the longer of the two. . . Al Skaf claims that same left-field barrier is 365 feet from home plate. . . The St. John's University nine, which narrowly missed becoming the victim of a no-hit game when the Redmen were held to one hit and one run by Bill Woods last weekend as the Wildcats pounded out a decisive 7 to 1 victory, are headed for their third straight metropolitan baseball championship of New York City. . . Fordham, St. John's closest challenger for the mythical title, has already dropped one decision to the Redmen, but the Rams will receive a chance to redeem themselves when the two teams meet again on May 27.

—V—

Add Basketball Notes: Notwithstanding the fact that it is rather early for conjecture on this matter, the rumors are already making the rounds concerning next year's schedule. Seton Hall appears on the Wildcats' 1941-42 card not once but twice—a home and home series has been arranged and it might be wise to secure your ducats for these two contests now if the crowd at this year's game was any indication of the future. Negotiations are also being made to lure the giants of the University of Oregon to the lair of the Wildcats when that quintet launches its annual tour of the East next winter. Brooklyn College and St. Francis of Brooklyn are other names that will likely appear on the schedule.

De Horatius, De Reverve, Samuels Get Perfect Rat.ngs on Science Honor Roll

Three science students gained the distinction of having a perfect 4.00 quality rating for the third quarter, according to the honor roll released last week by Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, O. S. A., Dean of the School of Science.

Those who obtained the highest possible rating in studies are Raphael DeHoratius, a senior, and Robert DeRevere and Melvin Samuels, freshmen.

Following DeRevere and Samuels on the freshmen class honor roll are William Hadfield, Anthony Rossi, Charles Hefele, Louis Fares, Wallace Redner, and Austin Gavin.

Frances McLaughlin led the sophomore class with a 3.78 rating with Eugene Labowski, George Weber, James Johnson, John McGee, Joseph Turner, Joseph Gambescia, Arsenio Martinez, Edward Cicinato, Anthony DiGiovanni, and Peter Lebischak also making the honor roll.

Salvatore Campo and Joseph Nelson led the juniors with 3.86, followed by Isadore Merlinsky, Theodore Orloff, Leonard Bortin, Joseph Scornavacchi, and Joseph Koch.

Columbus Gangemi, Robert Kiley, and Theodore Kraus were second in the senior class with 3.94, followed by Harry Goodman, John Begley, Eugene Eichman, Armand Castagna, Fred Steller, Charles Dolan, Joseph Santaniello, William Piscione, and George Urban.

These listings complete release of the third quarter honor rolls.

Belle Air Pictures On Display In Gym

All pictures to be included in the 1941 Belle Air, as well as others taken by the annual's photographer, will be on display in the Field House today and tomorrow. For those desiring to purchase any of these prints a representative of the Zamsky studios will be on the scene to take orders.

Though no definite publication date has been as yet set for the book the work is almost completed. All copy and picture proofs have been pasted into the "dummy" until it now closely resembles the finished book. The index, which will enable readers to locate quickly information on persons or activities, has been progressing at an even pace with the dummy.

Four "color prints" of campus scenes are to be featured in the current annual. These prints greatly enhance the beauty of the book and preserve, in their natural colors, typical views of the college grounds.

Today is the last day on which arrangements may be made for having names embossed on the covers of Belle Air copies. Names are to be submitted to either Thomas Moore or Frank McKay in the Belle Air office, room 51, Mendel hall. A charge of $.40 will be made.

A CAREER in Search of Men

Statistics show a decrease among practicing dentists in recent years while the number of professional men in other fields has increased. This can largely be attributed to advanced standards in dental schools.

The Marquette University Dental School is one of the 18 dental schools of the United States whose diplomas are recognized in all of the states.

The close relationship of the Dental and Medical Schools at Marquette University is an advantage to students.

Entrance requirements: Two years in a recognized College of Liberal Arts with satisfactory credits in biology, chemistry, and physics.

For complete information concerning opportunities in dentistry, write to the Secretary, Marquette University Dental School, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

gram will be a demonstration of liquid air by students of the science department.

Open House is scheduled to begin at 3 P. M. today. Mothers will be free for two hours to view the various exhibits. Activities of the day will conclude at 5 P. M. with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament offered in the college chapel.

Throughout the day mothers and their guests will be shown about the campus by the Mother's Day committee, assisted by members of the junior class.

Two-day Open House

Open House, which begins today, will be held tomorrow also. On both days the public is invited to attend between 2 P. M. and 5 P. M. or between 6 P. M. and 9:30 P. M. Featured events are the light show, the liquid air show, and a demonstration of micro-projection.

Exhibits will be explained by students in the science and engineering schools who have spent weeks preparing them. Demonstrations are scheduled of bacteriology, biology, embryology, psychology, engineering, physics, and numerous other technical subjects.

Reardon Elected D. P. E. President

Commerce Frat Picks Hayes, Canning, Frank, Hin, Koness as Officers

David N. Reardon, class of '42, was elected president of Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce school fraternity, by a large majority at a meeting of the group held in the C. & F. auditorium last Friday afternoon.

DAVID N. REARDON

Other officers chosen at the same balloting to take office in September were: vice-president, William C. Hayes, a junior; secretary, Samuel J. Canning, sophomore; treasurer, Edward R. Frank, junior; and Student Council representative, Robert J. Koness, also a junior. Leo F. Hin, a sophomore, automatically became sergeant-at-arms when he was unopposed for the position.

Reardon, a day-student, is an alumnus of North Catholic High School, Philadelphia. An accounting major, he is one of the managers of the varsity baseball team, writer of the "Wildcat Whirl" column in the VILLANOVAN, a member of Belle Masque, Beta Gamma, the History Seminar, and the Belle Air staff. Recently he served on the junior Dinner-Dance committee.

The new president will succeed George Flannery, Jr., who will graduate in June. Flannery was chiefly responsible for the reorgan-

Arts Frat Presidential Voting Tied

For the first time in the history of Epsilon Phi Theta, arts fraternity, the presidential election held yesterday afternoon resulted in a tie between William E. Schubert and David F. Daly, both members of the class of '42. A special run-off election will be conducted tomorrow at 1:00 P. M. in room 111, Mendel hall.

Officers chosen for the scholastic year 1941-42 at yesterday's balloting were: vice-president, Jacques E. Mauch, sophomore; secretary, Howard A. McCall, a junior; treasurer, John P. Maher, also a junior; and Student Council representative, John P. Fullam, class of '42.

Defeated candidates include Thomas J. McKimmey, a junior, who has been eliminated from the presidential race; Thomas F. Devine, class of '43, who sought the post of vice-president; Joseph F. Mahoney and John J. Hopkins, both sophomores, nominated and approved for the position of secretary; Thomas J. Harford, a junior, for treasurer; and Arthur L. Connor, also a junior, for the Student Council post.

The winner of tomorrow's election will displace James P. Collins, retiring president, and former editor-in-chief of the VILLANOVAN. Collins was quite active in the reorganization of the fraternity two years ago and has led it through its most active year.

Schubert, one of the two candidates remaining for the position of president, is also the retiring vice-president. The retiring secretary is Robert P. Schisler, John M. Bader, while James E. Donovan has served in the capacity of treasurer. The fraternity has been represented on the Student Council by William N. Way, a senior, during the past year.

Under the direction of Thomas J. Moore, a special committee has been busy arranging for the annual fraternity dinner. As yet, no definite date has been announced for the event, nor has a site been selected. This affair will end the fraternity's activities for the current year.

Both Daly and Schubert have been consisten honor men during the past three years, and have been active in class as well as in fraternity affairs, Daly as a member of the varsity tennis team and Schubert as managing editor of the VILLANOVAN.

Book Out May 23

Formal presentation of the 1941 Belle Air, college yearbook, will take place on May 21 at the annual staff dinner, to be held at the Wayne Hotel.

Besides the staff and faculty members, in attendance will be a special guest, Thomas F. Kennedy, editor of the 1937 edition. Senior members of the staff who have fulfilled the necessary requirements will be awarded gold Belle Air keys at the affair.

The book, which is at present in the process of printing, will be distributed to the student body on Friday, May 23, in the Belle Air office, room 51, Mendel hall, from 9:00 A. M. to 5:00 P. M.

For those who have not made previous arrangements and desire to purchase books there will be a few available at the price of $7.50.

Villanova Gets ASME Convention

Eastern college student chapters of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will hold their annual convention at Villanova next spring, it was announced today by Vincent J. Gordon, president of the Villanova chapter of the national organization.

Members of the Villanova group submitted their application as next year's host at the recent convention at Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute and have received the official approbation of the society.

The convention, first of its kind to be held here, will consist of two days of technical sessions and observatory trips to various plants in and around Phialdelphia. Villanova will play host to about 200 delegates representing 20 Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Maryland and Pennsylvania colleges.

Gordon and the new moderator of the Villanova chapter, William W. Hagerty, have arranged a tentative schedule for the meeting which will be held in the latter part of April or the early part of May. Mr. Hagerty, who will also be honorary chairman of the convention, replaces William J. Barber, who resigned to comply with the society's rule that no moderator may serve more than three years.

Registration until noon of the first day of the convention is planned, after which will take place a luncheon and technical session; dinner will be served to the delegates in the evening. The honorary chairman's breakfast will initiate proceedings on the second day, followed by technical sessions in the morning and inspection tours in the afternoon. It is expected that men prominent in the engineering field, either industrial or educational, will address the meetings.

Supreme Court Justice Roberts, Msgr. Foley To Receive Degrees At 98th Commencement Exercises

By WARD GUNCHEON

Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts and Very Rev. Monsignor Malachy P. Foley will receive honorary degrees of Doctor of Law at Villanova's 98th annual commencement exercises, to be held on June 5. Degrees will be conferred by Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, during the afternoon ceremonies in the Field House.

JUSTICE ROBERTS

On the morning of the commencement day, a Baccalaureate Mass will be celebrated, followed by the Baccalaureate Sermon, to be delivered by Rev. James F. Connor, assistant rector of St. John the Baptist Church, Manayunk, Pa. The two honorary degrees will be conferred during the afternoon exercises when graduating seniors will receive their diplomas.

Both recipients of the honorary degrees are outstanding men in their respective fields. Justice Roberts, third-ranking member of the Supreme Court, behind Charles E. Hughes and Harlan F. Stone, is respected as one of the most able jurists of the time; at present, Pennsylvania Republicans are seeking him as their next candidate for the state governorship. Msgr. Foley is rector of the Quigley Seminary.

Native of Philadelphia

Justice Roberts was born in Philadelphia on May 2, 1875. He began his law practice here after receiving his Ll. B. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1895. After three years of professional practice he served a four year term as first assistant district attorney for Philadelphia, and also taught law at Penn.

During World War I, he was appointed special deputy attorney to prosecute cases arising under the Espionage Act in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. Combining other duties with this, Justice Roberts was active in the business of the United States Housing Corporation of Philadelphia.

Appointed to Court

Following the close of the war, he assumed positions on the Boards of Directors of the Bell Telephone Co. of Penna. and the American T. & T. He was a director of the former for nine years and the latter for two. He was also a member of the board of the Franklin Insurance Company of Philadelphia.

In February of 1924, President Coolidge appointed Justice Roberts as one of two attorneys to prosecute the unlawful activities of several major oil companies. In 1930, during the Hoover administration, he was named to the Supreme Court bench.

Throughout his eleven-year tenure, Justice Roberts has usually been "conservative" in his opinions, often taking a dissenting view on New Deal proposals.

June 27, 28 Set As Registration Dates For Summer Session

Registration of students for summer school courses to be given here at the college will be held on Friday and Saturday, June 27th and 28th, it has been announced by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Director of the Summer Session. For classes to be conducted at Hallahan High School in Philadelphia, registration is on Wednesday, June 25th.

Classes are scheduled to begin at Villanova on Monday, June 30th. They will run for six weeks, commencement being held here on August ninth. Class will be held five days a week.

Because of the greater facilities available, a wider variety of subjects is offered to students attending school on the campus. The curricula include business administration, education, English, engineering, foreign languages, history, latin, library science, philosophy, sociology, and science.

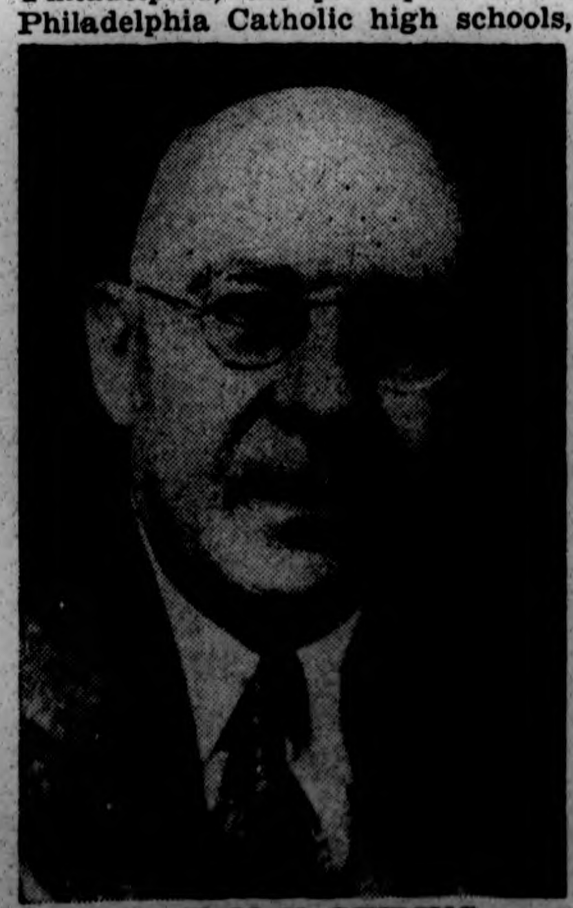
Opening day of the courses at Hallahan is scheduled for Thursday, June 26th. Classes will end in the latter part of July; commencement will take place on the 29th. Since the courses do not extend over as long a period as those held at Villanova, classes will be held six days a week.

Principal subjects included on the various curricula are English, education, science, and psychology.

Dr. Geiling To Receive 13th Mendel Medal At Annual Banquet Tonight

Dr. Eugene M. K. Geiling, professor of pharmacology at the University of Chicago, will be presented with the thirteenth Mendel Medal tonight following the annual dinner in honor of the recipient.

Invited to attend the formal ceremonies have been the former winners of the award, the faculty and their wives, the priests residing on the campus, Monsignor John J. Bonner, Rev. Joseph Cox, associated with the Chancellory office in Philadelphia, the principals of all Philadelphia Catholic high schools, and Augustinian fathers in all parishes of this region. The dinner will begin at 7:00 P. M. in the priests' dining hall.



DR. E. M. K. GEILING

Like past recipients of the Medal, Dr. Geiling was selected by the Executive Committee on the Mendel Award, in cooperation with an Advisory Committee. Founded by the college in 1928 to commemorate the work of Gregor Mendel, an Augustinian whose scientific researches have given to the world the now-celebrated Mendelian Laws of Heredity, it is awarded to outstanding Catholic scientists who have done much by their work to advance the cause of science and who have given practical demonstration that there is no real conflict between true science and true religion.

Major Work on Glands

This year's winner of the Medal is well-known to the science world for his work on insulin and gland studies. His major contributions were made while he was an associate professor at Johns Hopkins Medical College. Beginning in 1923, Dr. Geiling collaborated for six years with Dr. John Jacob Abel in giving to science information concerning the crystallization of insulin, purification of abumoses, secretine and the posterior pituitary hormones.

His more recent work has centered about the latter subject, especially its comparative pharmacology and anatomy. Research work

Callahan Has Office In Peace Federation

Charles J. Callahan, sophomore commerce student, was elected vice-president of the Middle Atlantic Group of the Catholic Student Peace Federation at a convention held May 3 at St. Rose's College, Albany, N. Y.

Attending the convention as the official delegate of Villanova, Callahan acted as chairman of the International Economic Organization Panel which discussed the economic systems of the world as they exist today.

Gerard Belz, junior artsman, and Robert Canfield, sophomore in the business school, were named to the program committee which will arrange for meetings and conventions during the next school term.

The Catholic Student Peace Federation is a national group of Catholice students having for its purpose the furthering of world peace efforts in the light of Catholic ideals. The convention at St. Rose's was the second meeting of the regional group this year.

BLAZER BALL COMMITTEE

Due to an oversight, the names of the committee of last Wednesday's Blazer Ball were omitted from the last issue of the paper. The four committeemen were:

Thomas A. Sullivan
Logan J. Phillips
Thomas H. Greene
Thomas J. DeSipin

"Alumnus" To Follow Up Graduates In Services

The May issue of the "Villanova Alumnus," which will appear tomorrow, will be dedicated to Villanova graduates who have joined the services and who have been drafted under the provisions of the Selective Service Act.

A special section, entitled "Villanova's Honor Roll," containing pictures and the name, address, and graduating class of each man in the services, will be included in each issue of the publication beginning with tomorrow's edition.

Another feature of the May "Alumnus" will be an article on the Far Eastern question written by James Koch, class of '16, Mr. Koch, employed by the Manila Electric Company, resides in the Philippine Islands.

Eight To Speak For Valedictorian Honor

To decide who will be valedictorian at Commencement exercises, eight leading senior students will compete in a speech contest on the topic, "The College Graduate and National Defense," this Friday at 2:15 P. M. in the C. & F. auditorium.

Those chosen for the final competition to deliver five-minute speeches before three faculty judges are: John F. McKinney and Frank W. Smith, engineers; Harry P. Goodman and Fred C. Steller, of the science school; Thomas J. Moore and Francis S. Vogel, artsmen, and Raymond F. Valentine and James J. McGarey, commerce students.

The winner of Friday's competition will deliver the valedictory address on June 5; he will then discuss the same topic on which he wrote for the competition.

Adieu, We Say Adieu

WITH ALMOST every ending there is a farewell. Thus it is that at the end of the school year we say farewell to those who are leaving Villanova, to the members of the senior class.

Four years have passed since you first came to us. During that time you have been taught in the various sciences, arts, and the commercial studies. Aside from and above all of the knowledge imparted to you in these fields you have received a Catholic education. With this training you are ready to enter the world. Graduates have often been likened to warriors starting out upon "the battle of life." This trite figure was never more true than it is today. The world is in a turmoil. Physical conflicts between nations have made a battleground of our universe.

Our own nation, nominally at peace, is in the throes of a campaign of preparedness. It is with a happy thought that we realize that our graduates, entering the aforementioned "battleground", are prepared. And that is the case. Guided by the Catholic Ideal and armed with the principles of truth the graduates are well girded to contend with the forces of evil.

It is the hope of the VILLANOVAN that you will apply these principles after you have left us, and that, doing so, your careers may be happy and successful.

—J. F. M.

Tomorrow Is Coming

THE SOCIALS for the senior class as held now consist of the Belle Air Ball and the Dinner-Dance on Friday and Saturday evenings early in February. This gives the seniors a social weekend, but they do not have any affairs of an informal nature at this time.

It would round out the activities of the fourth-year men if they could have an informal event in the early part of the week in which they have their socials. An affair such as a theatre party suggests itself; it would be different from anything else on the social calendar, it would be relatively inexpensive, and as the senior activities are held at the peak of the theatrical season, it should not be difficult to find a good show. The party could be held either in one of the regular theatres, or at one of the many excellent Little Theatres in this section.

Now is the time for juniors to plan for any additional events in the social program for next year. If the class wishes to schedule a new event it should do so now in order that it may be listed in the handbook for next year.

Elections will be held soon and when the class leaders have been appointed, it is at their immediate disposal to discuss the feasibility of such arrangements with the proper authorities.

What Price War?

THE NOW-CONSTANT rumblings across the waters are steadily increasing in volume; the alarming roar of mechanized divisions is growing louder; nor is the tramp of marching feet so faint on this day as it was a year ago. Each of these ominious sounds has become more audible to the shores of the United States because America has too long and too indiscriminately listened to the propaganda gongs tolling false proclamations of ideological contrast in the interest of "Democracy versus Hitlerism".

These frightening dissonants from the other side have reached such a high pitch that they are sadly drowning out the soft prayers uttered in memoriam only eighteen years ago. After the last war we were a nation in mourning. Less than a score of years have passed since that date, and in that short time we seem to have forgotten the grief of that moment. Once again, obviously unmindful of the tears and agony resulting from that world conflict, we are upon the verge of opening new wounds in the heart of our country. With an altogether too complacent attitude are we approaching the introduction to another infamous picture of a nation "garbed in black."

Many were the men who could not respond to the roll call at the termination of that battle. Many more were those who did answer from hospital beds and invalid institutions. Remember also those who mumbled dejectedly and despairingly throughout our land when all had become quiet. Let even the high and mighty recall that several of their rank spoke from a lower level a few years later. Above all, give ear to those who felt deeply and who are still longing for the loved ones they miss. All of these are the plaintive cries we can expect to resound throughout America again if we go to war.

On May 30 we celebrate Memorial Day. Let us trust that America will be reminded of just what it symbolized. If the nation could truly understand the meaning of this commemoration, it would not be silent in denouncing all steps which are drawing us closer to the possibility of entanglement. Nothing can be begotten from such action save misery and death which will again crush our nation.

Congratulations All Around

WITH A TONE of disappointment and not with a tone of joy, do we admit the end of Junior Week, because it was the most glorious, gigantic festival most of us have ever seen. All affairs were well managed and well attended, and most of all every one enjoyed them.

For this the class of '42 deserves congratulations and thanks. The moderator of the class can feel proud, and we compliment him. The class officers, the general chairman of the week, the chairmen of the particular affairs and their committees: they are all to be congratulated on their work. Not to be forgotten are those who worked long and hard, between and behind the scenes, and those who cooperated with the committees.

The class of '42 and your friends, for that wonderful week of entertainment, we salute you.

FACULTY COMMENTS

Some Of Our Cultural Debts

By Fr. Gavigan

HALF a century ago when every college man took for granted that Latin and Greek would form a substantial part of his curriculum, educated people were deeply aware of something that is obscured for many in our own day. Aeschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides in tragedy; Aristophanes, Plautus, and Terence in comedy; Demosthenes and Cicero in oratory; Pindar and Catullus in lyric; Horace and Juvenal in satire; Thucydides and Tacitus in history — all these writers and countless others showed students the roots without which the present-day branches of literature would be non-existent.

Literature and language — priceless possessions of every nation! We are justly proud of our own riches in both fields. But do we ever ask ourselves how they arose? Do we by any chance have the mistaken notion that they are independent entities? If we do, it is high time for us to face a few irrefragable facts.

Origins Of Literature

First, with regard to literature. Let a modern historian of English Literature show a few formative influences. "The vast majority of writers in English have turned to Latin authors for inspiration and to Latin Literature for models of construction. Bacon, Milton, Dryden, Johnson, Pope, Addison, Burke, Gray, Coleridge, Landar, Byron, Tennyson, Newman, Arnold were all university men, and the backbone of English university training has ever been Greek and Latin literature.

"Quintilian lad down the rules of good writing. Ovid in his 'Metamorphoses' preserved many of the tales of ancient mythology which reappear time and time again in English literature. An English poet, Tennyson, penned Vergil's highest eulogy, 'Wielder of the stateliest measure ever moulded by the lips of man.'

Rome's Debt To Greece

"The highest compliment that can be paid to any writer in any tongue is to say that his style is Ciceronian. The American high-school boy wrestling with Caesar's 'Commentaries' may well exclaim with Shakespear's Brutus, 'O Julius Caesar, thou are mighty yet'!"

This quotation shows some of the influence of Rome. Now we have but to consider that, as we were taught by Rome, Rome was taught by Greece. Horace and Quintilian merely reecho the common sentiment when they state that Latin literature, satire excepted, is modeled upon the Greek.

So much for literature. What about language? Let Greek speek for itself.

Greek Derivatives

"The ecclesiastical sphere is practically mine. I am the architect of churches, cathedrals and basilicas from the asphalt base in the crypts of the catacomb, up to the apse and the chimes in the dome. I am architect of monasteries for monks and anchorites, and of asylums for orphans and lepers and maniacs. Mine is the hierarchy, from the Pope on his dais with his tiara, to the mitered bishop in his diocese, and the parish priest in his presbytery. Deacons and acolytes, clergy and laity, papal encyclicals, diocesan synods, parochial homilies, and all dogmatic theology with all its mysteries and myriad topics — are mine.

"The Bible is mine from Genesis, Exodus, Deuteronomy of the Pentateuch, to Paralipomenon and the Psalms, to patriarchs and prophets, to the Evangelists of Christ, to the Epistles and Apocalypse of His Apostles. Epiphany, Pentecost, the Parasceve — are mine. The tune of hymns, the quiring of anthems, the Gregorian tones of litanies and antiphons are melodious through me, and I composed the canon and liturgy with its symbols."

Every noun and adjective in the two paragraphs above is a Greek derivative.

Latin Influences

Latin asserts its claim as strongly. This is a sample of what our Declaration of Independence would look like if we removed Latin derivatives:

"When in the . . . of . . ., it becomes . . . for one . . . to . . . the . . . bands which have . . . ed them with another, and to . . . among the . . .s of the earth, the . . . and . . . . . . to which the Laws of . . . and of . . .'s God . . . them, a . . . . to the . . .s of mankind . . .s that they should . . . the . . .s which . . . them to the . . ."

No matter in what school at Villanova a man may be enrolled, he is constantly meeting Latin and Greek terms. Whether we like to admit it or not, we are heavily indebted to Greece and Rome for much that is of value in our most ordinary experiences. That is why many highly successful professional men feel that the time they spent on Latin and Greek was time well spent. They became aware of their debt. They showed their gratitude both by admitting the benefits they had received and by showing in their work the results which the classics produced in them.

Wildcat Whirl

By Dave Reardon

WITH light heads and heavy hearts, or vice versa, the student body turned to classes yesterday after a hectic week of activity. Although some profs cooperated by dismissing their classes during Junior Week, there will probably be a greater (though unremedied) necessity for it this week because of the utter lack of shut-eye during the past few days.

At present the social life of the college is non-existent and activity around the institution is as dead as last week's corsage.

However, pleasanter memories are ours in brief retrospection.

HEARIN' THERE:

Monday Night: Droves of the drones had a "Joyous Season" at Rosemont's dramatic production of the same name; it was followed by a dance, music being supplied by some St. Joe's musicmakers. Noticeable was the absence of the many girls who retreated to their rooms immediately following the last curtain call. Jack Faraci, Walt Smith, John McGovern, Frank Desmond, Howie McCall, etc., were prominent in the stag line . . .

Tuesday Night: After some fifty-odd Austinites had been blacklisted for their aforementioned celebration, some of the third-year men continued their merrymaking at Carroll's down in Philly. Ed Kasky, Elk Murray, and Bob Hursh returned to school with some interesting tales. . .

Wednesday Night: With the seniors as the honored guests of the blazer-bedecked juniors, a goodly crowd enjoyed dancing to the strains of the supposed Villanovans. Prior to the dance, the Conestoga was the favorite stopping-off place. There was such a crowd there that comparatively few could be served. Following the occasion, the "Lampost", a new spot, was one of the many refreshment establishments which enjoyed the patronage of the boys and girls.

Thursday Night: Spent in either resting up for Friday and Saturday, taking pills, or decorating the gym.

Friday Night: Topping anything ever before held on the campus, an overflow crowd lauded the rhythms of Will Bradley in the roof-gardened gymnasium. It was tribute to the work of Prom Chairman John Parson and Decorations Chairman Ernie Klappenbach.

Saturday Night: The already-tired juniors culminated their festive week with their exclusive Dinner-Dance at the Garden Terrace of the Ben Franklin Hotel. Leo Zollo's syncopations were surpassing, the cuisine was of the best and the floor show received very favorable comment. "Pooch" Gordon's committee's room was the center of the after-dinner gathering whence many of the fellows proceeded to do the town in the brightest possible crimson. And at some unknown hour Sunday morning, the collegiate celebrators wrapped themselves in the arms of Morpheus, hoping not to awaken for a long, long time.

DAFFYNITIONS:

Abode . . . a ship
Bat . . . not nice
Bet . . . something to sleep in.
Brogue . . . no money.

RICOCHETS

Mike Gualario retired the other night, only to find a dead shark mischievously planted in his bed by his hall-mates . . . In repetition —Jack Farrow and Bill Foster have been having a "fine" time of things lately. After dealing with the law concerning automotive speeding, they were recently collared for exceeding the limit while horseback-riding in Fairmount Park . . . Doc Eichman is really making the most of his parting college days before entering the cantonment . . . Jim Walsh received three amorously-autographed photographs during the past week to add to his already expansive rogues' gallery of feminine admirers . . . Bob Boudon's girl friend returned to Detroit via the airways.

POLITICS:

Columbus was the first Democrat: he didn't know where he was going; he didn't know where he was when he got there; and he went on borrowed money.

Introducing:

Jim Is A Sport, A Good-Natured Sort, Who Held The Ed's Fort

By JOHN P. FULLAM

JIM COLLINS has been "introduced" before. However, it is by no means in a spirit of apology that we here present him once more. Rather, it would seem almost sacrilegious that any other name should appear in this space in this, the last VILLANOVAN issue of his college course.

As editor of this sheet, Jim always felt that no sacrifice for the paper's welfare was too great. And so, although it is manifestly impossible to even the score, we hereby try in these few lines to make at least some repayment.

However, we have to be careful. Wilmington's Mr. Collins has always shied away like an unbroken colt at the slightest hint of a compliment. As a result, some things will have to be omitted from this account.

Won't Mention It

For instance, we'll have to avoid stressing the fact that, although he was busy running a newspaper and a fraternity, he found time to direct the Red Cross campaign; that when the responsibility and the glory of newspaper editorship were over, he gladly spent long hours helping friend Tom Moore put out a yearbook—as a plain, ordinary staff member.

Yes, there are many conclusions which could be drawn about James P. Collins, were it not for militantly non-existent ego. As it is . . . well, here are the facts. Draw your own conclusions.

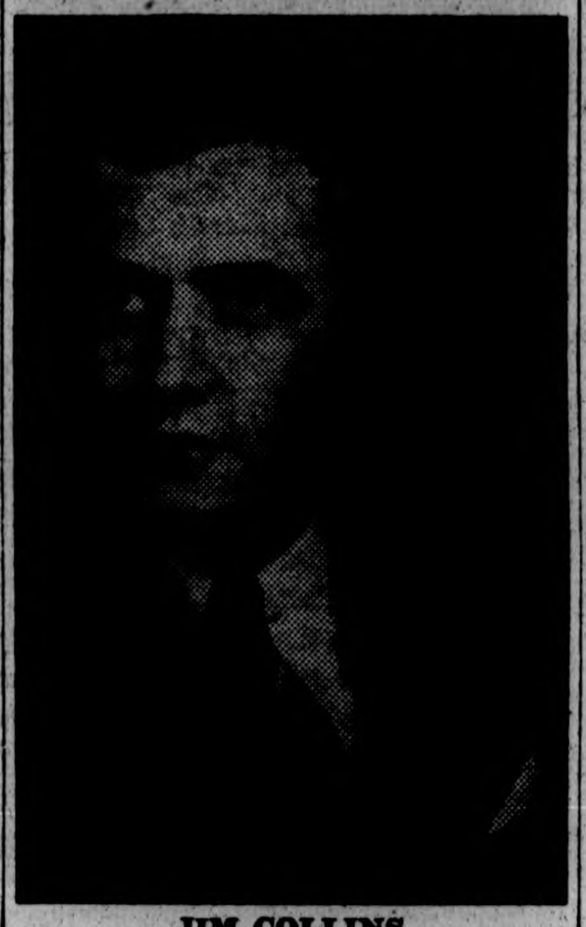
James Paul Collins' father was handing out cigars at about the same time that Peary was crossing Lake Erie — on September 10, 1918. After pursuing the usual three R's at St. Paul's Parochial School, Collins the younger entered Archmere Academy, in the company of another present-day Villanovan—J. Gordon Brosmer.

By no means satisfied with maintaining a high enough rank to make him valedictorian, Jim whiled away his teen-age hours as editor of his school paper, president of the senior class, president of the dramatic club, and a member of the basketball, baseball, and tennis teams.

Jim's journalistic experience stood him in good stead when he entered this Wildcat warren in 1937. After two-and-a-half years on the VILLANOVAN, first as a reporter and later as college editor, he became top man in Room 119 Mendel. For further details of these colorful days, consult Jim's memoirs in our Jan. 14 issue. The Belle Air also made good use of his talents for three years.

The List Grows

But the above's only part of the story. Jim was an Orientation Committee member, chairman of Junior Week, a member of Student Council, and president of Epsilon Phi Theta. Last September saw him chosen as Villanova's delegate to the University of Pennsylvania's bi-centennial celebration. He has taken part in the International Relations Club, the Music Seminar, intra-mural basketball and tennis, the Belle Masque, the History Seminar, the Sanotuary Society, and the Belle Air Ball committee.



JIM COLLINS
. . . ex-editor exits.

It was the VILLANOVAN that gave a particular flavor to Jim's college life, and vice versa. Rare were the week-ends that "the Hopper" (a nickname given him on a trip to Detroit because of a "game" he invented) didn't burn the midnight electric lights to get the next Tuesday's edition in shape. His record quitting time was 4:00 A. M. one Saturday morning.

Jim's Quite Nice!

But his conscientious — and result-producing—labor on "the rag" cramped J. P.'s social style little. The personable Collins, who could be called a Casanova if he were only one-half as popular with the fair sex as with his fellow members of Villanova's all-male world, got around. Though he was unable to fill the number of social engagements that he does now on the campi of all but one of the female-filled local colleges, few weeks were without a ray of sunshine in the life of some one or another (generally another) nice de-icer.

Up until this year, James P was one of the tribe of coffee-and-toast gulpers, commuting daily from Wilmington to his arts classes; now, with his constant companion Bill Way, he makes Fedigan hall his home.

Dix Before Blackstone

Like many another, Jim stands to be drafted within the next few months and as a result will probably not pick up his law books until he has laid down his rifle. But all Villanova will wager that, sooner or later, his name will be honored in more widely read lines than these.

Within a few weeks — a very few weeks — Jim will don his cap and gown, forever to leave his student days at Villanova behind him. But, though his memories of the college may grow dim with the passing years, Villanova's memories of "the Hopper" will remain constant. For it's hard to forget a man who's done as much for his alma mater as has Jim. Quoting the words of Franz when he wrote of the hero of his work, "Yes, Enrab": "Neither now nor at any time in the future will this region boast of his peer."

Senior Poll Finds Majority Eligible For Draft, Split On Enlistment

By EDWARD F. BORDEN

OVER 50% of the Senior class has been classified as eligible for military service on July 1. This was revealed during the past week by a broad survey consisting of 13 questions sponsored by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the commerce and finance school, and run under the direction of senior George J. Flannery.

Statistics and logic were voted the two hardest subjects of the commerce school by a large majority. Villanova-style varsity athletics are popular among seniors, as they voted 95% to 5% against any de-emphasization of them.

Following up the question on senior military service after July 1, which revealed slightly over 50% of the seniors eligible, the draft-eligible students were asked if they will enlist before they be drafted. Here again they were sharply divided, as approximately 50% said they will enlist, with the remainder declining any voluntary military service.

Army Preferred

Those students who would enlist prefer the Army, although sizeable percentages reported preferences for the Navy and the Air Corps. Marines, it seems, are the least popular among enlisting seniors, as only one out of ten favor that unit.

Reflective seniors, on the eve of their graduation also gave interesting comments as to the value of their college course. Over 90% of them believe that college was well worth the "time, cost and energy required." This in spite of the fact 80% of them admitted they have no business position awaiting them upon graduation.

$5,000 for Most

The seniors as a whole, however, are optimistic in regard to their expected yearly incomes within ten years, as the majority expect to earn close to $5,000. There were wide discrepancies in these figures, however, as their incomes estimated vary from a low of $1,000 to a high of $10,000.

C. & F. seniors were definitely decided as to the two most difficult subjects offered in the School of Commerce and Finance, as over 80 percent of the graduating commercemen picked either statistics or logic as the school's "toughest." Also in the running were accounting, psychology, and American government, although combined these amounted to less than 20% of the total votes received.

Villanova's administration of varsity athletics, particularly football, also has the seniors' approval; 19 students out of 20 believe that varsity athletics should not be de-emphasized. One-sidedness of the poll was emphasized by the fact that the small number of individuals expressing a desire for athletic de-emphasization usually clarified it with a comment of "somewhat" or "a little" de-emphasization.

Distraction

By GEORGE N. ERIKSEN

Sat I one eve, my eyes glued to the place
As if, from all appearance, deeply learning.
But to me there hung above the print, a haze
And floating as a cherubim, brightly beaming,
Her countenance, marred only by a golden curl
Breathed there by my sighs. The haze did whirl—

Study to me, a task seemed thus in vain
For there was she, mattered where I stared.
At the door she stood: look there to the window pane!—
She peers at me. Not to my face but to my heart
Unfolded like the volume 'neath my head:
My thoughts and love for her were plainly read.

Oh why dost that vision ever plague my brain?
In class, in sport, while walking and in deep repose.
Why do I start and feel a thrill when mentioned her name?
How many times have I talked to her, a shadow so close?
Some day when she is near, these things to her I'll whisper
Heart chaotically pounding, awaiting her reply, and kiss her!

Degree Men Of Past Decade Are Imposing List

The list of distinguished gentlemen who have received honorary degrees from Villanova in the past is indeed impressive.

Prominent among them are members of the legal profession, but representatives of many other walks of life are to be found as well.

The number of degrees awarded each year is almost as varied as the lifework of the recipients. Four honorary degrees were awarded in 1935, three in 1934, two each in 1940, 1938 and 1931, and one each in 1932, 1933, and 1939.

Last year's recipients were Hon. William I. Schaffer, Chief Justice of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, and John C. Kelly, an advertising executive. In 1939 some sort of a precedent was established when Major Edward Bowes—known far and wide for the "all right, all right" punctuation of his original amateur hour — received recognition for his humanitarian efforts.

Dr. Louis H. Clerf, a professor at Jefferson Medical College, and Judge John A. Matthews of the New Jersey courts, were awarded degrees in 1938. The four who received honorary degrees in 1935 were also participants in a large-scale pacifist conference held here. They were: Thomas Courtney, Chicago attorney and "gang-buster"; Rev. Brother Ambrose, C. F. X., Provincial of the Xaverian Brothers in Baltimore, Md.; Michael F. Doyle, Philadelphia international lawyer, and Walter F. Dreuding, Philadelphia philanthropist.

In 1934, Ferdinand E. Bower, Buick's chief engineer; Dr. Milo F. McDonald, principal of Brooklyn's Bushwick High School, and Thomas J. Condon, supervisor of schools in Waterbury, Conn., were honored.

Colonel Vincent A. Carroll was the recipient in 1933, while Dr. William N. Parkinson, Dean of Temple University Medical School, received an award in 1932. Two men —Hon. John V. Kephart, Pennsylvania Supreme Court justice, and William J. McGlinn — received Villanova's recognition of merit in 1931.

Tally Ho!

By Bruno Talvacchia

JUNIOR WEEK at Villanova has passed in review. Most of us are now reviewing. Here's hoping we pass, one and all, as smoothly as Junior Week did!

The gaiety and laughter of last week's festivities left us with a few afterthoughts. One of them is most ably expressed by a little rhyme found in the Penn State Engineer.

Ashes to ashes,
Dust to dust,
If it weren't for the paint,
The women would rust.

TALLY Woe:

A woman's promise to be on time carries with it a lot of wait!

"Jush One More":

This item was found in our files among other clippings. The source is unknown. The application is unlimited. It might have happened here; possibly it didn't but . . .

I had six bottles of scotch in the cellar and was told to empty the contents of each down the sink, or else. I said that I would and proceeded with the unpleasant task. I withdrew the cork from the first bottle and poured the contents down the sink with the exception of one glass, which I drank.

I extracted the cork from the second bottle and did likewise with the exception of one glass, which I drank. I pulled the bottle from the cork of the next one, drank one sink out of it, and poured the rest down the glass.

Pulled the sink from the next glass and poured the cork down the bottle. I pulled the next cork out of my throat, poured the sink down the glass, bottled the drink and drank the pour.

When I had emptied everything I steadied the house with one hand and counted the bottle and corks and glasses with the other, which were 29. To make sure, I counted again when they came by and I had 74, and as the house came by I counted again and finally I had all the houses and bottles and corks and glasses counted except one bottle . . . which I drank. The end.

Slightly Gassy:

Slowly the gas crept in. Soon it would choke him. Oh, if he only had kept his head and not been so greedy this would never have happened. It was rising higher now and he began to feel nauseated and dizzy. It would be soon now. What a fool he had been! He had brought it all on himself by acting like an idiot. Why had he been so selfish and short-sighted? The nausea was increasing; it was almost unbearable. Maybe . . . maybe a deep breath would help . . . yes it worked! Sauerkraut, whipped cream and Coca-Cola . . . never again.

The End Has Come:

The final issue usually requires much concentration for an appropriate finis. This one doesn't . . . so long until the fall; so long (plus a year) if the draft should call. In the meantime, don't forget to remember, writes the Catholic University Tower, lest you fall:

Many a romance begun beside a splashing waterfall at a summer resort has ended beside a leaky water faucet in a kitchen sink.

Grants Open To Villanova Seniors

Several scholarships and fellowships are open to Villanova graduate students, including grants to the Law School of Duke University and the graduate schools of Arts and Science of New York University.

The grants to the Duke Law School are first year scholarships worth $250, covering tuition and matriculation fees for the year. They will be awarded to graduates of approved colleges on the basis of scholarship, character and capacity.

New York University graduate schools are offering fellowships worth from $500 to $1000 in the following studies: biological sciences, chemistry, classical languages, and archaeology, economics, English, fine arts, German, government, history, mathematics, philosophy, physics, psychology, Romance languages, and sociology.

Students interested in diplomacy, international affairs, and belles-lettres may apply to New York University for the Penfield Scholarship, created from the will of Frederic Courtland Penfield, and worth $1000.

for his experiments has carried him on whaling expeditions in Northwest Canada and on marine studies in Florida and below the Equator.

Dr. Geiling was chosen in 1936 to be the first professor and chairman of the newly-established department of pharmacology at Chicago. He has served for several years as consultant to the United States Food and Drug Administration and as a member of the council on pharmacy and chemistry of the American Medical Association.

Native of S. Africa

The recipient was born in the Orange Free State of South Africa; he will receive the medal on his fiftieth birthday. In Cape Province he attended the Marist Brothers' College, receiving his A. B. degree at the University of South Africa. Later, he was awarded M. Sc. and Ph. D. degrees in animal nutrition and chemistry by the University of Illinois. Dr. Geiling attended Illinois on a fellowship, and obtained his M. D. degree at Johns Hopkins University.

During the first World War, he served as a member of the South African food commission. After the close of hostilities, he lectured on chemistry and agriculture at The Agricultural College in Transvaal. In 1938, Dr. Geiling was the Foster Lecturer at the University of Buffalo and the following year Paul Reed Rockwood Lecturer at Iowa State University. While at the latter institution, he became a citizen of the United States.

As a contribution to the national defense program, Dr. Geiling has been chosen by the University of Chicago to head a new summer session course in Toxicology and National Defense. This course deals with preparation of doctors and chemists to fight poison and poison gas.

Dr. Geiling will come to Villanova for the award today, after a lecture tour of New England and New York. He recently addressed a medical convention in Atlantic City.

Prom-Trotters Trot to Bradley's Music

Part of the overflow crowd which attended the Junior Prom last Friday night is pictured above as they danced to the music of Will Bradley and His Orchestra. Out of range of the camera are the decorations that transformed the Field House into a veritable night club roof garden.

Foot-Weary, Purse-Empty Juniors Look Back On Great Social Week

Another Junior Week has become history—a week of super-successes almost beyond all precedent.

The event, of course, was the Prom. In a modernistic roof-garden setting, over 550 couples danced to the effervescent music of Will Bradley and confreres, saw the crowning of Villanova's first Prom Queen, laughed at the antics of Leroy Miller, and, in general, enjoyed themselves immensely.

First of all, there was the setting. Prom-goers were made to feel that they were part of a gay, carefree crowd in a metropolitan roof garden. All around them, a typical city skyline was to be seen in the distance, while inside the garden, luminous columns edged the dance-floor. Tables were placed around three walls of the room, and white-coated waiters hurried to and fro with refreshments. On the back-drop behind the orchestra, a group of sky-scrapers was vividly portrayed.

The crowning of Queen Gloria Spatola by artist Walter Thornton, band-leader Will Bradley, and drummer-clown Ray McKinley was a momentous affair; and the line-up for awards of the six members of the Queen's court drew "oh's" and "ah's" from both masculine and feminine throats.

Intermission-time imitations by Leroy Miller provided interesting diversion; and extensive jitterbugging was another innovation. All in all, Chairman John Parson and his committee received the hearty congratulations of all.

The Junior Dinner Dance, at the Hotel Benjamin Franklin, was, to be brief, the perfect ending of a perfect week. The excellent food, the beautiful favors, and Leo Zollo's smooth music, combined to provide an unsurpassably pleasant evening for the 135 couples who attended it; chairman Vincent Gordon and his committee were largely responsible for its success.

Then, too, the annals of the Class of '42 Junior Week cannot rightly be closed without mention of the Blazer Ball, which inaugurated the social events of the week. Informality was the keynote of the happenings, while the Villanovans provided the necessary notes of another kind.

ization of the fraternity last year, and has helped to mould it into one of the most active groups on the campus.

Hayes will assume the position vacated by Edward J. Banagan, Jr., another senior. Thomas H. Doyle, Jr., is the retiring secretary and Walter T. Brown, retiring treasurer. James P. McElligott has served in the capacity of Student Council representative during the past year, and the sergeant-at-arms has been Bernard C. Crumb.

Defeated candidates at the election were: for president, John J. Parson, Jr.; James J. Lattanza, and John F. Jakovic, Jr.; for vice-president, Charles J. Callahan, Loring A. Jones, and Thomas A. Sullivan; for secretary, Anthony J. LaBrasca, William F. Friel, and John F. Dudley; for treasurer, Edward F. Bennis; and for Student Council, Robert F. Canfield and John J. Green.

A second balloting was necessary before the vice-presidential, secretarial, and Student Council posts were decided. No candidate receiving a majority, the two men receiving the highest number of votes for each of these three offices were voted upon.

The final voting found Hayes defeating Sullivan by a close margin for vice-president; Canning defeating LaBrasca to become secretary; and Koness nosing out Canfield for the Student Council post.

Appreciation

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the engineering school, in a letter to the VILLANOVAN last week, expressed his sincere thanks to all who contributed to the success of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education meeting held on Saturday, May 3 at Villanova.

Dean Morehouse attributed the gratifying results to the coordinate efforts of the various committees.

The letter stated that, "In addition to faculty cooperation the work of the students, non-engineering as well as engineering, who assisted, aroused much favorable comment. 'I never saw anything like it,' said Professor King of Lafayette. 'There was a student to tell me where to park, another to park my car, and still another to tell me where to register. If I had registered in advance everything was ready for me; if not, that was soon convieniently accomplished and badge, tickets, program, maps, etc., were handed me. Then another student stepped up to inquire whether I wished to inspect the laboratories or something in particular.'

"I wish further to acknowledge with thanks the interest which the Science Department under the leadership of Father Dougherty added to the meeting and also Father Vrana's versatile assistance.

"Last but not least I am grateful to those faculty wives whose proficiency and hospitality made a pleasurable day for the women guests in attendance.

"To one and all I am extremely grateful for their help in making Villanova College a cordial and efficient host."

THE STRAIGHT-AWAY lies ahead and thirty gentlemen of the athletic kingdom are almost through. In just a few weeks they trade their weapons of the game for the elaborate manuscript which sends them on their way. Tall or short, lean or heavy, they all step up—receive a handshake, nod graciously and then its congratulations, tears perhaps, and most certainly laughter.

Some are glad it's over, some are sorry and some are confused. "It's been swell these past years", "It's been terrible and it's——.' Thirty different personalities express themselves and why not? One was a star, one was a dud. One got the break and one didnt. One got hurt, the other survived. The coach liked one, and disliked the other.

They're one now, no longer football player, a basketball man, a track man, a baseball man—a scholarship man. The same path lies ahead. Where do they go from here?

The Stars and Duds

I remember those men; they put Villanova on the map. They played the games as best they could. They were tired, awfully tired. They won, they lost but still they played. They were happy when they won, and sad when they lost, but still they played. I remember him in particular. He had won the game, received the ovations, congratulations and there were parties. The papers had him in headlines and his picture was plastered for months and months over the sports pages. After that he was forgotten. He was dead news. The man at the desk said to look up the sensational sophomore and forget about him. Put him in the morgue.

Then I remember the other fellow. Why he was lucky to have his name in the box score! He was good. Perhaps not as good as the star, but in his own heart he knew he was good. He never got the break, he cursed the coaches, turned his head down and said

Woods Bests Quakers, 6-3; Providence Upsets Cats

Red and Blue Beaten For Seventh Year; New England Trip Sees Villanova Defeat Purple, 3-1, But Losing To Friars, 8-5

Making their second stop-off on the current New England tour, Villanova's baseball squad met unexpected defeat on Sunday afternoon at Providence, when the Providence Friars upset them, 8-5. The Wildcats batters who had previously trounced the Friars 9-4, had their their bats silenced, gathering but six hits to their credit.

Connie O'Leary who handed out eifiht damaging blows was the losing pitcher for Villanova. It marked the third loss in fifteen games for Doc Jacobs' charges. Dan Casey, Blue outfielder led the team hitting by collecting two triples. Three errors by the 'Cat fielders along with Providence's heavy hitting gave Villanova their defeat.

On Wednesday afternoon the hard-hitting Villanova Wildcats invaded River Field, Philadelphia, home park of the baseball forces of the University of Pennsylvania, and proceeded to pound out a decisive 6-3 victory over their unhappy hosts. It was the 11th win in 13 starts for the Cats this year.

No-Hittel in Grasp

Despite a painful blistered toe, sophomore Bill Woods twirled superb ball during his tenure on the mound. For more than six innings he was in the process of carving a niche for himself in baseballl's hall of fame. He kept fogging his high fast ball past succeeding Penn batters and unti ltwo were out in the seventh inning he held a no-hitter within his grasp.

When Bill was forced to withdraw because of the increasing pain in his foot in the eighth frame he had yielded but a total of three hits and as many runs—only two of which were earned. Connie O'Leary, who pitched such superb ball against Fordham the previous weekend, relieved Bill and retired the last six batters in order.

Leading the assault on the Red and Blue hurlers, Beinstein and Caputo, were Dan Casey and Woody Reitmeier—each with three hits for five trips to the plate. The Wildcast sluggers collected a total of thirteen hits off the opposition. Penn managed to contribute nine misplays which aided in the Villanova score production.

In the third inning, Doc Jacobs' nine took advantage of four Penn errors, and a walk by spicing in a couple of clean hits to send four runs scampering across the plate. From that point on, the Wildcats just romped to victory.

Doc Jacobs took his contingent into the heart of New England this past weekend to impress the folks there with baseball a la Villanova. The first stop was at Williamstown, Mass., where the Villanovans engaged the highly-regarded ball tossers of Williams College. A large gathering was on hand to see the Purple attempt to avenge the defeat handed them by the Wildcats last season.

Such was not to be, however. When the last batter was retired in the ninth inning, the gloom which settled on that historic campus was darker than the color which identifies their athletic equipment. Villanova had won, 3-1. But it was quite a ball game.

It Will Be The Coaches' Day To Weep When Diplomas Are Given

By JACK DUDLEY

Nick Basca gave Villanova followers many great exhibitions in his three years of varsity competition. It would be a great thing to have Nick back again for a year or two, but time has fled since he first donned the blue and white, and now he must move on with some thirty other varsity performers in different sports to become part of the great alumni of Villanova.

An so too, the team-mates of Captain Basca must swap their textbooks for sheepskins in a few weeks—Lindy Kolenda, who was on the receiving end of Nick's passes, Bill Piscione, a hard fighting guard, Harry Dhue, a tower of strength at the tackle position, and Stan Stress, who, last year, realized his ambition of scoring on an end-around play. Stepping out into the world in June is Pete Yankaukas, speedy fullback, doubling as a track star, who saw little action last year due to an early season injury. Faces to be seen no more in Villanova uniforms are those of Ed Collins, burly guard, and Ben Morkum, quarterback.

Six Courtmen Leave

Key men of Al Severance's basketball team to be replaced next year are co-captains Chuck Yund and Paul Nugent. Varsity stars for three years, Chuck and Paul led the team in scoring in its short, but successful season. Reserves who gave invaluable service to the team, leaving in June are Ernie Robinson, John Murphy, and Barney McAloon.

Doc Jacobs is wondering just now how he is going to replace the bulwarks of his pitching staff, Connie O'Leary and Connie Nicholas. First base, handled capably this year by Captain Jack Donoghue and Jack Thoma, will be open next year, following their departure. The graduation of Al Skaf presents a problem behind the plate, as does the departure of George Balmore in center field.

Kelley Will Be Missed

Minor sports do not escape the scourge of commencement which snatches established stars from their teams. After three years of breaking records, Walter Kelley will walk off with his diploma, leaving Bill Leahy to find a replacement for the greatest swimming star in Villanova's history. Graduating in June are John Pholeric, freestyler; Bob Boudon, diver; Paul Farnsworth and Tom Moore, who swam backstroke and breaststroke respectively.

Jumbo Elliott will lose two field men, but finds his relay teams intact for next year. Pete Yankauskas, javelin star, and John Pholeric, shotputter, will be lost by graduation.

Tennis and Golf Outlook

The tennis team, currently enjoying a successful season, will lose two of its stars, Captain Ed Banagan and Art Somers.

Three golfers leave the campus in June. Several underclass golfers will have the task of replacing Captain Cliff Randolph and his two stars, Bob DePersio and Dave Morse.

Dan Parker, well-known columnist of the "Daily Mirror," reported in his syndicated column that: "William F. Duffy, Tom McArdle's Villanova welterweight who teaches at Hartford High School, has been drafted for Gene Tunney's boxing program and has reported to Jacksonville, Florida."

Golfers Defeated By St. Joe's, 5-4

Hawksmen Hand Blue and White Their Second Loss Despite Randolph's Play

Despite the brilliant efforts of Captain Cliff Randolph and his partner, Bob De Persio, Villanova's golf team was defeated by St. Joe's last week, 5-4. Randolph and DePersio garnered three of the four Villanova points as they won both their individual and the best ball matches. The other point was secured when Bill Walsh and Bob Casey won their best ball match on the nineteenth hole.

The Villanova freshman stood 1 up after the seventeenth as a result of three consecutive birdies on the back nine by Walsh, only to be tied when Gelback of St. Joe's dropped a beautiful putt on the eighteenth for a birdie three. This sent the match into extra holes. Here Bob Casey sunk an eight footer for a par 4 to win the best ball match. Gelback had the low medal of the day, a 73, while Walsh was low for Villanova with a 75.

Previous to this match with St. Joe's the Wildcats had trampled the Redmen of St. John's in Long Island to the tune of 6-3. Bill Walsh and Bob Casey were really hot at the Hillcrest course, as they put together seven birdies for a best-ball of 66 to win their best ball match by the overwhelming margin of 8 up and 7 to play.

With a record of four wins and two defeats so far, the linksmen have three matches left, all of which are to be played this week. Today they meet Haverford, tomorrow they journey to Delaware, while Friday they play Fordham at Frazer. Of these matches, Fordham is expected to be the toughest opponent and the Wildcats are pointing towards this one. Villanova's linksmen will be at full strength.

Setonians Trim Erring Netmen

The varsity tennis team was handed its second defeat of the season last Wednesday when the Seton Hall squad traveled to Villanova and handed the Wildcats a 6-3 defeat to break the netmen's three game winning streak. This was the third straight win for Seton Hall against one loss to Westchester State College.

Villanova's three points were won by Captain Banagan, Burt Collins and George McFadden. Banagan, playing Jerry Dalton, won the first set (6-1) lost the second (1-6) and won the third handily (6-2). Playing number two man, Burt Collins easily defeated Bob Bohan (6-1) (6-4) while George McFadden was trimming Ed Piaseck (6-2) (6-3) for his third straight singles victory. Again playing number one man after his fine showing in this position at Rider, Chet Pajolek was beaten by Jim Sullivan (6-2) (6-3) as Ph.. Rekon was forced to three sets before he beat Dave Daly (6-8) (7-5) (6-2). Also receiving a sharp set-back at (6-2) (6-1) was Art Somers who found Lou Thebault a very aggressive number six man.

Doubles the Difference

Having taken three of the singles each, Villanova and Seton Hall were on even terms with the doubles matches once more to be the deciding factor. The Wildcats were confident because their last three victories were decided by the doubles contests, but this day was a different story as the North Jersey sextet made a clean sweep of the three matches to win, 6-3. Collins and Somers put up a strong fight against Dalton and Rekon but were hitting the ball too long and dropped the match (7-5) (6-3). After winning their last two doubles matches, McFadden and Pajolek failed to click and were checked by the fine net play of Bohan and Thebault (6-2) (6-3). Dave Daly and Ed Banagan also were set down as Sullivan and Ryan proved to be superior to the two veterans.

Five Games Left For Blue Nine

1941 Campaign Ends With Temple, G. Washington, Penn A. C., Ursinus and Manhattan

Returning home after their New England trip, the Main Line baseballers will take up their final home stand opening with George Washington University on Thursday. Following contests with the Penn Athletic Club, Manhattan U., Ursinus College and Temple will ring down the curtain on the 1941 diamond campaign.

Coming up from the Capitol City, the George Washington nine makes its first appearance on a Wildcat baseball schedule. This little school is reported to be one of the diamond powers of the south.

Penn A. C. Met Before

Penn A. C. will oppose the Blue and White on Saturday. They were beaten by Villanova earlier in the season in a seven-inning practice game by a 3-1 score. Threatening the Wildcats will be the bat of Buzz Howlett, former third baseman at this institution. Catcher Will Harwi is also a dangerous man at the plate.

Following this, the Green Jaspers of Manhattan, sporting only a mediocre record so far this season, will visit the Main Line diamond. They have dropped decisions to Temple, St. John's and Fordham, among others. However, they do boast of a win over the powerful Tigers of Princeton.

Owls Will Pitch Tomasic

The remaining two teams have already been met this year. Ursinus was easily beaten at Collegeville, 19-0, in seven innings and should not be any trouble. But the following day, the Wildcats repay a visit to their North Broad St. rivals, Temple, and hope to avenge the 5-4 defeat suffered at the hands of Andy Tomasic and his mates last month. And in particular, Andy Tomasic, for it was he who pitched the Owls to victory in that game. He won his own game when he drove the pellet over the Wildcat's right field wall for a double in the tenth inning, and scored Joe Valyo, his teammate.

The Wildcats bow out in this game, and close the doors on the 75th season in the history of the school. Playing their last game will be Jack Donoghue, first sacker; Al Skaf, catcher; and George Balmore, centerfielder. Either one of the senior pitchers, Connie O'Leary or Connie Nicholas will probably hurl.

Blanking Rams Was O'Leary's Joy! Infielder Thoma Sought By Scouts

It seems that many of the ball players who hail from the New England section of our great country turn out to be very valuable assets to Doc Jacobs' nine. Connie O'Leary is no exception to that statement.

Connie came to Villanova four years ago after building up a pretty good reputation. Needless to say, he has built upon that reputation while here.

His first season here, Connie was called upon to understudy the great Joe Desmond and Jim Schelley. But last year, Doc called upon him to pitch almost every important game on the schedule. The only setback that he suffered was at the hands of Fordham's great Ed Alex. Accounts were squared this season however, when Connie not only beat Alex but shut out the whole Fordham team with three hits in an 8 to 0 ball game.

Bothered by Sore Arm

Hard-working Connie was counted upon to be the mainstay of this season but a sore arm, received while pitching last summer, kept him from showing his best assortment till mid-season. In beating the Rams, he pitched his best game since coming to the Main Line school. From here on in, he will be one of the toughest pitchers to beat in college rank.

The other day, while relieving Billy Woods, Connie also showed that he is an excellent relief pitcher. Connie went into the game in the eighth inning, with none out, and two men on base. He proceeded to strike out the first two batters to face him and make the third pop out to Woodie Reitmier.

May Villanova get many more great competitors like Connie in years to come.

Hank Thoma has for three years been understudying the regular first baseman on the Wildcat nine. First, it was Bobby Bond and then John Donoghue for two seasons. Far from becoming discouraged with the breaks that he was getting, Hank has been out there plugging away at every practice trying to win a first string berth.

Hank plays in only about three or four games a year but in these few appearances, he shows that he has a great deal of ability and plenty of that will-to-win.

About school in the off season, Hank is about as quiet as a mouse keeping up in his studies and a few social engagements. Keeping up with the problems of finance seem to be his toughest task at the present.

Scouts Seek Him

For the past few summers Hank has been playing semi-pro ball up in his home town, Albany, N. Y. Last year seemed to be his best year when he hit .405 which, by the way, was the best average in the league. As a result of this, he was approached by several scouts/from Hartford and Williamsport.

Hank's ambition is to give a try at professional baseball for about two or three years and if nothing comes of it, then go into business with his father in the retail liquor field. The story of Hank Thoma may be the story of many other college boys who fail to make the grade in school and then go out and make a name for themselves in pro ball. It is just a chance, but it might happen. Who can tell?

Seton Hall And West Catholic Keep Titles Intact In Scholastic Meet

By JIM BONNER

As the 14th annual Villanova Interscholastic Track Meet drew to a close Saturday afternoon, three champions stood crowned. In Class A, for the P. I. A. A. schools, Norristown High School had dethroned Ridley Park. In class B, West Catholic High School of Philadelphia had successfully defended her title and in Class C, for Prep. Schools, Seton Hall of South Orange, N. J., had kept her title intact.

In annexing the Class A title Norristown picked up firsts in the 120 yard high hurdles, and the discus throw, seconds in the shot put and 160 yard low hurdles, and thirds in the 120 yard high hurdles, javelin throw, 880 yard run and the mile relay.

Soroka Gets Honors

In Class A, two double winners showered themselves with honors. Walt Soroka of Chester High School pulled down first in the shot with a heave of 51 feet, ½ inch and first in the javelin throw with 160 feet 5 inches. He also placed third in the discus. The other double winner in this class was Kenneth Marshall of Darby High School. His firsts were in the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Daniel Kirk and Jeffery Kirk, of Swarthmore pulled a brother act by annexing firsts in the 1 mile run and the 440 yard dash, respectively.

In Class B, West Catholic managed to get their championship without placing first in a single event. While they only took two second places, nevertheless they managed to place one or two men in every event to total their points for victory.

The only triple winner in any class was Hubert Doub of Central High. His jump of 20 feet 11⅝ inches was enough to take the broad jump and he ran over the 160 yard low hurdles in 18 and .5 seconds. In the high jump he registered a leap of 5 feet 10 inches.

Seton Hall Wins Again

The Class C Championships saw Seton Hall, who has never failed to be a contender for the title, win out over La Salle Military Academy by scoring 54 points to La Salle's 44. They both managed to take five first places, but Seton Hall was able to place a few more men in second and third positions and thus carry off the title.

There were three outstanding performers in this class. Carl Holland of La Salle M. A., Gorden Highfill of Seton Hall, and Bill Strong of Bullis. Holland made his firsts in the broad jump and the pole vault. Highfill, of Seton Hall, took the medals in both hurdle events, the 120 high and the 160 low hurdles. Strong of Bullis deserves special mention. By placing first in the shot and discus and third in the javelin, he tallied all of the points for Bullis School. Incidentally Strong is a local boy. He graduated from Lower Merion High school in 1940 and makes his home in Bryn Mawr.

Bob Cantler running for the Southern High School Rams shattered the record in Class B. 120 yard high hurdles by four-tenths of a second when he broke the tape in 0:15.3. Bob Bredin of Upper Darby High broke the record in the class A high jump by clearing the bar at 5 feet 9½ inches. The record was formerly held by Tom Jackson of Norristown High School. The only other record to fall was the Class B shot put. Francis Peratoni of Somerville cracked the record set by Dominic Montero of Salesianum High School, Wilmington, Delaware. Peratoni's heave of 51 feet 7½ inches broke the record by two feet.

Pioneer Bowlers Vanquish Stars

In the first match of the semi-finals the Stars dropped three close games to the powerful Pioneer quintet. The three games proved to be close, but the Pioneers had to much experience for their foes. Dolan and Farley proved the margin of victory for the Pioneers.

The T-dynamics and Aces haven't met in their semi-final. They are expected to meet this week. At the completion of this match the finals will take place. The champions are expected to be crowned by the end of next week.

ing, mound ace of the Ephmen, and theirs was a blistering matching of speed, curves, and strategy under the hot New England sun. Connie had the better of it, though, in yielding only six hits while his teammates were collecting ten off the offerings of Spaulding.

Williams went out in front in the fourth inning when Bush reached second on a wild infield throw and then scored on Dolan's single. At no time were the hosts able to nick Nicholas for more than two hits in one frame.

Villanova trailed until the sixth inning. Donoghue and Casey were moved into scoring position as a result of William's error and scored when Balmore smashed a sharp single into left field. The Wildcats added another tally for good measure in the last inning. Singles by Skaf, Reitmeier and Simonsen resulted in the last score of the game.

Jack Donoghue, who hit safely three out of four times, and Joe Yednock, with a pair of singles, led the Cats at bat.

After today, only two matches remain on the schedule for the varsity tennis team. Matches are with St. John's U. of Brooklyn on this Friday and with Catholic U. come this Sunday.

Dual Meet Is Scheduled Away; Squad Opposes F. & M. Saturday

By BILL CAREY

Facing the toughest test of the year the Wildcat trackmen will meet Temple tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at Temple Stadium. The Elliottmen will be forced to do their best in order to avenge the defeat at the hands of the Cherry and White back in '35, the last time the two squads met. Adding to the Temple meet, the Diplomats of Franklin and Marshall will play host to the Villanovans up in Lancaster on Saturday afternoon.

With dual-meet victories over Catholic U. and Albright behind them, the Wildcat runners are displaying form and confidence—but confidence is not all they need to top Temple. Mentor Ben Ogden has one of his best balanced squads in years. He has two or three men in each event while Coach Jumbo Elliott will have his men doubling up to offset the Cherry and White man power. With the Broad Streeters strong in the field as well as on the track, Jumbo will count on his runners more than ever.

Hooper Runs Mile

Leading the entry list for the Wildcats will be sophomore Johnny DiCarlo who will compete in the both dashes, quarter mile and broad jump. Also counted on heavily for Blue and White victories will be Bill Hooper in the mile and two mile runs, Harry Keefrider in the half and mile, Bud Jones and John Parson in the high jump, and Stan Nazian in both hurdles.

Pete Yankauskas will probably have little difficulty in annexing the javelin throw, and Sal Rosato is expected to continue his winning ways in the discus. The shot-putters will include Big John Pholeric, Ed Kasky and Rosato. Kasky will join Rosato in the discus while the fleet-footed Hooper will team up with "Yank" in the javelin.

Hopes For New Records

In all the running events the Wildcats will be pushed harder than ever, therefore Elliott is looking forward to some fast times. DiCarlo is out to break 10 in the hundred and will probably go under a 50 second quarter. Hooper will be called on to do some fancy stepping to break the tape in his races.

These same men will form the nucleus for the F. and M. meet. Although the Diplomats will be strong again this year, the Blue and White will encounter less difficulty than from Temple and are expected to win going away.

The Villanova entry list for both meets:

100 yard dash—Di Carlo, Nazian
220 yard dash—DiCarlo, Jones
440 yard run—DiCarlo, Yankauskas, Keefrider
880 yard run—Keefrider
Mile run—Hooper, Mauch
Two mile run—Hooper, De Petrillo, Mauch
High jump—Jones, Kasky, Parson
Javelin throw—Yankauskas, Hooper.
Discus throw—Rosato, Kasky
Shot put—Rosato, Pholeric, Kasky
Broad pump—DiCarlo, Parson, Jones
Pole vault—Parson
120 high hurdles—Nazian
220 low hurdles—Nazian

Johnny DiCarlo

Here's Villanova's fastest speed-merchant, the record-breaker, Johnny DiCarlo. Only a sophomore, DiCarlo has taken over the duties of Johnny Maher and already has broken the individual scoring record which was formerly held by Coach Jumbo Elliott. Against Albright, he accounted for 21 points.

"Oh well." He played, played hard —his best efforts, but still not enough. Handshakes were few but he still lived on. Attention was meager but he still lived on. He had a heart, a soul and above all had feeling. He felt the snickers, the few cheers and the kind thanks of others. He played, and then again he didn't play.

Part of the Make-Up

I remember also the other fellow. He didn't give a damn. He played to win and played to lose. He was cocky, obstinate, and was great for the headlines. I wonder why he played—maybe it was for the college education. But he was all part of the make-up of the thirty men.

But now it's time for closing. The helmets are put away, the bats are dusty and his name will just be a recollection among those who knew him when they were side by side. Four long years or were they fast years—thirty different thoughts—thirty different feelings. Athletes in high school, athletes in college, athletes in the future.

And what does Villanova owe them? What do you and I owe them? We owe them praise. We owe them thanks. We'll always remember them. They gave you thrills, a feeling for boast, the pride of Villanova and last but not least they gave you thirty different gentlemen.

Austin Is Winner Of I-M Hardball

With the able pitching of Alex Lukacs, who pitched five victories for Austin Hall, and the perfect teamwork of the players the nine won the Intramural Baseball League. Austin won five games against one defeat and the defeat was suffered at the hands of Alumni last Sunday on a 1-0 forfeit. Also taking place Sunday was Mendel's defeating the Fedigan nine and thereby leaving Austin the winner of the league.

In addition to the baseball crown the Austin Hall aggregation won the Intramural Trophy with a large lead over the rest of the halls. The trophy is awarded to the hall that has won the most of the athletic contests entered into, such as tennis, basketball, baseball and amateur night. Austin won about everything in the intramural program to produce one of the best hall groups in the history of the school.

Last week the Intramural Baseball All-Stars and Softball All-Stars were selected through the aid of Fr. Dunne and Fr.McKee. Austin placed five players on the first team of the baseball team and also placed four on the second team, while on the softball team the Blues took four places. In speaking of the softball; it will finish this week, to end the intramural program.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

THIS issue of the Villanovan effort of this department unmarks the last journalistic til next fall and after searching frantically for a fitting subject on which to comment, we decided that it might be best to ramble over the sports pages of this eight page weekly for the past year and give our memory a thorough overhauling on the stories that appeared on those pages during that period of time.

"Basca and Co. Ready for Nocturnal Debut" . . . that was the headline of the first issue of the year way back on October 1. Since that time many scores and records have been written into the books—some good, some not so good, but none to be ashamed of.

The sporting year started out on a high note when the football team submerged both P. M. C. and the University of Florida in a hevy of touchdowns and set the Wildcat followers in an optimistic state of mind concerning the future activities of the team. However only one person foresaw the blacker days that were ahead and that person was none other than Clipper Smith. These early successes were not sufficient incentive for Clipper to join the rest of us in our fool's paradise. He stated after the P. M. C. game that the blocking of the Wildcat eleven was the poorest in five years and so it turned ou to be. The Cats lost five of their last seven contests to foes who were eagerly awaiting an ailing Wildcat after years of continuous defeats at the hands of a healthier one.

It was with this flaw in mind that Clipper arranged the program for the spring practice sessions just recently completed. "Knock Someone Down" was the watchword of the drills and the boys really carried out the spirit of that phrase.

One bright spot on the pages of the early fall editions were the four victories out of a possible six turned in by the Villanova lightweights. Inspired by the fine coaching and leadership of Tom Casper, the 150's burned up the league after dropping their first two encounters. The crowning event was the 14 to 0 beating handed to the previously undefeated Yale eleven. Although Casper has turned his skills to a more lucrative field, we are not exactly going out on a limb in venturing to predict that the bantams are the team to watch next year. Only four seniors will be lost through graduation and the first string sophomores who were the bulwark of last season's combination should profit from the year's experience.

More vivid in the minds of all of us are the accomplishments of the basketball quintet in the not too distant past. Coach Al Severance proved to be not as good a prophet as Clipper Smith. Al made ample use of the crying towel after putting his charges through their preseason paces and he went on record as saying that they would be lucky to finish the season with a .500 percentage. Well, Al must have been playing it safe for the basketeers enjoyed a very good season—their record being thirteen wins against three setbacks, but they missed the chance to be rated a great team when they failed to halt the forty-three game winning streak of the famed Seton Hall aggregation.

Paper Receives High Honors in A. C. P. and Seton Hall Press Surveys

In deference to the senior examinations which will start Monday, May 19, and to the underclass examinations beginning Monday, May 26, this will be the last issue of the VILLANOVAN for the present scholastic year. Publication has been suspended until classes are resumed next fall.

Before closing shop, however, the student weekly received honors from two widespread collegiate press surveys for meritorious work during the past year. In the twenty-first annual survey conducted by the Associated Collegiate Press at the University of Minnesota, the VILLANOVAN received a First Class Honor Rating. This survey embraced a study of 412 college newspapers throughout the nation. The First Class rating is the second highest possible rating.

The Catholic Intercollegiate Press Survey, under the auspices of Seton Hall College, also honored the VILLANOVAN in awarding it a certificate of merit for outstanding achievement in the field of Catholic college journalism.

In the latter survey, the sports section received the highest possible distinction, attaining the rating of superior. The editorials, news stories, and features received the next highest rating conferred, being classified as excellent. The format, or make-up, of the paper was adjudged good, while the columns were considered average.

Commerce Day-Hops Aim at '42 Trophy

Plans are being made for closer cooperation of the C. & F. dayhops in the competition for the intramural trophy for 1941-1942. Rev. Francis McGuire, O. S. A., moderator of the day-hop group, outlined plans for next year's competition in a meeting held yesterday afternoon.

The commerce group, which has been climbing rapidly during the two years of activities in which it has engaged, will meet next Monday in the C. & F. Auditorium for the formation of committees. Each committee chairman will have two assistants who will act with him to secure the activity of all the 119 day-hops in at least one sport or competition next year.

All day-hops are asked to attend this meeting next Monday which will begin promptly at 1:00 P. M. "Only the complete cooperation of all dayhops will make it possible for the school to secure the coveted trophy in 1942," said Fr. McGuire in stressing the importance of this meeting.

DENTISTRY as a Career

Dentistry offers an opportunity in the field of health service for men of ability and determination. Advanced standards have cut down dental school attendance by 44% in recent years.

The Marquette University Dental School is one of the 18 dental schools of the United States whose diplomas are recognized in all of the states.

The close relationship of the Dental and Medical Schools at Marquette University is an advantage to students.

Entrance requirements: Two years in a recognized College of Liberal Arts with satisfactory credits in biology, chemistry, and physics.

Scholarships

Three Will Be Awarded on Basis of Competitive Exams Here May 21

Approximately 150 students from Catholic high schools in seven Middle Atlantic and New England states will compete for three tuition scholarships awarded on the basis of competitive examinations to be conducted here on Saturday, May 21.

Open to Catholic young men who are high school seniors and in need of financial assistance, the examinations will be held in room 106 Mendel hall from 9:30 A. M. until 1:00 P. M., during which time the entrants will be tested on their knowledge of English usage and literature, algebra and plane geometry, general science, and social studies.

Fliers Will Finish Course By June 15

William G. Slaughter, C. A. A. administrator, announced today that classes in the flying school will be completed by June 15.

Already each student has made his solo flight and has had at least eight hours of dual instruction. A total of 35 hours flying time is required before the fledgling pilots can receive their private licenses, which will be given out before classes have finished.

Of the ten students who started the course, the following will complete it: sophomores Richard Anderson, commerce student; Maurice Connolly, Walter McGrath, William Stevens, Jr., and William Sykes, sciencemen; Stephen Gasparovic and Arthur Tozer, engineers; and Frank Latawiec, freshman commerce student.

of the nation's highest court.

This will be the tenth honorary degree to be conferred upon Justice Roberts. He has been similarly honored by Princeton, Trinity, Williams, Dickinson, U. of Penna., Lafayette, Ursinus, Beaver and P. M. C.

Monsignor Foley, the second recipient of the honorary Ll. D. degree, was born in Chicago in 1896. He attended St. Rita's High School and spent two years at St. Ignatius College. He then entered St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore and was ordained in December, 1922.

After ordination, Monsignor Foley was made curate and professor at Quigley Seminary. After four years he assumed the duties of prefect of discipline. He held this position for seven years until 1934, when he was made rector of the seminary.

In November, 1938, he received the title of Papal Chamberlain and Monsignor.

The Rev. James F. Connor, who will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon, graduated from Villanova in 1928 with a degree of B. S. in Economics.

'42 To Elect

Junior nominations for officers of next year's senior class will be accepted tomorrow afternoon in the Mendel Amphitheatre from 12:30 until 1:30. Elections will be held next Monday in room 110 Mendel hall from 11:45 A. M. to 1:30 P. M.

Defense Classes

Will Continue Until the Middle of August; 265 Are Enrolled in Four Divisions

Engineering Defense Training classes will be continued under the direction of Villanova until the middle of August, when they will be suspended until the fall term, it was announced yesterday by J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering, who is in charge of the project here.

In the four divisions of the training classes now being taught, 265 students are enrolled. The four divisions of the program consist of advanced courses taught at the Cooper Hatch High School in Camden for employees of the New York Shipyard and elementary engineering subjects taught to high school graduates at Villanova, and at Northeast Catholic High School and West Philadelphia Catholic High School for Boys in Philadelphia.

Purpose of teaching the engineering course is to give to workers who cannot otherwise obtain it a basic knowledge of engineering so that their talents will be better fitted to aid in the National Defense program.

Teachers at the four schools are mainly members of the regular faculty and alumni of the engineering school. There are 27 altogether.

News Briefs

Resident students who wish to make reservations for rooms for next year may do so on May 16 and 17 at the business office during the office's regular hours; on May 19 and 20 all day in the business office; and on May 20 in Fr. Albers' office at the following times: juniors, 7:30 to 8:00 P. M.; sophomores, 8:00 to 8:30 P. M.; and freshmen, 8:30 to 9:00 P. M. The reservation must be accompanied by a deposit of $5.00 per student.

Elections for next year's officers will take place at a special meeting of the local chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers next Monday, May 19. Nominations were made at the last regular meeting, held yesterday.

Richard J. DiMarcantonio, senior education student, will discuss "The Administration of the National Labor Relations Act" at the year's final meeting of the History Seminar, to be held tomorrow at 2:15 P. M. in Simpson hall.

DiMarcantonio will treat of problems arising from the practical operations of the N. L. R. B., as opposed to its theoretical work.

The last Music Seminar of the year, to be held tomorrow evening, will consist of an all-request program, and will feature a lawn party on the front porch and lawn of Simpson hall.

Rev. John V. Vrana, moderator of the group, has arranged a program that should please everyone, and has planned to play those selections which have been the favorites of the seminar members during the past year.

Faculty Gains Three New Profs

Engineering Instructors Welcomed at Dinner; Fr. Mahoney, Barber, Haggerty, Limacher Leave

Three new teachers, all of whom wil be members of the School of Engineering staff, have been added to the faculty of the college.

Kenneth Moser, M. S., Harold LeTart, B. S., and Harry Blumenfeld, M .S., were officially welcomed to the college at the annual faculty dinner held on Sunday, Sept. 28. Two of the new instructors will join the Department of Mechanical Engineering; the other will be attached to the chemical engineering department.

Moser will replace William J. Barber, M. S., as an assistant professor of dynamics; LeTart will replace Mr. William W. Haggerty, B. S., as an instructor in mechanical engineering.

Teachers Leave

Barber leaves Villanova after a long association with the engineering school to join the faculty of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va. Haggerty, who resigned a position in the Army Air Corps to come here last year, has accepted a teaching position at the University of Cincinnati.

In the School of Commerce and Finance, the transfer of Rev. Jerome A. Mahoney, O. S. A., M. A., assistant professor of modern languages, to St. Nicholas parish in New York City was anounced. F. Mahoney, who came to Villanova in 1936 after teaching at St. Rita's High School, Chicago, will also take up duties at a New York hospital.

The resignation of Francis J. Limacher, M. S., of the Department of Chemical Engineering, has also been accepted. Limacher, who came to Villanova in 1939 from Purdue University, has left for a position with the Cramp Shipbuilding Co., of Philadelphia.

Comes From Stevens

Upon graduation from the Stevens Institute of Technology, new professor Moser received his Bachelor of Science degree; he was awarded his master's degree in 1941. Moser has been acting as an engineering consultant and intends to continue his private practice in addition to his new teaching dut-

Classes To Vote

Nominations for a Student Council representative of the senior class will be accepted tomorrow at 1:00 P. M. in the Mendel Amphitheatre; elections for the post will be held from 12:00 to 1:30 P. M. next Monday, Oct. 13, in room 111 Mendel.

Nominations for the vice-presidency of the junior class will be accepted on Wednesday, Oct. 15, and ballots will be cast on Monday, Oct. 20.

Student Council last Friday ruled these as the dates for class elections necessitated by the withdrawal from school of those elected to fill them at the conclusion of the last school term. Senior Student Council representative Bernard C. Crumb was drafted; junior vice-president Richard Anderson transferred to the University of Cincinnati.

Paper Rated "All-Catholic"

For the fifth consecutive year, the VILLANOVAN has been awarded "All-Catholic" honors in the annual survey and competition conducted by the Catholic School Press Association at Marquette University. Notification of the award, made after critical reading of last year's issues, was received last week.

Newspapers entered in the contest were judged on seven different bases, and Villanova scored at least 90% of the total possible points in each classification.

The most important basis upon which the newspapers were judged related to the "Diffusion of Catholic Thought and Promotion of Catholic Activity." Here the VILLANOVAN rated 95% on the extent to which the publication evidences Catholic leadership.

In the division calling for "application of art to news or feature articles," the college paper made 100%. Editorials, news, and feature coverage received a rating of 97%.

In the division concerned with the make-up of the paper, the VILLANOVAN scored 96%. Its uniformity and consistency in style received a high rating, as it did in divisions dealing with headline construction and accuracy, and service to school and community.

New Roads, Better Heating Plant Among Many Campus Improvements

By WARD C. GUNCHEON

In the extensive program of improvements to the college campus begun in June and now in the process of completion, over $20,000 has been appropriated for both building, landscaping, and road improvements. In addition, plans have been formulated and money allocated for several other projects.

During the past summer, the central heating plant, located in Mendel Hall, has been enlarged with the addition of a new automatic stoker. The purchase of the stoker was necessitated by the extension of the steam heating system to several additional buildings on the campus.

Steam Lines Laid

Steam lines were laid to Simpson Hall, the C. & F. Building, Austin Hall, and the newly acquired O'Dwyer Hall. Although the extension required a large financial outlay, college authorities believe that the resulting reduced heating costs and the better, more uniform heat will compensate the expenditure. New water lines were also laid while installing the steam pipes.

The extension of the central heating system was hampered by the difficulty in acquiring materials. Defense industries which used these materials had exhausted the market. In several cases the college was forced to obtain priorities for many of the vital parts and their delivery was made just recently.

Two New Roads

Elimination of the east road from Austin Hall to Lancaster Pike and the construction of roads from Mendel Hall to Simpson Hall and from the C. & F. Building to Ithan Avenue were included in the road building and repair plans. Existing roads, with the exception of the west road from Austin to Lancaster Pike, were either repaired or rebuilt.

Previous to the close of last year's term, the road extending from the chapel to the eastern end of Austin Hall was rebuilt. The circle in front of St. Rita's Hall was enlarged and the grade reduced to enable drivers to make the turns more easily.

Replacing a gravel path, a roadway has been constructed from the C. & F. Building to Ithan Avenue. This road has eliminated the necessity for the road from Austin to Lancaster Pike. The road in front of the janitor's quarters and extending to Austin Hall has been widened and surfaced.

Another new road connecting Mendel Hall and Simpson Hall has been constructed. This replaces the path which last year was impassable at times because of snow or mud. Although the new road does not make any contact with Lancaster Pike, a large circle has been built to enable drivers to turn, and return over the same road.

Extensive Landscaping

The construction of new roads and the extension of the heating system has necessitated much transplanting and reseeding. The sides of the road to Simpson Hall have been leveled and seeded, while the center of the terminating circle behind Simpson has been transformed into a flower bed.

To the rear of Austin Hall, evergreen trees, bushes, and sod have replaced the cinder parking place. All the chestnut trees. with the ex-

Fr. McGuire Succeeds Fr. Albers As Vice-President; Fr. McMenamin Becomes Procurator, Dever Controller

Appointment of Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., to succeed Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A., as Vice-President of the college was chief among the changes in administration made during the summer; the other changes resulted in the appointment of Rev. John J. McMenamin, O. S. A., and John T. Dever as Procurator and Controller, respectively. The new men have already begun their duties.

The new appointees to the various posts mentioned were named as the result of an election held by the Augustinian Order at the conclusion of the last school term. Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., was reelected president of the college. This will be his tenth year in office.

Fr. Albers retired after nine years of service not only as Vice-president, but also Dean of Men, Chairman of the Athletic Board, and moderator of the Student Council, to take up the duties of assistant pastor of St. Augustine's parish in Troy, N. Y.

Controller Resigns

As the new Procurator, Fr. McMenamin succeeds Rev. James S. Reilly, O. S. A., A. B., who left to assume the posts of Superintendent of St. Denis' Cemetery and assistant pastor of St. Denis' Church in Ardmore. Fr. Reilly has been Procurator here for the past few years.

Mr. Dever fills the vacancy created by the resignation of John B. Lawson, Controller, who accepted the comptrollership of a New Jersey industrial concern.

Studied Abroad

The new vice-president comes to office after having served as assistant professor of religion, moderator of the Centennial Class of '43, director of intramural activities of the School of Commerce and Finance, and counsellor of Austin Hall.

A graduate of Villanova in 1932, Fr. McGuire travelled to the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome, where he continued his theological studies for three years and was awarded a degree in Sacred Theology. After three years of further study, he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Here Since 1939

Upon his return to the United States, Fr. McGuire spent an additional year studying educational methods at Fordham University before taking up his professorial post at Villanova in 1939.

Fr. McMenamin, after his graduation from Villanova in 1927, attended the Catholic University in Washington, D. C., and graduated from there with a master's degree in 1931. In 1940 Columbia University awarded him a degree of Bachelor of Science in Library Science.

Stationed in N. Y.

Since obtaining his master's degree in Washington, Fr. McMenamin has been stationed at the Augustinian Preparatory Seminary in Staten Island, N. Y. Here he

DPE Smoker Due Tomorrow Night

Frs. McQuire and Bartley, "Clipper" Smith Will Talk to Commerce Frat

Delta Pi Epsilon, commerce school fraternity, will hold its first annual smoker in the lounge room of Simpson Hall tomorrow evening at 8:30 P. M.

The program will include a brief talk by Coach "Clipper" Smith on gridiron prospects for the coming year, and speeches by Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., newly appointed Vice-President and Dean of Men, and Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O. S. A., Dean of the business school.

To Outline Plans

Plans for the coming year will be outlined at this time by Patrick J. Dougherty, faculty moderator of the fraternity. Refreshments will be served to conclude the evening's entertainment.

Last week the officers of the fraternity held a lengthy conference with Mr. Dougherty at which time consideration was given to activities for the year, which will include regular social events, inspection trips to various plants in and around Philadelphia, and a number of guest speakers. President David N. Reardon announced that meetings will be held temporarily on alternate Thursdays at 11:45 A. M. in Simpson Hall.

Pins for Members

Fraternity pins, an innovation this year, will be procured for all active members as soon as possible. In addition to the pins, senior fraternity members will be awarded keys, as in the past.

This year, candidates for membership in the fraternity will be subjected to an extended pledging period. Unlike last year, when the initiation was completed in one night, this pledging period will be climaxed by an initiation which will last a full week.

A systematic examination file will be kept by the fraternity for use of its members. This file is to include copies of examinations given in previous years and will be available for reference and study.

A monthly communion Sunday has been proposed by the officers and will be discussed at an early meeting.

Four Class Funds To Aid Students

Students will benefit from the income of class scholarship funds for the first time this year, Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, announced yesterday.

Funds of each of the last four classes, 1938 to 1941 inclusive, have now matured to the $1000 level set for completion. This money has been invested in U. S. Savings Bonds, the income from which will be granted by the president to worthy students on the basis of need and scholastic standing.

Purpose of these funds is to assist students whose needs arose after they had begun their courses at Villanova. Those desiring aid must make application to the president, following which their individual cases will receive consideration.

The class scholarship program as it now operates provides that each class place the profits realized on its social events in a special fund which is turned over to the college when the class graduates. This fund is further supplemented by individual contributions. These funds are then invested and as each one reaches $1000 its income is used to assist deserving students.

Enrollment Drops 2% Here

In accord with a general trend throughout the colleges of the nation, unofficial advance registration figures here indicate a decrease of approximately two per cent from last year's total of 974 regular full-time student enrollment, P. F. Banmiller, college registrar, announced yesterday.

This slight decrease may be compared with similar drops of seven per cent at Temple University and five per cent at the University of Pennsylvania. Reports coming in from other colleges and universities over the country show like decreases, with a few exceptions. In most cases, the decreases are larger than Villanova's.

However, all figures for Villanova registration are tentative as yet, Banmiller emphasized. Official data will not be released until the registration figures from the various schools on the campus have been checked and analyzed.

The decrease is attributable in part to the Selective Service Act, which affected mainly the upper classes, containing students over twenty-one years of age. However, in some cases students left school to take attractive positions in plants turning out national defense products.

The freshman class, numbering approximately 300, is about the same as that of last year's total of 318 yearling registrants to this date.

Registration is complete with a few exceptions. A number of these are upper classmen who haven't acted pending classification by their local draft boards.

Total full-time enrollment is being broken down to determine the net change, the increase or decrease in each school, the change in the proportions of day and resident students, the number of members of the same family enrolled, and the geographical distribution of the student body.

The freshman class figures are being studied to determine what schools the new men come from and their preferences as shown in their selection of courses.

Farewell To A Man

MOST IMPORTANT of the several administrative and faculty changes made during the past summer was the appointment of Rev. Francis XZ. McGuire, O. S. A., to the office of Vice-President.

While we welcome to a new role a priest already known to us as a friend, teacher, and prefect, there likewise rests upon us the regretted necessity of saying farewell to his predecessor, Rev. Bernard M. Albers, O. S. A.

Appointed assistant rector at St. Augustine's Church in Troy, N. Y., Fr. Albers will receive a long overdue respite from the numerous tasks and heavy responsibilities which he assumed at the conclusion of the 1931-32 school year.

At that time, Fr. Albers was named Vice-President and Dean of Men. The competent service and an almost overwhelming interest in all things pertaining to Villanova, manifested during his first five years here, led the Athletic Council to further burden him in 1937 by naming him Chairman of the Athletic Board.

In this triple capacity of Vice-President, Dean of Men, and Chairman of the Athletic Board, as well as in his position as moderator of the Student Council, Fr. Albers was intimately associated with every student activity on the campus. All clubs, fraternities, and athletic teams were under his jurisdiction; every student election, appointment, or petition was subject to his approval. He likewise had the often unpleasant duty of enforcing all the disciplinary decrees of the faculty.

His new assignment as curate takes Fr. Albers away from school work for the first time since his own entry into grade school. Immediately following his conclusion of studies at ordination, Fr. Albers was delegated to the service of other youths. He came to Villanova from Aurora, Illinois, where he was rector of the Fox Valley Catholic High School.

Probably there are only a few who know the true value of Fr. Albers' vice-presidential reign to the growth and success of the college during recent years. But, even with our limited insight, we can vaguely understand what it means to lose a man whose loyalty, sincerity, and near-decade of service have made him almost a tradition at Villanova. His efficient methods, high ideals, and tireless application were always enriched by a zealous personal effort to do all possible for the betterment of the students and his alma mater.

In the name of the faculty, the students, the alumni, and all Villanova we say: "Thank you, goodbye, and good luck —Fr. Albers."

The Nation's Theme-Song

CAMPAIGNING against the "final mistake" that can be made by the United States in our aid to nations resisting aggression is at the moment a declining practice. If we are to judge by the number of individuals who in the past three months deserted the ranks of those challenging the prudence of America's voluntary "sliding," we might admit that our efforts were being wasted on a lost crusade.

However, the VILLANOVAN chooses to believe that the cause is still worth fighting for, and that the means employed to sway the nation to emotional blindness are still subject to criticism. Consequent to this decision, the editorial policy of this publication shall continue to condemn whatever it considers will instigate or precipitate military involvement in the European conflict.

Pursuing this course brings immediately to our attention the vast resources at the disposal of those forces desirous of plunging our nation into the foreign turmoil and their apparent success in the use of them. Known to all are the inglorious themes the radio and the press are presenting to a public which, with comparatively few exceptions, relies solely upon these channels as their "informer." In one concept of the word, it is granted that these organs have been catalogued correctly, for they have certainly betrayed a trust — a belief among our people that they can seek and find guidance and truth through these sources.

Expanding daily in their demonstrations of how powerful and influential they can be, they have again and again made us puppets for malicious interpretation and false fact. Make it your duty hereafter, to study and analyze the messages of these instruments if you are seeking the truth.

Yours For The Taking

ANOTHER year, another class at Villanova. Members of the Class of '45, it is to you that we address a word of welcome.

You can give yourself to Villanova by cooperating willingly and generously in every undertaking in which your participation is requested. Your first opportunity of this nature was in the one-day retreat. Continue to manifest the same spirit on future occasions and the task of all concerned will be made lighter.

Join organizations, but don't join merely for the sake of "joining. Be an active member of your group and make your presence felt in a constructive manner.

We welcome you to Villanova and to all she has to offer: opportunities for spiritual growth, cultural advancement, intellectual enlightenment, and social activity. All these are here; they are yours for the taking.

Proffering all these, Villanova asks something of you. The men of Villanova are Villanova. You should therefore so spend your time here that Villanova will benefit from your presence. Villanova offers much; it is for you to give a part of yourself in return.

We greet you, then, with a hearty welcome. May your stay here be such that it will be with regret that we will say farewell.

FACULTY COMMENTS

UNCLE TALKS PLAINLY

By Fr. Jos. Boyle

October 3, 1941

Dear Walter:

Your Dad wrote me that you were accepted at Villanova. Congratulations, my boy. I wish my work would permit me a visit with you at the start of your college career. For the present this note must satisfy.

You're now on your own. Don't abuse the trust the folks at home hold in you. Study comes first, but study wisely. Remember real study is thinking, and thinking is the heart of education.

The great men of history you will study will prove a rich source of inspiration to you. Yet there is no greater hero, no greater victor on earth than he who can subject his instinctive desires of the lower order to the better judgment of his spiritual nature.

You will learn much from your books, but there are many marginal notes you must pick up. Learn to show the spirit of chivalry to womanhood, not only in appearance but as a real indwelling feeling. As Schiller expressed it in his famous poem, "The Song of the Bell":

> Fair as a vision from the sky
> The maiden stands before his eye.

In the society of women your noble sentiments will be your surety of finding the most appropriate tone and attitude, and you will never, in word or act, be forgetful of your position as a gentleman.

You will live pretty close to hundreds of other men for two hundred and thirty days of the year. Lots of things can get your goat, if you let them. At Villanova you make or break your companions. They make or break you. Choose wisely what you are going to do or say every day and evening. Get plenty of air in good, rough games.

And don't forget the man behind you. He's the gent who puts up the cash. I refer to your father. Don't take money for granted. He doesn't get it by taking it for granted. Let him know regularly how his investment is paying.

Perhaps you think you can get through Villanova without the advice of an old fogy uncle. I think so too. Go to it. But get this — I'll break your neck if you fall down on the job.

New Moderators, Prefects Named

Frs. McQuade, Grimes, Sullivan Made Faculty Advisors of Classes, Day-Hops

Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., has been appointed moderator of the junior class, to fill the vacancy created by the accession of Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O. S. A., to the position of Vice-President and Dean of Men.

Fr. McQuade, assistant professor of social sciences and moderator of the Sociology Seminar, thus assumes the direction of the destinies of the class of '43 at the beginning of its most important year, in regard to social activity. More committees function, more class meetings are held, and more appointments are made during the junior year than at any other time.

Five prefects for resident halls have been appointed to fill vacancies created during the summer.

Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., has succeeded Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O. S. A., at Austin Hall. Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A., has been appointed to Alumni Hall.

Two new prefects, Rev. Francis W. Ludwig, O .S. A., and Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O. S. A, are in charge at Fedigan Hall. Rev Edward M. Dwyer, O. S. A., has been assigned to the newly-acquired O'Dwyer Hall.

The freshman class will have Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A., instructor of social sciences, as its moderator. While the first-year men sponsor no social events, they do hold frequent class meetings, and elect officers at the beginning of the scholastic year.

The present moderator of the senior class, Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., has been appointed to direct the activities of the day hop students during the coming year. Fr. Sullivan will be concerned chiefly with the organization and guidance of the various intra-mural activities in which the day students participate.

Twenty Freshmen Hold Scholarships

Fifty Upperclassmen Also Benefit From Grants in Excess of $45,000 Total

Twenty scholarships having a total value of $17,600 are held by members of the freshman class this year. In addition, scholarship grants and renewals amounting to $27,500 are being used by 50 upperclassmen.

Winners of the competitive scholarship examinations are James J. Mitchell of West Grove High School, now in the Department of Education, and Edward V. Murray of Northeast Catholic and James L. O'Brien of West Catholic High School, both in the School of Engineering.

Three winners of scholarships awarded through the various Catholic high schools are brothers of students or recent graduates. Thomas M. Schubert of Roman Catholic High School, now in the arts school, is the brother of William E. Schubert, a senior artsman. Robert H. Gruss and Edward M. Deasy, freshman engineers, are following the paths of their brothers, George Gruss, junior chemical, and W. E. Deasy, B. Ch. E., '41, president of last year's senior class, both of whom were also scholarship winners from Camden Catholic and Trenton Catholic respectively.

Other scholarship holders include James E. Dougherty of Northeast Catholic, who is in the commerce school, and Salvatore C. Carfango of Bridgeport High, who is taking arts.

In the School of Engineering are now enrolled scholarship winners Vincent J. Silverio, Southeast Catholic; Wallace A. Dietrich, St. Thomas More; Richard E. Gaffney, Central Catholic of Allentown; and John A. Hefti of Aquinas Institute, Rochester, N. Y.

Science freshmen who won scholarships are William G. Owens, Malvern Prep; William J. Baer, Upper Darby; Paul T. Drenning, Radnor High; Louis C. Murray, Cascia Hall, Tulsa, Okla.; William G. Plum, St. Thomas, Rockford, Ill.; and Warner P. Portz of Villanova Prep, Ojai, Calif.

Posts Of Controller, Procurator Change Hands

Pictured here are the four men involved in the transfer of the administrative business positions of the college.

At the right, bottom, JOHN B. LAWSON appears. Controller at Villanova for the past several years, he resigned to become controller of a New Jersey business firm.

taught English and also acted as Procurator.

In his new capacity, Fr. McMenamin serves as Procurator not only for the college but also for the Monastery. He hires all employees and has charge of purchasing done by the college.

Ten Years Experience

Mr. Dever, the new controller, brings ten years of varied experience in the administrative field to his new position.

After attending the University of Pennsylvania, he entered the public accounting firm of Price, Waterhouse & Company, in Philadelphia. Later he served as assistant contact manager for Warner Brothers, a motion picture chain.

Unwary Frosh Uses Brawn, Then Brain, Finally Becomes A Man

By PAT McWILLIAMS

"Hey, frosh! How about giving me a hand with a little chair—help take it up to the room."

These words, which are not uttered in an interrogative tone, begin the troubles of many an unsuspecting frosh.

Up they go. Up and up and up, to what seems to be the very roof of Mendel Hall.

"Lift down that little bureau, frosh, will you? My chair is in that pile somewhere."

After at least ten minutes of unpiling a conglomeration of bureaus, tables, chairs, and boxes, the yearling finally spots the "little chair." It inevitably turns out to be one of the very much over-stuffed variety — stuffed, that is, with iron, lead, and an assortment of other valuable defense materials.

And in addition to just "giving a hand," the frosh has to lend a back, two arms, and several previously unknown and rusty muscles. The jaunty junior, in his best impersonation of Simon Legree, orders his vitcims to carry their burden down the stairs, across the campus to another hall, and then up three more flights to his cozy little room.

The whole thing started when little Herbie waved a last fond goodbye to Papa and Mamma, and plunged headlong into the altogether strange world of college.

Tough At Start

His first day was one long nightmare of standing in line. The Business Office, the dean's office, the photographer. And when all that was over, he went up to formidable room 215, where he was given his "regs," a nick-name, and free singing lessons.

In the days which followed, Herbie attended seemingly endless freshmen meetings. He learned every cheer in the hand-book; he heard representatives of various extracurricular activities; he marched down to the stadium, and posed in group pictures. Then came classes.

That was three weeks ago. Now, the job which the Orientation Committee began has been completed by the ordinary activities of college life. The foreigner has become the native.

Man-of-the-Campus

Our Frosh worries not about schedules, speaks familiarly of his professors, and makes pointed remarks about food, train service, etc., etc. He hardly ever gets lost any more. He has even learned to twirl his keychain with a certain degree of nonchalance and speed.

Credit for this rapid transition could and should be given to several persons and organizations: to Rev. Francis X. Boyle, O. S. A., class moderator; to Chairman Bill Hooper and the Orientation Committee; to the frosh themselves.

But it would undoubtedly be simpler and more accurate to say that the job has been accomplished by—Villanova.

If You're Classified . . .

Students who have been classified by their local draft boards, and have not already notified P. F. Banmiller, college registrar, should do so immediately.

News Briefs

October 15, is the date set for the appearance of the year's first issue of the Villanova "Engineer."

The "Engineer" has again returned to its former policy of combining pictures with technical articles, rather than being composed entirely of photographs, as was the case last year.

Major portion of the first issue will be occupied by an article entitled "Electronic Microscopes," written by Thomas C. Muraski and Joseph Becker.

Muraski, junior chemical engineer, is also managing editor of the publication. Becker, a member of the sophomore class last year, is now in the Army Air Corps.

Remaining members of the editorial board include: Walter La Porte, senior mechanical engineer, as editor-in-chief, Robert S. Ayerle, a senior in the Department of Chemical Engineering, as circulation manager, and junior Arthur Lyness as business manager.

First meeting of the Spanish Club will be held this Thursday, October 9, at 1:00 P. M. in the C. & F. Auditorium. Members will present ideas on the year's activities.

Lock-picking as a legal profession in the business world was the featured topic of the regular meeting of the A. S. M. E. last Friday afternoon. Maxwell C. Maxwell, of the Yale-Towne Manufacturing Co., demonstrated the tricks of this art to the society's members.

Maxwell used tools manufactured for the purpose to prove his deftness in opening locks of different sizes and types. He explained the different working principles of locks and the appropriate method used in opening them when the key or combination has been lost. Following his demonstration, members were given the opportunity to duplicate previously-explained methods.

Defense Courses Enter Second Year

Elementary Engineering Will Again Be Taught at Villanova, Catholic High Schools

Villanova - directed Engineering Training Courses for National Defense opened in Philadelphia last night at Northeast Catholic High School. Tomorrow evening the courses will start at West Catholic High and on Monday, Oct. 13, they will begin at Villanova.

These elementary engineering courses, under the supervision of J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of the engineering school, are sponsored by the United States Department of Education to meet the demands of defense industries and the army for men with specialized training. There is no charge for the classes, which are open to all high school graduates who have had at least two years of mathematics and one year of physics or chemistry and who ranked in either of the two upper quintiles of their class.

24-Week Course

The 288 hours of work required for the elementary course are divided into 108 hours of physics, 108 hours of mathematics and 72 hours of mechanical drawing. The courses are given three hours a night, four nights a week, over a period of 24 weeks. The only expense to the student is the cost of the books.

More advanced groups, under instruction at Cooper Hatch High School in Camden, N. J., study hydraulics, thermo-dynamics, and steam turbine design. Upon completion of their courses these men are employed by the New York Shipbuilding Co. in Camden.

New Advanced Course

Over two hundred students have already applied for this year's course, which will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 7:00 to 10:00 P. M. A second-year course in junior engineering will be available for those students who wish to continue the training given them last year. This will include classes in the strength of materials, supplemented by laboratory work, applied mechanics, and advanced engineering drawing.

The Camden group will study marine heating, air-conditioning and heat transfer units.

To offset the lack of trained teachers, special courses have been given at Villanova, Temple University, the Philadelphia Navy Yard and the Fleisher Vocational School to 165 industrial technicians.

Dean Morehouse is in charge of the courses at Villanova and at the Philadelphia high schools. His proposals are subject to approbation by the Department of Education in Washington.

No Employment Guarantee

No guarantees of employment are given to students who complete the training course. The training, however, is designed to meet present and prospective defense needs and the facilities of college placement bureaus, the state employment systems, and the U. S. Civil Service Commission are utilized in placing trainees.

Although all instruction under the program is of college calibre, it is not a substitute for the regular course leading to a degree. Instead, a certificate is given to the graduates.

Last year a total of 143, or 85%, of those enrolled completed the course at Villanova.

Fund Drive Up To 38% Of Goal

Results of the first year of the Villanova Alumni Centennial Fund Drive to furnish the proposed new library, show that 38 per cent of its goal has been attained with approximately only 3 per cent of the alumni approached for contributions. Begun last spring, the drive has set $40,000 as its goal.

William G. Slaughter, secretary-treasurer of the alumni, has announced that the drive will be continued this fall and will be extended until the Centennial year, 1943.

Considering the results of the first year of the drive and the small percentage of alumni approached personally, the central committee has reorganized and enlarged its plans.

Assisting last year's class agents will be the club committees and a special gifts committee. By working together, the three committees hope to obtain pledges from each of the 5,000 members of the alumni. The club committees will operate in conjunction with the twenty-four Villanova Clubs across the country. The special gifts committees will handle those contributions not submitted through the other channels.

Graphs based on the results of the first year of the drive, show that the Springfield, Mass., Club has the largest proportion, 40 per cent, of alumni club members who have contributed to the Centennial Fund. The class of '23 leads all the other classes with 30 per cent of its members having contributed, while the class of '01 is second with 27 per cent.

Condolences Offered In Four Deaths

The VILLANOVAN announces with regret the death of Mrs. Hugh McLean, sister of Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., college librarian.

Mrs. McLean's funeral took place on the morning of Saturday, October 4, at her home in Holyoke, Mass. Representing Villanova at the services were Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college; Rev. Henry A. Caffrey, O. S. A, prior of the monastery, and Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A. Rev. Robert McGrath, O. S. A., and Rev. John Maher, O. S. A., were also in attendance.

Brother Sibelis Andrew, F. S. C., associate professor of English at LaSalle College, also died last week at the age of 29. A graduate of Catholic University, Brother Andrew came to La Salle in 1936 as associate professor of English and professor of journalism.

Later he assumed the posts of moderator of "The Collegian," student publication, and sponsor of the Catholic Press Exhibit. In 1940 he became moderator of the college alumni.

Solemn requiem mass was celebrated Saturday, October 4, and burial was at the mother house in Ammendale, Md.

Mr. Hugh Burns, cousin of Rev. John F. Burns, dean of the School of Arts, met an untimely death last week when he was burned to death. His funeral was held on Friday, October 3.

Mother Mary Amadeus, registrar at Rosemont College, also passed on to her heavenly reward, during the summer. Mother Amadeus died on August 24, after an illness of only 24 hours. She had been a member of the Rosemont faculty for 18 years.

To the families of Mrs. McLean, Brother Andrew, Mr. Burns, and Mother Amadeus, the VILLANOVAN extends its sincerest expressions of sympathy.

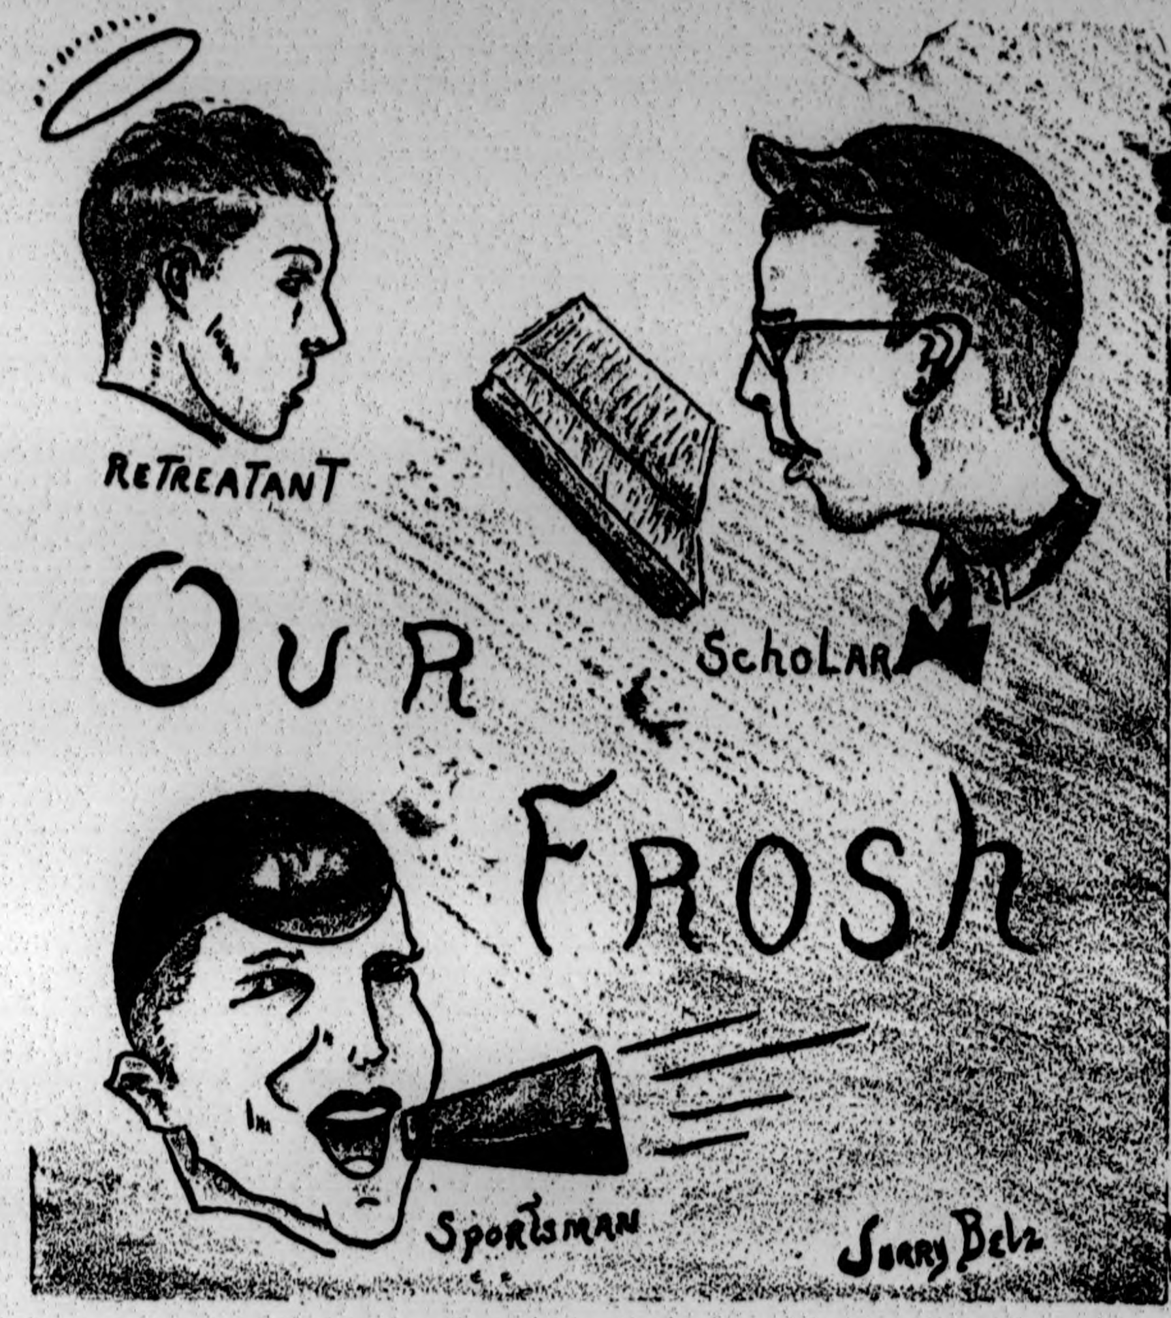
As We See Them . . . . By BELZ



FACULTY COMMENTS

UNCLE TALKS PLAINLY

By Fr. Jos. Boyle

October 3, 1941

Dear Walter:

Your Dad wrote me that you were accepted at Villanova. Congratulations, my boy. I wish my work would permit me a visit with you at the start of your college career. For the present this note must satisfy.

You're now on your own. Don't abuse the trust the folks at home hold in you. Study comes first, but study wisely. Remember real study is thinking, and thinking is the heart of education.

The great men of history you will study will prove a rich source of inspiration to you. Yet there is no greater hero, no greater victor on earth than he who can subject his instinctive desires of the lower order to the better judgment of his spiritual nature.

You will learn much from your books, but there are many marginal notes you must pick up. Learn to show the spirit of chivalry to womanhood, not only in appearance but as a real indwelling feeling. As Schiller expressed it in his famous poem, "The Song of the Bell":

> Fair as a vision from the sky
> The maiden stands before his eye.

In the society of women your noble sentiments will be your surety of finding the most appropriate tone and attitude, and you will never, in word or act, be forgetful of your position as a gentleman.

You will live pretty close to hundreds of other men for two hundred and thirty days of the year. Lots of things can get your goat, if you let them. At Villanova you make or break your companions. They make or break you. Choose wisely what you are going to do or say every day and evening. Get plenty of air in good, rough games.

And don't forget the man behind you. He's the gent who puts up the cash. I refer to your father. Don't take money for granted. He doesn't get it by taking it for granted. Let him know regularly how his investment is paying.

Perhaps you think you can get through Villanova without the advice of an old fogy uncle. I think so too. Go to it. But get this — I'll break your neck if you fall down on the job.

Your Wildcat
Uncle Bill, '12

New Moderators, Prefects Named

Frs. McQuade, Grimes, Sullivan Made Faculty Advisors of Classes, Day-Hops

Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A., has been appointed moderator of the junior class, to fill the vacancy created by the accession of Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O. S. A., to the position of Vice-President and Dean of Men.

Fr. McQuade, assistant professor of social sciences and moderator of the Sociology Seminar, thus assumes the direction of the destinies of the class of '43 at the beginning of its most important year, in regard to social activity. More committees function, more class meetings are held, and more appointments are made during the junior year than at any other time.

Five prefects for resident halls have been appointed to fill vacancies created during the summer.

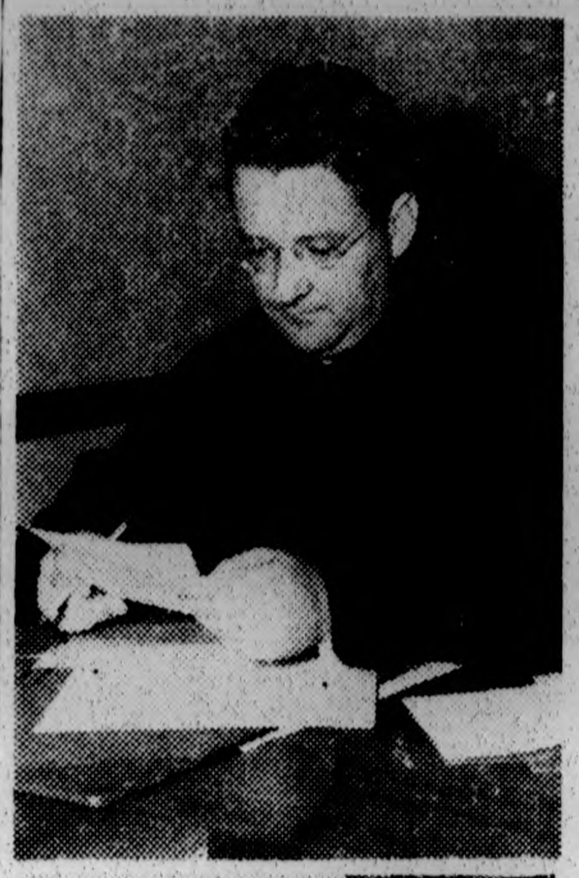
Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., has succeeded Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O. S. A., at Austin Hall. Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A., has been appointed to Alumni Hall.

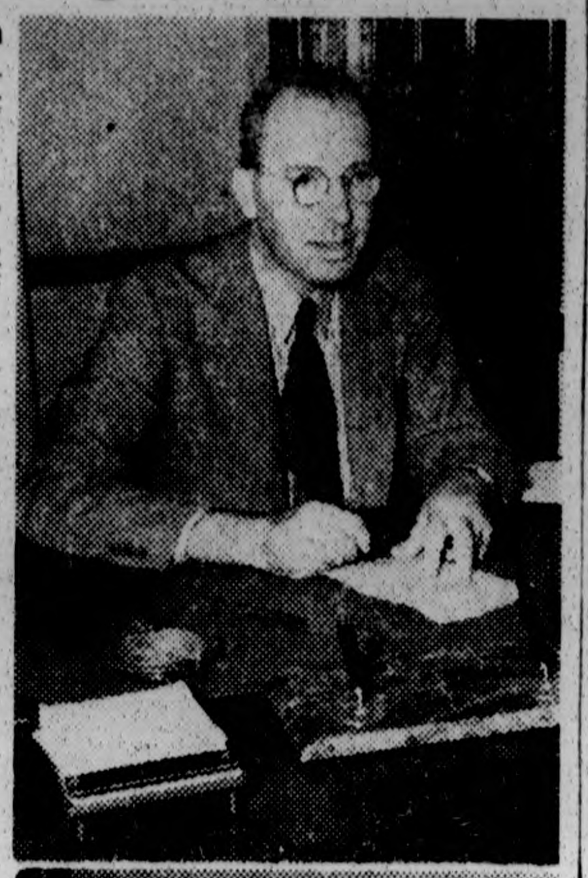
Two new prefects, Rev. Francis W. Ludwig, O. S. A., and Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O. S. A, are in charge at Fedigan Hall. Rev Edward M. Dwyer, O. S. A., has been assigned to the newly-acquired O'Dwyer Hall.

The freshman class will have Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O. S. A., instructor of social sciences, as its moderator. While the first-year men sponsor no social events, they do hold frequent class meetings, and elect officers at the beginning of the scholastic year.

The present moderator of the senior class, Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O. S. A., has been appointed to direct the activities of the day hop students during the coming year. Fr. Sullivan will be concerned chiefly with the organization and guidance of the various intra-mural activities in which the day students participate.

Posts Of Controller, Procurator Change Hands





Pictured here are the four men involved in the transfer of the administrative business positions of the college.

At the right, bottom, JOHN B. LAWSON appears. Controller at Villanova for the past several years, he resigned to become controller of a New Jersey business firm.

taught English and also acted as Procurator.

In his new capacity, Fr. McMenamin serves as Procurator not only for the college but also for the Monastery. He hires all employees and has charge of purchasing done by the college.

Ten Years Experience

Mr. Dever, the new controller, brings ten years of varied experience in the administrative field to his new position.

After attending the University of Pennsylvania, he entered the public accounting firm of Price, Waterhouse & Company, in Philadelphia. Later he served as assistant contact manager for Warner Brothers, a motion picture chain.

Twenty Freshmen Hold Scholarships

Fifty Upperclassmen Also Benefit From Grants in Excess of $45,000 Total

Twenty scholarships having a total value of $17,600 are held by members of the freshman class this year. In addition, scholarship grants and renewals amounting to $27,500 are being used by 50 upperclassmen.

Winners of the competitive scholarship examinations are James J. Mitchell of West Grove High School, now in the Department of Education, and Edward V. Murray of Northeast Catholic and James L. O'Brien of West Catholic High School, both in the School of Engineering.

Three winners of scholarships awarded through the various Catholic high schools are brothers of students or recent graduates. Thomas M. Schubert of Roman Catholic High School, now in the arts school, is the brother of William E. Schubert, a senior artsman. Robert H. Gruss and Edward M. Deasy, freshman engineers, are following the paths of their brothers, George Gruss, junior chemical, and W. E. Deasy, B. Ch. E., '41, president of last year's senior class, both of whom were also scholarship winners from Camden Catholic and Trenton Catholic respectively.

Other scholarship holders include James E. Dougherty of Northeast Catholic, who is in the commerce school, and Salvatore C. Carfango of Bridgeport High, who is taking arts.

In the School of Engineering are now enrolled scholarship winners Vincent J. Silverio, Southeast Catholic; Wallace A. Dietrich, St. Thomas More; Richard E. Gaffney, Central Catholic of Allentown; and John A. Hefti of Aquinas Institute, Rochester, N. Y.

Science freshmen who won scholarships are William G. Owens, Malvern Prep; William J. Baer, Upper Darby; Paul T. Drenning, Radnor High; Louis C. Murray, Cascia Hall, Tulsa, Okla.; William G. Plum, St. Thomas, Rockford, Ill.; and Warner P. Portz of Villanova Prep, Ojai, Calif.

Unwary Frosh Uses Brawn, Then Brain, Finally Becomes A Man

By PAT McWILLIAMS

"Hey, frosh! How about giving me a hand with a little chair—help take it up to the room."

These words, which are not uttered in an interrogative tone, begin the troubles of many an unsuspecting frosh.

Up they go. Up and up and up, to what seems to be the very roof of Mendel Hall.

"Lift down that little bureau, frosh, will you? My chair is in that pile somewhere."

After at least ten minutes of unpiling a conglomeration of bureaus, tables, chairs, and boxes, the yearling finally spots the "little chair." It inevitably turns out to be one of the very much overstuffed variety — stuffed, that is, with iron, lead, and an assortment of other valuable defense materials.

And in addition to just "giving a hand," the frosh has to lend a back, two arms, and several previously unknown and rusty muscles. The jaunty junior, in his best impersonation of Simon Legree, orders his vitcims to carry their burden down the stairs, across the campus to another hall, and then up three more flights to his cozy little room.

The whole thing started when little Herbie waved a last fond goodbye to Papa and Mamma, and plunged headlong into the altogether strange world of college.

Tough At Start

His first day was one long nightmare of standing in line, The Business Office, the dean's office, the photographer. And when all that was over, he went up to formidable room 215, where he was given his "regs," a nick-name, and free singing lessons.

In the days which followed, Herbie attended seemingly endless freshmen meetings. He learned every cheer in the hand-book; he heard representatives of various extracurricular activities; he marched down to the stadium, and posed in group pictures. Then came classes.

That was three weeks ago. Now, the job which the Orientation Committee began has been completed by the ordinary activities of college life. The foreigner has become the native.

Man-of-the-Campus

Our Frosh worries not about schedules, speaks familiarly of his professors, and makes pointed remarks about food, train service, etc., etc. He hardly ever gets lost any more. He has even learned to twirl his keychain with a certain degree of nonchalance and speed.

Credit for this rapid transition could and should be given to several persons and organizations: to Rev. Francis X. Boyle, O. S. A., class moderator; to Chairman Bill Hooper and the Orientation Committee; to the frosh themselves.

But it would undoubtedly be simpler and more accurate to say that the job has been accomplished by—Villanova.

News Briefs

October 15, is the date set for the appearance of the year's first issue of the Villanova "Engineer."

The "Engineer" has again returned to its former policy of combining pictures with technical articles, rather than being composed entirely of photographs, as was the case last year.

Major portion of the first issue will be occupied by an article entitled "Electronic Microscopes," written by Thomas C. Muraski and Joseph Becker.

Muraski, junior chemical engineer, is also managing editor of the publication. Becker, a member of the sophomore class last year, is now in the Army Air Corps.

Remaining members of the editorial board include: Walter La Porte, senior mechanical engineer, as editor-in-chief, Robert S. Ayerle, a senior in the Department of Chemical Engineering, as circulation manager, and junior Arthur Lyness as business manager.

First meeting of the Spanish Club will be held this Thursday, October 9, at 1:00 P. M. in the C. & F. Auditorium. Members will present ideas on the year's activities.

Lock-picking as a legal profession in the business world was the featured topic of the regular meeting of the A. S. M. E. last Friday afternoon. Maxwell C. Maxwell, of the Yale-Towne Manufacturing Co., demonstrated the tricks of this art to the society's members.

Maxwell used tools manufactured for the purpose to prove his deftness in opening locks of different sizes and types. He explained the different working principles of locks and the appropriate method used in opening them when the key or combination has been lost. Following his demonstration, members were given the opportunity to duplicate previously-explained methods.

If You're Classified . . .

Students who have been classified by their local draft boards, and have not already notified P. F. Banmiller, college registrar, should do so immediately.

Fund Drive Up To 38% Of Goal

Results of the first year of the Villanova Alumni Centennial Fund Drive to furnish the proposed new library, show that 38 per cent of its goal has been attained with approximately only 3 per cent of the alumni approached for contributions. Begun last spring, the drive has set $40,000 as its goal.

William G. Slaughter, secretary-treasurer of the alumni, has announced that the drive will be continued this fall and will be extended until the Centennial year, 1943.

Considering the results of the first year of the drive and the small percentage of alumni approached personally, the central committee has reorganized and enlarged its plans.

Assisting last year's class agents will be the club committees and a special gifts committee. By working together, the three committees hope to obtain pledges from each of the 5,000 members of the alumni. The club committees will operate in conjunction with the twenty-four Villanova Clubs across the country. The special gifts committees will handle those contributions not submitted through the other channels.

Graphs based on the results of the first year of the drive, show that the Springfield, Mass., Club has the largest proportion, 40 per cent, of alumni club members who have contributed to the Centennial Fund. The class of '23 leads all the other classes with 30 per cent of its members having contributed, while the class of '01 is second with 27 per cent.

Defense Courses Enter Second Year

Elementary Engineering Will Again Be Taught at Villanova, Catholic High Schools

Villanova - directed Engineering Training Courses for National Defense opened in Philadelphia last night at Northeast Catholic High School. Tomorrow evening the courses will start at West Catholic High and on Monday, Oct. 13, they will begin at Villanova.

These elementary engineering courses, under the supervision of J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of the engineering school, are sponsored by the United States Department of Education to meet the demands of defense industries and the army for men with specialized training. There is no charge for the classes, which are open to all high school graduates who have had at least two years of mathematics and one year of physics or chemistry and who ranked in either of the two upper quintiles of their class.

24-Week Course

The 288 hours of work required for the elementary course are divided into 108 hours of physics, 108 hours of mathematics and 72 hours of mechanical drawing. The courses are given three hours a night, four nights a week, over a period of 24 weeks. The only expense to the student is the cost of the books.

More advanced groups, under instruction at Cooper Hatch High School in Camden, N. J., study hydraulics, thermo-dynamics, and steam turbine design. Upon completion of their courses these men are employed by the New York Shipbuilding Co. in Camden.

New Advanced Course

Over two hundred students have already applied for this year's course, which will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 7:00 to 10:00 P. M. A second-year course in junior engineering will be available for those students who wish to continue the training given them last year. This will include classes in the strength of materials, supplemented by laboratory work, applied mechanics, and advanced engineering drawing.

The Camden group will study marine heating, air-conditioning and heat transfer units.

To offset the lack of trained teachers, special courses have been given at Villanova, Temple University, the Philadelphia Navy Yard and the Fleisher Vocational School to 165 industrial technicians.

Dean Morehouse is in charge of the courses at Villanova and at the Philadelphia high schools. His proposals are subject to approbation by the Department of Education in Washington.

No Employment Guarantee

No guarantees of employment are given to students who complete the training course. The training, however, is designed to meet present and prospective defense needs and the facilities of college placement bureaus, the state employment systems, and the U. S. Civil Service Commission are utilized in placing trainees.

Although all instruction under the program is of college calibre, it is not a substitute for the regular course leading to a degree. Instead, a certificate is given to the graduates.

Last year a total of 143, or 85%, of those enrolled completed the course at Villanova.

Condolences Offered In Four Deaths

The VILLANOVAN announces with regret the death of Mrs. Hugh McLean, sister of Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O. S. A., college librarian.

Mrs. McLean's funeral took place on the morning of Saturday, October 4, at her home in Holyoke, Mass. Representing Villanova at the services were Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college; Rev. Henry A. Caffrey, O. S. A, prior of the monastery, and Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O. S. A. Rev. Robert McGrath, O. S. A., and Rev. John Maher, O. S. A., were also in attendance.

Brother Sibelis Andrew, F. S. C., associate professor of English at LaSalle College, also died last week at the age of 29. A graduate of Catholic University, Brother Andrew came to La Salle in 1936 as associate professor of English and professor of journalism.

Later he assumed the posts of moderator of "The Collegian," student publication, and sponsor of the Catholic Press Exhibit. In 1940 he became moderator of the college alumni.

Solemn requiem mass was celebrated Saturday, October 4, and burial was at the mother house in Ammendale, Md.

Mr. Hugh Burns, cousin of Rev. John F. Burns, dean of the School of Arts, met an untimely death last week when he was burned to death. His funeral was held on Friday, October 3.

Mother Mary Amadeus, registrar at Rosemont College, also passed on to her heavenly reward, during the summer. Mother Amadeus died on August 24, after an illness of only 24 hours. She had been a member of the Rosemont faculty for 18 years.

To the families of Mrs. McLean, Brother Andrew, Mr. Burns, and Mother Amadeus, the VILLANOVAN extends its sincerest expressions of sympathy.

ANOTHER year—another column. With all good intentions, we once more resume our reportorial snoopings in an attempt to note the social activities of our men-about-the-campus and other items too rumorous to mention.

Apparently the summer layoff has made the boys more socially-minded than ever before because they lost no time in acclimating themselves to the campi of the neighboring colleges. Before the Soph Hop, Rosemont and Immaculata frosh both played hostess to our first-year men on successive afternoons, serving the he-men tea and cookies between dances.

As usual, an entourage of ravenous upper-classmen frequented these affairs, discouraging the frosh's chances to acquaint themselves with some damsels for the coming year. Despite the competition, some of the smoother neophytes came out of it swinging with some smart dates, thanks to Austin Gavin's diplomacy. Evidently the new crop of co-eds is exceptionally pulchritudinous.

Just a word in tribute to the numerous fellows who did not return to school and who are faithfully serving their country: nice going, men, and good luck!

EAVESDROPPINGS:

The Soph Hop was a great affair for which the second-year men deserve commendation as do the Villanovans musicrew. . . Any prospective card sharks should avoid Johnny Sandonato because he owns quite a fancy deck anyway you look at it. . . Bob Koness and John Cerulo will be your New York and Philadelphia correspondent for the coming year. They carry all the news of the world, hot off the wires. For your favorite newspaper, see Bob or John.

It seems that Jack Enright has followed up his summer affair with Gerry by motoring to Valley Forge every Sunday, supposedly to see the leaves turning. However, one of his best friends is trying to turn a new leaf over for him.

SPOTLIGHT:

Tom Morgan, debonair quarterback on the football squad, claims his girl friend, Helen Mueller, has been selected as one of the six most beautiful models in New York City and will compete in the Rheingold girl contest. She will be on the radio program, "We, the People," tonight at 9:00 P. M.

WHAT NOAH DIDN'T KNOWA:

Ed Cubler reputedly carries on a close correspondence with Bonnie. . . . Paul Waters has evidently made progress with Mary, Immaculata junior, since last year because he now sports her class pin. . . Tom Devinney motors all the way to Washington nearly every weekend to keep a standing date with Mary C. . . Burt Goldberg, would-be commerce senior, has not returned to school. He has taken unto himself a wife. . . "Scoop" Funabashi has called it quits with Helen, comely Brooklyn lass.

Fedigan's Bob White, express agent, proved very unbusinesslike when he couldn't even quote his own prices. . . Roy Lind encountered great difficulty in locating a date last Friday night. . . Frank Reese almost reached a point of desperation for the same reason. . . . Bud "Hard-Luck" Newell's date contracted appendicitis the day before.

Doc Jacobs' keystone combination on the baseball club have joined the armed forces. "Skag" Calandra and "Woody" Reitmeier were a classy combination that will sorely be missed. . . John Parson, last year's Junior Prom chairman, is a flying cadet at Randolph Field, Texas. He visited the campus last week en route back to the training base.

Jim Bonner and Tom Delahanty thought they both had a date with DeeDee, a southern belle from Virginia and Rosemont. But, as things turned out, an unknown senior was her escort—much to their surprise. . . . Bob White was seen with Ann Yeager co-chaperoning the Immaculata frosh. . . "Irish" Donahue found three kittens by the roadside and has taken it upon himself to fondle them in Austin Hall.

Villanova Adds Another Residence Hall — And Honors Memory Of First President, Fr. O'Dwyer

By THOMAS C. MURASKI

IN the southwest section of the campus are two residence halls, both of which were at one time private residences. The nearer of the two is Simpson Hall, a yellow stucco house at the termination of the road beginning in front of Mendel and cutting across the campus toward Lancaster Pike. The other hall is new and is housing students this year for the first time. Directly west of Simpson, it is named for the first president of Villanova College, Rev. John P. O'Dwyer, O. S. A.

O'Dwyer Hall was acquired by the college toward the end of the last school term. During the summer it was renovated and in September was opened to upperclassmen on the standard basis as outlined in the catalogue. It is connected with the central heating and power systems, and has accommodations for twenty students and a moderator.

Those few students, however, can boast of a reception room and front porch, things which the other halls don't have. They have their own driveway leading in from the pike and the extension of the road from Mendel to Simpson is being undertaken to include a connection with the new hall.

The biggest job during the summer was that of changing the house from a family dwelling into a college dormitory. The interior was entirely redecorated, rooms were partitioned, doors and extra facilities installed. And in keeping with the Villanova tradition of "the campus beautiful," several trees were removed and the land was grade, sod and young trees will complete the landscaping. The exterior of the house will be renovated immediately, if the present favorable weather continues.

Rev. Edward M. Dwyer, O. S. A., assistant professor of philosophy, was appointed as moderator of the new hall. Fr. Dwyer and Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., moderator of the Simpson Hall, will alternate as prefect of discipline for the two halls. Despite the union on this count, O'Dwyer will be associated with Austin Hall for intramural activities whereas Simpson will remain with Fedigan.

When the hall was named it was not given just a name; it was also given a tradition; a tradition that has its headwaters in the life of Fr. O'Dwyer himself.

An excellent orator, an untiring and energetic man of ability, Fr. O'Dwyer laid down principles and examples which have come down to the present time.

Came From Ireland

Born in Callan, County Kilkenny, Ireland, in 1814, he studied in Ireland at the local college and entered the Order of St. Augustine at the age of 17. He then went to Italy where he was most proficient in all his studies. In April, 1840, he was ordained and, in the same year, he came to the American Province, only to return to Europe two years later because of ill health. In the summer of 1843 he returned to America to take up his life's work.

On Aug. 28, 1843, Fr. O'Dwyer opened community life at Villanova with Mass, blessing the new monastery and placing it under the patronage of St. Thomas of Villanova.

Prominent in U .S.

Historic records show that he preached the funeral oration for the pontifical solemn obsequies of Pope Gregory XVI. The eulogy was printed in full in the "Catholic Herald." In 1847 he opened the diocesan synod by preaching another impressive sermon, and in 1849 attended the Seventh Provincial Council in Baltimore where he was elected to fill the bishopric of the new see of Savannah. Ill health prevented his appointment by the Holy See.

Besides acting as president of the college, he was Pastor of St. Augustine's and Superior of the Augustinians in the United States. In 1848, when Villanova received its state charter, he was elected president of the Board of Trustees and re-elected president of the college.

Many Early Setbacks

During the days of bigotry and mob violence in Philadelphia, Fr. O'Dwyer was faced with many setbacks and disappointments. St. Augustine's was burnt by the "Know Nothing" party in 1844 and the college was threatened with open violence. These worries, together with the work of building a temporary chapel and subsequently a new church and other buildings at the college, broke Fr. O'Dwyer's health and, in April, 1850, he was sent to Baltimore to recover. On May 24, 1850, he died at the early age of 36.

The memory of a man of such ability and initiative carries with it a deep love and never-ending pride. His final act—getting out of bed to receive the Holy Eucharist for the last time—speaks for itself as to the type of man he was.

Meet The Boys:

Nelson's Brain Sure Beats The Band; The Frosh Feel Hooper's Guiding Hand

By BOB YOUNG

"STEP closer, ladies and gentlemen; step closer to the greatest scientific discovery of the century; the marvelous, mystifying, magnificent machine that manufactures eggs. Through a series of chemical reactions we . . ."

Little children have gazed in wide-eyed amazement, college students have snickered and sneered, adults have wondered a little as they listened to the above speech but they all admitted that "Jen" and his egg-making machine really played a great part in last year's Open House.

But perhaps, dear reader, before divulging further information, I should first introduce J. Eugene Nelson, alias "Jen," "Gene," "Nel," "Buck Rogers," "the baby" or a number of other pet names placed upon him by classmates. Dropped by the stork at 5648 Florence Ave., Philadelphia, on May 25, 1922, Gene still hangs his hat at that residence. Now if you're surprised at his graduating at such a tender age, it's true—I made him prove it, myself!

It seems that he either wants to finish his education in a hurry or he's just too brilliant to be kept in one place very long—and after seeing his scholastic records, we are inclined to agree with the latter supposition.

Gene's whirlwind flight through school started at Longstreth Elementary School at the ripe old age of five years; he continued at Shaw Junior High, West Philly High and after skipping a total of three grades he was ready to enter School of Science at Villanova as a mere child of 16 heading for a B. S. degree in Biology. Since that time he has stood no lower than second in his class.

Photography and aeronautics have been his hobbies and sources of extra-curricular work since high school when he was photographer for the school year book, newspaper, and magazine, and president of the photography and aeronautics clubs. At Villanova he has been taking pictures for the Mendel Bulletin," of which he is now editor, and the Villanova "Engineer" and is a familiar figure behind ball games.

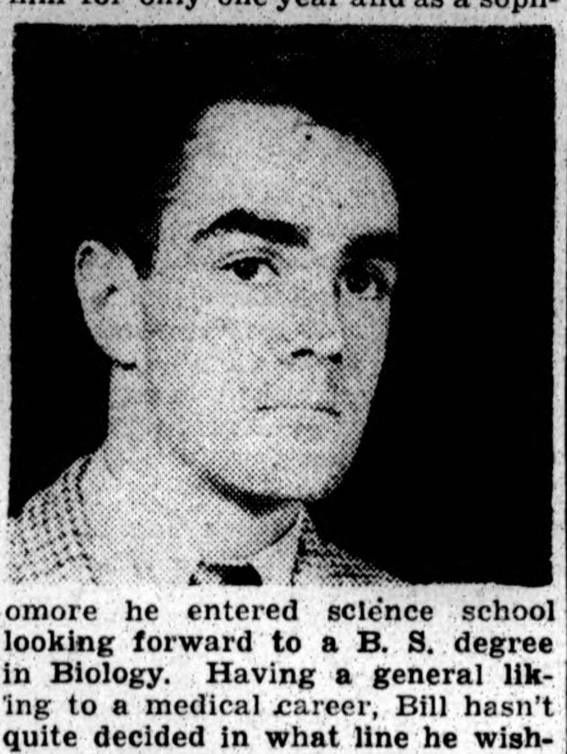
In addition to his interest in things to come, (he's a member of the American Rocket Society), he has also had time to consider scientific problems of the present by occupying the position of chairman of the Research Seminar for the past two years. A member of L. K. D. for the past four years, he was on the initiation committee during his junior year and is now Sergeant-at-Arms of that society.

In regards to social life this beaming personality is non-partisan when it comes to choosing feminine companions, although he did mention that his ideal girl would be attractive, clever, athletic and well-versed in the affairs of the world.

NOW we come to our other fourth year man to be taken over the coals.

William Edward Hooper, Jr., better-known to his friends as just plain Bill, first brought excitement to the household of Mr. William J. Hooper, Sr., in Springfield, Pa., on April 5, 1920. Since that date this shy, handsome gift to the fair sex has caused plenty of excitement in both his home and schools.

Upon entering Villanova, Bill buried himself in the studies of the commerce and finance school. But a business man's vocation attracted him for only one year and as a sophomore he entered science school looking forward to a B. S. degree in Biology. Having a general liking to a medical career, Bill hasn't quite decided in what line he wishes to specialize, but hopes to continue his education in medical school upon graduation next June.



A Tank and Track Man

In regard to sports, we need only to look at his medals and trophies to prove that here is a man who excels at swimming and running. On the swimming team for three years at West Catholic, he was captain in his last year, established the 220-yard freestyle Catholic League record in his third year and bettered it the following term.

During his year at Mercersburg he set a world's record for the 440-yard freestyle.

Starring on Villanova's swimming team in his first two years here, Bill added a few more medals to his collection. But since he was persuaded by "Jumbo" Jim Elliott, track coach, to run indoors in the mile relay team last year, he has forsaken his first love to star for our cinder-churners in the 880 and mile events and plans to try for cross-country racing this year.

For extra-curricular activity Bill was on the Sophomore Cotillion committee, a member of the Orientation Committee and Student Council for three years, chairman of Junior Week last year and finally chairman of the Orientation Committee this term

ODE TO THE Villanovan

(On the beginning of another journalistic year.)

By JOHN P. FULLAM

Once more thy stately portals open
Welcoming thy straggling flock,
And again there come those dopes in
For a quick glance at thy clock.
From now on, each Friday P. M.
Thy serene and peaceful sleep
Will be aided and abetted
By a silence oh, so deep,
Which is shattered, on occasion.
By a "click" and then a "clack,"
As a trial-and-error typist
Crams some classwork, due weeks back.
But on Sat. and Sun. and Monday
Thy machinery doth roar—
Clatter, chatter, smoke, and paper
In the air and on the floor.
Sleepless nights re-reading copy
—Deadline, red line, very soon—
And whenever work's been sloppy,
"Why the ain't it out by noon?"
All this is but half the story,
Half the fun, and half the pain,
But—no time to think of glory;
Deadline's coming round again.
For example, those discussions
("Bull session," I think's the name.)
In "the office" repercussions
Make even dynamite seem tame.
And we should not—nay, we must not,
From this cursory account
Omit those basketball exhibits
Where score, pulses, and old hats mount.
So my young, my beardless freshman,
If you want to reach the top
Of the VILLANOVAN'S mast-head,
Practice up that pivot shot!

WITH the curtain call for a new school year resounding over the dressing room of the VILLANOVAN, this column would inform the Class of '45, a new group in the Main Line campus audience, that herein exchanges from other college publications will constantly be found. A selection of news items will be made to keep in touch with our counterparts in the many institutions of learning of the nation. We are interested in knowing what's being done, when it's being done, and where it's being done . . . in other words, gentlemen, "What's the story?"

Wishful Thinking:

The story this week reverts back to the Sophomore Cotillion. Among other things, we can't help thinking of ways and means of avoiding the unnecessary evils of a dance date. Our thoughts keep wandering to a little poem we saw some time ago, the source of which has been forgotten:

I wish I were a kangeroo,
Despite his funny stances
I'd have a place to put the junk
My girl brings to the dances.

Selective Service Technique:

A unique course is being offered at Dartmouth College this fall called Democratic Thought 1-A. It's for senior only and will trace various component traditions of liberty and freedom from the Hebrew and Greek civilizations.

It's difficult to determine the extent to which the draft will exert its far-reaching influence!

Just For a While:

Poor Little Freshman, he's so sad
All alone without his Dad;
Away from Sis and Mom and Brud
He's as useless as a dud.

Sophomore slave and Senior stooge,
His troubles now will seem quite huge;
From high school hero to college chump,
He'll be a man — with many a bump.

The "dink," the sign, the paddle, too,
Persuade the heartiest . . . even you;
So be a sport and take it all,
Don't be a kid and sulk and bawl.
Perhaps next year, when you're a man
Somebody else's hide you'll tan;
So face the music with a smile
And watch your step . . . just for a while.

—The St. Bona Venture.

Tally Tale:

A local girls' college senior was walking on the promenade of a seaside town when she noticed a weighing machine with the notice: "I speak your weight."

She put a penny in the slot and stood on the platform. A voice answered: "One at a time, please!"

Sir Walter "Harvard":

The editors of the Harvard Crimson hit the national limelight for their gallantry in the recent drought period covering the New England States. It seems that the weatherman's misbehavior forced a ban on tub baths and showers at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, Mass.

According to President Roswell G. Ham, the shortage was serious. (Not related to Ickes.)

The boys immediately wired the girls, "Now, when you feel like girls in the soap ads and when even unwashed Yale men won't come within 10 feet of you, Harvard wants to make friends," and they proceeded to offer their showers to the waterless unfortunates.

P. S.—The girls wired back declining the offer.

Articles on Bonds, Men in Camps Appear; Fr. Stanford Encourages Drive

Highlighting the role the alumni is playing in national defense activity and a Centennial Fund report, the fall issue of the "Villanova Alumnus" made its appearance last Wednesday. For the first time since its inaugural, four years ago, the magazine is being sent to all alumni, including those who are in defense training.

The official poster used by the Defense Savings Board is depicted on the cover and is the theme of the issue. A two-page article is devoted to the purposes and aims of the Defense Savings Plan. An editor's note to this article suggests that donors to the Alumni Centennial Fund make use of the Defense Savings Plan in remitting their contribution, purchasing a bond in the full name of the "Fund."

Discredits Doubts

Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, in an open letter to the alumni lends encouragement to the Centennial Fund Drive and discredits the doubts of a few of the alumni as to the drive's success. Considering the drive as "voluntary and spontaneous," he predicts that the moderate goal set by the "well-organized committee" will be attained. He concludes his letter with the remark, "In reaching the amount you have set as your goal the building up of the alumni morale will be even more precious. . ."

Eugene M. Reiley, '29, chairman of last June's alumni reunion makes his report on the annual affair. Features of the '41 reunion were the President's Dinner, followed by a new innovation, "Villanova Quiz Session."

Featured in the "defense issue" is a list of approximately seventy-five Villanova graduates who are now in the service.

Slaughter Elected

The "Alumnus" also discloses that William G. Slaughter, alumni secretary-treasurer, was elected vice-president of the Association of Alumni Executives of fifty-two liberal arts colleges in Pennsylvania.

Joseph A. Barnes, new sports editor, sums up the football prospects for the coming season. Introducing the alumni to the new crop of sophomores playing their first year on the varsity, Barnes outlines possible strategy to be used this year.

The staff of the "Alumnus" for the coming year includes Edward L. Jonik, '40, former editor of the Belle Air, as editor; Arthur W. Murphy, '40, associate editor, and last year's sports editor of the VILLANOVAN, Joseph A. Barnes, '41, covering sports highlights.

Broadcasters May Give Local Programs

Within a matter of weeks, the Villanova Broadcasting System may have its inception.

Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., moderator, in issuing a call for candidates for membership in the Radio Club, disclosed tentative plans for the broadcasters, as an experiment, to attempt a series of 15-minute newscasts given over a wire from Simpson Hall to O'Dwyer Hall.

If the experiment is successful, and interest is high enough to warrant, the program may become a nightly feature.

Formed last year as a revival of the defunct Broadcasters, the Radio Club welcomes as members all students interested in radio announcing, acting, and presentation. It is not a technical group, but a speech arts organization that gives its members practice at the microphone.

Fr. Vrana requests all past and prospective members to contact him so that a time for the weekly meetings may be set. Tentatively, Wednesdays at 1:00 P. M. in Simpson Hall has been fixed upon; the first meeting will take place tomorrow.

Free To Service Men

Starting with this issue, the VILLANOVAN is presenting each graduate in the nation's service and each student of last year who was drafted with a subscription to the weekly.

School Of Engineering Gains Three New Teachers —

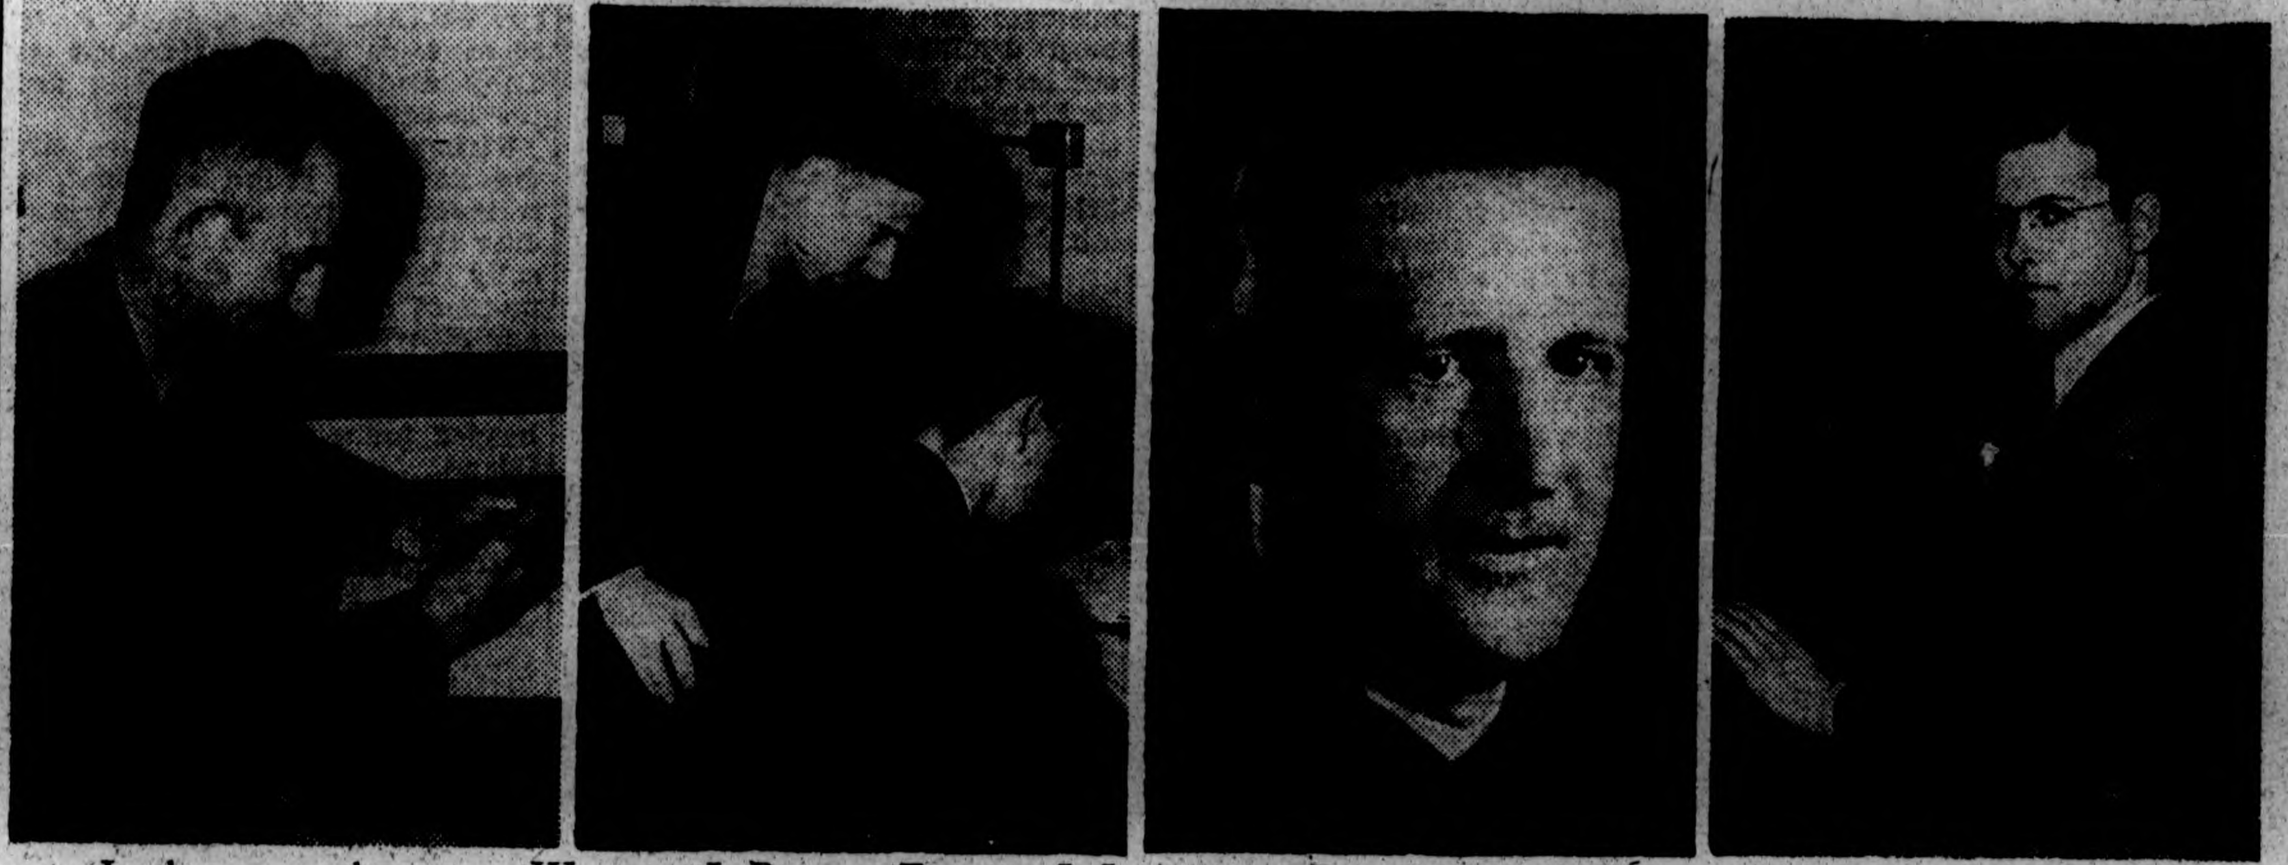
Pix Dates Set

Individual senior pictures for the Belle Air, college yearbook, will be taken next week from Monday, Oct. 13, to Friday, Oct. 17, between 9:00 A. M. and 5:00 P. M. in the Mendel Hall reception room.

As in past years, three different poses will be taken: formal, informal, and in cap and gown. Two pictures will be made of each pose. A schedule of appointments for members of the senior class is being drawn up and will be posted on all bulletin boards on either Wednesday or Thursday of this week.

All seniors will be required to pay a $1.00 fee at the time the pictures are taken. Those who cannot appear at the scheduled hour must report to the Belle Air office, room 51, Mendel Hall, or to one of the yearbook editors. Anyone who fails to do so will have to make his own arrangements to have the pictures taken at Zamsky's Studios in Philadelphia.

As Four Former Faculty Members Leave Villanova For Other Duties



In the same order appear WILLIAM J. BARBER, FRANCIS J. LIMACHER, REV. JEROME A. MAHONEY, O. S. A., and WILLIAM W. HAGGERTY.

Frosh Engineer Program On

Dr. Paul A. Loefflad, college physician, will address the freshman engineering students next Monday, Oct. 13, as the fourth speaker in the current orientation program for freshman engineering students. The title of Dr. Loefflad's talk will be "Your Physical Health."

Previous speakers were Emil Amelotti, assistant professor of mathematics and physics, Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., and Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A.

Purposes of this program are twofold: first semester talks are general in character and are designed to acclimate the students to new surroundings and new methods of study and instruction.

During the second semester, the conferences will be more specialized in an effort to aid the students in the choice of the particular field of engineering which they wish to pursue. The aim here is not to change the student's mind if he has decided on a definite course, but to point out the studies required for various types of engineering and the occupations to which they will lead.

The remaining program for the first semester is: Oct. 20, "Your Mental Health", Dr. William McHugh; Oct. 27, Nov. 3 and 10, "Use of the Library", Rev. Daniel F. Falvey, O. S. A.

Nov. 17, "The Grading System," Paetrus F. Banmiller, college registrar; Nov. 24, "Report Writing", John A. Oakey; Dec. 1, "Music", Dr. Edward L. Haenisch; Dec. 15, "Literature", Rev. John J. McMenamin, O. S. A.; Jan. 5, "Art," Fr. Vrana; and Jan. 12, a specialized employment topic will be discussed by a personal director yet to be appointed.

First Music Seminar Tomorrow Features Tschaikowsky Works

Tomorrow the winter series of Music Seminars will open with a program on "The Music of Tschaikowsky," to be held at 7:30 P. M. in Simpson Hall.

To be given under the direction of Rev. John J. Vrana, O. S. A., this first 1941-'42 seminar will consist of a biographical sketch of the composer and the playing of representative recorded selections of his works.

"The Operetta 'Gondoliers,'" consisting of the entire operetta with libretto and pictures, will be presented at the resident seminar on Wednesday, Oct. 15. Dr. Edward L. Haenisch will direct.

Remaining programs of the winter series, in which Fr. Vrana and Dr. Haenisch will alternate as conductors, will include "The Life and Music of Beethoven," "The Opera 'Aida' Complete," "The Music and Life of Verdi," "From Bach to Boogie-Woogie," "The Music of the Four Strausses," and "Art and Music."

All will be held on Wednesday evenings at 7:30 in Simpson Hall.

Day student seminars, which will be held every Wednesday in the Mendel Amphitheatre from 12:30 to 1:30 P. M., will also begin tomorrow with the featuring of Tschaikowsky's Piano Concerto. Dr. Haenisch will lead all the day-hop music seminars.

High Mass Opens 99th School Year

Fr. Stanford Offers Sacrifice in Chapel, Stresses Need of Spiritual Defense

Stressing the fact that "our spiritual defense must keep a step ahead of our military preparedness if we are to preserve those freedoms which we cherish so highly in this country," Very Rev. Edward V. Stanford, O. S. A., president of the college, officially opened Villanova's 99th scholastic year by celebrating Solemn High Mass before the entire student body in the college chapel on Sept. 22, the feast of St. Thomas of Villanova.

In his welcoming address following the ceremony, Fr. Stanford reminded the students of the grim task which will be theirs in the reconstruction which must follow the present world chaos. "Reconstruction will be laborious and painful," he said. "It will require the exercise of the finest and noblest talents in man. It will demand intelligence and the highest spiritual insight."

For this reason, he told his listeners, they must seize upon every opportunity presented to them for their spiritual, mental, and physical growth. "It is the task of the faculty to stand ready at your side to assist you in unlocking the storehouses of wisdom and knowledge . . . to inspire you to live lives more richly useful and closer to God."

Stating that the members of the faculty are aware of their responsibilities and prepared to meet them, he urged the students "to rise to the full stature of your young manhood and to step out bravely in preparation for the serious burdens which will undoubtedly be the lot of your generation."

Fr. Stanford concluded with the prayer that Villanova students would not be found wanting for the deeply religious spirit so necessary "to give light and peace and hope to man in this sorely troubled world."

Assisting Fr. Stanford in the celebration of the Mass were Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A., newly-appointed vice-president of the college, as deacon, Rev. Edward M. Dwyer, O. S. A., as subdeacon, and Rev. John E. Bresnahan, O. S .A., as Master of Ceremonies. The Augustinian scholastic choir under the direction of Rev. Ralph J. Handran, O. S. A., sang the Mass.

Applications Taken For Membership In Sanctuary Society

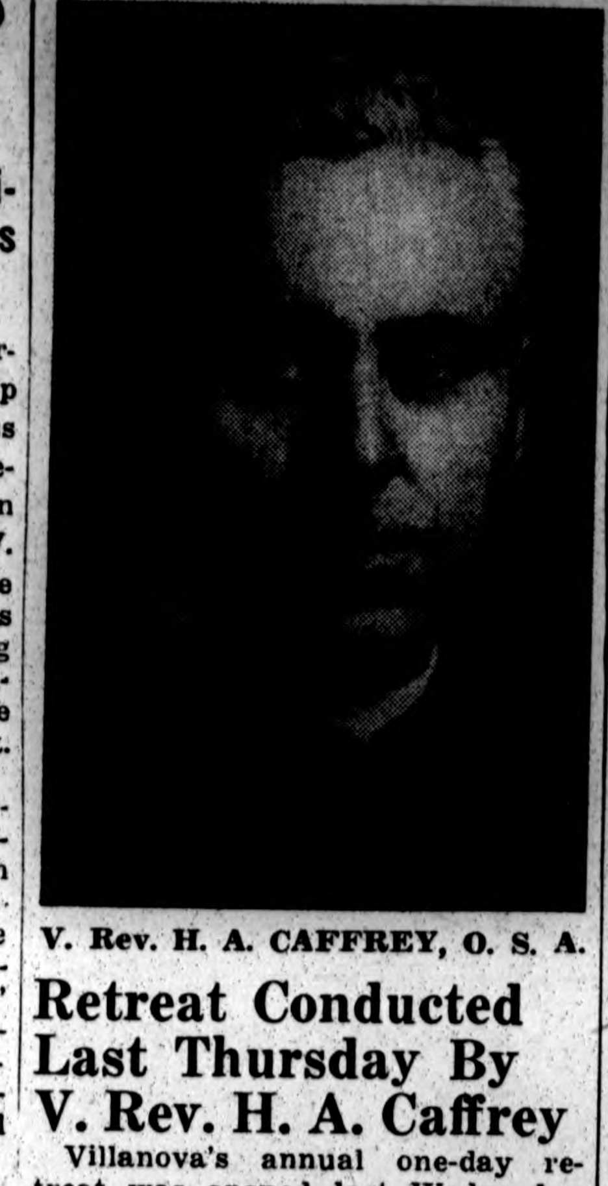
All students who are interested in joining the Sanctuary Society have been urged by Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O. S. A., college chaplain and moderator of that organization, to make application to president Thomas J. McKimmey, secretary William T. Walsh, or to himself.

Purposes of the organization, as outlined by the moderator at a meeting held Wednesday evening, September 24, are: "To enlist the services of as many students as possible in the conducting of the ceremonies at chapel services, to promote greater uniformity in the performance of the Sacred Ceremonies, and to foster a knowledge of the symbolism and ceremonies in the Mass."

New members will, if necessary, be instructed in the proper method of serving Mass and Benediction, and at the end of one month's time will submit to an examination.

A group of 64 students attended the meeting in the college chapel on September 24, the first of the monthly sessions which are held throughout the school year. Vice-president Thomas C. Muraski presided in the absence of president McKimmey. Fr. Boyle gave the members a brief outline of the activity planned for the society during the present scholastic year.

Conducts Retreat



V. Rev. H. A. CAFFREY, O. S. A.

Retreat Conducted Last Thursday By V. Rev. H. A. Caffrey

Villanova's annual one-day retreat was opened last Wednesday evening with a conference conducted by V. Rev. Henry A. Caffrey, O. S. A., in the college chapel.

Fr. Caffrey warned the assembled students not to become so deeply engaged in worldly matters as to neglect their spiritual welfare, stating that they should regard themselves as pilgrims on the journey through life.

Two Masses were celebrated on Thursday morning: one at 7:30 for the residents; the second at 8:45 for the day students.

At the second conference, Fr. Caffrey discussed the virtue of purity. He urged the students to make frequent use of the Sacraments, and gave three suggestions to aid in warding off temptation.

The Sacrament of the Altar was the subject of the third conference. Prefacing his talk with the Biblical quotation, "Labor not for the meat that perishes," Fr. Caffrey reminded the students that just as the body needs food, so does the soul.

Following Stations of the Cross, the fourth and final conference was held. At this time the retreat master told the students to be doers, not merely hearers, of the Word. The conference was concluded with Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

The retreat was brought to a solemn close on Friday morning with the celebration of Mass and bestowal of the Papal Blessing on the students.

Officers Of Holy Name Among Cardinal's Escorts

Officers of the Holy Name Society represented the college in the escort for His Eminence, D. Cardinal Dougherty, Archbishop of Philadelphia, on the occasion of the official opening of the new Chinese Catholic Church in Philadelphia last Sunday.

Members of Holy Name Societies throughout the Archdiocese of Philadelphia united to form a Guard of Honor and Escort for His Eminence on this occasion. The men who represented the college were the new president, John F. Lakovic, vice-president Thomas C. Muraski, and secretary William T. Walsh.

At the annual one-day retreat last Thursday, students were urged to join the society, the purpose of which is to foster devotion to the Holy Name.

Since the ends of the society are purely spiritual, no meetings are found necessary for anyone except the officers.

Wandering Scribe On Trick Tapestry Sights Varied Student Summer Jobs

By BOB McINTYRE

WHILE we were strolling down a particularly dark byway in Philadelphia one evening last summer, a wizened old gentleman, obviously of a mixed Arabian and Levantine ancestry, sidled up to us and proceeded to harangue us with some fast talk about a magic carpet which was "unconditional guaranteed." Being an inveterate "sucker" for any kind of a bargain, and deciding it was an economical way to see America first, we purchased the rug from our swarthy friend and began our super-terrestrial trek.

For want of a better direction, we headed north. Passing over the New York area and looking down, we spotted "Doc" Lyons hard at work in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Thinking we could elicit some information, we swooped down on the Yard (almost getting shot for our pains). As per expectations, "Doc" told us that Joe McCabe was trying to show Sears-Roebuck what should be done with the mail order business and that Logan "Meathead" Phillips was a beachcomber out on the island. He also told us that Andy Melton was a steward at the Babylon Yacht Club and that Jack "Big Deal" Gallagher lugubriously occupied his time as a mortician.

Homeward Bound

Turning the carpet around and almost knocking the fender off a stray cloud, we headed back. Coming in sight of Philly once more, we thought it might be a good idea to see what some of the engineers were doing with their spare-time. In coming down for a landing we almost knocked Charlie King off an electric pole. When things finally became untangled he told us that he didn't usually work up a pole but in one of the power plants of the Philadelphia Electric Company. In response to our question he replied that also working for the PX were "Pooch" Gordon, Tom Husen, Joe Dorsey, and Jack Regan.

Needing a new spark plug or something for the carpet, we glided across the river to the R. C. A. plant in Camden. Here we ran into Bob Simpson, who told us that he was doing defense work and that also doing their bit for Uncle Sam at so much per hour were Tom DeSipin, Joe Gill, Dick Hill, Mal Boyle, Bill Lynch, Jack Myers, and Jack Muench.

From the same source we garnered the valuable information that Ed Hagan was taking a P. G. course in child psychology, in the role of a Philadelphia playground instructor. The latter's classmate, Joe McMahon, spent his working hours as a construction engineer and was in complete charge of all pipe layouts for a defense housing project.

Work gets monotonous even when you are only watching, so we gassed up the magic carpet and headed for the wilds of Atlantic City. Flying over the World's Playground we were immediately attracted by the activity evident around the waters of Absecon. We lost enough altitude to see Jack Enright take third place in the Absecon Island Regatta.

Weekends Build Morale

We turned back to Margate and landed on the beach to spend a few lazy hours with quite a number of our beachcombing buddies. Among them were Charlie Harrison and Tony Anderson weekending from the so-called vital industries.

Tiring of this life of ease (that doesn't even sound sensible), we resumed our travels with a trip out over the broad Atlantic. Amid the salty breezes we discovered two more of our number, Jim Buxeda and Henry Martinez, discussing the past, present, and future glories of Puerto Rico. Both gentlemen were headed for a visit to their beloved Island.

Tinkling bells awakened us one morning a few days later. Investigation proved that it wasn't Santa but two of Bob Hope's Good Humor men, Bud Jones and Johnny DiCarlo. Assisting in the bell tinkling activities was that Bad Humor man, Joe "Scare the Kiddies" Costa who had also gone into the ice cream busniess.

Just to be cosmopolitan we decided to take in the south, including the city of New Orleans. Moth juice was an expensive as gasoline in that section of the country so we were forced to hop a ride on top of an airliner . Among the passengers we spied notorious Bill Kelly. Young William was touring the South as a labor scout for one of our large defense plants. Some job according to Bill.

At any rate when we got to New Orleans we were incarcerated in the gaol for hopping a ride on an airplane. There we spent the remainder of the summer pondering on our own prosaic and listless existence.

AIEE To Send Delegates To Maryland Convention

At the first regular meeting of the A. I. E. E., held on Monday, Sept. 29, William Lynch, chairman, outlined the aims and purposes of the Villanova branch of the organization for the benefit of the junior class electricals, who were attending their first session as members.

The group voted to send representatives to the student convention of the parent group, to be held in the latter part of the month at the University of Maryland. Final plans will be made at the next regular meeting on Oct. 13.

Nominations for the positions of vice-chairman and treasurer were made. Elections will take place in the near future.

Ten Admitted To CPT Course

Civilian Pilot Training, a three-months course in aviation, as a part of the program of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, began last Wednesday with the admittance of ten students to the extensive course.

Students who were admitted to the course have completed at least two years of college or have the equivalent credit. Besides the credit requirement, all have passed the exacting physical examination.

The course consists of extensive training in actual flight and equally complete classes in ground school. Flight training is carried on at the Paoli Airport under the supervision of two government-approved instructors.

At the conclusion of the course in flight training, the ten students will have a total of 35 hours of flying. Part of this time will be with dual instruction and, following a solo flight, they will be permitted to acquire the hours necessary for a private pilot's license.

Ground school will be under the supervision of William G. Driscoll, assistant professor of physics. Running concurrently with flight training, the ground school course will be in session every Monday and Friday evening from 7:30 to 9:00 P. M. A total of 72 hours of ground school training will have been completed by the end of this semester's course.

Upon completion of both courses and passing of government examinations, the students will receive private pilots' licenses. During the past summer course, 14 C. A. A. students successfully completed the course and received their licenses.

Two former C. A. A. students are now in the U. S. Army Air Corps. John J. Parson, last year's Junior Prom chairman, and Robert Dooley, former Belle Masque secretary and stage-manager, are now receiving further instruction at government airports as Flying Cadets.

Literateurs Start

All students interested in contemporary literature are invited to attend this year's initial meeting of the Book Club, to be held this Thursday, Oct. 9, in room 203 Mendel hall at 1:00 P. M.

Activities to be undertaken by the club this year will be discussed, along with the proposal that an award be given to the senior who collects the best personal library in his four years at Villanova.

"We're Going Places"

For the first time, Villanova has chosen from the ranks of its students a 150 lb football coach. Stan Eusko of the Clipper Smith eleven has been forced to the sidelines this season because of a bad injury, and will devote his skillful pigskin knowledge in tutoring the lightweights. Assisting him will be Koproski, another injured Wildcat gridder.

Heavy Tasks Confronting Them, Lightweights Seek League Crown

New Coaches Must Fill the Gaps Before Invading Princeton on Oct. 17

Villanova's "battling bantams" dug in for a series of strenuous conditioning drills this week in preparation for their opener, on October 17, with the Princeton lightweights.

The 150's new coaches, Stan Eusko and Jack Kuproski, both former backs on the Varsity Club are faced with the two-fold responsibility of emulating the record set up by last year's fighting team and the difficult task of replacing the gaps in the line-up due to the departure of such stellar players as: Frank Lombardo, Tony Sachetti, Bill Anderson, Joe Parkins, Charles Urie, George Famigiette, Bill Brown, "Pooch" Gordon, Stan Kazor and Bill Sykes.

Last year's lightweights, after losing two hard-fought opening games, settled down to business and steam-rollered the remaining opponents in one, two, three order, concluding the season with a bang-up victory over the co-league champs of Yale University. Although falling short of the league championship this team not only set up the best record hitherto obtained by a lightweight aggregation, but showed the necessary spirit which distinguishes a championship team from a second-rate team.

Princeton Has Lead

Cornell, Lafayette, Villanova, Penn, Princeton, Rutgers, and Yale are the seven member teams who will be chasing once again the "George Foster Sanford Trophy," donated by the former Rutgers Varsity coach, and of which Yale, Princeton and Rutgers each have a claim. Three legs, one for each year's league leadership are necessary for permanent possession.

Princeton with 2½ legs on the trophy needs only a tie for the title to permanently retire the cup. Rutgers and Yale each have two legs,

Athletic Office Sets Game Prices

Ticket prices for home football games this year will range from sixty cents for general admission to $1.75 for reserved seats at Shibe Park Stadium. Besides the two extremes there will also be a large quantity of seats available at a $1.25 rate. All prices include city, state, and federal taxes.

Games included at these prices are those with Centre, Baylor, Detroit, and Auburn. Thus, using the 60 cent rate, a Villanova patron may attend all home games for only $2.40.

Ticket rates for away from home games vary from a $1.65 minimum for the Manhattan game to a $3.30 tops for the Florida tilt. The October 11th night fray with Florida University at Gainesville, Florida, may be seen from general admission seats for $1.65. Reserved seat prices are $2.50 and $3.30.

As in the past, all seats are reserved for the Temple meeting. Prices are $1.75, $2.28, and $2.85. Student tickets will be $1.14.

The Manhattan game at New York City's Polo Grounds may also be seen from reserved seats only. However, prices are a little more reasonable, the scale being $1.65, $2.20, and $2.75.

Reserved seats for the Duquesne game to be played at Pittsburgh, Pa., will cost $1.75, and $2.25.

Applications for ticket reservations should be sent to Bob Whelan at the Field House Athletic Office. Remittance in full must accompany all applications, both for home and away games. Tickets will be delivered to the purchaser about one week before the game.

Villanova loses one of the best second baseman she had this year. Woody Reitmeier is now a private at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. This would have been Reitmeier's third year at second base.

'Cats Give Challenge To 'Gators

Villanova Gets Scare In Opener But Rallies To Defeat Centre College

Praying Colonels Hold 3-0 Lead at Halftime But Reserve Strength and 'Cat Backs Come Back Strong to Win 38-3; Large Crowd at Shibe Park Sets Opener Attendance

By JACK MAUCH

Before 21,000 fans, largest inaugural crowd in the history of the school, the Villanova Wildcats humbled the "Prayin' Colonels" of Centre College 38-3 at Shibe Park last Saturday night. Trailing 3-0 at the end of the first half the sluggish Wildcats snapped out of their lethargy to inflict the crushing defeat by scoring three touchdowns in each of the last two periods.

A few minutes after the second half started the Blue and White got rolling. Joe Behot returned a punt to Centre's 37. On the first play Joe Pezelski smashed to the 18. Another run by Pezelski, two plunges by Behot and Sal Rosatto put the ball on the two yard line from where Rosatto took it over.

Yednock Punts Nicely

Villanova repeated two minutes later. Chief Yednock, hard-playing right half, punted out on the one yard line. Reid Caudill got off a nice boot from behind his goal out to the 35. Here Jo-Jo Pezelski demonstrated his scat-back prowess by taking the punt and scampering the entire distance to pay dirt.

Fullback Dan Casey scored the next one almost single-handed when he blocked Jack Higgins kick, scooped it up on the 20 and ran over for the score.

Several beautiful off-tackle thrusts by George Smith, who played a fine game all evening, and a pass Pezelski to Hank Christman set up the next score. Smith tallied from the three.

Pritko Races 30 Yards

Clipper's boys, finally warmed to the task and looking like the combinations of old, took the aerial route for No. 5, the most perfect play of the contest. With the ball resting on Centre's 45 Al Postus, flashy soph back, faded and whipped the pigskin to Steve Pritko on the thirty, Pritko ran the remaining distance to the goal. Only the spectacular blocking of Lou DePalo, who took out two men, Joe Yednock, and tackle Bob O'Connor made the score possible.

Wild Bill Prohovich scored the final six-pointer of the evening. A bad pass went over the head of Centre's tailback and Prohovich fell on it in the end zone.

Lou DePalo and Ed Kasky each made one conversion after touchdown. DePalo missed a field goal attempt from the 29 early in the third period when the 'Cats drove from their own 30 yard line. Postus, Ziggy Zamlinski, and Smith were outstanding in this drive.

Haddock Sparks Centre

While the Wildcats couldn't get moving in the first half, the Kentuckyians sparked by Jack Haddock, ace passer, capitalized on every break to make yardage. They made their only score of the game midway in the second quarter when Haddock booted a placement from the nine yard line. The drive which culminated in this score started on their own 45, and was featured by the fine passing of Haddock, who really lived up to advance notices of his aerial ability.

Outside of this score the Southerners never threatened and the half ended with the ball in midfield.

Station WIP Airs Football Battles

Villanova grid fans who are unable to attend games will again be able to follow the Wildcats through the facilities of the broadcasting companies. As in the past few seasons, both home and away games will be aired.

The home frays will emanate over the local Station WIP. Philadelphia's own Byrum Saam will take care of the announcing as in previous years. His experience in handling Wildcat games in former years makes him the number one choice in this department.

The Florida and Duquense road games will be aired over the NBC network of WFIL, and the Manhattan game in New York will be heard over Station WHN. This contest will be handled by the capable Don Dunphy, well-known metropolitan sports announcer.

TO start this 99th year of Villanova off right, we're not going to talk about the Dodgers. But the least that we can do is to rebel against the lingo of our higher colleagues and not call them "Bums." Beloved or not, they're real champions. So too, we denounce those sports writers who play up the folly that Brooklynites call their hero, "Koiby," and that he'll "moider dem." Brooklyn is part of the United States and that bit of colloqualalism isn't typical of the good citizens of Flatbush, Kings and etc.

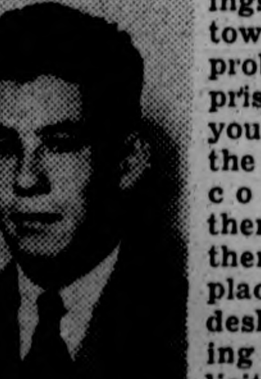
When Mr. Allison Danzig of the Times and Mr. Everitt Morriss of the Tribune came to Villanova these past few weeks to make their reports on doings at Smithtown, they were probably surprised at the young man at the desk who confronted them. Although there was no placard on the desk designating him as publicity director, Mr. James F. Haughton gladly welcomed them into his humble home.



Going back a bit to refresh newcomers, Jim Haughton just a year ago was taking on the airs of a senior on this campus. On the side he punched the typewriter those same twenty-five times a year and out of the keys came the material for his column in this paper.

Jim's ability in writing was a sure-fire success. His rhetoric was smooth flowing and he was a protege of the "Red Smith" type of story.

Well, now, Mr. Haughton, the former Wyoming whirlaway who once had an interview with famed Ann Corio has found his saddle and one which he likes very much. Take a glance at the morning and evening papers and you'll find that Villanova does have a football team out here on the Main Line. Finally, Villanova is coming into her own in the way of proper publicity. It's a man's job and Haughton is the man to do it. Why, we can even see Clipper's face becoming more radiant every day with Jim around!

A "Monday morning" quarterback never finds much to laugh about. He's about the most critical "critter" there is, but without them the world would be too sunny and that's not the way the world goes around. In this instance we inherit that position.

Reversing the procedure though,

Florida Team Well Tested Against Foes

Southerners Crushed Tampa Saturday; Harrison Threat to Blue

By JACK DUDLEY

Following their policy of getting places and seeing the country, Villanova's Wildcats embark on their first trip of the season. The schedule calls for an invasion of the native state of the Florida 'Gators this Saturday night. Despite four defeats at the hands of southern teams while in the South in the past two seasons, Clipper Smith will again lead his boys down there to meet one of the most improved teams in that section.

Last year, for the first time in the history of the school, Florida U. defeated both Georgia and Georgia Tech. Nine members of that first team have returned to give Tom Lieb an outfit which demands respect from its big-name opponents.

Appear Strong

Since no form of practice is as effective as actual combat, the 'Gators are a well tested team; the Villanova game being their fourth of the season. They took Randolph-Macon in the opener, dropped a close 6-0 decision to a great Mississippi State team and last week pounded out a 46 to 6 victory over Tampa University.

To pass over that Mississippi State game without further comment would be to ignore a strong indication of the potential strength of Florida. The 'Gators lost by the small margin of one touchdown to one of the nation's greatest teams. Last week the Maroons conquered Alabama, the preseason southern favorite, 14 to 0.

Harrison Returning

Tommy "Reds" Harrison at left halfback will bother the 'Cats with his passing and running. Milt Hull at tackle, Forest Ferguson, charging end, and Harry Parham, who makes an art of pass defense from his position of line-backing center constitute the backbone of the 'Gators great line.

Villanova's opening game uncovered great offensive power, spontaneous and devastating, coupled with the ability to take advantage of a sudden break.

It isn't likely that weather will be an important factor in Saturday night's game. The Wildcats have been getting a taste of real Southern heat right in their own back yard.

Harriers Begin Cross - Country

This year Villanova opens its track season with the brightest prospects in years. Returning are stalwarts Bill Hooper, and Johnny DiCarlo, along with several other valuable point getters. But, the real battle this year will be for places on the one mile and two mile relay teams. The veterans will see keen competition from a star studded sophomore aggregation consisting of George Guida, "Dixie" Dunbar and "Rapid Robert" O'Sullivan.

At the present time coach Elliott is concentrating on cross-country work to develop endurance, and also to round into shape a cross-country team to represent Villanova in the I. C. A. A. A. A. meets in New York during the coming fall season. A battle for positions will be waged on Wednesday when the entire team will navigate the two and one half mile course around the campus.

Much is expected from Freshman Carl Oerth, last year's winner of the National Public High cross-country title.

Outstanding Freshman material seems to give the "Wildcats" a bright outlook for future years. In addition to Oerth, several local boys are enrolled, Kiley of North Catholic; Rooney, winner of the Penn Invitation 220 hurdles and runner up in the 110 yard distance; McKeon, State Conference Champion in the 220 dash, and last but by no means least is Ed Withem, middle distance champ from Cleveland, Ohio.

Cris Keefer, a member of last year's Frosh team, will assist in managerial duties this year. Senior manager Bill Craven issues a call for all Freshmen interested in becoming managers.

Interesting Jobs Held By Gridders

Summer Positions Ranged From Defense Work to a Junior G-Man

As you watched the Villanova-Centre game Saturday night perhaps you wondered what some of the fellows out there on the field did during the summer while you were perishing with the heat in some office or at some summer resort. Well, we were wondering too, and also thought about it some this summer. So to ease our curiosity and yours we've prepared this brief resume of what occupations held the minds and bodies of our football team, for the past three months.

Our three versatile members, Joe Yednock, Dan Casey, and Mike Kupecki, who play both varsity football and baseball at Villanova followed the baseball circuit to keep in trim for the coming football campaign. "Cosmic Joe" Yednock was playing a lot of third base for Vermont in the Northern League along with "Slugger Dan" Casey who was roving the lef field pasture for Bennington in the same circuit loop, and leading the league in runs batted in and in triples. At the same time Mike Kupecki was catching for Trenton Potteries, batting a cool .340, and fighting his local draft board for a deferment.

Defense workers

In line with Uncle Sam's vast rearmament plan, picture Captain Paul Stenn on the assembly line tackling those big army tanks at Berwick, Pa., Roy Erickson, George Smith and Joe Behot handling the blazing hot sheets of steel at the New York, Keysport, Pa., and Roebling, N. J., steel mills.

The Gulf Refinery employed three of the Wildcat stalwarts Pezelski and Anderson of C & F and Bray of Education as Engineers. What a blow to Mr. Morehouse and Dr. Haenisch .

The most natural picture that could be painted would have been obtained by walking into the Bethlehem Steel Co., or the Delco-Remy Battery Plant at Bloomfield, N. J., for at Bethlehem you'd have seen "Big Boss" Steve Pritko sitting around as foreman and in the next state Tom Morgan also a foreman giving the orders as he hopes to this year in the quarter back position.

But out in Long Island and down in Ocean City Ed Kasky and Sal Rosato were reigning over the bathing beauties as life guards. Two of the varsity ends Elk Murray and Lou DePalo were counselors at Ranger Lodge, a boys camp in Casco, Maine, and at a White Plains, N. Y., playground respectively.

Really getting in shape for another tough season was Bill Prohovich way up in Northern Vermont. He handled the compress drill in a granite quarry. John Nieman was a Junior G-Man in his home town of Baldwin, L. I.

Day Hops Annex Links Tourney

The Intramural Golf Championships were held at the Pennsylvania Golf Club, Frazier, Pa., last Wednesday. Forty entries, representing all teams of the league participated. By taking first place, worth ten points towards the Intramural Championship, the Mendel Dayhops stepped into first place in the standings.

The Dayhops captured first, second and fourth places in the tournament. Ed Tribulas and Bill Powers paced the field with 79 and 87, respectively. Hugh Matthews of Fedigan carded a 90 to cop third place. Mendel Dayhop, Joe Haggerty shot a 91. Vince Gammache of Alumni and Joe Rozum of O'-Dwyer came in with 93 and 94.

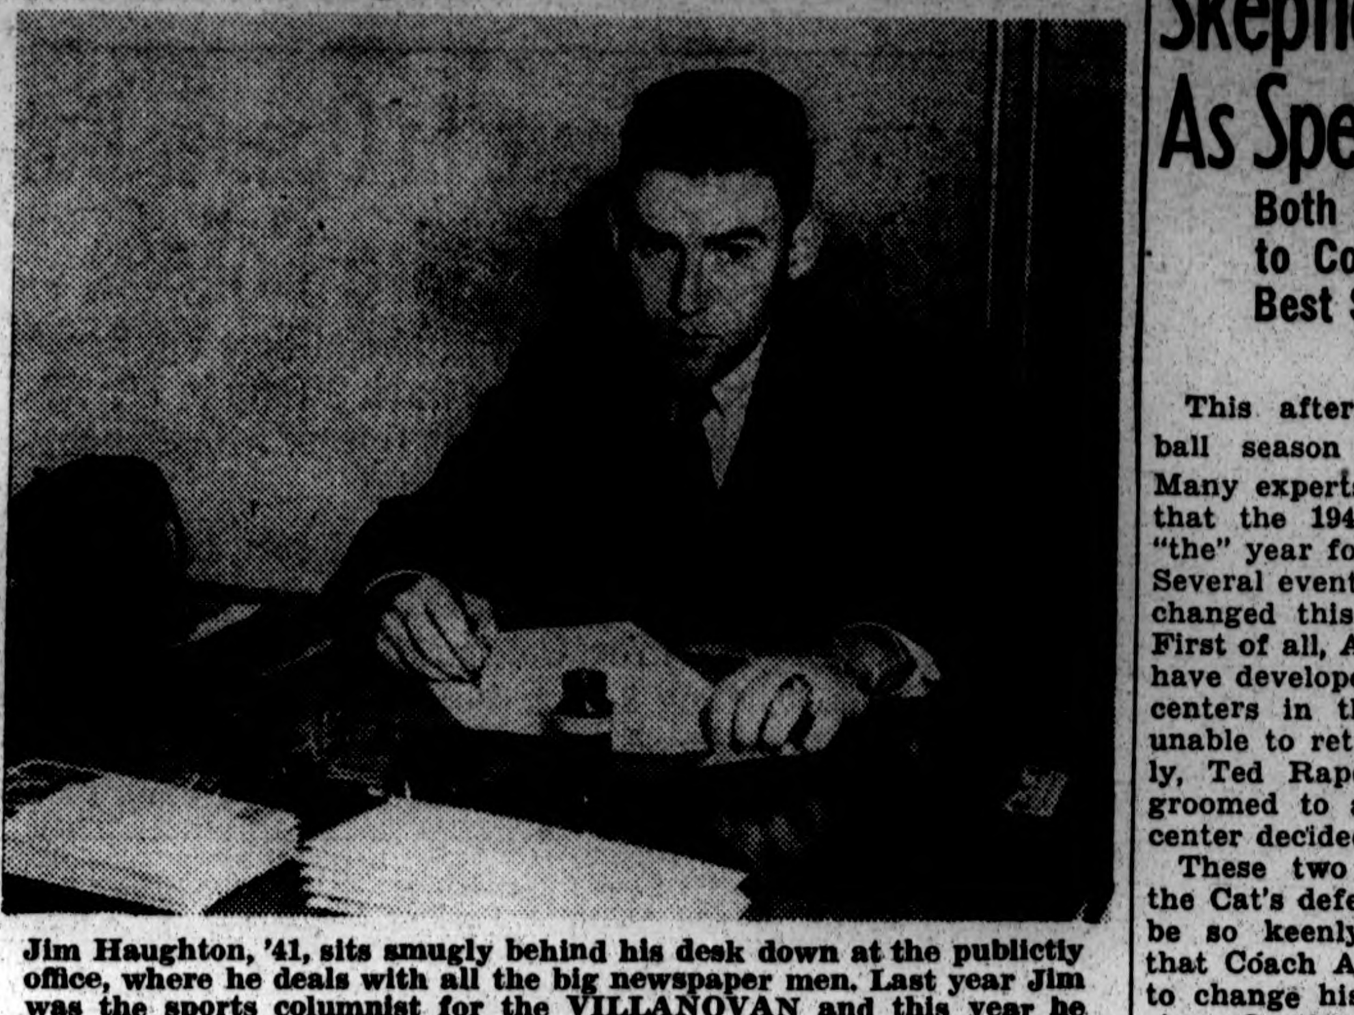
Team scoring was as follows:

Mendel D. H.	10
Fedigan	7
Alumni	5
Austin	3
C. & F.	2
Mendel Res.	1

Tennis Finals

One of the biggest Intramural tournaments yet staged is the tennis Championships, still in progress. The tournament has not yet reached the point of crowning champions of the individual teams. By next week the finals should be on. Austin hall is defending its tennis Championship it won last year through its great star, George McFadden, who is now a member of the varsity tennis team.

Mr. Haughton Turns Executive



Jim Haughton, '41, sits smugly behind his desk down at the publictly office, where he deals with all the big newspaper men. Last year Jim was the sports columnist for the VILLANOVAN and this year he stepped into the role of publicity director for the athletic department. Watch the presses go now!

'45 Team Tied By Bordentown

Villanova's Freshmen gridders kept a four-year undefeated slate intact Saturday, but the best they could do was to battle to a scoreless tie against Bordentown Military Institute at Bordentown.

Playing the game for the most part in the Cadet's territory, the Wildcat offensive went to pieces each time they were in striking distance. Even in the last quarter when Villanova brought the ball to the 4-yard line a fumble ruined their chances to go ahead.

Probably so used to playing defensive ball against the varsity, the frosh running and passing attack was quite inferior and the best they could do was to play a good defensive ball game.

Bordentown only threatened to score once. That came on the second play of the game when a completed pass was good for 45 yards deep into Villanova's scoring region.

Absent from the coaching lines was the Frosh coach, Doc Jacobs, who was scouting Florida for the Wildcats.

Skepticism Marks First Court Drill As Spector And Rapella Are Lost

Both Students Fail to Return to School Causing Gloom to Coach Severance; Wildcats Will Tackle One of the Best Schedules in Their History

By JACK COLEMAN

This afternoon another basketball season starts at Villanova. Many experts predicted last spring that the 1941-42 season would be "the" year for the Wildcat Quintet. Several events since that time have changed this outlook considerably. First of all, Art Spector, who would have developed into one of the best centers in the college ranks was unable to return this fall. Secondly, Ted Rapella, who was being groomed to alternate with Art at center decided to remain at his job.

These two were big factors in the Cat's defense last year and will be so keenly missed this season that Coach Al Severance will have to change his offensive and defensive. On the offensive the Cats will have to keep control of the ball till they are certain of a shot. The defense is still Coach Severance's big nightmare—how to get the ball off the backboard?

Many Problems

Several large "if's" hold the key the problem. Can Fred Gerland come through and play the kind of ball that was expected of him? Could either Joe Lord or Herm Drizen switch to the center post and hold up under some of the punishment that Spector took during the last campaign? These problems give Mr. Severance a very gloomy outlook on the season.

With the return of Bill Woods, Dick Gray, Villanova's sixth man, Bob Kelty, Fred Gerland and such stellar ex-frosh as Joe Lord, "Reds" Klotz, Herm Drizen, and Jim Finnigan, the Cats will be well-stocked with guards and forwards.

New Entries

According to Coach Severance, every minute of the months pre-season training wil be utilized for their opening games with Loyola of Baltimore, and a very tough St. Francis of Brooklyn team on December 5th and 6th, respectively.

Several new entries on the '41-'42 schedule tend to make it a heavier pull for the Cats. Colgate, William and Mary, Brooklyn College, St. Francis of Brooklyn, Waynesberg, and Westminster were not played last year. Tenative games with Bradley Tech, Butler, Manhattan, and Duquesne, if arranged, would give the college one of its toughest schedule in years.

Villanova again will come up with one of its excellent freshman teams, led by Don Duffy, winner of All-State honors from Ohio; Louis Reynolds, star of West Chester High; Tom Dunleavy, of St. Joseph's and Brown Prep fame; and "Dutch" Sivertsen, star of the State Championship Lower Merion team. The Frosh schedule as in previous years will not be drawn up until a later date.

Nowak And Howlett Get Coaching Posts

Walt Nowak, '40, graduate of Villanova, has recently been appointed to the position of assistant football coach at Camden High School. Coming to Villanova from this same school, he quickly displayed his prowess as a downfield blocker, and in his senior year at the college was chosen unanimously by Philadelphia sports writers as the best blocking end in the East.

Another ex-Villanovan to achieve success in the football world is John (Buzz) Howlett, '40, who has been named assistant coach of football and head track coach at Northeast Catholic High School.

Future Opponents Are Impressive

Villanova's future gridiron foes made very good showings in Saturday's games and came up with a .857 average. Six opponents won and one lost. The only unfortunate was Auburn. The Plainsmen were crushed by the mighty Green Wave of Tulane, 32-0.

The largest score was registered by the Detroit Titans who smothered a weak Wayne University team 54-0. But the most impressive showings were made by Florida and Temple. The Gators, Villanova's next opponent, after losing a heartbreaker the week before to powerful Mississippi State, trounced Tampa University by a 46-6 score. This bodes no good for the Wildcats and they can expect plenty of trouble from the Florida club next week-end. The Owls of Temple still going strong, rolled over a good V. M. I. team last Friday night, 28-13.

The other winning opponents were Manhattan and Duquesne, who beat George Washington and Tulsa respectively. These two teams meet each other next week.

Next week's schedule:

Manhattan	Duquesne
Temple	Georgetown
Detroit	Cent. St. T.
Auburn	La. Tech.

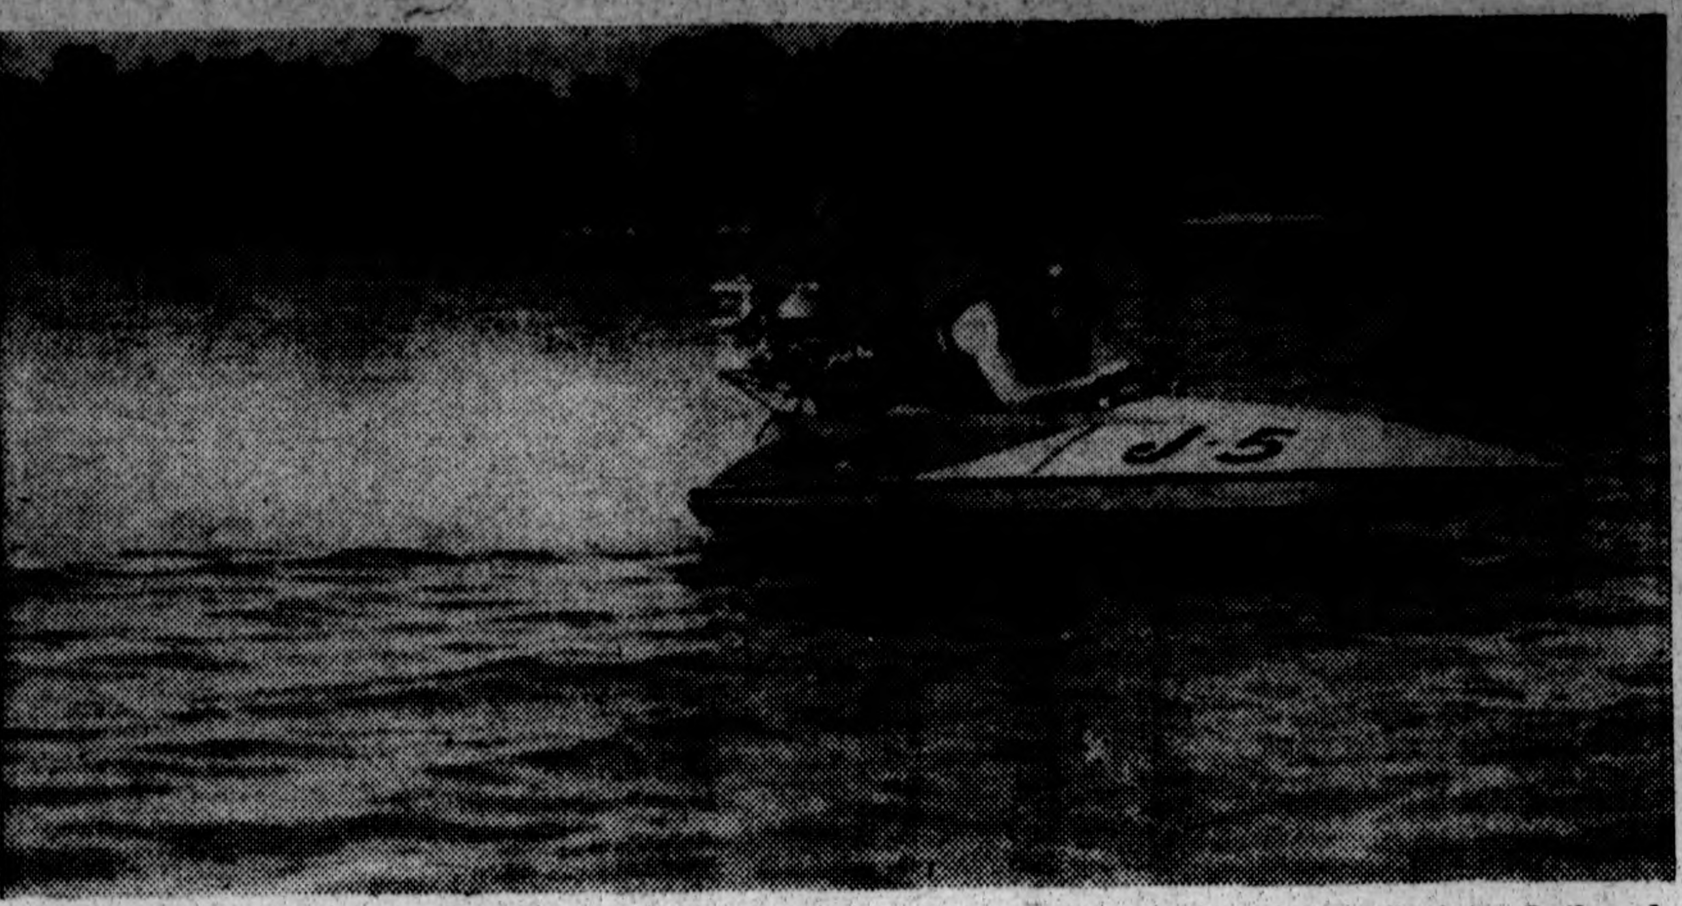
Frank Desmond And His "Drastic Stuff"



Shown above is Frank Desmond as he captured his second straight Eastern Intercollegiate Outboard Championship last June. Desmond, now in his Junoi r year, holds seven other outboard titles in addition to the Intercollegiate crown.

Wildcat Teams Average .720

Coach Al Severance's basketball team headed the other athletic groups in the ratio of games won to games played for the 1940-41 season. The Severance quintet won thirteen of their sixteen games, finishing with an average of .806.

The school record for the season showed Villanova teams victorious in 45 out of 69 competitive struggles, for a .720 percentage.

The baseball nine ran second, winning 16 out of 21 games for an average of .752, and the golf team placed third, averaging .750, by winning 6 out of 8 matches.

Tennis and track were tied for fourth place, with the average of .500, the tennis team winning 4 out of 8, and the track 2 out of 4.

Usually a top winner in the past, the football squad hit a new low in the Clipper Smith regime by losing five of the nine games played. The grid 'Cats lost to Temple, Dusquesne, Baylor, Detroit, and Auburn, while defeating P. M. C., Manhattan, Florida and Kansas.

Holding the cellar spot without recording a single win was the swimming team. In their three meets they were the losers.

we'll say right from the beginning that blocking in the Centre game the other night was good. Not in all spots but at the times when it was in demand. Lou DePalo, the sophomore end, Joe Behot, signal caller, Steve Pritko, at the other end position and Joe Yednock, the propagandized "cosmic" kid gave that record-shattering crowd a good demonstration of those knifing blocks which just cut the Colonels down. The sixty cent fans go wild for that and it is good football.

As far as that first half went, you can throw it out of the books. Between halves the eminent sports writers of Philadelphia had their handkerchiefs out for Villanova and their typewriters seemed to stop functioning. It was certainly a poor display of football but as the saying goes, you might as well get all the bad out of you in the beginning. So it was true, for Villanova came rebounding back in the second half and half-way consoled her funny or strange adherents. Call them what you will.

Desmond Retains National Crown Sweeping Twenty Outboard Races

By JIM NUNEMAKER

Establishing a new record of winning the Eastern Intercollegiate Outboard Championships twice in a row, Frank Demond brought laurels back to Villanova for another year. Desmond is a member of the Junior class of the Commerce and Finance school. The victory was in Class A and B along the individual scoring of points. He set a new record as the only contestant to win the Eastern Intercollegiate classic two years in succession.

In 36 races entered, Frank came through with 20 first places; the following is a chart of his victories:

	Class A	Class B	Class C
Races	14	14	8
Won	7	12	1

Wins in Canada

Returning to his hometown, Red Bank, N. J., early in July, Frank won the National Sweepstakes in Class A and B. After winning many honors in the United States he decided to enter Canadian competition and in so doing he won the Canadian Outboard Championship at Valleyfield, Quebec. In this race he set a record of 51.5 average miles per hour in Class B.

Frank's record this year shows 20 first places, 7 second places, 2 third places, 3 fourth places and 1 sixth place, while three times he did not finish. This is truly a great and commendable record for such a representative of Villanova.

Desmond's success story is not a smooth flowing chronology. He didn't go speeding along, winning every race without any trouble. True, he didn't take any spills, nor did he have any engine trouble during the entire season, but that was due to his ability as a first-class driver. However, he had competition and plenty of it!

Meets Stiff Competition

Witness his feat in the Lipton Trophy regatta in Philadelphia in which he finished third to two of the outstanding professional racers in the country. In this meet the highest point winner of the whole regatta receives the six thousand dollar trophy. In an attempt to garner extra points Desmond entered a Class C boat (about a 45 hp. engine), in a Class F event (boats with 60 hp. engines). Although he was beaten by a few of the boats, he made a commendable showing and managed to take one of the places.

Other races in which Frank competed in this year were the South Jersey Championships, Eastern Championships, National Outboard Championships, and the Ocean City (N. J.) races.

He Awaits Title

Announcement of the National Amateur Outboard Champion has not yet been made, but Desmond has a very strong chance to win the title. This award is made to the amateur who has compiled the highest number of points for one season. In one regatta alone this year at Geneva, N. Y., in the state amateur championships, Frank scored 1625 points out of a possible 2400. Achievements like this throughout the season place Frank high among the outstanding racers of the country, and if he wins the title he will have truly deserved it.

HERE AND THERE

By FRED CLARK

CLIPPER let the cat out of the bag Saturday night for all to see, but the 22,000 fans who thronged to Shibe Park to witness this event are still in a quandry as to the characteristics and fighting ability of the feline. For it seems that this particular Cat is the owner of a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde complex. During the first half of the game with the Prayin' Colonels of Centre College, a faint purr was about the only sign of life shown by the Cat.

Whatever Clipper fed his "pet" between halves must have been a strong potion, for, once the whistle blew for the start of the latter half of the contest, the heretofore mild and lifeless Cat suddenly was transformed into a vicious, clawing Wildcat. Once the taste of blood, he struck suddenly and deftly and only the hands of the huge clock could put a stop to the carnage.

Unusual Heat

When it was all over the Cat had entered pay dirt six times and amassed 38 points in one half, or more than a point a minute. That is really racking 'em up, but what about that first half? Villanova crammed med as much poor football into the first thirty minutes of play as they did sensational football into the last thirty minutes. Maybe it was overconfidence or the unusual heat or maybe the yellow-clad visitors from the blue grass region were still smarting from that 35-6 rout the Wildcats inflicted on them a few years back and hell-bent for revenge.

At any rate the southerners played their heads off and hearts out from the very beginning of the game to the final whistle and with their sensational backfield ace, Jack Haddock, playing a whale of a game (sounds like a fish story), left the field at the half time with the score reading3to 0 in their favor. If nothing else, this first part of the game showed that the Villanvoa pass defense was far from impregnable and no doubt the team will put plenty of work and time on this phase of their game during the ensuing weeks.

Team of Opportunists

A lack of capable reserves on the small Centre squad plus a rejuvenated Wildcat turned the affair into a rout in the second half and placed smiles on the faces of Wildcat rooters. Here was the devastating blocking that turns an ordinary pass play into a touchdown jaunt. Al Postus passed to Pritko who ran half the length of the field for six points because his mates applied perfect blocks on would-be tacklers.

"Bull Moose" Nieman As Comic Strip Character Plays Best When Mad

Out on the cleat-ridden turf, a massive red-headed tackle is on the jaunt. Powerful in stature, he slices in for the tackle, grins, and then picks himself up. Then out of the stillness comes the bellowing roar of the Clipper.

"Nice going, John."

"Bull Moose" grins again, a smile of achievement. But that's not the whole story for the red-head. The next play he throws a block, a good substantial one, but one that might differ from the opinion of a referee. Out of the stillness comes a sarcastic cry.

"Nieman, get out!"

And that seems to paint the picture. It's the ups and downs for Johnny Nieman, '42, or "Bull Moose," '42. The Bull gets his day every so often and that's when he's mad. Just take that Duquesne game of last year for example.

The Dukes had just scored in that dusky twilight and that peeved Nieman. A few minutes later they got the pigskin again and Bull rip-snorted through the line for three plays in a row and pulled the fleet back down, handing them a minus twenty yards for their offensive. That was his day and the Clipper highly approved of such action.

Turnabout is fair play so we'll give the other angle of the picture. A few weeks ago, Bull defied the sacred tradition of linemen not going past the line of scrimmage and into the secondary on pass plays. Now he realizes.

Clipper was mad about it and Vince was mad about it, but things do pass and the Bull was reinstated. Now his intentions are packed with reiterations that he's going to play some real football this year as he has in the past.

Nieman hails from just a little west of the little old city, New York. Out on the island, in Baldwin, the red-head makes his dwelling, and first picked up his knowledge of football. Two scholarships, one from Temple and the other from Villanova, came after a brilliant football career in Chaminade Catholic. You never hear of Tomasic and Nieman as teammates so the logical conclusion is that they're enemies on the pigskin battlefield.

"Bull Moose" is quite the antithesis of the name John, but that came about during his sophomore year here. Bull registered the high score on a pressure machine, which the gridmen took workouts on. Thus the name came along at a time when a certain comic strip portrayed a powerful man called by that name.

Our Mr. Nieman is busily engaged in pursuing a Bachelor of Science degree in Biology on the side and hopes to enter Dental school.

'Cats a "Dark Horse"

The Rutgers News Service, in "doping" relative strength of the 150-lb. teams, chooses Yale, Penn and Cornell as the "teams to beat," and places Villanova in the "dark horse" class due to our last year's "last-minute rush." The News Service goes on to predict that Cornell's erratic sophomores may settle down to be this year's "spoiler."

With only last year's sparkplug Tony Peruta at quarterback, Swede Donoghue and Jack MacManus in the halfback slots the vacant fullback spot should be amply filled by a newcomer to the squad, Nick Scallzetti. On the line at the ends we have returning Bill Menseck, Chester Czarnecki, Sid Caplan, Joe McGovern, Bill Newell, and Tommy Lyons, at the tackle position, Logan Phillips and Joe Carbine and with Charles Marchese returning at center, the 150-lb. team will not be lacking in experienced players and the first glimpses of the newcomers in action yields a promising outlook for a top-notch season.

"We Pick Winners"

In tune with the current trend among newspapers, The VILLANOVAN introduces its own survey of probable football winners. Claiming no clairvoyant powers, our board of experts, including coaches, various heads of departments, and writers, here submit their personal opinion concerning what will happen on fifteen gridirons next Saturday.

Press Apostolate Gains New Life

Catholic Action Activity Revived Through Efforts of Fr. McKee, Robert Canfield

After a few years of inactivity, the Catholic Press Apostolate is being revived to its former influence on the campus through the efforts of its moderator, Rev. Edward B. McKee, O. S. A.

Present plans of the organization, under the direction of president Robert T. Canfield, junior commerce student, call for the installation of seven pamphlet racks to be conveniently placed in various campus buildings. Racks have already been placed in Mendel Hall, the dining hall, and the chapel.

Treating of such current topics as economic and political questions, besides those of a purely religious character, these pamphlets are intended to answer a long-felt need for adequate information from the Catholic viewpoint on modern world problems.

The Apostolate, dedicated to the spreading of Catholic doctrine through the distribution of these inexpensive pamphlets, endeavors to carry out the repeated pleas of the Holy Father, urging Catholic youth, particularly college students, to take part in some phase of Catholic Action.

For the past several years, Fr. McKee has been gathering experience in the use of pamphlets, magazines, and other Catholic periodicals, as aids to education.

In explaining the purpose of his group, Fr. McKee stated that, "In recognizing the serious inroads on public opinion which modern types of anti-American and anti-Catholic propaganda have made in recent years, we believe that the use of these leaflets will clarify for the students many of the puzzling moral and political issues with which they are confronted."

Students availing themselves of this opportunity to learn to view modern problems in the Catholic perspective are asked to place a donation in the box provided for that purpose in each of the pamphlet racks.

Improvements

ception of two, which lined the eliminated road from Austin Hall to Lancaster Pike have been transplanted to border the new road extending to Ithan Avenue. The two remaining trees have remained untouched, since they were planted in their present position for experimental purposes. The former road has been dug up, graded and seeded.

The landscaping in front of the chapel has been changed with the planting of several evergreen trees and a large blue spruce tree. Leveling and re-seeding of the grounds about O'Dwyer Hall were also included in the landscaping program.

Fedigan and O'Dwyer Halls were the only two dormitories to be included in the development program. Fedigan was completely repainted inside. Instead of using one color through out all the rooms, each room has been painted an individual color. O'Dwyer Hall, acquired by the college last summer, is undergoing an extensive renovation which has not yet been fully completed. The hall has been repainted inside and modernly furnished, and the surrounding grounds have been graded and planted. The new hall provides accomodations for twenty.

New tubular chairs have been provided for the college dining hall and a new ice machine has been installed in the kitchen.

"Mi, Mi, Mi"

Try-Outs for Glee Club Produce Results — of More Than One Kind

It wasn't frosh orientation, though it seemed just as embarrassing.

Upper-classmen were bustling officiously about the C. & F. auditorium. Fidgety, perspiring freshmen came reluctantly forward, and —shades of room 215—began to sing!

"Do, re, mi, fah, sol, la, ti, do-o-o," they quavered. Then they went through it again, an octave higher this time.

"I don't think I'm a tenor, Father," one faltered. "How about trying me as a baritone?"

You guessed it. Applicants were being auditioned for the Choral Society. And it really was a try-out. After they had been placed in the ranks either of the "tenori" or the "bassi," the red-faced, sheepishly-grinning vocalists were made to back up to the piano and sing whatever note Fr. Handran chose to plunk. Or at least, to try.

Some of them did pretty well—some of them. Then, of course, there were those who sang the same old down-in-the-cellar "do" even when the pianist was high up among the twitter-notes.

Now, in order that you may understand the results of the tryouts, let it be known: (a) that the membership is rigidly limited to 40 men; (b) that there are almost 30 of last year's members still enrolled; and (c) that over 30 new applicants tried out.

Hence, it is not at all strange that comparatively few of the new men, after reading the list of accepted members a few days ago were able to throw their hats in the air and shout, "Rosemont, here I come!"

And they might reasonably be allowed a feeling of pride at their accomplishment, for less than half of the applicants are still warbling, "Do, re, mi, fah, sol, la, ti, do-o-!"

Job Registration To Start December 1

Registration in the Placement Service, usually held in April, has been moved up to Dec. 1, this year. The service, under the direction of William G. Slaughter, is open to all seniors who desire its services.

The placement bureau has been formed to co-ordinate the attempts of Villanova graduates to obtain employment and of employers to obtain the services of the graduates. During the past year, Bethlehem Steel, Seagram Distilleries, R .C. A., and the Philadelphia Electric Co. were among the concerns sending representatives to the college. Students who have registered with the bureau are given the opportunity to be interviewed by the various representatives if they have the necessary training for the positions.

During the summer months many calls were received by the service but it was impossible to fill the many requests for graduates because of the lack of names in the registry. Expecting a similar demand this year, Slaughter has moved up the date

Sophs Entertain At Fall Dance

Class of '44 Opens Social Season with Traditional Cotillion

Villanova's Class of '44 opened its social career in the Field House on Friday evening when it presented the annual Sophomore Cotillion to a capacity audience.

Featured in the coming-out were Rev. Francis X. Boyle, class moderator, the dance committee, headed by Austin Gavin, and the revamped Villanovans, with redheaded Joe McEvoy handling the vocals.

AUGUSTINE GAVIN

Hampered by a late start, the committee nevertheless made arrangements with both Immaculata and Rosemont Colleges for tea dances to be held for the benefit of socially-minded frosh.

Rosemont presented its informal affair on Friday, Sept. 26, and Immaculata entertained the next day.

The dance itself was held on an oppressively hot evening. The threat of rain earlier in the day had changed to humidity and the overcast sky held no cooling breezes. In spite of the heat and the large crowd, however, the spacious Field House was not too uncomfortable.

True enough, many couples stepped out "for a breath of air," but then the boys might have been showing their dates the new roads, all of which would come under the heading of campus pride.

Although the official figures have not yet been released, impartial observers remarked that the crowd rivalled that of last year, when the Centennial Class sponsored the most successful cotillion in history.

Dugan Hopeful

L. K. D. President Expresses Confidence for Successful Year, Welcomes Suggestions

Robert Dugan, president of the Lambda Kappa Delta, science school fraternity, will officially open the fraternal year 1941-'42 at a meeting to be held this week. Speaking for all the brothers Scientific, he has expressed high hopes for a successful year and commented that the sign on the presidential door reads, "Open for suggestions."

Vacancies created by graduating members number approximately 25. "This will allow the induction of many science freshmen this fall, which process will be done with scientific thoroughness," Dugan said.

For the present, the society will devote all its energies to the formulation of plans for the annual dance, scheduled for Friday evening, October 31. The committee in charge of this affair will be appointed at the first meeting. This is one of the biggest events on the fraternity's calendar, and will mark the freshmen's first participation in fraternity affairs.

The new members will be initiated February 16. Many suggestions for further activities are being considered. A bowling league and special research-discussion group are the strongest possibilities along this line.

Frosh Introduced At Annual PKP Smoker

First formal meeting of the Phi Kappa Pi, engineering fraternity, was its annual smoker, held last night in the C. & F. auditorium. The primary purpose of the affair was to acquaint the freshmen with the upperclassmen and members of the faculty.

Last night's program of talks by faculty members, music, and refreshments was arranged by a group of students appointed by Vincent J. Gordon, senior mechanical and president of the organization.

Rev. John S. O'Leary, O .S. A., moderator of the fraternity, gave the principal address of the evening. Although several members of the faculty could not attend because of defense training courses, the new teachers were introduced, as were past presidents of the fraternity. A great number of the alumni were present as guests.

Book Donations Increase Library

College librarian Rev. Daniel J. Falvey, O. S. A., announced last week that a large number of books were acquired by the library during the summer months. Many of the volumes were purchased by the college, donations accounting for the remainder.

Rev. Gregory Pulgar, of St. Nicholas' parish in the Bronx, N. Y., contributed several rare editions. Other donors included the Rev. John Barthouski, O. S. A., pastor of St. Augustine's Church in Philadelphia, who gave volumes on historical topics and apologetics, and assistant professor William Slavin, who presented books on mathematics and physics.

Among other new issues acquired by the college are: "Immigration and Conquest," by Harry H. Laughlin; "What Reading Does to People," Douglas Waples; "The Library in the School," Lucile F. Fargo; "Acquisition and Cataloguing of Books," realeased by the U. of Chicago School of Library Science; "Ignatius Loyola," by Robert Harvey.

"Mr. House of Texas," Arthur D. Howden Smith; "Choose and Use Your College," Gus E. Snavely; "The Red Decade," Eugene Lyons; "Barrie, the Story of J. M .B.," Denis Mackail; "A Preface to Life," Fr. James, O. M. Cap.; "God and Philosophy," Etienne Gilson; "Fundamentals of General Psychology," John Frederick Dashiell.

"Tin Pan Alley," Isaac Goldberg; "The New Criticism," John Crowe Ransom; "This War Is the Passion," Frances Caryll Houselander; "Restoration Verse, 1660-1715," William Kerr; "A History of Western Civilization," Arthur P. Watts.

"Benjamin Garver Lamme, Engineer," an autobiography; "Oxford Companion to American Literature," in four volumes; "Experiments in Organic Chemistry," Lucius Junius Desha and Larkin Hundley Farinholt; and "Fundamentals of Physical Chemistry," Earl C .H. Davies.

Smith To Head Ring Committee

Junior Class President Also Announces Appointment of Six Committee Members

Eugene Smith, commerce student, has been appointed chairman of the junior class Ring Committee, William Walpole, class president, announced today.

EUGENE P. SMITH

Other committee members chosen by Walpole to assist Smith are: Joseph McNeilly, and James Donnelly, of the School of Engineering; Joseph Mahoney, artsman; Andrew Macchia and Anthony DiBenedetto, science students; and Louis Block, of the C & F School.

Smith, a member of the business staff of the VILLANOVAN, Delta Pi Epsilon, and one of the managers of the 150 lb. football team, thus becomes the first of many committee chairmen to be appointed by Walpole this year.

This committee will receive prices from various jewelry companies, and award the ring contract to the firm making the best offer as to quality and value. Orders will be taken as soon as the contract has been placed.

Smith, upon learning of his appointment, warned students that there may be a slight rise in ring prices over those quoted last year, because of an increase in the cost of the stones used.

Classes Resume

Evening and Saturday Schools Open; 81 Receive Degrees at Summer Commencement

Opening sessions of the Villanova College Evening School were held September 29 at Hallahan High School, 19th and Wood Sts., Phila. The Saturday School, which will be conducted both on the campus and at Hallahan, resumed classes last week.

The Evening Session has achieved rapid growth, as evidenced by the fact that since its inaugural in 1928 the enrollment has almost trebled. Courses are offered in accounting, general business, and nursing education. These classes are conducted for the benefit of regular students who wish to obtain a diploma in Commerce and Finance or who are pursuing courses leading to degrees of Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science in Economics, and for special students who seek higher education. Classes are held on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday evenings.

The Saturday School at Hallahan offers courses in education, English, history, Greek, Latin, library science, mathematics, nursing education, philosophy, political science, psychology, religion, sociology, and modern languages. The courses offered at Villanova are biology, chemistry, and physics.

Students who wish to attend evening classes must register by October 16, and those who expect to enroll in the Saturday session must do so by October 11.

Eighty-one students received degrees at the commencement exercises of the summer session on August 9. There was a total enrollment in this school of 1106 persons, and the curriculum included 142 courses.

N. Y. A. Student Aid Reduced One-Third

Appropriations made by the National Youth Administration to the college have been reduced one-third this year, according to an announcement of William G. Slaughter, N. Y. A. director at Villanova.

This means that only 62 students, 31 less than last year, will receive governmental aid. Reduced appropriations in accordance with the national administration's policy of cutting down all non-defense expenditures have reduced N. Y. A. allotments at many colleges.

Registration cards were filled out last year by students desiring aid, and part-time positions have been granted to the most worthy candidates, as determined from the information contained on the cards.

Seventy-One Graduates Reported In Services; Many Are Officers

Seventy-one of Villanova's alumni have been reported to William G. Slaughter, secretary-treasurer of the Alumni Association, as being in the United States Army, Navy or Marines.

This list is not as yet complete, since the Villanova Clubs of the country, which report the names, have been inactive during the summer months.

The fall issue of the "Alumnus" lists the names of these graduates, and their service addresses. Several of the alumni now in service were graduated before the beginning of World War I.

In the Carolinas

From the class of '41, John Bader is serving at Fort Croft, S. C. Gordon J. Brosmer, last year's chairman of the Belle Air Ball, is stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C. In the Naval Reserve from the same class is Daniel J. Keating, while Robert Mentzinger is now in the Marines.

Thomas L. Winterbottom, '41, is a baker at Camp Lee, Va. At the same camp is Vincent Murphy, also '41.

Of the preceding class, that of 1940, five are in the U. S. Air Corps, eight in the regular army and one in the Navy. Austin Bradshaw, Joseph B. Christoph, J. Bradley McManus and William Neel are Flying Cadets in the Air Corps. John B. Brennan, Jr., is a Lieutenant in the Air Corps and is stationed at Patterson Field, Ohio.

William F. Duffy, captain of the Villanova boxing team in his junior year, is a chief petty officer at the Naval Training Station located in Norfolk, Va. He is assigned to the athletic department of the station

Charles Roche, '40, is an ensign in the Navy and is now aboard the "U. S. S. Phoenix." Saul Wallach, captain of the Villanova tennis team in 1940, is a corporal assigned to Battery "C" of the 166th Field Artillery at Camp Shelby, Miss.

In the medical divisions of the Army are Jerry T. Agnes, '38, Gilbert Bagot, '38, Caesar Deleo, '30, William D'Elia, Vincent J. Gara, George Keffer, '33, and William McCarthy, '34.

From the earlier classes, Stanley Coar, '12, is a colonel in the 195th regiment at Indiantown Gap, Pa., John A. Malone, '14, a lieut. colonel at Fort Eustis, Va., and Capt. Richard H. Magee, '15, an office assistant to the Secretary of War in Washington, D. C.

Stationed at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, is Lieut. T. Leslie Burns, M. C. Lieut. Burns graduated in '28. Aboard the "U. S. S. Memphis" is Ensign Thomas E. Delate from the class of '39. In the chaplain's division of the army are Lieut. Paul C. Potter, '30, and Lieut. Burchard V. Murray, '31.

In order that the files may be brought up to date, Slaughter has asked the secretaries of the 24 Villanova Clubs and the members themselves to forward to him the names and addresses of those alumni who are known to be in the service. Upon receipt of these addresses, the Alumni Office will send copies of the "Alumnus" to them.

Chems To Form A. I. Ch. E. Chapter

By virtue of a unanimous resolution voted by its members at a meeting held Monday, September 29, the Villanova Chemical Society will be replaced by a student chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

At the meeting, the society's first this year, Harry Blumenfeld, newly appointed assistant professor of chemistry and chemical engineering, outlined the advantages of joining this nationa' organization.

The A. I. Ch. E. is the national professional society of chemical engineers in this country. Student chapters are located at the major chemical engineering schools throughout the country. As members, the students could attend A. I. Ch. E. conventions; they would receive the technical publications of the society and enjoy the benefits of its library and employment service; and they would also be afforded the opportunity to exchange ideas with other student chapters.

Blumenfeld, himself a member of A. I. Ch. E., will be the faculty moderator. The chemical society officers elected for the present year will continue in the same capacities in the branch of the A. I. Ch. E.

The petition for membership in the Institute has been circulated.

Tentative plans of the organization call for Meeting and Plant Trip Committees. The former group will plan programs and obtain speakers for the meetings.

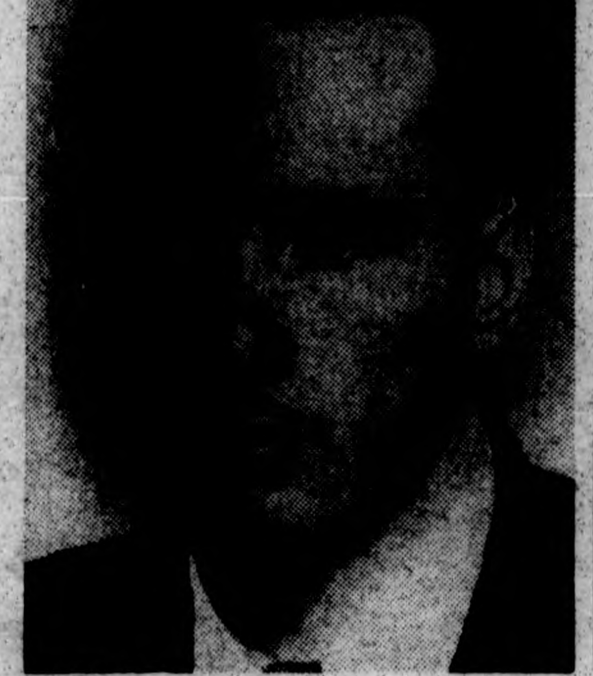
Highest Honors Given '41 Annual In National Survey

Belle Air Attains All-American Rating for Fourth Consecutve Year; Closest to "Perfect" Book

The 1941 Belle Air, edited by Thomas J. Moore has been awarded "All-American" honors in a contest conducted annually by the National Scholastic Press Association. This marks the fourth successive year in which Villanova's year-book has achieved this rating.

The 1941 book has the added distinction of receiving the highest score of all college and university annuals in the country; a total of two hundred and thirty-nine books were entered in the competition.



THOMAS J. MOORE

Its score-book, when returned after the judging, bore the following comment, "The 1941 Belle Air comes closest to being the 'perfect year-book' of any it has been our privilege to judge."

Furthermore, it was pointed out that while an "excellent" rating for any part of a year-book is quite rare, the "superior" rating is extremely so. Villanova's annual received the "superior" rating in almost all departments.

In a letter of congratulation to all responsible for the book's success, the judge of the contest declared the Belle Air "the finest I have ever encountered in its class" and ". . . a truly outstanding year-book."

The honors won by the 1941 book climax a long line of similar achievements. The Belle Air received "All-Catholic" recognition every year it was entered in such competition. The 1940 annual was chosen one of the ten best in the nation.

Credit for the 1941 Belle Air's laurels goes to its staff. Thomas J. Moore, editor-in-chief, now a student at law school; Arthur S. Somers, an Air Corps pilot; John M. Bader, college editor, and J. Gordon Brosmer, copy editor, both of whom are now privates for Uncle Sam; and William N. Way, photography editor, also a law student, devoted most of their leisure hours during the whole of last year to making "the book" a good one.

Beta Gamma Argues Intervention Topic

Last evening at 7:30 P. M. in room 215, Mendel Hall, the Beta Gamma Society conducted an important intra-society debate and round table discussion.

Topic for debate was: "Resolved: That the United States of America should intervene in the present European conflict, to the extent of sending expeditionary forces abroad to fight." Thomas J. McKimmey, Joseph F. Mahoney and George A. Harris upheld the affirmative, while the negative was supported by David N. Reardon, Robert J. McIntyre, and James J. Gerrity.

Two eight-minute speeches and one five-minute rebuttal were permitted to each team. No decision was rendered. The debate was immediately followed by a round table discussion, with John Fullam, chairman of Beta Gamma, as the presiding officer.

New Dates Set

Thomas J. McKimmey, chairman of Student Council, has announced that previously scheduled dates for the nominations for the senior class Student Council representative and junior class vice-president have been changed.

Senior class members will meet in the Mendel Hall Amphitheatre Thursday, Oct. 16, at 1:00 P. M. for the nomination of a Student Council representative. Elections will be conducted the following Monday, Oct 20.

Junior nominations are scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 23, at 1:00 P. M. also in the Mendel Hall Amphitheatre, and elections will follow on Monday, Oct. 27.

Nearly 100 Now In Spanish Club

Last Thursday the largest membership in the history of the Villanova Spanish Club, approximately one hundred students, attended the first meeting of that organization of the current scholastic year, in the commerce school auditorium.

President James Walsh disclosed during the course of the meeting that Columbia University had judged Villanova's club as being superior in membership and enthusiasm to any other similar group in the East. Villanova's membership exceeds that of the clubs at Georgetown U., Holy Cross College, Fordham U., and Notre Dame U.

Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O. S. A., moderator, revealed that the club has received an invitation from the U. of Pennsylvania to present a play in conjunction with a Spanish Club Olympics. It is hoped that the members of the cast will be selected by the end of November.

A suggestion by Juan Silva that informal joint meetings be held with clubs from Rosemont, Immaculata, and Chestnut Hill colleges was warmly received. Plans for this project will be made at future meetings.

Fr. Lozano introduced the incoming officers, who were elected at the end of last year. They are: president, James Walsh; vice-president, William Swan; secretary, Paschal Russo; and treasurer, William Menseck.

Villanova Faculty Forms Chapter Of Educational Society

The recently-organized Villanova College chapter of the American Association of University Professors now includes a representative number of the lay members of the faculty in its ranks and expects to augment its membership in the near future.

The Association, which is concerned with the place and function of faculties in college and university government, publishes "The Bulletin," an educational journal for teachers, bi-monthly in February, April, June, October, and December. The group has branches throughout the United States and Canada.

Among other problems considered by this group are: faculty administration relations, freedom of inquiry and expression, and the improvement of teaching standards.

Membership is open to all college and university teachers from the faculties of eligible institutions and to graduate students and assistants. An institution is considered eligible if it has been accredited by a reliable agency and meets with the approval of the Association.

Officers of the local branch are: president, Dr. Gilbert Macbeth, associate professor of English; vice-president, Dr. William H. McHugh, professor in the education department; and secretary-treasurer, William C. A. Henry, Esq., assistant professor, business administration.

Lynch Is Victorious In A.I.E.E. Balloting

William M. Lynch, '42, was elected chairman of the local branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at a meeting of the chapter last week.

Other officers elected for the coming the past summer as an employee ior, vice-president; Joseph C. Dorsey, senior, secretary; and Charles W. King, senior, treasurer.

Following the balloting King gave a brief talk on his experiences during the past summer as employee of the Philadelphia Electric Company's Schuylkill Generating Station.

The newly elected officers announced the completion of plans for the participation of the group in the coming A. I. E. E. Convention scheduled for Oct. 24-25. The convention will be held at the University of Maryland. In conjunction with this trip, members will visit the Department of Justice and the new National Airport in Washington.

Frosh Have Unusual Musical And Athletic Talent, Survey Reveals

By THOMAS A. SHALLOW

Villanova's freshman class has a high percentage of musicians, practically all its members intend to participate in intramural athletics, and most of the new men were attracted to the college by its scholastic reputation and Catholic environment, the Freshman Survey conducted by P. F. Banmiller, college registrar, as a part of the Freshman Orientation Program, has revealed.

When asked what reasons influenced their coming to Villanova, 201 of the 271 polled listed the school's scholastic reputation and 187 signified the Catholic environment, most students giving more than one reason.

Why They're Here

Other factors influencing their choices were the advice of parents, the suggestions of alumni, the recommendations of priests and religious, the visits to their high schools by representatives of the college, the school's athletic reputation, and the receiving of literature from the college.

It was explained to the freshmen that every Villanova student is expected to take part in some form of extra-curricular activity, and the survey was taken to find out what activities the freshmen favored in this regard.

Lists of the freshmen experienced in writing, music, athletics and all other forms of extra-curricular activities were given to the respective moderator so they could contact the freshmen interested in their particular activity.

Musical Abilities

Good news for Fr. Handran was the fact that 80 of the yearlings stated they can play band or orchestral instruments, ranging from the piano to the mellophone. Some of these have already been given places in the band and still more will have their chance when the Symphonic Orchestra gets underway.

Freshmen singers are evenly divided in regard to range. There are 19 tenors, 19 baritones, and 18 basses. We will list as unclassified for the present the freshman who explained he was a first tenor "but my voice is just changing."

An unusually high percentage, 238 out of the 271, can swim and 234 intend to take part in intramural sports. In the latter department touch football is the favorite, with basketball and softball next, and track and boxing also receiving preference.

The music seminars will be well attended if we can depend on the desire expressed by 132 of the first year men to attend the weekly concerts of recorded music.

Open House Popular

Open House programs for the last four years were attended by members of the freshman class, the survey showed, with the greatest number attending the one held last spring. A substantial number of the new men revealed that they took the competitive scholarship examinations last spring.

An analysis of the survey gives the administration a key to the factors which attract students to the college. The results of this analysis are embodied in a report which is written by the registrar each year. Although this year's report hasn't been composed as yet, Mr. Banmiller stated that in the past the student has generally been influenced by a combination of factors, rather than by any single one.

Field House To Be Scene Of Giant Baylor Rally On Thursday Evening

Band, Cheerleaders to Head Proceedings; Fr. McGuire, Smith, McNally to Speak

By JOHN P. FULLAM

Villanova students are hereby notified to limber up their vocal chords, work themselves up to a fever pitch, and report to the Field House on Thursday evening at 8:00 P. M.

No, Wilbur, it isn't a hog-calling contest. Instead, strange as it may seem, it is a football rally, to prepare Wildcats and Wildcat supporters for the Baylor encounter on the following night. It will be the first rally except for the annual pre-Temple affair to be held at Villanova for years and years; and if present plans reach fulfillment, it will be strictly colossal.

Oh, of course, there have been those at-the-station send-offs before some of the away games, at which a few of the oldest and most faithful rooters wave sleepy farewells to their departing heroes. But there hasn't been an honest-to-gosh, formal rally since long before the proverbial puppy-hood of Hector.

As a result of this long felt lack, the Student Council decided to see what could be done: Thursday evening's giant rally will show the result of Publicity Department machinations resulting from expressions of student opinion.

That's what it will be—a giant rally. It will honor a gallant squad that travelled the length of the country to break a jinx that has hounded them for two seasons. It will be an indication to that squad that the student body is appreciative of the individual and collective efforts of the team.

And it will also be an attempt to spur the Wildcats to the heights necessary to lick a powerful Baylor club, fresh from a 20-7 win over Arkansas.

The band will be on hand for the affair; cheerleaders will put rooters through their paces. Fr. McGuire, "Clipper" Smith, and assistant "Vince" McNally will be the main speakers; a supporting cast of prominent sports-writers will also have something to say.

An attempt will be made to depart from the rigid rule of keeping the players themselves away from the rally. Tentative plans call for the presence at least of the team captain for the game.

With all arrangements thus completed, there is needed now only the complete co-operation of the students themselves.

Engineers Build Metallurgy Lab

Blumenfeld Directs Student Design, Construction in Section of Mendel Basement

With engineer's scale, measuring tape, and drawing board, senior engineers taking Physical Metallurgy, Ch. E. 201, under Harry Blumenfeld, M. S., have taken to planning and building their own metallurgy laboratory in the basement under the Monastery dining hall.

All details of planning the layout and part of the actual construction work are in the hands of the seniors. Mr. Blumenfeld believes that in this way the students will have a chance to exercise initiative in planning their own laboratory and to gain practical experience.

The laboratory, which will consist of two rooms, a dark room and the laboratory proper, was designed by senior mechanicals William Ehmer, Alfred Leone, John Regan, and Thomas Shallow. The designs were approved by Mr. Blumenfeld and the construction work, which will be done by the Maintenance Department of the college under the direction of Mr. Loughery, is now under way.

Metallurgy equipment including polishers, grinders and heaters, will make a heavy electrical load, and the design of adequate wiring was undertaken by Thomas Hushen, Arthur Koerner, and Henry Martinez. The wiring was complicated by the number of motors necessary for the different pieces of equipment and the heavy power demand of the heaters, in addition to the lighting system.

Plans for tables and other laboratory equipment were drawn up by a crew made up of Philip Malarkey, John Muench, and Sidney Stevens. Construction of this equipment has been undertaken by these students.

Priorities had to be obtained on equipment including miscroscopes, vertical illuminators, grinders, polishers, heaters, and photo-micrographic apparatus. Some of this is already on hand and the remainder is on order with delivery assured before completion of the laboratory.

The site of the new metallurgy laboratory saw past service as an emergency drawing room after the Mendel Hall fire in 1929. After Mendel Hall was restored it was abandoned for this purpose and has since been used as a storage space. Presence of a water supply, drainage ,and electrical lines make it readily adaptable for laboratory facilities.

A. S. M. E. Meets

Will Invite Members of Local College Chapters to Attend Its Regular Sessions

Vincent Gordon, chairman of the Villanova chapter of the A. S. M. E., stated at the first meeting of the society yesterday that negotiations are under way to invite chapter members from local colleges in the Philadelphia district to the regular meetings of the Villanova branch.

As suggested by Kenneth J. Moser, M. S., honorary chairman, such inter-collegiate meetings would provide an opportunity for the students to exchange mutually valuable information on current engineering topics. This collective action on the part of the various chapters will also enable them to obtain speakers who are prominent in the field of engineering.

Preparations for the annual Spring Convention are also under way. This year Villanova mechanical engineers will play host to about 200 delegates representing 20 Delaware, New Jersey, New York, Maryland and Pennsylvania colleges. These colleges are the eastern student chapters of the society. Chairmen who will serve on the various committees have not yet been selected.

Instructors End Training Course

Instructions were completed recently by the local branch of the Defense Training Program, which is under the direction of J. Stanley Morehouse, M. E., dean of the engineering school, in courses for 165 instructors who are to teach during the coming school year in elementary engineering courses conducted by Villanova and other local colleges.

Two sections received instruction at Villanova, one at Temple University, two at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, and one at the Fleisher Vocational High School.

Classes at Villanova were conducted by Dr. Edward L. Haenisch, advisor to the chemistry and chemical engineering department, and Professor G. B. Thom, head of the mechanical engineering department of Swarthmore College.

Dr. Haenisch also taught at the Navy Yard, as did Dr. J. Roberts of the psychology department of the University of Pennsylvania.

The course at Temple was conducted by Mr. Martin Berger of the Du Pont Company of Wilmington, Del., who also had charge of the section at Fleisher Vocational High School.

Purpose of the course was to train technically qualified men in the art of teaching. All those who took the instructions are active in various technical fields, and the courses were designed to give them a grounding in the principles of teaching, along with some actual experience to aid them in handling their own classes.

Commendable Progress

ASIDE FROM its very obvious benefits to the college, one of the primary effects of the Centennial Fund Drive will be the building up of alumni morale. This marks the first time the Association has undertaken such a project for the school; its success will affirm the importance of the alumni body in the scheme of things and bring realization to its possibilities as a potent factor in the development of the Alma Mater.

This is especially true because of the importance of the goal of the Drive. A college just can't exist nowadays without adequate library facilities, and the new library will fill a need that grows more pressing each year as the present library space becomes more and more cramped. Since every student who will attend Villanova will thus benefit from the Drive, the Alumni couldn't have chosen a more desirable birthday gift for their college.

It is the spontaneous nature of the Drive which gives it such special value. The idea of donating the Library originated with the Alumni members; one of them designed the proposed plans, and the work of the campaign is being done by class agents and others who give their services willingly and freely.

As to the progress of the campaign to date, Secretary Slaughter reveals that, after last spring's educational campaign, returns show one-third of the fund pledged by a group which contains only three per cent of the Alumni body. With the Villanova Clubs throughout the country meeting again after their summer recess and personal solicitation starting in earnest, prospects are that the fund will be subscribed long before the two year period allotted for the Drive is up. For their fine work thus far and the success we feel will follow, we congratulate the Alumni.

Invitation From Deep Waters

THE POPULAR topic of discussion in Washington at the moment is the proposed repeal or revision of the Neutrality Act. That the Act is before congress and subject to possible modification would seem to indicate that we have been stringently adhering to all of the provisions of the law to date. This, however, is far from the actual case.

In effect, the United States has long since nullified several of the measures embodied in the Act by adopting and executing policies that it deemed to be in conformity with our self-appointed aid to Britain and other nations engaged in the same struggle for physical survival.

The Neutrality Act in its original form made it unlawful for any American citizen or corporation to lend money or extend credit to a nation at war. Also, it declared that it was unlawful for any American to sell war materials to a nation at war, except for cash. Now, through the enactment of the lend-lease law, our government extends unlimited credit to Britain and her allies. There is, of course, no consequent need for these countries to make purchases from our business concerns. It is certainly not difficult to discern from these policies that we have in part repealed the Act as far as we cared to in order to satisfy the course we have pursued.

Now we are about to consider another phase of the Act, which, if approved by Congress, will permit the arming of our cargo ships. This is to receive the immediate attention of the legislative body. Mention has also been made of permitting American vessels to enter the "combat areas," when it shall be necessary for the maintenance of our national defense. This last would-be breach of the Neutrality Act has, in all political wisdom, been relegated to the background for future consideration.

However, it is not plausible to speak of these two issues as separate, distinct measures. They are co-related by their mutual invitation to disaster; the "Wolf packs" of the seas will snarl in glee at the new-born American-exposure twins. In short, revision of these two provisions in the Neutrality Act will serve only to rush us into war on a new wave of emotional hysteria upon the sinking of one or more of our ships.

New Mask Of The Redmen

A COMMUNIST meeting will be held in Convention Hall November 5.

On four previous occasions, the Stalinites have tried to gain admittance to this auditorium, but failed. This time, however, they found the key.

Two little words were all they needed. For this particular meeting was to be held in the interests of "national defense."

The logic used by the spokesman of the Board of Trustees of the hall is a striking example of America's thinking at the present time. He says that since the Communist party is now interventionist, and therefore in line with "national defense," it ought, as a matter of course, to be allowed full propaganda rights.

He's fair about it, anyway. The America First Committee, despite its non-intervention viewpoint, is to be allowed to meet in the hall as well.

Students of America, is this logic? Are we to allow Communism, still the most detestable of all forms of un-Americanism, to gain headway under the flimsy disguise of "national defense?"

Has hysteria so poisoned our reason that we are going to plant within ourselves a tape-worm, that we may build up a defense against obesity?

Get Behind The Team

STUDENTS of Villanova now have an opportunity to make a real display of school spirit. The rally for the Baylor game, the first of its kind in many years, will serve as an indicator of the intensity of the support which you are willing to give the team. They showed that they had the spirit in Florida; will you show them the same spirit on Thursday night?

FACULTY COMMENTS

Destruction and Historical Progress

By DR. HARTMAN

NOT infrequently, students begin to wonder how wars and revolutions have influenced historical progress. They seem to question the propriety of the operation of destructive forces in order to maintain progress. They constantly argue that it is a peculiar kind of progress which has its motivating forces in the destruction of lives and the ruination of property. In their language the deterioration of a social order or the collapse of an economic structure is just not indicative of progress in any sense of the word.

Progress Defined

Now the difficulty confronting the minds of these students lies in ascertaining the significant meaning attached to the word progress, at least when we employ it in the historical sense. It must be cautioned that historical progress is a peculiarly distinct kind of a progress. Accordingly, we regard the functioning of any historical processes influencing a marked development as a component part of this type of progress. Its sole characteristic is that a fundamental change has been produced. In a historical sense it is immaterial whether the change has contributed to the advancement of the social order or to its deterioration. Even its complete destruction may be observed as a part of its progress. The important thing to note is that some tributary of change has joined the ever-flowing stream of historical development. This makes progress and no amount of academic quibbling will make it any different.

Destructive Forces

Contemporary civilization has been definitely influenced in its development by historical progress. Certainly it would be incorrect to assert that this finished product has alone been generated by the functioning of the constructive forces peculiar to social advancement and moral enlightenment. As Catholic students of history we are ever mindful of the fact that the destructive tendencies emanating from the religious revolution of the sixteenth century are still contributing to the "progress" of history. Fundamental changes are continually being provoked by the effects of this sixteenth century movement. Moreover, we may significantly observe that these changes are progressively influencing a peculiar type of historical development in the modern world.

I might offer a contrast involving the progress associated with the physical development of the human body. Sometimes evidences of the concrete facilitates an understanding of the abstract. No one will deny that the amputation of a leg from the body is responsible for a marked change in the human body. In a fundamental sense the functioning of the destructive processes has contributed to the physical development of the body. The development in question is a part of "progress" although it is difficult to conceive how any physical advancement has occurred. Like historical progress, the progress marking the physical development of the body has been influenced by change. This change, moreover, may have been encouraged by destructive tendencies.

What Influences Progress?

What are these processes which may influence the "progress of history"? Since we are employing the generic significance of the word it is natural to expect that these process will be both numerable and complex. They will operate not only as contributing to social advancement in a constructive sense but may be responsible for wrecking its very existence. Fundamentally speaking, they may be anything but essential social forces. Economic activity may often be advanced as the underlying cause of some revolutionary movement. Suffice it to say, that these forces contributing to the "progress of history" are naturally comprehensive and varied.

Judgment of Progress

In conclusion, students should be reluctant to criticize one for regarding the operation of destructive forces as contributing to the progress of history. Moral good should not be confused with historical progress. Quite frequently, individuals and movements are any thing but morally good, yet they are influencing the progressive development of history. Behold the forces of destruction operating in the contemporary world and the "great men" who have played a part in their functioning. And, believe me, both are a part of historical progress.

THE Phi Kappa Pi and Delta Pi Epsilon smokers highlighted activities on the campus last week despite many outside attractions. Foremost of these was the tea dance given at Rosemont Friday afternoon reportedly for St. Joe men but with many of the local lads in attendance, notably Sam Canning with Gay Cruse and Bill Walsh with Pat Kennedy, daughter of the former ambassador to England and, incidentally, a golf addict.

Up at Mt. St. Joe's on Sunday afternoon approximately seventy-five fellows were guests of the fair coeds at a reportedly successful tea dance, the purpose of which was to familiarize the girls with prospective dates for their coming dance. Jim Meehan, Rog Logan and chief date-getter John Kirschner had a swell time.

When asked why he was wearing it on his leg, he replied, "Well, the handbook doesn't say where it has to be worn."

Meet The Boys: Cookie Leads The Rah-Rah Lads; Frank Will Snap The Coming Grads

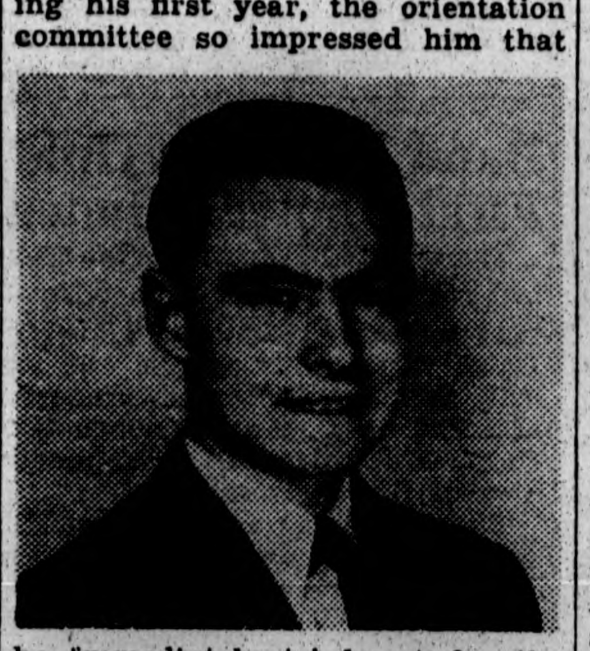
By WARD GUNCHEON

SO many of the seniors in this "Meet the Boys" feature have dropped by the stork, left at the doorstep, become an income tax exemption or the pride and joy of their family, that with apologies to all encyclopedias the following form will be used for their vital statistics: Koness. Robert James, (1920-), b. Brooklyn, N. Y., and McKay, Frank Joseph, 1916-), b. Holyoke, Mass.

Why Bob Koness received the nick-name of "Cookie," he will not disclose, but the where, when and by whom are in the Mendel Hall Amphitheatre at the beginning of his freshman year at the hands of the Orientation Committee.

A Rah-Rah Boy

His attendance here was preceded by four years at Hempstead High School in Long Island, near his present home in Wantagh. During his first year, the orientation committee so impressed him that he immediately tried out for the cheer-leading squad. Since that time he has been down in front of the crowd leading the rah-rah's!



While on the subject of sports, we must note that Bob's ability as a swimmer cannot be underrated. Having churned the water with the best of them on the varsity squad last year, he is entering this year in the fifty and one hundred yard free style events. In the former he averages about 25.2 seconds and in the latter approximately 59 seconds.

Devotee of Thespis

Emerging from the Field House Pool, Bob found time enough last year to take part in Belle Masque's annual one-act plays. This was his first attempt to turn from natator to narrator and he hopes to repeat the performance again this year.

That white cap he has been seen wearing about the campus identifies him with the Orientation Committee and the Student Council. He was elected to the Student Council last spring by the D. P. E. fraternity of the C. & F. school.

To Be a Marine

In accordance with his commercially-inclined mind, Bob was a member of last year's Belle Air business staff and this year he's continuing in the same capacity.

As for social life, Bob is a difficult person to connect with any one person or college. He claims no preference and those who offer any information of this sort bear him out. Immaculata, Rosemont and Chestnut Hill are well represented. Perhaps the undisclosed source of his nickname can be found in his "sweetness" towards all girls.

There seems to be some subtle connection in the ensuing part of this biography. During the past summer, Bob, together with his roommate, Ted Galysh, decided to help the National Defense Program by enlisting in the Officers' Training Course of the U. S. Marines. When they are graduated, they will become Second Lieutenants in that branch of the service.

A Statistical Whiz

In the C. & F. school both he and Ted have taken extraordinary interest in statistics and all other subjects taught by Mr. Dougherty, who is an ex-marine himself. In addition, both have been able to absorb Mr. Dougherty's subjects with amazing ease.

Bob's vision for the future should be a beautiful dream for Mr. Dougherty, since he plans to take the civil service examination for the position of government statistician after serving his enlistment in the marines. Despite his statistical traniing, Bob predicted that the Dodgers would win the world series.

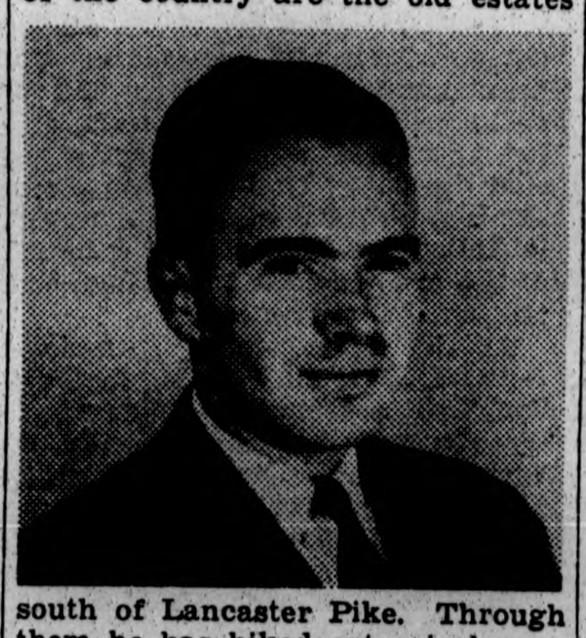
ANOTHER fellow who has Marine intentions but directed in another way is Frank McKay. He hopes to have senior pictures for this year's Belle Air "well in hand" for he has been assigned the Herculean task of Photography Editor on the annual publication. He will be seen during the next few weeks hovering about seniors, bulletin boards and the Mendel Hall reception room. All this came about as the result of his taking up the shutter hobby several years ago in high school.

When he was graduated from Deerfield Academy in Massachusetts, he followed his brother, Ed, '41, to this campus and like him enrolled in the C. & F. school. There he is majoring in the pre-law course.

A Strenuous Hiker

Although he hasn't participated on any of the varsity athletic teams he can be seen almost any afternoon of the fall and spring playing tennis. He might not want to be called a nature-lover, but his long walks through the surrounding countryside prove this to be so. His favorite scenic spots in this section of the country are the old estates south of Lancaster Pike. Through them he has hiked extensively.



Though Frank didn't find the statistics course completely to his liking he does profess a preference for law subjects as taught by Mr. Henry. He adds that only the "humane" help of Mr. Schaffer enable him to pass Accounting 1.

Last year Frank served on the Mother's Day committee and also participated in Mendel Hall's amateur night presentation. He has followed the activities of the Music Seminar since its inception.

Not Drafted—Yet

In affairs military, Frank has received his draft questionnaire but as yet has received no classification. This he is anxiously awaiting because his future plans hinge upon it. If these plans aren't upset, next fall will find him at the Harvard Law School, one year behind his brother. After Harvard, he will hang up his shingle and be ready for business.

Activities away from the college last summer were limited to the stock room of the White-Wycoff Paper Co., but the summer of '37 proved to be less monotonous, when he made an extended trip through the British Isles and the Continent.

Audience with Pope

While in Rome, he, together with a large party, was granted an interview with the late Pope, Pius XI. His credentials for the audience were secured from a priest who resided in the same house where Father McGuire, now vice-president of the college, was living while attending American University there.

Six-Man Cheering Section Gives 'Cats Inspiration To Beat Florida

Two thousand miles of driving to see a football game. . .but the six students who went to Florida say it was well worth it.

Five seniors, Dave Daly, T. Doyle, Johnny Maher, Bill Schubert, and Paul Waters, and frosh Tom Schubert got back Sunday night from Gainesville with lots to say about the jaunt.

Leaving Philadelphia at 8:00 P. M. Thursday, they took turns driving. . .and before they knew it (at 5:00 P. M. Friday) they were in Gainesville. After establishing headquarters at the White House Hotel, where the team was staying, the travelers went out to Florida Field to see Villanova practice. . . but the 'Cats were 40 miles away at the Highland Country Club. . . and Florida's practice was secret.

Out to the Field again at night to watch Villanova's "secret" practice. . .with a few hundred Florida students in the stands. . .constantly yelling "Gator bait" at the Smithmen in jeering tones.

A good rest Friday night in Gainesville. . .no wonder. . .with 3,500 Florida men around. . .and no co-eds. . .nice town, though . . .and a beautiful college and stadium. . .frat houses look like mansions. . .buildings mostly new.

Then game day. . .rest for the team as the vanguard of 3,400 soldiers from Camp Blanding start pouring into town. . . by 6:00 in the evening the sidewalks are jammed tight. . . the convoys have arrived. . . 3,400 soldiers. . . and 3,300 are for Villanova. . . friendly guys from Connecticut, Brooklyn, New Jersey, etc. . . . glad to talk to Northerners.

After the purchase of cow-bells . . .and wearing blue-and-white "glamour bows" furnished by Mrs. Tommy Lovett. . .with gold "V's" for victory. . .out to the game . . .admitted on student tickets . . .but sit opposite the Florida stands in the midst of rabid Gator rooters.

Big crowd there. . .second largest since the stadium was built in 1931. . .3,400 of them soldiers. . . with a sprinkling of sailors and student fliers. . .a colorful crowd that enjoys a good game and the impromptu sideshows that go on.

The Florida cheerleaders do their stuff on a narrow cement ledge below their rooters. . .the band. . . a really smart-looking 89-piece outfit. . .with a smooth local gal as drum-majorette. . .the M. P.'s busy preventing untoward incidents among the good-natured men in brown.

Six Villanovans get sore throats yelling their heads off for the 'Cats . . .all the regular cheers and a few of their own invention. . .they sound lonely among the pro-Florida crowd. . .but their cheering is at least as loud as that heard at some Villanova home games in past years. . .and the 50-cents-a-head soldiers are with them.

A shortage of Villanova spotters in the press box. . .two Southern networks broadcasting the game . . . Fr. McGuire talks between the halves. . .the student radio station, with power stepped up for the game, can be heard in Philadelphia . . .but most of the students don't know it.

The object of the trip. . .the game itself. . .Florida outplays Villanova for most of the first half . . .but never gets within scoring distance. . .the 'Cats threaten as the half closes. . .but a field goal attempt is spoiled.

The second half is all Villanova . . .the Wildcats look like a bowl-bound team as they run through Florida. . .the Gators can't make any ground. . .a thrilling touchdown pass, Postus to Proho, and Bill's away. . .and still the 'Cats march.

Worn out from shouting. . .with no voices left. . .the six rooters head for Philly. . .no time to stay for a frat dance. . . or to celebrate . . .just get out of town before the convoy blocks the road. . .and they do beat the caravan.

Take it easy going home. . .no rush. . .stop for Mass Sunday morning in a little town in South Carolina. . .the chapel can accomodate thirty. . .and fourteen parishioners are present. . .the pastor asks for contributions to support the foreign missions. . . sounds a little bit like misplaced charity.

Arrival back at Villanova at midnight Sunday. . . and to bed.

Last night I held a hand,
So dainty and so sweet,
I thought my heart would surely burst,
So wildly did it beat.
No other hand e'er held so tight,
Could greater gladness bring
Than the lovely hand I held last night—
Four aces and a king! ! !

Complexities of Science:

Passing through the historic battlefields of New Jersey where farmers once had stood, gun in hand and knees knocking, standing off the "Martian invasion", the 207th Coast Artillery ran into difficulty.

The light trucks were leading the regiment south to training camp in Georgia. The "heavies" with their guns in tow were bringing up the rear, about five minutes behind. The light trucks pulled up by the side of the road to wait for the "heavies' 'to catch up. Five minutes passed—no "heavies". Fifteen minutes passed—still no 'heavies". Things were beginning to look grim.

The New Jersey State Police were called out, found the wayward wagons helplessly lost a few miles back at a clover-leaf intersection.

American defined:

Professor Franz Boas, of Columbia University, and Professor Ernest A. Hooton, of Harvard, gave an answer to the question "What is an American?"

"He is not blond or dark. He is not tall or short. He is not German, Irish, French, Italian, Jewish or British. He is a man who has been woven into the American social fabric, who thinks as his fellow citizens do about accepted institutions, government, morality, honor, and who conducts himself as they do. By his deeds he is to be judged—not by his looks or his geographic origin."

Open letter to the Immaculatan:

Dear Gals,

A few days ago our campus was informed of the unfortunate lot of a number of your day-hops. We refer to the shortage of bus accomodation for fourteen of your commuting colleagues.

Not to be outdone by the Harvardian gallantry expounded in this space last week, the editor of this column offers his humble chariot for the daily use of the girls-in-need. Of course, drivers would also be available in the person of Villanova men.

Sincerely yours,
The Editor.

Commendable Progress

ASIDE FROM its very obvious benefits to the college, one of the primary effects of the Centennial Fund Drive will be the building up of alumni morale. This marks the first time the Association has undertaken such a project for the school; its success will affirm the importance of the alumni body in the scheme of things and bring realization to its possibilities as a potent factor in the development of the Alma Mater.

This is especially true because of the importance of the goal of the Drive. A college just can't exist nowadays without adequate library facilities, and the new library will fill a need that grows more pressing each year as the present library space becomes more and more cramped. Since every student who will attend Villanova will thus benefit from the Drive, the Alumni couldn't have chosen a more desirable birthday gift for their college.

It is the spontaneous nature of the Drive which gives it such special value. The idea of donating the Library originated with the Alumni members; one of them designed the proposed plans, and the work of the campaign is being done by class agents and others who give their services willingly and freely.

As to the progress of the campaign to date, Secretary Slaughter reveals that, after last spring's educational campaign, returns show one-third of the fund pledged by a group which contains only three per cent of the Alumni body. With the Villanova Clubs throughout the country meeting again after their summer recess and personal solicitation starting in earnest, prospects are that the fund will be subscribed long before the two year period allotted for the Drive is up. For their fine work thus far and the success we feel will follow, we congratulate the Alumni.

Invitation From Deep Waters

THE POPULAR topic of discussion in Washington at the moment is the proposed repeal or revision of the Neutrality Act. That the Act is before congress and subject to possible modification would seem to indicate that we have been stringently adhering to all of the provisions of the law to date. This, however, is far from the actual case.

In effect, the United States has long since nullified several of the measures embodied in the Act by adopting and executing policies that it deemed to be in conformity with our self-appointed aid to Britain and other nations engaged in the same struggle for physical survival.

The Neutrality Act in its original form made it unlawful for any American citizen or corporation to lend money or extend credit to a nation at war. Also, it declared that it was unlawful for any American to sell war materials to a nation at war, except for cash. Now, through the enactment of the lend-lease law, our government extends unlimited credit to Britain and her allies. There is, of course, no consequent need for these countries to make purchases from our business concerns. It is certainly not difficult to discern from these policies that we have in part repealed the Act as far as we cared to in order to satisfy the course we have pursued.

Now we are about to consider another phase of the Act, which, if approved by Congress, will permit the arming of our cargo ships. This is to receive the immediate attention of the legislative body. Mention has also been made of permitting American vessels to enter the "combat areas," when it shall be necessary for the maintenance of our national defense. This last would-be breach of the Neutrality Act has, in all political wisdom, been relegated to the background for future consideration.

However, it is not plausible to speak of these two issues as separate, distinct measures. They are co-related by their mutual invitation to disaster; the "Wolf packs" of the seas will snarl in glee at the new-born American-exposure twins. In short, revision of these two provisions in the Neutrality Act will serve only to rush us into war on a new wave of emotional hysteria upon the sinking of one or more of our ships.

New Mask Of The Redmen

A COMMUNIST meeting will be held in Convention Hall November 5.

On four previous occasions, the Stalinites have tried to gain admittance to this auditorium, but failed. This time, however, they found the key.

Two little words were all they needed. For this particular meeting was to be held in the interests of "national defense."

The logic used by the spokesman of the Board of Trustees of the hall is a striking example of America's thinking at the present time. He says that since the Communist party is now interventionist, and therefore in line with "national defense," it ought, as a matter of course, to be allowed full propaganda rights.

He's fair about it, anyway. The America First Committee, despite its non-intervention viewpoint, is to be allowed to meet in the hall as well.

Students of America, is this logic? Are we to allow Communism, still the most detestable of all forms of un-Americanism, to gain headway under the flimsy disguise of "national defense?"

Has hysteria so poisoned our reason that we are going to plant within ourselves a tape-worm, that we may build up a defense against obesity?

Get Behind The Team

STUDENTS of Villanova now have an opportunity to make a real display of school spirit. The rally for the Baylor game, the first of its kind in many years, will serve as an indicator of the intensity of the support which you are willing to give the team. They showed that they had the spirit in Florida; will you show them the same spirit on Thursday night?

FACULTY COMMENTS

Destruction and Historical Progress

By DR. HARTMAN

NOT infrequently, students begin to wonder how wars and revolutions have influenced historical progress. They seem to question the propriety of the operation of destructive forces in order to maintain progress. They constantly argue that it is a peculiar kind of progress which has its motivating forces in the destruction of lives and the ruination of property. In their language the deterioration of a social order or the collapse of an economic structure is just not indicative of progress in any sense of the word.

Progress Defined

Now the difficulty confronting the minds of these students lies in ascertaining the significant meaning attached to the word progress, at least when we employ it in the historical sense. It must be cautioned that historical progress is a peculiarly distinct kind of a progress. Accordingly, we regard the functioning of any historical processes influencing a marked development as a component part of this type of progress. Its sole characteristic is that a fundamental change has been produced. In a historical sense it is immaterial whether the change has contributed to the advancement of the social order or to its deterioration. Even its complete destruction may be observed as a part of its progress. The important thing to note is that some tributary of change has joined the ever-flowing stream of historical development. This makes progress and no amount of academic quibbling will make it any different.

Destructive Forces

Contemporary civilization has been definitely influenced in its development by historical progress. Certainly it would be incorrect to assert that this finished product has alone been generated by the functioning of the constructive forces peculiar to social advancement and moral enlightenment. As Catholic students of history we are ever mindful of the fact that the destructive tendencies emanating from the religious revolution of the sixteenth century are still contributing to the "progress" of history. Fundamental changes are continually being provoked by the effects of this sixteenth century movement. Moreover, we may significantly observe that these changes are progressively influencing a peculiar type of historical development in the modern world.
